

CHRISTMAS.

· Curtis· · Publishing Company..
· Philadelphia·

Price-

THE CENTURY CO., of New York, publish the two great illustrated magazines, THE CENTURY and ST. NICHOLAS. THE CENTURY is for older readers, ST. NICHOLAS is for children. Each is the acknowledged head of all periodicals of its class in the world, in circulation, in fame, and in ability. More than three million copies are circulated during the year. Few cultivated homes are now without them.

CENTURY

WILL CONTAIN:

RUDYARD KIPLING.

T. B. ALDRICH.

EMILIO CASTELAR.

RUDYARD KIPLING'S NEW NOVEL,

"The Naulahka," a story of America and India, written in collaboration with an American author, Wolcott Bales-tier,—the adventures of a young American from "Topaz." Colorado, at the court of a maharajah in India, and of the heroine, who goes to India as a physician to ber own sex-It begins in November. There will be

THREE OTHER SERIAL STORIES,

A novel of New York life by the author of "The Anglo-maniaes"; "Characteristics," a striking story by Dr. Weir Mitchell; and "The Chosen Valley," a novel of the Great West by Mary Hallock Foote. Thomas Bailey Aldrich will contribute a special group of short stories, complete in single numbers, and Frank R. Stockton and others of the best American writers will farnish fiction.

A NEW LIFE OF COLUMBUS.

The 400th anniversary of the discovery of America will be commemorated by the publication of a new life of Columbus, written especially for The Century by Señor Castelar, the famous Spanish statesman, orator, and writer. New historical material and fine illustrations will be a feature of these papers. Other material bearing upon the discovery of America is in course of preparation.

THE WORLD'S FAIR AT CHICAGO.

The architectural features of the Fair will be pictured in The Contary with Interesting descriptive articles. These illustrations are published by special arrangement with the managers of the Fair.

THE INDIAN'S SIDE.

Much has been printed on the Indian question from the white man's standpoint. In a series of articles by Miss Alice M. Fletcher, of the United States Interior Department and the Peahody Museum, the Indian's side will be presented—how he lives and thinks, etc.

THE FARMER AND THE GOVERNMENT.

In view of the great interest touching the subject of what the Government should do for the farmer, The Contact will print a number of important articles by leading writers on such subjects as "The Farmer's Discontent," "Cooperation," "What the Government is Doing for the Farmer," etc. The workings of the Dept. of Agriculture and its practical value to the farmer will be explained.

STEDMAN AND EGGLESTON.

The distinguished poet Edmund Clarence Stedman will furnish a series of papers on "The Nature and Art of Poetry"; and "Folk Speech in America" will be described by Edward Eggleston, the author of "The Hoosier Schoolmaster." "The Origin of American Provincialisms," etc., will be interestingly treated by Dr. Eggleston.

ART MATTERS.

Examples of the best work of American contemporary painters will be shown, and Cole's great series of wood-engravings, made directly from the Old Masters, will be continued. Articles on famous painters are in preparation.

ARTICLES BY GREAT FRENCH MUSICIANS.

The Century is able to announce a remarkable series of Author of "The Anglomaniacs." supers by Gounod (the composer of Faust and other well-mown operas), Saint-Saëns, Massenet, and other famous French musicians, on their own work and kindred subjects.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHIES OF EDGAR WILSON NYE ("BILL NYE").

This well-known humorist will contribute a series of entertaining articles descriptive of his experiences in dif-ferent parts of America and in various capacities. The first is entitled "The Autohlography of a Justice of the Peace," and it appears in November.

WHAT I SAW OF THE PARIS COMMUNE.

Archibald Forbes, the fumous war correspondent of the London Daily News, who was one of the first to enter Paris in the days of the Commune, will write two papers regarding his adventures, which will be fully illustrated.

OTHER IMPORTANT ARTICLES

Include papers on the Vigilance Committees of San Francisco, by the Chairman of the Committees, and by General Sherman, who was then an officer of the State Government in San Francisco; interesting illustrated papers on "The Jews of New York," their family life, customs, etc., with other papers on New York life; articles on the Government of Cities, papers on timely topics, poems, etc. December will be

Mrs. BURTON HARRISON.

ARCHIBALD FORBES.

A Magnificently Illustrated Christmas Number.

THE CENTURY is always issued on the first day of the month, and single numbers may be bought everywhere (price 35 cents), or yearly subscriptions (price $4.00) will be taken by booksellers, postmasters, and the publishers, The Century Co., 33 East 17th St., New York. Remit by post-office or express order, check, draft, or in registered letter. Begin subscriptions with November, 1891, the number which opens the new volume.

C. NICHOLAS FOR YOUNG FO

The nineteenth volume of this unique magazine for young folks begins with the number for November, 1891. From the first issue Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge has been the editor, and the pens of the greatest writers of the English world, and the pencils of the most famous illustrators have been at its service. Tennyson, Longfellow, Bryant, Thomas Hughes, Whittier, Bret Harte, Bayard Taylor, Mrs. Burnett, Miss Alcott, Donald G. Mitchell, George Macdonald, Mrs. Oliphant, and Professor Proctor are a few of the many great names which have been upon its list of contributors. Everything in it is illustrated. In 1892 it will have

A SERIAL STORY OF NEW YORK,

By Brander Matthews.

A CHARMING SERIAL, "TWO GIRLS AND A BOY,"

By the author of "Marjorie and Her Papa." A SERIAL STORY OF AUSTRALIAN LIFE, By William O. Stoddard.

"THE ADMIRAL'S CARAVAN," By Charles E. Carry), author of " Davy and the Goblin."

"THE CITY OF STORIES,"

A clever idea, by Frank M. Hicknell. "A SPOILED DARLING," A SERIAL STORY

By Frances Courtenay Baylor. "WHEN I WAS YOUR AGE."

A record of the home-life of the author, Laura E. Rich-ards, and her sisters, daughters of Julia Ward Howe.

PAPERS OF INFORMATION.

How Columbus Reckoned The Great American Desert.
The Cliff Dwellings of Arizona.
The Grand Cation of the Colorado.
The Petrified Forest.
The Electric Light. The Making of a Newspaper, Etc., etc., etc.

PAPERS OF PATRIOTISM.

Honors to the Flag. Boys and the National Guard, etc., etc., etc.

PAPERS OF TRAVEL AND ADVENTURE.

"A Dash with Dogs for Life or Denth," by Lieut. Schwatkn,
"The Corner of the Column," by J. T. Trowbridge.
"An American Family in Egypt," by Col. S. H. Lockett.
"After Black Buck in India," by Clarence B. Moore.
"Childhood in Japan," by Ida C. Hodnett.
"A South American Hunt," by Herbert H. Smith.
"Australian Sketches," by James O'Brien.

SHORT STORIES.

Stories of Southern Life, by Thomas Nelson Page.

"The Escape of a Whole Menagerie," by Edgar W. Nye.

"November in the Cafton," by Mary Hallock Foote,

"Kissandy and Mundy," by Richard Malcolm Johnston,

"Ambrose Did It," by Octave Thanet.

"David Cameron's Fairy Godmother," by Miss Bisland,

"How Rangoon Carried Weight," by E. Vinton Blake,

"Harry's Namesake," by General O. O. Howard,

"The Dickey Boy," by Mary E. Wilkins.

HISTORICAL and MISCELLANEOUS PAPERS.

The Boyhood of Louis XIV., by Adele Orpen.

William the Conqueror,
The Last Conquistador, by E. S. Brooks.
Marcus Aurelius, by Elinor Lewis.
A King Without a Throne, by Tudor Jenks.
The Sen Fight off the Azores, by C. H. Palmer.
Volcanoes and Earthquakes, by Prof. F. D. Chester.
The Busy Pages of the Supreme Court, by One of Them.
A Young Girl's Silhonettes. With an introduction by Joseph Jefferson.

St. Nicholas costs $3,00 a year, 25 cents a number. All booksellers, newsdealers, and postmasters take subscriptions, or remittance may be made (by check, draft, money or express order, or registered letter) to the publishers, The Century Co., 33 East 17th St., New York. Begin subscriptions with the November number.

Boy

THE BEST BOOKS. Ask to see The Century Co.'s books at the steres. They include Kennan's "Siberia and the Exile System," issued simultaneously with editions in various European countries (two vols., $6.00); the richly illustrated "Women of the French pean countries (two vols., $6.00); the richly illustrated "Women of the French pean countries (two vols., $6.00); a number of Frank R. Stockton's novels, including "The Squirrel Inn," just issued ($1.35); a new edition of the famous "Sport with Gun and Rod" (just the thing for a Christmas present for one who is fond of hunting and fishing, a magnificent volume, $5.00); "The Autobiography of Joseph Jefferson," richly illustrated ($4.00), etc., etc. The Century Co.'s books for children include the popular Brownie Books,—"The Brownies: Their Book" ($1.50), and "Another Brownie Book" ($1.50), by Palmer Cox; "Lady Jane,"—one of the most charming stories for girls ever written ($1.50); "Marjorie and Her Papa," a book which every little girl will want ($1.00); "The Boys" Book of Sports,"—for every boy ($2.00); the popular "Baby World," new edition ($1.00), etc., etc.

Digitized

Ma. Howkils

ably be the most notable in the history of the JOURNAL.

BUNTON HARBORON

A. HAWTHORNE LATHROP

MRS. THACKERAY RITCHIS

MESS ETHEL INGALLS

MADAME CLARA LANZA

MES. LAURA E. RICHARDS

DIL TALWARD

A write requires more space to tell than we can command on this and the next pages. A few of the more popular features are, however, here told, and will demonstrate that the year of 1892 will unquestion-

How to Train a Daughter No question is more complex to the thousands of mothers throughout the land. In a very full article treating this subject, THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL has received the cooperation of the following women, each of whom has

A Series by Mrs. Gladstone

MRS. GLADSTONE is one of the most practical women in England. When a young mother, she made a careful study of the bringing up of children. That she succeeded, the positions which her children occupy in England to-day fully attest.

What required years of labor for her to learn, MRS. GLAD-

No advice ever written for young mothers has in it the peculiar value which attaches itself to these articles by MRS. GLADSTONE. They will be like a manual for the nursery, with rules that are destined to become standard.

Social Life at Six Centres

In the January JOURNAL, MRS. BURTON HARRISON, the author of "The Anglomaniacs," will continue her delightful glimpse of New York social life, as seen by one whose social position makes it possible to write with authority. Her second paper will be an inner view of what is best in the social whirl of the great metropolis of to-day. Mrs.

Washington Society, by Mrs. Admiral Dahlgren

Chicago Social Life, by Mrs. Reginald DeKoven

Following which will be articles of equal note on social life in Boston, Philadelphia and San Francisco, in a series

A Royal Recluse

At Home with ex-Empress Eugenie

Around the life of no royal woman clusters so much romance as about that of EUGENIE, the ex-Empress of the French.

The world has lost sight of her of late years, but her life is ever interesting. In this article-in the preparation of which an American writer made a special trip abroad-will be given the first accurate pen-portrait of her present daily life, her home, how her days are occupied-in fact, an inner glimpse of EUGENIE'S life from facts furnished by a daily attendant. The article will be beautifully illustrated.

Wine on Fashionable Tables

Whether the use of wines at fashionable dinners and in the best society is decreasing, is a question which will be treated in a full-page article to which the following men and women

Harrison's papers will be succeeded by articles on of "Social Life at Six Centres."

"Hints from a Mother's Life"

STONE will tell in a series of articles, entitled

Mrs. Jefferson Davis

Mrs. Beecher

Mrs. Admiral Dahlgren

written therefor:

Mrs. Gladstone

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe

Mrs. John Wanamaker

MER JOHN WANAMAKER

GABRIELLE GREELWY

Mas. Heartex

MR. PATRICK COM

A Girl's Novel by Mr. Howells

The JOURNAL has purchased from Mr. Howells the exclusive rights of his next novel. It is a story unlike any which MR. HOWELLS has ever written. The novel deals almost entirely with American girl-life in the West and in New York, and will have about it a freshness of incident and crisp interest which will delight the most ardent admirers of Mr. Howetts. The story will run for nearly a year, each chapter increasing in interest as it goes on. It will be illustrated by one of our foremost artists, and prove one of the most attractive novels of the day.

My Father as I Recall Him

By the Favorite Daughter of Charles Dickens In a splendid series of articles MISS MAMIE DICKENS will tell what she remembers of her father; how he educated his children; his family life and his personal habits; how he wrote his famous books; his love of flowers and animals; how Christmas was spent in the DICKENS household; how he romped with his children; his last years and closing days. To none of his children was CHARLES DICKENS so affectionately attached as to his daughter MAMIE, and she saw much of her father under all circumstances. Her pen-portraits of his domestic life cannot, therefore, fail to be of special interest, especially as everything MISS DICKENS embodies in these articles is told for the first time in print.

A Group of Famous Daughters

One of the most unique numbers of a magazine ever printed will be one of the issues of the JOURNAL during 1892. It will be entirely written in prose, poem and story by the famous daughters of famous men and women-names whom all will recognize. Over forty " famous daughters " will be represented by a poem, a story or an article, each written specially for this number.

Among the writers will be:

Dickens's Daughter Thackeray's Daughter Hawthorne's Daughter The President's Daughter lefferson Davis's Daughter

Dean Bradley's Daughter Mr. Gladstone's Daughter Senator Ingalls's Daughter Mrs. Whitney's Daughter Charles Kingsley's Daughter General Sherman's Daughter Horace Greeley's Daughter Mrs. Julia Ward Howe's Daughters

Bringing together an unique array of talent.

A Novelette by Miss Jewett

MISS SARAH ORNE JEWETT has given her next piece of fiction, entitled "An Every-Day Girl," to the JOURNAL. It is a beautiful tale of New England life, charming in its simplicity and the quiet life of a Puritan community. Succeeding Miss Jewett, will appear short stories by

Julia Magruder Margaret Crosby Rose Hawthorne Lathrop Mary E. Wilkins

Florence Marryat Mrs. Alexander Caroline Mason

Clever Daughters of Clever Men

Those bright and talented girls of famous families, of whom we constantly read, and yet whose portraits and personal lives are unfamiliar to us, will be presented in this series. It will be, perhaps, the brightest gallery of clever American girls ever portrayed in literature.

lanes Ina Hillyron

MISS JULIA MAGRUTURE

Мия. Пинсика

have contributed:

Chauncey M. Depew

Hon. John Wanamaker George W. Childs

Col. Elliot F. Shepard

Hon. Rutherford B. Hayes

MES. MACDE HOWE ELLIOTS.

Mrs. Barton Harrison

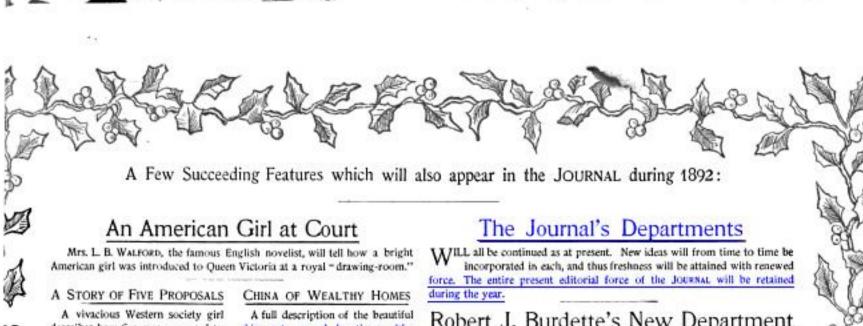

Mrs. George J. Gould

Madame Romero

Mrs. William C. Whitney

Mrs. ex-Governor Chilin

Mas. Sorrose

describes how five men proposed to her, and why she rejected them.

china sets owned by the wealthy families of New York.

Queens of Westminster Abbey

In the February issue, Miss E. T. Bradley, daughter of the Dean of Westminster Abbey, will begin a series of illustrated articles, in which she weaves the stories of the lives of the most famous queens in English history into a description of their royal tombs. The loves, the intrigues, the bits of romance which surrounded the lives of the great queens of history, will be told with a freshness that will make these articles interesting from another than an historical point of view.

WOMEN AND THE FAIR

MRS. POTTER PALMER will show exactly what part women will take in the great Columbian Exhibition of 1892-91.

THE ART OF THE ACTRESS

MADAME ADELAIDE RISTORI, the eminent tragedienne, will tell in a notable article what a young woman should possess to become an actress.

A Day with Patti in Wales

An illustrated description of the great singer's castle home in Wales, her pets, her treasures and her souvenirs, her home-life, and how she conducts her household. Prepared under MADAME PATTI'S own direction.

HOW I MADE MY FORTUNE

MRS. HATTIE GREEN, commonly conceded to be "the richest woman in America," will tell exactly how she accumulated her enormous fortune of forty millions of dollars.

WHY I HAVE NEVER BEEN SICK

An article by REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE giving the secret of his good health, and why he has never known what it is to have even a headache or a mental pain.

A Beautiful Southern Love Story

By MISS JULIA MAGRUDER, in four instalments, will present a love-tale of the Southland, wherein the strife of affection in two hearts silently burns over "A Smouldering Spark"—the title of the novelette.

A STORY BY MRS. ALEXANDER

A tale for girls by the author of "The Wooing O't," which will delight the heart of every girl.

A STORY BY MRS. HOLMES

A short serial story by MRS. MARY J. HOLMES has also been contracted for by the JOURNAL.

Mr. Beecher as I Knew Him

MRS. BEECHER'S famous series of reminiscent papers of her great husband will continue in several of the issues for 1892. The latter papers will be of special interest, portraying Mr. BEECHER'S later life, his famous days in Brooklyn, his closing hours, and his death.

Six of our most famous women will tell, each in a separate article, how life looked to them in girlhood, their hopes, ambitions and dreams, and how they have been realized in later years.

FACES WE SELDOM SEE

In this series will be given sketches and portraits of women noted in song, charity and public works, whose names are as household words, yet who are in reality unfamiliar to us by their faces and lives.

Famous Women Among the Books

For 1892 the JOURNAL is now negotiating with six of the most famous women in the literary world, who will contribute to its literary department a talk about the latest books. Each woman will contribute an entire JOURNAL page of talks about the books, one each alternate month, Mr. Box filling in the other months with his new department of "LITERARY THINGS AND PEOPLE."

AMERICA'S NEEDLEWORK

Will be shown in a special series of articles, in addition to the regular needlework department, treating of the latest and most beautiful needle and handiwork as exemplified by the six leading schools of the country.

TO MAKE A PRETTY HOME

A series of elaborately illustrated articles on things for home decoration, each subject being treated fully in a separate full-page article. All the designs will be carefully illus-

Robert J. Burdette's New Department

WITH the January issue, Mr. Burdette, so well known to the Journal readers for his humorous contributions, will be added to the regular staff of editors, and will have each month a department of his own. Of its character little need be said. It will be in Mr. Burdette's own style, witty and yet wise. A good spirit will pervade it, and laughs will be frequent. The JOURNAL will thus in every sense have a humorous editor-a man who knows how to be funny, and yet whose words are wisdom-freighted.

NO change further than this will be made in the departments at present excepting in the literary department elsewhere announced, a careful canvass of our readers' wishes during the past year fully convincing us that the departmental features of the JOURNAL as at present conducted are accept-

CHRISTMAS CONTENTS

For December, 1891	Vol. 9, No. 1
	PAGE
The Staircase of Fairlawn Manor-(Cha
Highrated by Alfred Fredericks and String E. Wiles	pter ty - by manne bickens 3
Christmas Eve-(Poem)	<ul> <li>Marguerite Merington 4</li> </ul>
When I Was a Girl	- Amelia F Barr 4
Christmas on an Old Plantation -	<ul> <li>Rebecca Cameron ,5</li> </ul>
Social Life at Six Centres-
SOCIAL LIFE IN NEW YORK-I	- Mrs. Burton Harrison 6
Ye Men of Good-Will-(Poem)	- Hezekiah Butterworth 7
Minimiser by W. L. Taylor	Distant Buston 9
Snow on the Mountain—(Poem) -	- Richard Burton 8
Unknown Wives of Well Known Men- XII—THE PRINCESS BISMARCK	- Countess Wilhelmina 8
With Fertralt	A STATE OF THE PARTY OF THE PAR
Thoughts to Carry with You	<ul> <li>Mary Ainge De Vere 8</li> </ul>
Chrysanthemums—(Poem)	Jenny Burr 8
Clever Daughters of Clever Men-	VII. C. L. M.C.W. 0
IIJEFFERSON DAVIS'S DAUGHTER -	<ul> <li>Alice Graham McCollin 8</li> </ul>
A Christmas Girl—(A Story)	- Caroline Atwater Mason 9
literrand by C. B. Gibers and F.S., Gold	VALUE AND
Mr. Beecher as I Knew Him-(Part III)	- Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher 11
The Girl Who Clementine	De Vere Marie Roze
Clara Poole	Minnie Hauk
Loves to Sing   Italo Campa	nini Louise Natali 12
The Brownies through the Year-
THE BROWNIES IN DECEMBER	Palmer Cox 13
Greetings ) Adelina Patti-Nicolini Lady	Margaret Morell Mackenzie
	Lyall
	Roze Madge Kendal 14
	ev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D. 15
Print - Walley and by Print	<ul> <li>- Ruth Ashmore 16</li> <li>- Foster Coates 17</li> </ul>
Side Talks with Girls	Ruth Ashmore 10
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers' Corner	<ul> <li>- Ruth Ashmore 16</li> <li>- Foster Coates 17</li> </ul>
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers' Corner Knitting and Crocheting	- Ruth Ashmore 16 - Foster Coates 17 - Margaret Bottome 18 - Elizabeth R, Scovil 19
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers' Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework	- Ruth Ashmore 16 - Foster Coates 17 - Margaret Bottome 18 - Elizabeth R. Scovil 19 - Mary F. Knapp 20—21
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author Literary Queries	- Ruth Ashmore 16 - Foster Coates 17 - Margaret Bottome 18 - Elizabeth R. Scovil 19 - Mary F. Knapp 20—21 - Grace Greenwood 22 - 22
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author Literary Queries Art Ior Art Workers	- Ruth Ashmore 16 - Foster Coates 17 - Margaret Bottome 18 - Elizabeth R, Scovil 19 - Mary F, Knapp 20—21 - Grace Greenwood 22 - 22 - Mande Haywood 23
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers' Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author Literary Queries Art for Art Workers Hints on Home Dressmaking	- Ruth Ashmore 16 - Foster Coates 17 - Margaret Bottome 18 - Elizabeth R. Scovil 19 - Mary F. Knapp 20—21 - Grace Greenwood 22 - Mande Haywood 23 - Emma M. Hooper 24
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers' Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author Literary Queries Art for Art Workers Hints on Home Dressmaking Hats and Bonnets for Christmas Wear	- Ruth Ashmore 16 - Foster Coates 17 - Margaret Bottome 18 - Elizabeth R. Scovil 19 - Mary F. Knapp 20—21 - Grace Greenwood 22 - 22 - Mande Haywood 23 - Emma M. Hooper 24
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author Literary Queries Art for Art Workers Hints on Home Dressmaking Hats and Bonnets for Christmas Wear Small Belongings of Dress	- Ruth Ashmore 16 - Foster Coates 17 - Margaret Bottome 18 - Elizabeth R. Scovil 19 - Mary F. Knapp 20—21 - Grace Greenwood 22 - 22 - Mande Haywood 23 - Emma M. Hooper 24 - Isabel A. Mallon 26
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author Literary Queries Art for Art Workers Hints on Home Dressmaking Hats and Bonnets for Christmas Wear Small Belongings of Dress Fur Coats and Fur Trimmings
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author Literary Queries Art for Art Workers Hints on Home Dressmaking Hats and Bonnets for Christmas Wear Small Belongings of Dress Fur Coats and Fur Trimmings Domestic Helps and Culinary Hints
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author Literary Queries Art for Art Workers Hints on Home Dressmaking Hats and Bonnets for Christmas Wear Small Belongings of Dress Fur Coats and Fur Trimmings Domestic Helps and Culinary Hints	Ruth Ashmore 16 Foster Coates 17 - Margaret Bottome 18 - Elizabeth R. Scovil 19 - Mary F. Knapp 20—21 - Grace Greenwood 22 - 22 - Maude Haywood 23 - Emma M. Hooper 24 - Isabel A. Mallon 26 - 27 Edith Dickson, Maria Parlou 28
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers' Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author Literary Queries Art for Art Workers Hints on Home Dressmaking Hats and Bonnets for Christmas Wear Small Belongings of Dress Fur Coats and Fur Trimmings Domestic Helps and Culinary Hints Everything About the House	Ruth Ashmore 16 Foster Coates 17 - Margaret Bottome 18 - Elizabeth R. Scovil 19 - Mary F. Knapp 20—21 - Grace Greenwood 22 - 22 - Mande Haywood 23 - Emma M. Hooper 24 - Isabel A. Mallon 26 - Sabel A. Maria Parloa 29 - Maria Parloa 29 - Aunt Patience 30 - Edward W. Bok 31
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author Literary Queries Art for Art Workers Hints on Home Dressmaking Hats and Bonnets for Christmas Wear Small Belongings of Dress Fur Coats and Fur Trimmings Domestic Helps and Culinary Hints Everything About the House Just Among Ourselves Two Entirely Different Things All About Flowers	- Ruth Ashmore 16 - Foster Coates 17 - Margaret Bottome 18 - Elizabeth R. Scovil 19 - Mary F. Knapp 20—21 - Grace Greenwood 22 - 22 - Mande Haywood 23 - Emma M. Hooper 24 - Isabel A. Mallon 26 - 27 Edith Dickson, Maria Parloa 28 - Maria Parloa 29 - Aunt Patience 30 - Edward W. Bok 31 - Eben E. Rexford 32—33
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author Literary Queries Art for Art Workers Hints on Home Dressmaking Hats and Bonnets for Christmas Wear Small Belongings of Dress Fur Coats and Fur Trimmings Domestic Helps and Culinary Hints Everything About the House Just Among Ourselves Two Entirely Different Things All About Flowers Southern Breads and Muffins	- Ruth Ashmore 16 - Foster Coates 17 - Margaret Bottome 18 - Elizabeth R. Scovil 19 - Mary F. Knapp 20—21 - Grace Greenwood 22 - Maude Haywood 23 - Emma M. Hooper 24 - Isabel A. Mallon 26 - Isabel A. Mallon 26 - Maria Parloa 28 - Maria Parloa 29 - Aunt Patience 30 - Edward W. Bok 31 - Eliza R. Parker 34
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers' Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author Literary Queries Art for Art Workers Hints on Home Dressmaking Hats and Bonnets for Christmas Wear Small Belongings of Dress Fur Coats and Fur Trimmings Domestic Helps and Culinary Hints Everything About the House Just Among Ourselves Two Entirely Different Things All About Flowers Southern Breads and Muffins The Story Ever New—(Poem)	- Ruth Ashmore 16 - Foster Coates 17 - Margaret Bottome 18 - Elizabeth R. Scovil 19 - Mary F. Knapp 20—21 - Grace Greenwood 22 - 22 - Mande Haywood 23 - Emma M. Hooper 24 - Isabel A. Mallon 26 - Maria Parloa 29 - Aunt Patience 30 - Edward W. Bok 31 - Eben E. Rexford 32 - Eliza R. Parker 34 - Florena M. York 35
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers' Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author Literary Queries Art for Art Workers Hints on Home Dressmaking Hats and Bonnels for Christmas Wear Small Belongings of Dress Pur Coats and Fur Trimmings Domestic Helps and Culinary Hints Everything About the House Just Among Ourselves Two Entirely Different Things All About Flowers Southern Breads and Muffins The Story Ever New—(Poem) A Useful Bag and Case	- Ruth Ashmore 16 - Foster Coates 17 - Margaret Bottome 18 - Elizabeth R. Scovil 19 - Mary F. Knapp 20—21 - Grace Greenwood 22 - 22 - Mande Haywood 23 - Emma M. Hooper 24 - Isabel A. Mallon 26 - Maria Parloa 29 - Maria Parloa 29 - Aunt Patience 30 - Edward W. Bok 31 - Eben E. Rexford 32—33 - Eliza R. Parker 34 - Florena M. York 35 - Eva M. Niles 35
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers' Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author Literary Queries Art for Art Workers Hints on Home Dressmaking Hats and Bonnets for Christmas Wear Small Belongings of Dress Fur Coats and Fur Trimmings Domestic Helps and Culinary Hints Everything About the House Just Among Ourselves Two Entirely Different Things All About Flowers Southern Breads and Muffins The Story Ever New—(Poem) A Useful Bag and Case The Perfumes We Use	- Ruth Ashmore 16 - Foster Coates 17 - Margaret Bottome 18 - Elizabeth R. Scovil 19 - Mary F. Knapp 20—21 - Grace Greenwood 22 - 22 - Mande Haywood 23 - Emma M. Hooper 24 - Isabel A. Mallon 26 - 27 Edith Dickson, Maria Parloa 28 - Maria Parloa 29 - Aunt Patience 30 - Edward W. Bok 31 - Eben E. Rexford 32—33 - Eliza R. Parker 34 - Florena M. York 35 - Eva M. Niles 35 - L. J. Vance 36
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers' Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author Literary Queries Art for Art Workers Hints on Home Dressmaking Hats and Bonnets for Christmas Wear Small Belongings of Dress Fur Coats and Fur Trimmings Domestic Helps and Culinary Hints Everything About the House Just Among Ourselves Two Entirely Different Things All About Flowers Southern Breads and Muffins The Story Ever New—(Poem) A Useful Bag and Case The Perfumea We Use The Care of a Sewing-Machine	- Ruth Ashmore 16 - Foster Coates 17 - Margaret Bottome 18 - Elizabeth R. Scovil 19 - Mary F. Knapp 20—21 - Grace Greenwood 22 - 22 - Maude Haywood 23 - Emma M. Hooper 24 - 1sabel A. Mallon 26 - 27 - Isabel A. Mallon 26 - 27 - Maria Parloa 29 - Aunt Patience 30 - Edward W. Bok 31 - Eben E. Rexford 32—33 - Eliza R. Parker 34 - Florena M. York 35 - L. J. Vance 36 - Horace N. Jones 36
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers' Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author Literary Queries Art for Art Workers Hints on Home Dressmaking Hats and Bonnets for Christmas Wear Small Belongings of Dress Fur Coats and Fur Trimmings Domestic Helps and Culinary Hints Everything About the House Just Among Ourselves Two Entirely Different Things All About Flowers Southern Breads and Muffins The Story Ever New—(Poem) A Useful Bag and Case The Care of a Sewing-Machine Women's Chances as Bread-Winners—	- Ruth Ashmore 16 - Foster Coates 17 - Margaret Bottome 18 - Elizabeth R. Scovil 19 - Mary F. Knapp 20—21 - Grace Greenwood 22 - 22 - Maude Haywood 23 - Emma M. Hooper 24 - 1sabel A. Mallon 26 - 27 - Isabel A. Mallon 26 - 27 - Maria Parloa 29 - Aunt Patience 30 - Edward W. Bok 31 - Eben E. Rexford 32—33 - Eliza R. Parker 34 - Florena M. York 35 - L. J. Vance 36 - Horace N. Jones 36
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers' Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author Literary Queries Art for Art Workers Hints on Home Dressmaking Hats and Bonnets for Christmas Wear Small Belongings of Dress Fur Coats and Fur Trimmings Domestic Helps and Culinary Hints Everything About the House Just Among Ourselves Two Entirely Different Things All About Flowers Southern Breads and Muffins The Story Ever New—(Poem) A Useful Bag and Case The Perfumes We Use The Care of a Sewing-Machine Women's Chances as Bread-Winners— X—WOMEN IN ART—	- Ruth Ashmore 16 - Foster Coates 17 - Margaret Bottome 18 - Elizabeth R. Scovil 19 - Mary F. Knapp 20—21 - Grace Greenwood 22 - 22 - Mande Haywood 23 - Emma M. Hooper 24 - 12 - Isabel A. Mallon 26 - Maria Parloa 28 - Maria Parloa 29 - Aunt Patience 30 - Edward W. Bok 31 - Eliza R. Parker 34 - Florena M. York 35 - Eva M. Niles 35 - L. J. Vance 16 - Horace N. Jones 36
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers' Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author Literary Queries Art for Art Workers Hints on Home Dressmaking Hats and Bonnels for Christmas Wear Small Belongings of Dress Pur Coats and Fur Trimmings Domestic Helps and Culinary Hints Everything About the House Just Among Ourselves Two Entirely Different Things All About Flowers Southern Breads and Muffins The Story Ever New—(Poem) A Useful Bag and Case The Perfumes We Use The Care of a Sewing-Machine Women's Chances as Bread-Winners X—Women in API— From a Woman's Point	- Ruth Ashmore 16 - Foster Coates 17 - Margaret Bottome 18 - Elizabeth R. Scovil 19 - Mary F. Knapp 20—21 - Grace Greenwood 22 - 22 - Mande Haywood 23 - Emma M. Hooper 24 - 15abel A. Mallon 26 - Maria Parloa 28 - Maria Parloa 29 - Aunt Patience 30 - Edward W. Bok 31 - Eben E. Rexford 32—31 - Eliza R. Parker 34 - Florena M. York 35 - Eva M. Niles 35 - L. J. Vance 16 - Horace N. Jones 36
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers' Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author Literary Queries Art Ior Art Workers Hints on Home Dressmaking Hats and Bonnets for Christmas Wear Small Belongings of Dress Fur Coats and Fur Trimmings Domestic Helps and Culinary Hints Everything About the House Just Among Ourselves Two Entirely Different Things All About Flowers Southern Breads and Muffins The Story Ever New (Poem) A Useful Bag and Case The Perfumes We Use The Care of a Sewing-Machine Women's Chances as Bread-Winners X—Women in ARI From a Women's Point From an Artist's View	- Ruth Ashmore 16 - Foster Coates 17 - Margaret Bottome 18 - Elizabeth R. Scovil 19 - Mary F. Knapp 20—21 - Grace Greenwood 22 22 - Mande Haywood 23 - Emma M. Hooper 24 - Isabel A. Mallon 26 - Sabel A. Mallon 26 - Maria Parloa 29 - Aunt Patience 30 - Edward W. Bok 31 - Eben E. Rexford 32—33 - Eben E. Rexford 32—33 - Eliza R. Parker 34 - Florena M. York 35 - L. J. Vance 36 - Horace N. Jones 36 - Susan M. Ketcham 37 - William M. Chase 37
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers' Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author Literary Queries Art for Art Workers Hints on Home Dressmaking Hats and Bonnets for Christmas Wear Small Belongings of Dress Fur Coats and Fur Trimmings Domestic Helps and Culinary Hints Everything About the House Just Among Ourselves Two Entirely Different Things All About Flowers Southern Breads and Muffins The Story Ever New—(Poem) A Useful Bag and Case The Care of a Sewing-Machine Women's Chances as Bread-Winners X—Women in ARI— From an Artist's View Why Santa-Claus's Beard is White—	- Ruth Ashmore 16 - Foster Coates 17 - Margaret Bottome 18 - Elizabeth R. Scovil 19 - Mary F. Knapp 20—21 - Grace Greenwood 22 - 22 - Maude Haywood 23 - Emma M. Hooper 24 - 15abel A. Mallon 26 - 27 - Edith Dickson, Maria Parloa 28 - Maria Parloa 29 - Aunt Patience 30 - Edward W. Bok 31 - Eben E. Rextord 32—33 - Eliza R. Parker 34 - Florena M. York 35 - L. J. Vance 36 - Horace N. Jones 36 - Susan M. Ketcham 37 - William M. Chase 37 - William M. Chase 37 - William M. Chase 37 - M. A. Bird 38
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers' Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author Literary Queries Art Ior Art Workers Hints on Home Dressmaking Hats and Bonnets for Christmas Wear Small Belongings of Dress Fur Coats and Fur Trimmings Domestic Helps and Culinary Hints Everything About the House Just Among Ourselves Two Entirely Different Things All About Flowers Southern Breads and Muffins The Story Ever New (Poem) A Useful Bag and Case The Perfumes We Use The Care of a Sewing-Machine Women's Chances as Bread-Winners X—Women in ARI From a Women's Point From an Artist's View Why Santa-Claus's Beard is White-	- Ruth Ashmore 16 - Foster Coates 17 - Margaret Bottome 18 - Elizabeth R. Scovil 19 - Mary F. Knapp 20—21 - Grace Greenwood 22 22 - Maude Haywood 23 - Emma M. Hooper 24 - Isabel A. Mallon 26 - Susan M. Farlon 29 - Aunt Patience 30 - Edward W. Bok 31 - Eben E. Rexford 32—33 - Eliza R. Parker 34 - Florenz M. York 35 - L. J. Vance 16 - Horace N. Jones 36 - Susan M. Ketcham 37 - William M. Chase 37 - William M. Chase 37 - M. A. Bird 38
Side Talks with Girls Side-Talks with Boys The King's Daughters Mothers' Corner Knitting and Crocheting Artistic Needlework My Start as an Author Literary Queries Art for Art Workers Hints on Home Dressmaking Hats and Bonnets for Christmas Wear Small Belongings of Dress Fur Coats and Fur Trimmings Domestic Helps and Culinary Hints Everything About the House Just Among Ourselves Two Entirely Different Things All About Flowers Southern Breads and Muffins The Story Ever New—(Poem) A Useful Bag and Case The Care of a Sewing-Machine Women's Chances as Bread-Winners X—Women in Artis's View Why Santa-Claus's Beard is White- Useful Things Worth Knowing	- Ruth Ashmore 16 - Foster Coates 17 - Margaret Bottome 18 - Elizabeth R. Scovil 19 - Mary F. Knapp 20—21 - Grace Greenwood 22 - Maude Haywood 23 - Emma M. Hooper 24 - Isabel A. Mallon 26 - Isabel A. Mallon 26 - Maria Parloa 28 - Maria Parloa 29 - Aunt Patience 30 - Edward W. Bok 31 - Eben E. Rexdord 32—33 - Eliza R. Parker 34 - Florena M. York 35 - Eva M. Niles 35 - L. J. Vance 16 - Horace N. Jones 36 - Susan M. Ketcham 37 - William M. Chase 37 - William M. Chase 37 - M. A. Bird 38

Subscription Rates to the JOURNAL:

One dollar per year, payable in advance. Single copies, ten cents. In England, single copies, six pence; per year, six shillings, post-free.

The Journal's Advertising Rates:

Five dollars per Agate line each insertion before the editorial page; three dollars per Agate line on succeeding pages and all covers. Reading Notices, six dollars per Nonpareil line. These

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

Vol. IX, No. 1

PHILADELPHIA, DECEMBER, 1891

Yearly Subscription, One Dollar Single Copies, Ten Cents

N one of the most picturesque and best wooded of Eng-land's counties, stood—aye, and still stands—Fairlawn Manor. Nestled among trees and standing on the top of a hill, with the setting sun crimsoning the old tiled roof, the ivy and creepers which covered the walls catching glints of light here and there, the soft sumgints of light here and there, the soft sumner wind making a gentle sighing among the grand old trees, the subdued twittering of birds, as they settled down to roost, gave one a feeling of perfect rest and pence and happy contentment. Fairlawn Manor was a low, rambling, fine old house, but with nothing pretentious about it, the entrance door, indeed, being curiously small and insignificant, as compared with the rest of the building.

The low steps led up to this door, and you passed at once into a hall, which occupied the entire center of the house. The mullioned windows, which had deep-cushioned recesses, looked out upon the park. The roof and walls were of oak, dark with the age of many centuries. The huge fireplace, with heavy heass "dogs" and roomy oak ingle-nooks, made one think of, and almost long to see, brass "dogs" and roomy oak ingle-nooks, made one think of, and almost long to see, Yule log blazing up the wide chimney, and brightening the old armour, pictures, china and silver, which adorned the walls and covered them completely. At each end of the hall was a curtained door, that to the right leading into a bay-windowed sitting-room; and through this room again into a long pic-ture gallery. From the first room you passed through another door onto a fine, wide, oak dor, occupying the right wing. The door to the left of the hall opened at once upon the "withdrawing room," at the end of which there was a round room of good size, hung with the finest old French tapestry. This with the finest old French tapestry. This chamber had been used, from all time, as the retiring and work-room of the dames of the manor. Then came an oak staircase, the fac-simile of that in the right wing excepting that this one had at the top, before you could enter upon the bedroom corridor, a baizecovered door, which fastened with a spring.

The servants' offices were all at the back, and were hidden from view by a high, closelyout yew hedge.

The flower-garden at the back was large, with trim grass terraces, quaintly-cut shrubs, masses of old-fashioned flowers in rather prim beds, rustic sents round many of the splendid old trees, which were scattered about the ter-races and lawn, and in the centre of the latter's velvety carpet stood a sun-dial. A high wall, covered with the growth of many hundred years, jealously guarded the privacy of this most lovely spot.

For pany centuries, Fairlawn, Manur, with

For many centuries Fairlawn Manor, with all appertaining thereto, had been owned by the Godfrey family.

The present "Squire"—we are reading of well-nigh a hundred years ago—was one Hubert Godfrey. He was a tall, powerfull—"" fellow, thirty years of age; his eyes y ere dark and piercing, and the heavy eyebrows meet-ing in the middle of his forelend gave to the face a somewhat fierce expression; the nose was fine and straight, and the mouth, though full and slightly sensual, could wear a frank and genial smile.

It was sad to see already signs of dissipation and of uncurbed temper in the marks and lines about the eyes. Alas! In those days —"the good old days" (?)—the highest gentlemen in the land were not ashumed to make brutes of themselves, to be found dead-drunk under the table, and to be carried up to bed by their own valets.

In Squire Godfrey's case, however, it was the fits of ungovernable passion which had made havoc of his face, even when quite a lad. He was aware of his jealous and passion-ate temper, and he tried hard to fight against ate temper, and he tried hard to fight against it; and during the last few years had been tairly successful in the effort. He was a bold, fearless rider, and was Master of Hounds for his part of the county, an accomplished swordsman, and a lover of all sports.

Some five years previously he had experienced a great grief in the death of his nearest neighbor, school-fellow and loved companion, Sir Harry Fanguhar, of Towers Court.

It was a terrible loss for Hubert Godfrey in every way, as Sir Harry had great influence over him, an influence for good, for refinement, for gentleness, for temperance; and the love between these two friends was something akin to the love of Jonathan and David. But love between these two friends was something akin to the love of Jonathan and David. But it was a great surprise to Squire Godfrey to find himself left sole guardian of Sir Harry's orphan daughter, the little Anna; and a responsibility which at first appeared to him quite overwhelming. He could not, and and have because refuse the responsibility. but set himself at once to carry out the wishes of his dead friend, Towers Court was left in trust to the Squire

Towers Court was left in trust to the Squire until little Anna, who was then five years old, should come of age, which was to be on her attaining her eighteenth year. She was to be educated in France, was to learn every accomplishment which a girl in those times could learn; and was on no account to be separated from her nurse, "the good Bridget," So ran Sir Harry's will.

So mn Sir Harry's will.

As soon as matters could be arranged, the Squire journeyed with his charge and Bridget to France. He placed there in a school at Tours, and waited to see them comfortably settled down. When he came to take his leave of them, for a time, little Anna, who was pule and thin—"fretting after the dear master," as Bridget explained—classed her hands together, and, with the tears running down her checks, implored her "dear guardian" not to leave her.

He took the child in his arms, southed her with gentle, loving words, and spoke long to

He took the child in his arms, southed her with gentle, loving words, and spoke long to her of her father, explaining his wishes with regard to her education, and begging her to help him in carrying out these wishes. She smiled at last, and looking straight into his face, with wonderful determination in her pretty mouth and dark-blue eyes, said: "I will help you, guardian." And she kept her word.

She was naturally a very shy, undemonstrative child, and this unusual outburst of grief made a great impression on the Squire.

He went to see his charge twice every year, and his visits were eagerly looked forward to by the little English girl in her foreign home.

And so the years passed by. The Squire following his many pursuits, and keeping guard over himself, as it were, for the sake of Anna: the girl learning eagerly, and taking advantage of everything which was taught her, not only because she was clever and intelligent, but also in remembrance of her promise to the Squire.

At sixteen she was highly accomplished, and a wonderful and enthusiastic musician, Indeed, as Bridget said, she was "a genus at music."

Indeed, as Bridget said, she was "a genus at music."

She was as shy and as quiet in her manner as of old, but always received the Squire with frank and loving welcome. And he?—

Well, he had changed; for bold rider, fearless huntsman, expert swordsman though he was, he found himself trembling in the presence of this young girl. What was the meaning of it! The old, old story? Aye, even so. But he must never let her know, never let her guess, by look or sign, how dear she had become to him. He must always be her old guardian, nothing more, and must be ready to give her away some day. But this thought made the blood mount to his brow and cheeks, and sent him into a very whirlpool of frenzied passion.

The last two years of Anna's school-days were years of half agony and half bliss to the poor Squire. But they came to an end at last, as all years must; and he made his final journey to Tours to fetch her home.

He was almost thankful that the many farewells to be said made it impossible for her to see much of him before the start.

"Every one has been so good to me, guardian, especially the dear nuns at the Convent. I see much of him before the start.

"Every one has been so good to me, guardian, especially the dear nuns at the Convent. I do not know how to thank them all!" She was very quiet and silent during the journey, and the Squire and Bridget left her much to herself, knowing that her thoughts were with her father and her orphaned home. How she loved it! And yet how she dreaded the first sight of it! But she would have much, so very much, to see about. She would sot be dull away from her school friends. And then her guardian would come and see her constantly. Looking up at him suddenly, she caught so fierce a glance directed at her that she started, and was about to speak, when a bright smile renseured her, and he laughingly arranged some wraps about her.

"You're tired, lass?"

"No, guardian, I'm only thinking." But at look, nevertheless, had startled her greatly.

It was a clear and beautiful autumn morning when they arrived at Towers Court.

The family lawyer was at the door to receive Anna, and all the servants engaged by the Squire—the old housekeeper had remained as caretaker since Sir Harry's death the Squire—the old housekeeper had remained as caretaker since Sir Harry's death —lined the entrance hall, curtsying and bowing low to their young mistress. But old Mildred stepped forward to kiss her hand, when Anna put her arms round her neck and embriced her fondly.

"God bless you, my dear mistress, and send you many years of health and happiness. How like the master you have grown! Why."—taking Anna's face in her hands—"'tis his very self!" and to hide an ominous quivering of her lip, Anna kissed the old woman again, and passed hurriedly along into her father's old study.

and passed hurriedly along into her father's old study.

Here she was left for a time; and when Bridget knocked at the door, saying that the Squire would speak with her, she came out composed and calm, though the nurse saw that the dark-blue eyes had been shedding many tears. She found the Squire waiting for her, hat and whip in hand, "to deliver up the keys of the castle to its fair chatelaine," as he laughingly said. But the laugh was forced and strained.

of the castle to its fair chatelaine," as he laughingly said. But the laugh was forced and strained.

"And now, Anna, my charge of you is over, and my stewardship is at an end. Henceforth you are your own mistress."

"Ah! dear guardian, I shall want you more than ever now! I have no words in which to thank you, no words in which to thank you, no words in which to express how nobly you have carried out my father's trust. But I do thank you from my heart, and I would do anything in the world to show my gratitude to you." As she spoke, the benutiful blue eyes filled with tears. Her words and her unusual tears—tears for him—were more than the Squire could bear. Then and there, in a passionate outburst be told her of his love, seized her in his arms for one brief second, strode away, mounted his horse and was off like a flash of lightning.

For many days he remained alone, struggling against the desire to learn his fate from Anna's lips. Angry with himself for having declared his love, and so seeming to have taken advantage of her words, ashamed for having had so little control over himself, and taking himself to task in the old passionate way.

Anna, meanwhile, was meditating, and was thinking what her answer onght to be. She loved her guardian now as she had loved him

She had heard nothing, had seen nothing, and sat long at the organ, pouring out her supreme happiness in song after song Digitized by Google

195790

as a child. She knew of no other love but this for the Squire, and the love for her father. But what ought she to say! Now was the op-portunity to show him the gratitude she had spoken of. She was very lonely in her large, beautiful home. She missed him truly. She had, as yet, no friends in England.

And thus musing, the Squire found her.

She rose to meet him, with a flush of pleasure, and with the old frank and unembarrassed welcome; but he dared not look up, or meet her eyes, but stood humble and abashed be-her eyes, but stood humble and abashed before her.

"Think no more, Anna, of what I said. It was madness on my part. I was a cowani to ask you to mate yourself with so old a man, and one so unworthy of so fair and gentle a creature. Think no more about it, Anna. But forget my words and forgive me. I come to bid you farewell. I go abroad again."

He had not once looked up, and had spoken burriedly, in a low, hearse whisper.

There was silence in the room.

At last, with a heavy sigh, he raised his head to see Anna standing with her hands outstretched, and to hear her say—with the same steady, quiet determination she had used in speaking to him that day at school, so many steady, quiet determination she had used in speaking to him that day at school, so many years ago..." I will make you, Hubert Godfrey, a true and faithful wife. So help me God!" A short time after they were wedded. Before taking his young wife to Fairlawn Manor, the Squire was all for journeying with her to London town, to have her portrait painted by thegreat artist of the day, to show her all the sights and wonders of the city, to her all the sights and wonders of the city, to introduce her to an uncle and cousin and to many old friends,

Dame Anna, with her beauty and her sweet

Dame Anna, with her beauty and her sweet and gentle manners, won all hearts.

Now and again the Squire had to leave her—the portrait was taking some time—to see after his horses and hounds. Traveling them was slow work, and it took him several days to go and return. During his absence, Dame Anna was left in his uncie's charge. He and his son Eric—a handsome youth destined for the army—were proud indeed to take the beautiful young bride sight-seeing.

But she was glad and happy when the picture was finished, and she and the Squire, with Bridget, started for her new home.

Very busy then was the Dame for many Bridget, started for her new home.

Very busy then was the Dame for many and many a day. Her refined and womanly ways and presence brightened up the old house like a my of sunahine. And very happy and contented seemed the Squire.

The kennels being some distance from the manor, and this still the hunting season, he was contented from the manor.

was constantly from home. Dame Anna was no sportswoman, she had never ridden to hounds, but was nervous and timid with horses, so it came to pass that she was much

Many a young wife might have found the

Many a young wife might have found the time hang heavily on her hands, but she was never dull. Her music was to her what sport was to the Squire—a never failing source of amusement and pleusure.

He had ordered, while in London, for her, a pisnoforte—one of the very best then made, to replace the old Spinet, and had had a small organ built in the round room—or, as it was now called, the Dame's room—and it was here she passed her days, and very often her evenings also. For at this time of the year the Squire had frequent hunting suppers, and these gatherings were not for women.

bad frequent bunting suppers, and these gatherings were not for women.

And so the months passed by.

A quiet, uneventful life.

But soon there came a new and wonderful hope to Anna, which stirred all her woman's nature, and gave her a loy so exquisite as she had never dreamed of. But this hope, although it shone in her beautiful eyes and glorified her lovely face, made her timid and more shy than usual.

"I'll not tell him yet, Bridget."

"Why not, my dearie? "Twill be better to do so."

do so."
"Nay, Bridget, I'il wait a little," and kissing her nurse, she went to join the Squire at the breakfast table.

"Anna, I have a letter from London." Eric asks to be allowed to come and bid us fare-well. Shall be come, my wife?" As Anna looked up to answer "yes," and net her husband's eyes, she blushed botly over face and throat, knowing that for the first time she was keeping something from him. Had she seen the look on his face, she would surely have shared her secret with him!

Eric came to spend a few days at the manor before starting with his regiment for foreign lands. Anna welcomed him with sweet hospitality. But there was a change in her man-ner, a sudden flushing of the fair face, and an expression of joy, which she used not to wear.
What could it mean?

And the Squire set himself to watch.

The Dame and Eric were innocently unconscious of the demon of jealousy which was being reason in the Squire's undisciplined heart, and Anna, as hostess, did the best she could to make the young soldier's short visit as pleasant as possible.

If Anna would only speak now!

On the eve of Eric's departure, he begged for some music on the organ, and as Anna sat there, dressed in white, playing and singing— but playing and singing, as the Squire noticed but playing and singing, as the Squire noticed, with a passion quite unusual.—Eric said, with a passion quite unusual.—Eric said, with boyish admiration, "She looks for all the world, cousin, like a living Saint Cecilia."

Instead of answering, the Squire turned a fierce and livid face to Eric, and left the room, "What can be the matter?" thought the young man. "I must ask the Dame if ought ails bint." But she had heard nothing, had seen nothing and sat long at the organ, pouring out her supretne bappiness in song after song.

after song.

The Squire by this time is nearly mad with rage, and, alas! with drink. And great heaven, what has be in his right hand! A shining, sharp, nurderous rapier! Will no good anget whisper "I will make you. Hubert Godfrey, a true and faithful wife, so help me God?"

O! stay his hand. O! Anna, speak! Alss!

Alas! And he crouches in a dark corner, and watches and waits.

At last the organ is silent.

"Dame, what alls my cousin?"

Anna turns round. "Alls him, Eric, why?"

"He has left the room some time, and had a scowl of suger on his face."

Anna thinks a minute. "I am keeping a secret from him, but I will tell it to him tomorrow." And with a radiant face she passes up the staircase murmuring, "to-m and the swing door closes behind her. "to-morrow,

Eric has his foot upon the stair, when, with one well-nimed thrust the rapier does swift and sure work, and the hopeful young life is ended, "O! God, what have I done! Villain, murderer that I am!" And throwing himself upon the bloody sword, he falls without a groan, pierced to the heart.

And so the hours pass by.

And so the hours pass by.

Anna sat thinking for a long time of her coming happiness. She had sent Bridget—who occupied a small chamber near that of her mistress—to bed. But Anna must have fallen asleep in her chair, for when she woke up, the dawn was breaking—breaking with a weird and ghastly light which made her sleudder. She looked for the Squire in his dressing-room, but not finding him there, a vague uncasiness seized her, and as she passed the guest-chamber she noticed, what she had not observed the night before, that the door was wide open, and the room was empty, and observed the night before, that the door was wide open, and the room was empty, and thinking "then perhaps something did all him," she made quickly for the staircase. Another minute and the most appalling shriek that was ever heard rang through the house and brought Bridget to the staircase. What a scene! O, what a sad and ghastly scene!

scene!
The other servants had gathered behind, fearful and trembling.
They carried the Dame—who they found clinging to the Squire's neck, with her hair and her white gown covered with his blood—to her room, and laid her on the hed thinking that she, too, was dead.
Bridget sent at once for help, but she knew that many hours must pass before such help could arrive.

could arrive.

As she saw her mistress lying there, quite unconscious, pale and cold, she prayed that her "bonnie bird, her dearie" might never wake again. But she continued to apply restoratives and to chafe the poor hands and feet. After many weary bours, and with another wild and frightful shriek, Dame Anna opened her eyes and sat up in bed. The brautiful, tender eyes had disappeared. In their stead were eyes with such a horror, such a terror in them, that you turned to look for the awful sight they saw!

that you turned to look for the awful sight they saw!
The doctor gave but faint hopes of her recovery. If the child were born—well—perhaps she might rally. But—She never spoke, the expression of intense borror never left her face, and she seemed to see nothing, to know of nothing but that fearful sight, and she walked up and down the fatal staircase for hours together.
It was so pitiful and so terrible a sight that many of the maids ran out of the house, never

many of the maids ran out of the house, never

At last, one morning at break of day, Bridgot, missing her mistress, and going in search of her, found her lying at the foot of the staircase—in the same spot where the Squire had fallen—cold, stiff, quite dead.
Many tears were shed for her and for the blighted life and trugic death. She had been greatly belowed for her goodness, charity, and beaute.

beauty.

In carrying her, for the last time, to her room, the bearers suddenly felt a gentle push and a dimness come across their sight, so that they had to stop a second.

But no impediment could be seen. Again, when the coffin was carried up, the

Again, when the coffin was carried up, the same thing happened.

And Bridget, following, was heard to say—
"Now, don't'ee, don't'ee, my dearle. For cannot frighten your old nurse."

And so it came to pass that a report got spread about that Dame Anna's staircase was haunted by her restless spirit.

The next heir being a minor the house was shut up, and poor Bridget, as care-taker, found it very difficult to get any one to keep her it very difficult to get any one to keep her company.

She was alone in the house, at last, for many years. She never missed a day without mounting the staircase, and the gardeners out-side got to listen with trembling awe for the words: "Now don't'ee, don't'ee, my dearle. You cannot frighten your old nurse."

(Continued in January Journal)

MISS DICKENS AND THE JOURNAL

N presenting the above opening chapters of Miss Dickens' story, the JOURNAL prints I. Miss Dickens' story, the Journal prints the first piece of fiction ever written by her. The concluding part will be contained in the January number. For an issue closely following this, Miss Dickens has written a delightfully reminiscent article on "What My Futher Taught Us." showing the methods of education pursued by Charles Dickens in the training of his children. This article will be entirely independent of the splendid series of articles about her father, by Miss Dickens, which, under the title of "My Futher as I Recall Him," will appear later in the pages of the Journal. This series will passess the same charm of personal interest which has placed Mrs. Beecher's reminiscences among the most successful ventures of the Journal. the most successful ventures of the Jouanna.
thus for. Miss Dickens has prepared each one of these articles with a special degree of care and loving interest, and all through the series will be detected the hand of a daughter who not only loved her father, but thoroughly understood him. What Miss Dickens saw of her father's inner life will now be told for the first time in her Journal articles. It will be seen, therefore, that for the thousands of lovers of Dickens, a rich store of Dickensonia is in prospect in the Journal during 1892.

CHRISTMAS EVE

BY MARGUERITE MERINGTON

THE children dreamed the whole night through

Of stockings hung the hearth beside; And, bound to make each dream come true, Went Santa Claus at Christmas-tide, Black stockings, red, brown, white and gray-Long, little, warm, or patched and thin-The kindly Saint found on his way, And, smiling, popped his presents in.

But as he felt his hoard grow light, A tear-drop glistened in his eye: "More children on this earth to-night, Than stars are twinkling in the sky.

Upon the white and frozen snow He knelt, his empty bag beside-Some little socks must empty go, Alas : "-said he-" this Christmas-tide!

Though I their stockings may not heap With gifts and toys and Christmas cheer, These little ones from sorrow keep; For each, dear Lord, to Thee is dear t

"Thou wert a little Child like them"— Prayed he—"For whom I would provide Long years ago in Bethlehem, That first and blessed Christmas-tide !

"As soothed Thee then Thy mother's kiss, And all her comfort, sweet and kind, So give them love, lest they may miss The gifts I know not where to find !

" That sweetest gift, dear Lord, bestow On all the children far and wide; And give them hearts as pure as snow"— Prayed Santa Claus—" at Christmas-tide!"

WHEN I WAS A GIRL

*L-By AMELIA E. BARR

MRS. BARR

WHEN I was VV agirt tilved in a different world. I write these words with a thoughtful con-sciousness, for nothing material of my childhood's world remains. I have, indeed, the spiritual and men-tal outgrowth of that world; but all its actual environments have bewas born among the lonely sea-stretches of Silverdale, in the little town of Ulverston, a neighborhood saturated with the spirit and influence of George Fox; and I think the soft which-h, which-h of the sen waves spoke to me long before I could speak. I have a cradle memory of the great sea, whose voice has baunted and called me all the days of my

But when the full consciousness of child-But when the full consciousness of child-hood came, I was living among the mountains of the English lake district, in the ancient town of Penrith. It was in the year 1836, and this year is the first A. D. I remember. King William the Fourth reigned then, and, in se-cluded parts of England, life was very similar to what it had been in Queen Elizabeth's time. I remember well the coronation of Queen Vic-toria. I remember the great Chartist riots. I toria. I remember the great Chartist riots. If remember England's abolition of slavery, and the scorned beginnings of the Testotal move-ment. I remember the birth of tract and Bible societies, and of missionary efforts. I remember the bringing home of the first luci-fer match, and the putting away forever of the flint and tinder-box. I remember when there was no help for the poor, and sick, and ignorant, but in private charity. When I was a girl about nine years old, letters were great events; there was no penny postage, and only three thousand post-offices in all England and Wales. It was about this time the Govern-ment began to think of Lancaster or National schools; there was not then a Ragged School in all England. In those days the sanitary conditions of towns were so dreadful that the rich lived twice as long as the poor; and not half of the population, in the rural districts, could read. Little children in factories and mines were worked as brutes-of-men still work horses; and, for the working-man, no one had dreamed of libraries, or of any kind of recreation.

In my twelfth year I first saw a railroad and a steamboat. I had never read about them, and I had never seen a picture of them, and I can feel yet the swelling of heart and the glow of imagination with which they filled me. For in those days there were few newspapers taken; and they were considered as the pecu-liar fuxury of men. I should have as soon thought of smoking my father's pipe as of reading his newspaper. There were no papers reading his newspaper. There were no papers at all for women and children, if I except the "Court Journal" for women of rank. But it never occurred to me, even in childhood, that I should remain among those lonely moun-tains. I was filled with longings for the yellow splendors of Asia, and the magnificence of those lands towards. Sunrising which the "Arabian Nights" had made me familiar with.

*The first of a series of articles in which a sex lette of the most famous women of America and Europe have been indexed as left how life broked to their in dir-heed, what were their hopes, their dromes and their ametrious, and how they have been realized in inter-years. The other articles in this series will appear in succeeding basics of the Journal.

I dreamed my own stories, and in them set my future years to deeds of high emprise and impossible self-denials. Many of my kinfolk had been, or were, East-Indian sailors. I used to sit in their low parlors, smelling of camplior and sandal-wood, and dream of trepical factors and arrival and treatment. cal forests, and minorets, and turbaned men. Bagdad and Cairo were more real to me than London and Paris. Over the chimney-piece of one parlor there was an ear of Indian corts, bung by a ribbon. It is impossible to explain how that long, golden cone stirred and moved me. Impossible to tell what 1 felt when I first saw a four agre corn-field in Texas—the tail blowing leaves, the fresh snowy cars in my own hands! My first meal of corn-ears was like eating a sacrament. In some way, I was eating the harvest of my childhood.

But I owe more to Queen Scheherezade than to any mere mortal. She was chamberfain to all the portals of fancy; she filled my childhood with wonderful dreams; she made it joy to me to live; she opened every sense, built up lordly cal forests, and minorets, and turbaned men.

with wonderful dreams; she made it joy to me to live; she opened every sense, built up lordly pleasure bouses in my imagination, and carried me on the enchanted square of carpet to all the spicy lands toward the Sunrising. I hope, beyond the questing and the guessing of this world, to know who wrote those marvelous tales, and thank them.

I lived in books. I was shipwrecked with Crusoe; I went round the world with Anson and Cook; I crossed the Sahara with Denham and Clapperton, and wandered hungry and forforn with Mungo Park on the Niger. With every one of Fox's martyrs I suffered; De Foe's book of "The Plague of London" made me walk softly and cast a "hush!" over life for days and weeks. I did not only read through books—I felt through them. The books that books—I fell through them. The books that formed my mind are now old-fashioned broks; unfortunately, children think them so. They were my first loves, and I adore them yet; for literature, as well as life, has its early and its latter loves. its latter loves.

Life was all a wonder-land to me. To travel Life was all a wonder-land to me. To travel everywhere! that was my dream and hope. And our fervent desires are generally prophecies. God is too good to inspire a want which He does not intend to gratify. I have traveled all my sixty years. It is only within the last few months I have began to think—"that will do! I have seen enough!" Not certainly what I planned to see; but I have seen lands fairer and better than my dreams. I have found out that the Rocky Mountains were not only on the map: my feet have trod them. The Persian Gulf and the Red Sea—which had been in my girlhood the enchanted roads to lands of enchantment—have been nobly exchanged in my girlhood the enchanted roads to lands of enchantment—have been nobly exchanged for the Atlantic and the Mississippi and the waters of Mexico.

In my sixteenth year I left home and went to a distant school. I went away full of great expectations, but they run in two channels—I would go to far strange countries, and I would do some great and wonderful thing. This achievement never took a literary form. It was always to be religious and charitable. And so, naturally, my eyes were turned towards missionaries. My knight was to be a Soldier of the Cross.

a Soldier of the Cross.

I look back to-day over fifty years, and see how little of my own planning has come to pass. A man of commerce had always appass. A man of commerce had always appeared to me as a man below my standard and my station. To "Suit the Sen" and to "Serve the Altar" were the only ideals and traditions of my family. I was resolved to marry a missionary—and I married a manufacturer of woolen yarns, nevertheless, a true knight, who, in the great strait of 1867, cheerfully faced death and laid down his life. I had resolved to go East—far East. I was sent to the far, far West. I had fully resolved to be a great philanthropist—a saviour of men and a great philanthropist—a saviour of men and women ready to perish. Until mid-life, my heart and hands were full and busy with the cares of my home, and the care and education of my sons and daughters. The countries I dreamed about I have

The countries I dreamed about I have not known; but God has shown me far better ones. I have not been permitted to wear my life away as a ransom for many; but I have been permitted to do, and to bear, the noblest duties and sufferings of wifebood and motherhood; and I have been made able, but I late good areas and large to make able, by God's good grace and love, to write for the

by God's good grace and love, to write for the women of my generation some words which have strengthened feeble hands and made hopeful the despairing.

I am now asked bow I have found life to be? I nuswer, without besimition—I have found life good. It has been good always—in poverty or wealth, in joy or sorrow, tenting awhile or wandering about. The influences of childhood never left me. The tales I had read in the lovely study among the mountains and lakes of "The North Country," I told to my children under the stars of the tropic nights. And if ever an hour's doubt of God's care has And if ever an hour's doubt of God's care has come to me in later years, it could find no come to me in later years, it could find no resting-place, because my beart was sure to whisper—"He loved you when you were a child. Can you doubt Him now?" I have found life a warfare, but I have always found the weapons provided sufficient for the victory. The obstacle has been the necessity for the leap over it. And the God of my childhood bas been the Guard and Guide of my weath and the Friend of my cray bairs. my youth, and the Friend of my gray hairs.

And the conclusion of the matter is this:

Let young girls build their glorious castles for the future; and, having laid out their lives, let them "Commit their way unto the Lord, and He will bring it to pase"; or, if He see it wise not to give them the desire of their bearts, still let them "Trust in Him," for then, surely. He has something better in its place.

Then, when they are sixty years of age, they may say with me.

may say with mes-"I do not feel the snow of years,

Sap mounts and pulses bound : My eyes are filled with happy tears, My ears with happy sound.

My life still keeps the dew of morn, And what I have I give; Being right glad that I was born, And thankful that I live."

Y grandfather lived on a rice plantation on the Cape Fear River, in the section known as "The Neck," a region noted for open-handed hospitality, wealth, retinement and culture. He owned a large number of negroes, and was an amiable, easy-going master, much more interested in literature than in rice planting, and preserving in his daily life many of the habits of his English ancestors.

English ancestors.

The Christmas holidays on his plantation lasted from Christmas Eve—always a half-holiday—until the Yule log burnt in two after New Year's Day. The first work done in the New Year was the selection by the negroes of the Yule log, or—as they all called it, the "Christmas back-log," for the next Christmas fire.

The driver * marshaled a gang of the best axe hands, and down they went into the swamp to select the biggest, knottiest, most indestructible express tree that could be found, which was felled with great ceremony, while the hands chanted a part of the "Coonah" song:—

"Christmas comes but once a year Ho rang do rango! Let everybody have a share, Ho rang do rango!"

When the tree was cut down the butt end of the stock was measured the length of the hall fireplace "up to degret house," and cut, or sawed off, then hauled down to the canal and anchored where it would get thoroughly water-logged during the ensuing twelve months.

The object of this was to keep it from being burnt out too soon; for as long as the Yule log burned the whole plantation force had holiday. A day or two before Christmas the back-log was hauled to the house and given a bed in the sand, so that the surface-water could drain off. Christmas morning, the moment the first misguided fowl "crowed for day," the back-log was carried into the great holly-wreathed hall; the massive brass and irons were drugged forward on the wide, ample hearth, a bed of wet ashes was carefully prepared, and the huge log laid on it; and then an artistic fire of frugrant, resinous lightwood and seasoned oak was built up against it, and the revels had begun.

The week before Christmas—ah!

what a deliciously busy and expectant season it was!

The fanners † full of eggs, that were carried into the store-room, gave promise of endless puddings, pies and cakes; while aundry tantalizing whiffs that were borne to us whenever we ranged near the door—and, who could keep away?—made us all long with childish eagerness to shorten the Busy days they were, indeed. Holly and mistletoe had to be wrenthed for the hall, dining-room, library and hall-room. Caudle papers were to be cut and dipped in melted spermaceti. Cake papers, of most elaborate design, were to be originated by anut's artistic All the china, silver and glass had to

"De John Coonahs comin"!" And there they come, sure enough?

One of the negroes, who was selected by the over-seer as a superintendent of the working force, or "field hands."

t Fanners were large, square split baskets, holding boot two and a-half bushels, and were for carrying sugh rice from the fiens to the mortars.

gathered on the front piazza, which was string with hampers filled with all sorts of things for Christmas gifts. Grandpa invariably gave money, fifty cents in silver to the men, a quarter to the women, and a shilling and sixpence, respectively, to "the chaps" (half-grown boys) and little children, who, in plantation parlance, were called "the trash gang." The ladies distributed the contents of the hampers. Gloves, comforters, Madras handkerchiefs, printed cotton handkerchiefs, balls, tops, knives, pipes, shawls, aprons, cravats, caps, hoods, all sorts of things that experience had taught their owners the negroes most delighted in. Barrels of apples, and great watters piled up high with gingerbrend and cakes, were divided out, until the last little bow-legged tot had been made happy.

great walters piled up high with gingerbread and cakes, were divided out, until the last little how-legged tot had been made happy.

From the piazza, in a straight line to the store-room, filed all the negro women who were wives, "to draw Christmas," which meant getting an extra allowance of meat, rice, molasses, coffee, sugar, floor, dried fruit, and anything of the sort they chose to ask for, to make their holiday feasting. The week before there had been a great hog killing, so that fresh pork would be in abundance for every cabin at the quarters. Then everywhere revelry had full swing. The gentlemen, headed by "ole Master." went deerhunting, with a large pack of hounds and out-riders, returning to "a great diving dinner"—a special phrase that seemed to heighten the magnitude of the feast to the negroes.

The evening closed with a dance in the ball-room. Uncle Robin, dressed in my great-grandfather's regimentals, and looking, of course, supremely absurd, was the head fiddler, and a remarkably fine one, too. It was delightful to watch him ascend the musicians' stand, bowing with great ceremoniousness to the friendly greatings of the neighborhood gentry, from whom he was quite sure of cans stand, bowing with great ceremonious-ness to the friendly greatings of the neighbor-hood gentry, from whom he was quite sure of a perfect shower of gold and silver pieces in the pauses of the dance. "Big Ben" and "Cousin Hannah's Be-," who played second and third fiddle to the old autocrat, followed with due humility behind him, quite certain of as many reproofs from him as they got quarters from the young gentlemen. The board masks covered some; while streaks and spots of red, white and yellow paint metamor-phosed others; and immense beards of horseair, or Spanish moss, were plentiful.

The leader—for there seemed to be some regular organization among them, though I never could persuade any negro to explain it to me-was the

Uncle Robin, dressed in my great-grandfather's regimentals bells were fastened to the fringes of rags

The banjo, the bones, triangles, castanets, fifes, drams, and all manner of plantation musical instruments, accompanied the procession. One of the Coonahs, generally a small and very nimble man, was dressed in woman's clothes, and though dancing with frantic real, never violated the proprieties sup-posed to be incumbent upon the wearer of skirts.

Once before the hall-door, the lender snapped his whip with a crack like a pistol-shot. Everything stood still for an instant; we dared not draw a breath, and could hear the tumultuous benting of our hearts as we pressed closer to mammy or grandpa.

The awful stillness is broken by another resonant crack of the whip; and at the instant the whole medley of instruments began to play, and, with their first note, out into the open sprang the dancers. Those weird, grotesque, even hideous creatures embody the very ideal of joyous, harmonious movement. Faster and faster rings out the wild barbaric melody; faster and faster falls the beat of the flying feet, never missing the time by the space of a midge's breath. One after another the dancers fall out of line, until only the woman and the leader are left to exhibit their best steps and move-

About this time one of the dancers, About this time one of the dancers, a hideous travesty of a bear, snatches a hat off of the head of the nearest pickaninny, and begins to go round to the "white folks," to gather the harvest of pennies with which every one is provided. All the while the dance was in progress the musical voice of the leader was chanting the Cooneh song, the refrain of which was taken up by hundreds of voices.

was taken up by hundreds of voices.

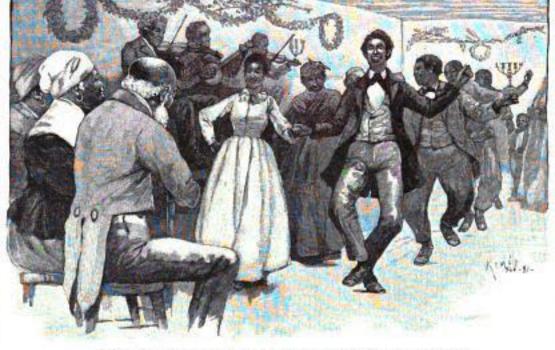

As the wild chant draws to a close, out of the hall door run a bevy of white children with laps and hats full of nuts, raisins, apples, oranges, cakes and candy, and scatter the whole among the crowd. Such a scramble as follows! The last fragment gathered up, all at once the leader cracks his whip, and whiris once the leader cracks has whip, and whites round with his face from the house, and the crowd marches to the next plantation.

Some time during the Christmas week the negroes had a grand ball. There was a very large and comfortable servants' hall attached to my grandfather's kitchen, and in it the ball was held. It was made gay with holly and myrtle boughs, myrtle-wax candles in the ball-room sconces lighted the scene, aided by the immense silver branch candlesticks, the crowning glory of the great drawit Not seldom the ball was opened by master, hisself," who danced either with his mammy, the driver's wife, or some newlywedded bride.

But, meanwhile, the Yule log has been slowly burning out. Uncle Tony, coming in to mend the fire, discovers that the log is only two chunks now. When the family go to dinner he will carry one chunk out, extinguish the fire upon it, and lay it in the path between the house and the kitchen. The next morning he will put it away in the cor-ner of the wood-house to start the next year's Christmas fire. But while it lies in the path it is a sign well understood. Over the planta-tion has flown the news, "De back-log done burn in two, an' Cousin Tony lay um out!"

The long merry festival has ended. The negroes will dance and frolic all night long, and to-morrow, at daybreak, the overseer's horn will blow; each gang will muster under its head man, and the plantation work begin.

During Christmas week the negroes had a grand ball "in de qua'ters," servants had set out all the materials for making egg-nog on a gigantic scale. A fanner of fresh eggs, great dishes of sugar, and the cellaret of liquors. When the eggs were beaten to the required degree, etc., until the yelks were the color of rich cream and the whites adhered steadily to the dish when it was turned upside down, the whole was put to-gether in the gigantic china punch-bowl, relic of ancestral feastings across seas in "ye old countrie." I would not dare to say how many eggs, or how much brandy and rum went into the concection of that bowl of egg-nog.

house filled with guests. We children were scrubbed within an inch of our lives, so as to be clean for Christmas, mammy well know-ing the impossibility of getting one of us to consent to the daily both next morning. Then there was a great flitting about to hang

Then there was a great flitting about to hang up the stockings, and mammy must take notice just whose stocking it was that hung at the foot of the bed, and whose hung on either side of the fireplace, and on the bureau knob; while mammy's own stocking, by universal consent, was given the best place in the room, and hung on a chair right before the fireplace. Then we were tucked into bed, quite sure we would lie awake to see Santa Claus, but only rousing when at four o'clock the horn at the quarters blew a long, clear blast:

horn at the quarters blew a long, clear blast; and we felt the floor shake as the men stagered through the hall passage with the great

By the time our stockings were emptied and examined, grandpa, fully dressed, had come out of his room into the hall where the

When it was pronounced right, a waiter of glasses was filled and handed round to the assembled company; and then claw-footed mahogany table was lifted out on the wide front piazza, the flaming sconces were ighted, and the egg-neg bowl, surrounded by pyramids of tumblers, placed upon it. The driver, lurking somewhere in the shadows, began to beat a furious tattoo on a drum; and, as if by magic, all at once the house was surrounded by a sea noise was surrounded by a sea of torch-bearing negroes, all the hands from the quarters, who had come over to wish "ole master" a happy Christmas, and to receive from him a glass of egg-nog spicee, My grandfather knew every

My grandfather knew every one of his negroes, big and lit-tle, by name; and his greeting was always personal to each. They came up in couples, ac-cording to see and dignity, and corning to see and dignity, and the unvarying formula was:
"Sarvant, Master; merry Christmas to you, an' all de fambly, sir!" "Thank you, ack; merry Christmas to you and yours!"
The "drinking Christmas in "is at last ended;

the negroes returned to the quarters, and after breakfast reassembled again to "git Christ-mas," as they phrased it. All the family banjo player was a unique—a great, big, heavy, awkward-looking fellow, black until he looked blue—and a typical negro; the very last man on the plantation that you would have suspected of having a note of music in him. But just give him a banjo! Dan tuned languidly, with half-shut eyes, struck a note or two to test the strings, and then—if you had one drup of dancing blood in your veins, you belonged to him till he chose to stop.

chose to stop. All the negroes came over to the house "to look on," and it would have been hard to tell which half of the company—those indoors or out—had the merriest time. Somewhere about midnight there was a general distribu-tion of hot apple-toddy and rum-punch; and was ended.

The second day after Christmas the John Coonahs * began to make their appearance. Sometime in the course of the morning, an ebony herald, breathless with excitement, would project the announcement: "De John Coonahs comin'!" and away flew every pair of feet within nursery precincts.

There they come, sure enough! A long, grotesque procession, winding slowly over the hill from the quarters; a dense body of men the from the quarters; a delise body of men (the women took no part in it, save as specta-tors) dressed in the oddest, most fantastic-garb, representing birds and beasts and men; Ragged and tattered, until "ragged as a Coonah" was a common plantation simile; with strips and tatters of all sorts of cloth, in which white and red flannel had a conspicu-cus cart sewed all over their clothes in tuffs ous part, sewed all over their clothes in tufts and fringes. They were, indeed, a marvelous spectacle. Rude imitations of animals' heads, with and without horns, hid some faces; paste-

*I have been unable to discover the origin of the Coonales, and do not know in how many of the Southern States they were known. My impression is that the custom was introduced into South Carolina by the slaves who accompanied Governor Str John Vesmans from Barbadoes, and from theire were beought by his descendants into North Carolina, when they re-settled his old colony on the Cape Fear Silver. They were confined altogether to the low country, or tide-water region. The Coosalts were an institution principally known on the South Carolina, Georgia and Fierda coast, and in New Orleans.

By Mrs. Burton Harrison

EN TWO PAPERS-FIRST PAPER

THE PERSON OF TH

O properly appreciate New York society in the meridian splen-dor of today, one trast with it the recorded bered pictures of its past. Up to the time of the war between the States the town was hardly more than a huge overgrown village, with ideas, cus toms, homes and equipments that are sur-passed in elegance by those of many far west-ern towns recently created on the border-line of American civilization.

To read the descriptions of and satires upon the aristocracy of Gotham a little over forty years ago, makes one smile with a sort of superior amusement at the thought of the leap progress has made into the broad plane of modern culture. For it seems to me bald folly to ignore the fact that much of this luxury we decry as demoralizing to the age, brings within everybody's grasp some share, otherwise unattainable, of the influences that refine and educate. If one is to judge by the authors and preachers of the beginning of this pregnant half-century, people were then just as full of striving after place and power; then just as wont to push away the stepping-stones they had used on which to rise, just as material and of the world worldly, as now. But that surveying it is as if we had turned an opera-glass to look through the broad end, the society of that period does not differ in its salient points from ours.

It is farther back—about the year 1830—that we catch releasant climposes of the Knicker. To read the descriptions of and satires upon satient points from ours.

It is farther back—about the year 1830—that we catch pleasant glimpses of the Knickerbocker life, whose foundation was impacted, apparently by forces beyond the reach of change. With a population of about two hundred thousand, for the most part hardmarking and self-respective citizens. New Yorknundred thoctsand, for the most part hard-working and self-respecting citizens, New York recognized few of the purely stiticial bound-aries that make the sets of to-day, like circles striking each other to rebound. The inherited aristocracy of the place opened its doors gra-ciously to those whose talents and energy had lifted there to a whose talents and energy had lifted them to stand on a par with their enter-tainers. Thrift in business, probity in affairs, intellectual supremacy, were the ohief keys to unlock portals desirable to enter. The general quietude of life, the early hours kept, the sanctity of the home-circle in which the guest was deemed honored to be included—not al-lowed merely to see drawing-room and divingtable once a year, then rigidly shut out till the next time, as now—all conspired to further the process of "simplification," insisted upon by Tolstol as necessary to the ideal social life.

IT is like a fairy-tale to bear some dear old dowager of the ancient stock, whom one meets occasionally enshrined in her rightful place in modern New York society, tell of her "coming-out" and marriage in that Golden Age already so remote. In the family mansion in White street—a site built on by her father in preference to one of equal value in Broadway, because the old gentleman was afraid of the noise and dust of a post-road—she had grown up to receive company in a best parlor, furnished after a pattern unfamiliar to the rising generation of to-day. On the floor was a carpet strewn with roses and filies; in the recesses on either side of an Italian marble mantelpiece were hair-cloth sofas; a marble centre-table held puzzle-cards and a Scott's Bible on a special mat. The cideboard in the war worsted mat; the sideboard in the rear room offered decanters of Madeira and Santa Cruz rum always in view, beside a china basket of apples, and another of freshly made crullers. Girls and young men, invited to spend the evening, arrived soon after seven o'clock and left at ten. After a cotillion or two-for the waltz was deemed improper—some young lady would be called on to show her steps in a scarf-dance, acquired from the dancing master of the hour. Music proposed, resulted in "Gaily the Troubadour" or "Home, Sweet Home," the songstress accompanying herself on the piano-forte. Supper, consisting of cof-fee, biscuits, shredded ham and grated cheese, jellies, nuts and oranges, with—on great occa-sions—an oyster stew, was handed to the guests. "Dinners, in those days, were prin-cipally 'stag,'" goes on the sweet old Madam, around whom agroup of women have gathered after a modern banquet, while awaiting the return of the men from table. "A few con-spicuous people kept famous cooks, and owned wine-cellars of renown; but, for the ladies, tea-parties were considered in better taste. My mother's waffles, with cinnamon and sugar dusted over them after the butter was put on, were considered fit to set before a king."

The first of a series of articles on social life in six of the foremost American cities, each city being sketchest by one of its leading social leaders. The two papers closely following Mrs. Harrison's articles are:

WASHINGTON SOCIETY, By Mrs. Admiral Dahlgren. CHICARO SOCIAL LEFE, By Mrs. Reginald DeKoven. After which articles by writers of equal note will follow on pocial life in Boston, San Francisco and Philadelphia.

WELL, well! A wedding, was quite an W extravagant affair. My wedding-dress? It was made, of course, by Whittingham—satin, thick as a board, cream-tinted, cut low in the neck, and the bertha a frill of yellowish-blond isce—laced up behind, awfully night, I'm afraid, and the skirt resching to the insten. Then I were a pair of Lane's white step. Then I wore a pair of Lane's white satin boots, and six-button white kids. Early in the afternoon had come Martel to dress my hair in three buge bows. Oh, how tired my hair in three buge bows. Oh, how tired I was before he put on my orange-wreath to be crowned by a long blond veil. My bouquet, I well remember, was composed of white monthly roses, grown in the dining-room windows of my husband's maiden sunt, and surrounded with geranium leaves; and the bolder was of gold, set with pearls. The groom and groomsmen, who arrived at dusk, wore blue coats with brass buttons, the state of them had been supported by the state of them had been supported by the state of them had been supported by the fied shirt bosoms. Every one of them had submitted to have his hair frizzed by a fashionable barber. We stood, during the wedding, between the folding doors, and, after it, went down in the basement to the supper. Yes, dear, my mother mixed the bride's cake—black cake, an old receipt—and it was iced by the confectioner. Contoit furnished the icethe confectioner. Contoit furnished the ice-cream, but the supper was mostly cooked at home. Turkeys, hams, chickens, game, pre-serves, jellies, blanc-manges, brandied-peaches, grapes, raisins, nuts, plenty of Stuart's mot-toes and candies, cake of all kinds, Madeira, port and sherry were thought all-sufficient then for gentlefolks. I shall have to own that the bride had a finger in most of the prepara-tions. I blanched every almond mamma used.

"The most formidable ceremony was the first appearance of the bride and groom for the fashappearance of the bride and groom for the fish-ionable stroll on Broadway in the afternoon. Langh as much as you please, ladies, but I wore a pearl brocade, with leg-of-mutton sleeves, a steepte-crowned hat of white satin trimmed with orange-blossoms, and a long white lace well that reached nearly to my beels. Of course, I sported the gold watch that was my wedding gift, stuck in my belt and secured by a thick gold chain around the neck! Arm-m-arm with my bushand, we were naturally a thick gold chain around the neck! Arm-niarm with my busband, we were naturally much observed, but it was the thing to do.

* * * Surely you've had enough? Well, one more detail that I've heard very seldom told.
In summer-time, belies and beaux walked together to Contoit's Ice-Cream Garden on the west side of Broadway, between Leonard and Franklin streets. It was thickly planted with trees, and had walks with private boxes railed off on either side, where a young fellow could sit with his sweetheart, and eat ices and poundcake and drink lemonade; what I'm afrail will shock you mothers of young girls, is that will shock you mothers of young girls, is that he generally paid for the treat. Ha! ha! ha! There come the gentlemen to wonder, as usual, what we women find to talk about!"

THE middle period of the nineteenth century presents to the student of New York sociology a less inviting aspect than the one preceding it. People who had made fortunes by purveying to the gentry just described, were beginning to push their way post their early patrons. The newly enriched lost no time in fulfilling the necessary conditions of the then fashionable life. They took pews in Grace Church, boxes at the opera, wore cashmere shawls, set up a carriage with coarbman in livery instead of the baggy and pair with which they had been wont to spin along the Third avenue; subscribed to the Society Library, the "Home Journal" and "Trobriand's Review"; bought their books of Crowen, their THE middle period of the ninetcenth cenview"; bought their books of Crowen, their trousers of Derby, their bonnels of Miss Lau-son, put their names on the lists of "Dickens balls" and the Washington Monument; and, last but not least, contrived to get themselves into the good graces of the indispensable Mr. Brown. No chapter of the period would be complete without allusion to this portly carrisge-opener, the link between the curbstone and society, as he was styled by some ready wit, To be a member of " Brown's Brigade" much a part of the ambition of a young blood, until twenty years ago, as to be able to culti-vate a moustache and dance the redown.

SINGLE man owning the snug income of A two thousand a year, in the beginning of the fifties, could live on it, it is said, to include all needful indulgences in fashionable rites, He could wear wide-bottomed trousers, a hat set a riny bit to one side of his pomaded locks, a "Joinville" tie, Alexandre's straw-colored kid gloves; could frequent the cyster-shops of Florence and Sherwood; drop in to laugh at Burton in "The Serious Family"; appland Jenny Lind at Castle Garden; visit the boxes of his friends at the opera-conducted by Max Maretzek; show himself in the Broadway dress parade from Bleecker street to Fourteenth street between the hours of three and four, and be seen at the best balls. The possession of a fortune of one hundred thousand dollars was esteemed, in that halovon time, sufficient excuse for a merchant's retirement from business, while old New Yorkers still quote the saying of one of their number, then re-garded as a specimen of satiric pleasantry: "A man with $500,000 is just as well off as if he were rich."

WE must now take another bound forward in the century, to consider the ward in the century, to consider the present condition of those men and women whose mothers—at the time when Mr. F. O. C. Darley made some of his charming drawings of "Ladies in Society"—wore skirts with three flounces, hair in low bandeaux with wreaths of flowers or leaves, and wide berthas of state of seal leaves and the leaves of their law. wreaths of flowers or leaves, and wide berthas of real lace around the shoulders of their lowcut gowns; whose idea of summer bliss was a visit to the United States Hotel at Saratoga, the Ocean House at Newport, or the Pavilion House at Sharon; who read Tapper between covers of papiermaché, and "doated" on Nathaniel Parker Willis.

It is useless in a sketch so brief as this to attempt to deal with more than the mere outer shell of modern society in New York. The interest which our continent at large has man-interest which our continent at large has manifested as to the sayings, doings, habits and etiquette of the body generally known as the Four Hondred, shows conclusively that externals are what the public cares to see. The subject, surviving ridicule enough to have trampled out of existence a weaker plant, springs up anew like the "chamomile which flourisheth most when crushed to earth." The craving for light in the dark pathway of social advancement is universal in our land. New York serves as a model for a countless number of towns and hamlets of which the actors in her drama of society know not the sterest which our continent at large has manactors in her drama of society know not the names; and as the first European hearers of the tales of the Arabian Nights were charmed by stories of Oriental sumptuousness in which they might not share, so the readers of New York "society columns," everywhere, feed their imagination with the pictured splendors of the most extravagant city in any land.

A DMITTED to be the most astonishing feature of modern society in New York—I do not say modern fashionable society, because several of the names upon its shining list are not yet seen in those of the functions enjoyed by the so-called Four Hundred—is the number of colossal fortunes owned by individuals. Two men are circl who are reported to enjoy the revenues from estates of $150,000,000 each. Others—between twenty-five and thirty of these enviable sonts—lie down at night with the agreeable reflection that they may upon the morrow, if so disposed, make ducks and drakes of fortunes ranging from five millions to one hundred millions each. As to the "one-millionnires-and-over," they are quite common cattle in our streets. Naturally enough, the dazzle of these facts leads people outside of New York to fancy that the whole of society is in the attitude glowingly described by Thackerny's Vicomte de Florac to express his prosperity. "Sitting surrounded by splendors, before golden vases, crowned with flowers, with valets to kies our feet." Entire columns of small print are devoted to the jeweled crowns, the strings of black pearls and threaded diamonds bought from the sales of royalty deposed or deceased; the dinner-services of gold and porcelain; the forests of orchids, the curtains and table-cloths of price-less lace, the town-houses, the country-houses, the equipages and the yachts with boudoirs less lace, the town-houses, the country-houses, the equipages and the yachts with boudoirs fitted in white and gold and silken broideries that would have seemed impossible save to the fevered imagination of a writer of corsair romances twenty years ago. As a keen com-mentator on American character has recently observed: "When the material rewards of success are so great, the American mind has no choice but to broad on them." This discussion choice but to brood on them." This discussion of wealth has, to all appearance, indeed become our crowning reproach among other nations, who declare that while money rules the world, we alone make no pretense at veiling our worship of plutocracy, and are content to let our "spiritual squalor" appear before all men's eyes.

A GAINST such sweeping critics it were folly to attempt defense. But it is conceded by more than one observer who has watched its evolution since the war, that society in New York has, out of its varied elements, built up a much more interesting structure than before. It is a part of history for the Old to protest against the New, and to end by coalescing with it. Nowhere has this truit of human nature been more emphasized than in the great commercial contra where it trait of human nature been more emphasized than in the great commercial centre where it is easily within memory to recall sharp denunciation, by certain members of the old Colonial families, of the pretensions of some of those to whose parties they are now quite eager to be bidden. Said a young scion of an historic stock while discussing the threatened districts of carriers into two factions, the division of society into two factions—the aristocrats, high in established pride of place, and the new element of lavish entertainers "Do you think a fellow who can be sure of getting the best music, the best dancing and the best food in one of the best houses, and in company of women who are all pretty and in company of women who are all pretty and jolly—where the evening goes like a streak— is likely to prefer crowding into one of the ancestral coffins they call parlors, with a lot of his mother's friends, just because each one of 'em has a pedigree and undertakes to saiff' at those who baven't? No, thank you."

This child of the century but voices in his

artless way the sentiments of many of his kind. As one sheep jumps, the others follow. The younger—and, in consequence, the gayer— element, settles the question decisively. The great new palaces throw wide their doors, stretch their thick-piled crimson carpets across the sidewalk, line their halls with flunkies, embower their rooms in palms and growing roses, capture artists to charm the ears, and bedeck their walls with treasures to charm the eyes, and, presto! the miracle is worked. The fusion has begun that a few years hence will and happily so, in a republican community— rease to call for even so passing a comment. In fact, almost all the chorus one hears comes from neither the members of the old rigime nor from the new; but rather from those distinct outsiders who, while a waiting their own golden opportunity, feel obliged to dispose of their time in malicious comment,

T IS from such sources that emanate the cheap diatribes against the heartless, brainless materialism of the fashionable set. In truth, many of the people so stigmatized are the actual springs that supply the great charities like fountains for waylarers about the city of New York. They are continually alert to found, to watch over, and to broaden the scope of scores of noble enterprises meant to lighten the lot of less fortunate humanity. They give personal supervision to the most prosaic details for the entertainment and comfort of thousands of art-atudents, self-support-ing women, mechanics, street-boys, incumbles ing women, mechanics, street-boys, incurables and sick. Such a thing as sensational "slum-ming" is never heard of here; but the news-papers that chronicle the balls and dinners of Mrs. Cresus might as often report that lady's appearance in a plain gown at the banquet she has provided for newsboys, or among the beds of the hospital she has built and endowed; not to mention that she and her husband and whither are meaning the found are a state of the not to mention that she and her husband and children are generally found among the quiet church-going folk on Sunday in their pews. In domestic life—one feels inclined so say a word on a side so seldom presented to the public—the same conspicuous type is found to be, as a rule, a devoted wife and mother. The danger to American youth of the luxurious classes, would truly seem to be the risk of over-training, over-consideration from his parents. Unlike the youngster of the same class of society in England, who is, after the fashion of Tom Brown, sent off toschool "like a young bear thrown upon the world with all fashion of Tom Brown, sent off to school "like a young bear thrown upon the world with all his troubles before him"; our American school-boy is followed into his necessary exile with longing solicitude, with constant consideration, with daily discussions among the circle left behind, as the personnge of first importance, after the father, in his home. The young girl, as all the world knows, is indulged much more than most princesses of the blood-royal at whose home-education history has given a glimpse.

THE complaint of exclusiveness oftenest registered against the fashionable set is justified by the physical inability of women justified by the physical inability of women who go much into society to solve the problem of making both ends meet. In the give-and-take of social intercourse they have as much as they can do to pay debts incurred, to return civilities, to attend to the vast correspondence entailed by the growth of their circle and responsibilities, and, worse than all, to daily go upon rounds of calls among people scattered between Washington and Struvesant Sonares. between Washington and Stuyvesant Squares, and the neighborhoods on either side of Cen-tral Park. The matter of days which, in-scribed on the cards of one's acquaintances, stare one in the fact from December to April with unrelenting reminder that there is no cluding the vista of sociability thus opened, might occupy a chapter to itself.
Dinner-calls are obligatory; visits of condolence and congratulation as recurrent as ocean tides. A thousand and one wines claims ab-tides. A thousand and one minor claims ab-sorb the hours set apart for outside service; and with all this, many women find time for classes, courses and lectures, and often keep up classes, courses and lectures, and often keep up studies in which their young people are em-ployed. Those who talk of the rush of the London season should reflect that what the English concentrate into three months, and put uside in favor of a more leis-urely and rational existence, is by us spread over the entire year. For, in one way or another, our business of pleasure goes on until June, and is immediately transferred to New-tor tor Bar Harbor, to be taken in the autumn to Lenox and Tuxedo.

to Lenox and Tuxedo. I do not pretend to do more than offer these facts for consideration, while to enter into the ethics of the subject is beyond the province of my sketch. But I stoutly contend that, critics to the contrary, the society of New York that stands before the world as representative, has something of intrinsic charm, intelligence, as the contrary of the contrary that the contrary of cultivation and merit that lifts it far above the materialism commonly said to be the chief characteristic of the age we live in.

[Mrs Harrsson's second article on "Social Life in New York" will appear in the January JOURNAL.]

WINE ON FASHIONABLE TABLES

THE January Journal will contain a special full-page article on "Wine on Fashionable Tables," discussing the point whether the use of wines at fashionable dinners and in the best society is decreasing. The article will have as its contributors the following men and weemen; Changeau M. Darage Han Jahr. women: Chauncey M. Depew, Hon. John Wanamaker, George W. Childs, Hon. Ruther-ford B. Hayes, Col. Elliot F. Shepard, Mrs. William C. Whitney, Mrs. ex-Governor Claffin, Mrs. George J. Gould, Madame Romero and Madame Barrics, which Mrs. Burton Harrison will supplement with an article on "Wine at Women's Lunches.

Tissue Paper Entertainments.

Effective, refined, easy to prepare, inexpensive, Child urncters all drussed in Tissue Paper. They are characters all dressed in Tissue Paper. They are The Floral Rainbow (for 42 Bayes and Girls).

War and Peace (for 45 Bayes.
The Story of Joseph (for 20 Bayes.
The Darling of the Year (for 12 Girls.)
Send 5 cents for new Book and 120 Samples Thous. DENNISON MANUFACTURING CO.

Boston, New York, Phila. Chicago, Cinn. or St. Louis.

HOME STUDY, Young and indddle-aged through and predicts less traction by MASE, at their own House, Pressure Law, Shorthand, etc. Adapted to all ages and both series, Students from every State. Distance no objection. Low rabes and satisfaction guaranteed. Trial lessons sent free. Write to REYANI A STRATION'S, 426 Rale St., Satisfac, S. Y.

SHOPPING Mys. H. M. CARD, 1230 Arch Street, Philin., Ph., will do Shopping of all kinds free of charge, Chapterson carefully chosen. Write for circular 4 references

"It came not, the strain, to the temples of Isis; The priests heard it not on the Palatine Hill; P'en Zion was deaf as the shrines of Osiris, It came to the shepherds, O men of good-will. XII

*The conqueror slept in his throne chamber matted, With only his golden lamp breaking the gloom; The sentinel leaned on the dark caryatid And guarded the priest in his peristyled room.

Still to men of good-will sings the harp, angel-haunted. Have ye heard it to-day? Have ye caught the sweet strain? Every heart is a chord to which angels have chanted, As once to the heralds of Bethlehem's plain.

XXI

The sheepcotes have gone and the camel bells ringing,
The cry of ewes; but, ah! sorrowful still
Is the heart of the world o'er which Heaven is singing—
Go echo the angels, ye men of good will to by Google

SNOW ON THE MOUNTAIN

BY RICHARD BURTON

ON towering height is softened into grace And loveliness by snow its summit bears; So have I seen some rugged human face Made beautiful with age and silver hairs.

*XII.—THE PRINCESS BISMARCK

BY THE COUNTESS WILHELMINA

N hour distant from Ham-burg is the castle of Fried-richsruhe, the residence of the Prince and Princess Bismarck. It is situated in a dense forest, bordered by river, hedge and wall which render it invisible alike to road and rail passengers. Originally built for a hunting-lodge by Count Frederick, of Lippe-Sternberg in 1763, it was converted later into an inn—"Frascati," as it was called—whither the inhabitants of Hamburg went on bullidays and where they held their nicenies. holidays, and where they held their picnics and carnivals. In 1871, when William I presented the estate to Bismarck, the house proper consisted of a two-storied yellow-painted structure. It has remained the main building, although considerably enlarged and altered since that time. The effect within is bare and plain. Walls and ceilings are whitewashed, the furniture is scanty and uncomfortable, and ornaments are few. A large portrait of the Emperor William, in the enormous dining-room, and photographs of various members of the Bismarck family, and of several of the Prince's celleagues, comprise the only art specimens that the castle contains.

THE PRINCESS BISMARCK (By courtray of Mosers, D. Appleton & Company)

Its grounds are extensive and beautiful, dense woods, a winding river and handsome shrubbery combining to secure this effect. They were, in former years, open to the public; but the flowers and trees were so mutilated by visitors in quest of "souvenies de Friedrichsruhe," that it was found necessary to close the gates.

close the gates.

The life at the castle is one of rural simplicity; possessing but few neighbors, its inmates rely for entertainment upon themselves and the guests with whom the house is always

Extensive entertaining is also the rule at Varzin, and at the ancestral home of "Schon-hausen," the two other estates of the Ex-

Chancellor.
But of the mistress of this home. At the time of her marriage she relinquished a name which would not have misbecome the heroine of a Bab Ballad—von Puttkammer. The Franlein Johanna was a most charmingly sweet and modest country maiden—in spite of her name—when at the weekling of one of her friends, at which she was bridesmaid, she met young Herr Otto von Bismarek, a strapping, dissipated, high-handed young dandy of thirty-one, with a reputation for fire-eating and flirtations which would scarcely have disgraced a Kentucky colonel of twice his years. These two young people, as Rosalind says, "No sooner met than they looked, no sooner looked than they loved." Hence it was that immediately on his return from the wedding young Otto wrote to the parental Puttkammers, with whom, by the way, he had not the ine of a Bab Ballad-von Puttkammer. ers, with whom, by the way, he had not the slightest acquaintance, demanding the hand of the Fraulein Johanna in marriage. The paternal Puttkammer seems to have been somewhat of a diplomatist, for without com-

* In this series of psu-portralts of "Unknown Wives of Well-Known Men," commonred in the last January Jonus AL, the following, each accompanied with portrait, have been printed:

MISS. THOMAS A. EDISON			January
Mas. P. T. BARNUM		100	Petersury
Man, W. E. GLASSTONE	-		- March
MRS. T. DE WITT TALMADE		+	April
Mas. CHAUNCEY M. DEPRW	-		. May
LADY MACHONALD		4:	June
MISS. JOHN CHANDLES HARRIS	10		ii Labor
LABY THNNYSON		40	Airgrost
Miss. Will Carlstron			, Reptember
MISS WILLIAM MCKINLEY		44	October
Mus Max O'RELL	10		. November

Any of these back numbers can be had at 10 cents each by writing to the Journal.

mitting himself to either a consent or refusal, after learning from his daughter that she cared for young Otto, he wrote, inviting that es-timable young gentleman to visit him. Preparations were made to have his reception one of becoming solemnity and dignity; but the ef-fect was rather spoiled by young Bismarck the moment he alighted going up to his sweetheart and kissing her soundly in pres-ence of a number of guests. The immediate ence of a number of guests. The immediate effect of this embarrassing and shocking behavior was the prompt announcement of the betrothal, which was followed, a year later, by the marriage.

During the first years of her marriage, and the period immediately following, of her husband's general unpopularity, Frau von Bismarck, by her cheerful, simple home-life, did much to help and encourage her husband. When the tide of public opinion changed, and he became, from being the most hated to the best loved man in Germany, when honors were heaped upon him, the Princess remained the same simple, loving wife and mother.

Her influence over her husband has been strong, enduring and elevating, and has never, for a moment, wavered. It is no doubt true, as the Prince so often says, that what he is she for a moment, wavered. It is no doubt true, as the Prince so often says, that what he is she has made him. Always she has enjoyed his entire confidence, and known his diplomatic intentions and plans from conception to fruition, the trust which he places in her discretion and devotion being implicit.

By her marriage with Prince Rismarck she has had three children, all of whom are living. Herbert, William and Marie, now the Countess of Rantzau, who lives with her parents and three little sons at Friedrichsruhe.

ents and three little sons at Friedrichsruhe

ents and three little sons at Friedrichsruhe.

The family goes but little into society, preferring rather to entertain their friends in their home. The Princess is a fine musician, her taste for classical music being strongly developed. And one of the prettiest sights at the castle is the evening picture of Bismarck, sitting in his arm-chair, poking meditatively at the fire, while his wife plays Beethoven's sonatas to him, and the family and guests sit about listening and enjoying.

She is of a quick, lively disposition, with good taste, clever wit and intelligence of more than ordinary quality. She is a most prudent and economical housekeeper, famous in times past for the delicious little dinners which she could concoct with the smallest of outlays.

pass for the deficious little dinners which she could concoct with the smallest of outlays. Her religious character is strong to the de-gree of bigotry. Having inherited a strain of Evangelical piety—her parents were staunch Moravinus—she has a feeling of such intense hatred for the French, whom she regards as a nation of heretics, that she was most bitter in her denunciation of them, and strongly ur-cent in her advice to her husband to externigent in her advice to her husband to extermi-nate them, her sole reason for all this being a functionl zeal for the well-being of the Evangelical religion.

The Princess' taste in dress is exquisite, simple and neat; her manner is sweet and natural, some one once having said of it and of ber, "She wins all hearts, where the Prince takes them by storm."

As her portrait shows, she is still a pretty woman, and one with a nobility of expression better than mere beauty. She is of medium build, five feet seven inches in height, al-though Prince Bismarck made a note on his bedroom door-posts, where he inscribed, in 1880, the heights of the various members of his family, to the effect that the Princess tip-toed a little to reach this.

Prince Bismarck recently wrote in a friend's album the following little verse.

"Oh, happy is that man, and blest, Who sits in his own home at rest; Who sits in his own home at rest; Who snugly sits at his fireside In tranquit peace, whate'er betide."

What better comment can be made on the lovely home, the reflection of a tranquil na-ture, which has been made for him by her who has been the subject of this sketch.

And so we will leave her

"In tranquil peace, whate'er betide,"

THOUGHTS TO CARRY WITH YOU

BY MARY AINGE DE VERE

TRONG faith in human beings is the stronger faith in God.

When we feel the narrowness of these lives of ours, each in its own small circle, we are consoled by knowing that every star must move within its limits, though space be around it.

The rich are only enviable in one attribute —their power to help the poor.

It is only in looking on death that we comprehend immortality, and only utter wenriness gives promise of perfect rest.

The friend who becomes a lover continues still to be a friend; but the lover who becomes a friend ceases forever to be a lover.

When it is said of a man that he treats men and women just alike, you may be sure he treats them all as if they were men.

Sufficient unto the day is the evil there-f; but, sufficient unto a lifetime is often the evil of a single day.

Children are taught more than they ever learn, and learn more than they are ever

Our bodies live in houses, because our souls live in bodies.

Wisdom, like many other human attributes, is only for the time. We are wise to-day, that to-morrow we may look back and say, "How foolish we were!" foolish we were!

The desire to teach is stronger than the deafre to learn. We only study that we may be enabled to impart again.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

BY JENNY BURR

SWEET are roses in the year's young prime, And fair the glowing pinks of summer-

But what shall match the winning grace of these, That bloom the brightest when the others

*II-JEFFERSON DAVIS'S DAUGHTER

BY ALICE GRAHAM McCollin

ORN at Richmond, Va., the capital of the Confederate States of America, on June 27, 1864, during the progress of the war for their existence, it is but natural that Varina Anne Davis-more generally called that Varina Anne Davis—nsore generally called Winnie—the second and youngest daughter of the late Jefferson Davis, should have become endeared to the South as "the daughter of the Confederacy." Her bubyhood was spent in the midst of scenes in which her infancy spared her the terrible knowledge and anxiety that older people suffered. When she was but nine months old—a short time before the evacuation of Bichmond—Mr. Davis arganaed the detion of Richmond-Mr. Davis arranged the departure of his wife and children from that city to Charlotte, in North Carolina, where a furnished house had been reuted. No preparations for their arrival had been made, the house and its contents being locked securely; the baggage which they had brought with them was largely ruined from the ill repair of the cars in which it had been transported, and discomfort reigned supreme. As if to add to it, Mr. Burton Harrison, Mr. Davis's secretary—and afterward the husband of the clever author of "The Auglomaniacs"—who had accompanied the forlorn little party was forced to leave them and return to aid Mr. Davis. However, the agent for the house came to their assistance, and after a few more mishaps the President's family were comfortably installed. This was Miss Winnie's first serious experience of misadventure.

MISS "WINNIE" DAVIS

of misodventure.

They remained here until Mrs. Davis received the news of General Lee's retreat and of the continuous ill fortune of the Confederof the continuous ill fortune of the Confederate forces, when, acting under instructions given her by her husband while in Richmond, Mrs. Davis arranged to leave Charlotte. The tressure train of the Confederacy and that of the Richmond banks came through Charlotte at night, and as among their escort was Mrs.
Davis's brother and a grandnephew of her husband's, it was decided that the President's family should leave on it. The railroad track was in running order only as far as Chester,
S. C., which place was reached in the morning. 8. C., which place was reached in the morning An ambulance was here secured for Mrs. Davis and her family, and a wagon for their luggage, and after dark they started to follow the treas-ure train to Abbeville. The mud was so deep that it was found impossible to pull the heavily laden ambulance, and Mrs. Davis with her "cheerful little baby"—ns she calls Winnie—in her arms, trudged for five miles through mud over her shoe-tops. About one o'clock they reached in safety the church in which the treasure guardians had taken refuge, and here they rested until daylight, when the jour-ney was resumed. The children, as the grown ney was resumed. The children, as the grown people, suffered for food before Abbeville, where the little party remained for a few days, was reached. Here Mrs. Davis received the news of General Leo's surrender and of President Lincoln's assassination. Desiring to facilitate Mr. Davis in his movements by leaving him free of any necessity to secure safety and shelter for his family, Mrs. Davis took her children and started for Washington, Ga.
She remained there only a few hours and toward nightfull left that place. About hen miles from town, the little band halted and encamped for the night. Mr. Davis joined them here and traveled with them for two or three days, at the end of which time he was captured and taken, with his entire party, to Macon, Ga.

<sup>6</sup> This series was commenced in the Iaal/November) issue of the Journaus, with a portrait and sketch of Miss Racinel sharman, daughter of the Iale General Sherman.

Macon, Ga.

From there they were removed by vessel to Hampton Roads, where they lay at anchor for a few days until after Mr. Davis had been removed to his prison at Fortress Monroe. The vessel containing Mrs. Davis and her children was sent, a few days after Mr. Davis's money of the Savannah Ga.

who can be sent, a two cays after Mr. Davis's removal, to Savannah, Ga.

While at Savannah, Winnie caught the whooping-cough, and "was ill" writes Mrs. Davis, "almost unto death for some days with the fever which precedes the cough." Mrs. Davis sent her older children to Canada and interded to score from Angusta (to which Davis sent her older children to Canada and intended to escape from Augusta (to which place she had been sent) to join them with Winnie, but she was told that if she quitted the country for any purpose whatever she would not be allowed to return, and so abandoned the project. The removal to Augusta was a change much for the better, and here both Mrs. Davis and the baby beanne stronger and in better health than for long months before. Soon after this Mr. Davis's release was obtained, and after rejoining his family and making short visits with them in Canada, Cuba and the South, the party went abroad, whence they returned, some months later, to make their home in Memphis.

Winnie remained with her parents until 1877, when she was taken to a school at Karlsruhe, in Germany, where she remained for the stear.

ruhe, in Germany, where she remained for five years. Of her life there not a great deal can be said. She was educated as a drawing teacher, and was also given special dramatic training. The former has borne fruit in the clever sketching and landscape painting which she does and the letter in an extreme for lease. she does and the latter in an extreme fondness for the theatre and good dramatic representa-tions. The principal result of her education here. Miss Davis thinks, was to convince her, after ber return to America, of the folly of educating American children abroad. She has been persuaded to write on this subject, and the JOURNAL will have the pleasure very soon of presenting these articles.

From Germany she went to a boarding school in Paris, where she was soon joined by her parents. A few months later she returned with them to New Orleans, which was then their home, and where she made her debut at the Mardi Gras Ball the following spring, re-ceiving her first taste of American social life. The people of Alabama invited Mr. Davis to visit them soon after this, and with his daughter be undertook the journey. They were received with so much enthusiasm that the trip was extended to Atlanta and Savan-nab. It was at Atlanta that Governor Gordon nab. It was at Atlanta that Governor Gordon presented Miss Davis to an enthusiastic gathering under her now de people, "The Daughter of the Confederacy," On this trip also Miss Davis heard for the first time the famous "Rebel Yell." Their itinerary included a stop at Greenville, Ala., where they were received by one of the Southern regiments with the peculiar rebel yell.

After this she remained at home with the exception of short visits and a second journey through Georgia with her father until a few months before his death, when at his urgent entreaty, and on the advice of her physician.

months before his death, when at his urgent entreaty, and on the advice of her physician, she went abroad again. She was in Paris at the time of her father's death, kept in ignorance by his wish of the true state of his health, and prevented by illness, had she known of it, from returning. As soon as possible after Mr. Davis's death she returned to her mother, and since that time has not left her. Mrs. Davis and she divide their time between New York and Beauvoir with an occasional trip abroad. The home at Beauvoir casional trip abroad. The home at Benuvoir is now by reversion Miss Davis's property, and of which we present a picture. It is situated a few miles from New Orleans, on the situated a few mines from New Orienne, on the Gulf of Mexico, at Beauvoir Station, and has been the homestead since 1879. The past summer they spent at Narragansett Pier.
Miss Davis possesses not only the ability which has been already mentioned to make a profession of her artistic powers, but has de-recession of her artistic powers, but has de-reloped also her literary powers to a practical extent. She has of late months written ex-tensively for the current periodicals and re-views of this country, and is always a wel-come contributor. She sings delightfully, playing her own accompaniments with charm-ing simplicity.

g simplicity. In appearance Miss Davis is what her por-Trait makes of her, and yet better to look upon, Tall, slender, fair-haired, with gray eyes of peculiar beauty, she is the ideal realization of Southern maidenhood. She has a sweet Southern madennood. See has a sweet Southern voice and a manner which evidences the gentle, courteous heart beneath. Her health has never been good, perhaps because of the privations and sufferings to which she was exposed as an infant, but she is in no sense an invalid.

Her mother bears tribute to her as "the best and dearest of daughters;" her father when on his deathbed said that she had never dis-obeyed or given him pain, and without an ex-ception every one who comes at all under her gentle refinement feels her to be a woman with " Heart on her lips, and soul within her eyes Soft as her clime, and sunny as her skies."

By Caroline Atwater Mason

AUTHOR OF "A DAUGHTER OF THE DUNE," "MRS. ROSSITER LAMAR," ETC., ETC.

ERE I am at last!"

The speaker was a tall, slight girl with fair hair and a charming face, who had, at the moment she spoke, rushed breathlessly into a dull supper room of a transport dull upper room of a tenement house. Seated at a sewing-Seated at a sewing-machine by the window was a woman a few years older, with a serious face, who, yet, looked up with a smile as she returned. "I should think 'at last!" Where have you been all the morning, Lite?"

"Been?" cried the other, turning ber eyes, which were fairly blazing with fun and exfairly blazing with fun and excitement, up to the ceiling to denote speechless rapture, and effecting a miraculous whirl upon one toe. "Been? How can you ask? There is but one absolutely soul-satisfying spot in this benighted burg!"

"And that is—?"

"Why the five and ten-cent store of course, Emily Loraine."

"Lite!"

"Trule" the girl went on

"Truly," the girl went on, the corners of her pretty mouth full of mischief, "there is fall of mischief. "there is not, so far as heard from, an aspiration of my soul which is not met and satisfied there."

"Eliza Gilbert, you are too ridiculous," laughed her sister.

"Please don't call this good little girl Eliza. It scares her. And, cara wie, you do not understand. You figure to yourself, T and T—Trash and Trumpery, Trumpery and Trash. Nothing of the sort! This is on a higher plane than any five on a higher plane than any five and ten-cent store which has ever presented itself to your sordid imagination — yes, my love, sordid. Do you hear? and Lite turned a look of impressive severity upon Mrs. Lorsine, who was now stitching busily away upon a red flannel shirt.

"Books? Gewiss! Shake-

"Books? Gewist! Shakespeare is now reduced to five cents. The masterpieces of all the ages are gathered together. They do look a little ashamed of their clothes, I admit. Music?
Handel, Haydn, Wagner—you can have them all for a mere sone! Is it art you want?
There it is; any amount of it—high, too—that is the only thing that was high. Ten cents will put you in possession of the highest forms. But I see you return to that odious red shirt. My eloquence is wasted on you; but perhaps if I should tell you of the gridirous and blacking-brushes and tin pans, you would respond. There are plenty of them.
Indeed, there is everything known to the human family."

"But how in the world did you happen to go to such a place? I thought you started for the post-office and no other where."

Lite had taken off the simple little black hat she wore, and laid saide her jacket, and now came and sat by the sewing-machine, asking, as she did so-

"Where is Jocy?"

"He is taking his nap, to be sure. Look at the clock. It is almost the picheian dinner hour.'

"I was going to say, if he were out of hear-ing, that we can have the jolliest time Christmasing for Joey in this same bazaar. Why, truly, Emily, there are lovely toys there for only five cents apiece, and he shall have his darling stocking full. It will hardly count at Mrs. Loraine looked a little grave.

"I wish it wouldn't, dear; but you know even five cents does count now-"Fiddlesticks! Stop being sober, Won't have it, not a bit of it! Emily, my dear, I have a statement of some slight importance to make to you. Look at me for a moment!"

"I am looking; you are awfully pretty.

never saw so many fireworks in your eyes.

Is that what you want me to see?"

"Desist! This is no time for insipid flattery.

She whom you now see before you is—pre-

"Then, last of all, I dropped in at Dudley's to see the water-colors. Free collection, madam, do not alarm yourself—

Although she was on pleasure bent, She had a fregal mind?

So I strolled about among the lovely bric-à-brac for awhile; some things were even finer than at the bazzar." " Lite!"

"Lite!"

"They were, really, but not so adaptable—don't say cheap, it is such an unimaginative word. Then on among the pictures. Of course, Emily, I had the slight advantage here of knowing where to admire, a point which is desirable for several reasons, objective and subjective. There was one woman there who spent half an hour admiring the wrong thing. I felt sorry for her when she found it out, she was so mortified."

"How did she find it out?"

"When they told her the price, of course.

"When they told her the price, of course, There is one standard which is infallible! Now listen: it so happened that Mr. Dudley himself was there....

"How do you know it was Mr. Dudley?"
"I know-no matter how. He saw me admiring a lovely bit of an English moor—just a gray-brown corner up against an autumn sky—and he came up and began talking with me, and when he found I appreciated such me, and when he found I appreciated such pictures, he took me from one to another, and finally, my dear, he opened a great portfolio of the choicest things he had, things which they do not show, Mrs. Loraine, please understand, to everybody, and let me see them all and talked in such a pleasant way about them. Oh, I did have a beautiful time!"

"I am glad, dear."

"Don't be gladdest glad yet, for 'still there's more to follow."

"What, more than this!"

"Aye, more! You are a wise woman, Emily, but I've done one thing you didn't know about. You remember that day we passed the University Chapel, and I was so impressed with the the first had been to delude Mr. Dudley into selling my card for me, and I had put off going there as long as I could because I do hate to talk about my work and feel like an agent and all that. But when I saw that the moment had arrived, I remarked, modestly, that I worked in water-colors a little myself. Mr. Dudley had fancied so, which was pleasing. Then I further admitted, not without reluctance, that I happened to have a very slight sketch with me, and with that I drew out my card and rushed into the midst of things, telling him how much I wanted to sell it and get orders for more, and, in fact, the whole story."

"Did you tell him that your sister made shirts for a living?"

shirts for a living?"
"No, and I didn't tell him that Joey had "No, and I didn't tell him that Joey had croup the other night. There were, in fact, several points in the family history which I omitted. But he took my sketch, and regarded it with the eye of a connoisseur, while my poor little heart almost burst its black alpaca bounds. Finally he laid it down, took off his eyeglass, pulled a piece of chamois-skin out of his pocket and wiped it tenderly, while I, with an odd little souff he has, he remarked:
"How many of these can you do in a week?

with an odd little souff he has, he remarked:

"How many of these can you do in a week?
They will sell like wild-fire." Now, why wildfire should sell rapidly it is not for you nor any other carping critic to ask. No matter for anything but the blessed fact. I am to do it by the dozen, for every student who sees it will want it, Mr. Dudley says, and he pays me a dollar, Emily Loraine, for every one?"

At this point Lite held out in her small pink palm, with an air of exultation, a bright silver dollar.

"Talk about not being able to afford fivecent presents for your angel child! What do you think now?"

"You are an angel child yourself," said Mrs.
Loraine, and began to cry.

Loraine, and began to cry.

"Nicht wahr? And oh, what do you think? Most wonderful of all—I saw Strong of '91!"

"Who is Strong of '91, pray?"

"Emily! Not know who Strong '91 is after living six months in Hamilton! I should be ashamed to argue myself so unknown as that. Not know Strong—pride of the University, stroke oar in the crew, the man who leads the prayer-meetings and the athletics too! Why, be is a perfect to a room—a he is a perfect paragon—a prodigy—all muscle, mind and morals. You must have heard of him.

"I believe now that I have seen his name. I had forgotten."

"Well I have seen him."
"This is a red-letter day, isn't it? Does he look very different from other students?"

from other students? "No. I experienced a revul-sion of feeling when Mr. Dud-ley, indicating this young man, whispered in an almost awe-struck tone—'Strong '91!' I had noticed him looking at the pictures. One of these very square students, you know— some of them are so—with a kind of nibbled mustache and freckles." freekles.

How uninteresting." "He had a good face, though, and I thought there was a certain manliness about him; still I was disappointed. I had supposed Strong '91 would be a tall, imposing creature 'with an eye that takes the breath,' and all that kind of thing."

all that kind of thing."

"I am sorry to call you down to ordinary things, Lite, but if you would set the table—"

Upon this Lite sprang from her seat and with swift movements went about her work, humming "Robin Adair," and looking so joyous that the room itself seemed to grow bright.

Mrs. Loraine and her sister belonged to the great army of women who are carrying on a struggle to make a living against heavy odds. By birth and education they belonged among better surroundings than they could now com-mand. They had come to Hamilton with the hope of larger opportunities than their native

"Here I am at last 1"

ple are so dense," and Lite put her head on sumptively—a pampered worldling, a bloated bondholder, a millionaire! She is already rolling—in imagination—in gold."

"Yes, but she has rolled in imagination a good many times before."

"Oh Emily, how stupid you are! I do not roll in imagination; nobody does. Some peoone side with a small, pensive sigh.

"Go on with your story, love," said her sister, patronizingly.

"Well, to begin with, you asked me how 1 happened to go to the new bazaar. It was in this wise: the idea seized me as I left the postoffice that I would give myself up to a norming of wild dissipation; see life, as it were!"

"Oh, Lite, and you went to the five-cent store! This is excruciatingly funny," and Mrs. Lornine laughed merrily.

You must not interrupt me.

know of its great throbbing heart, its teeming millions-?

Seventy-five thousand, to be exact. Its towers, its palaces, its gilded-7' Luxury?

"Thanks, that is what I was after, 'My love she lives in a two-pair back." These two rooms, the courtyard below, the streets from here to the post-office and the church—are they not all we can be said to know of Ham-

"I made up my mind, Emily, to have the best time I could. To play I was 'rich and handsome and everybody loved me, and go about and see things as if I had nothing else about and see things as if I had nothing else to do. I saw other people going into this buzar, so I went there too. Then I went to the Waldo Library and walked about with the air of a bibliomaniac. I am sure I impressed the librarians. Then I strolled in the park a little while and looked at the lovely ladies in their carriages, and "played" I had left mine just outside, you know, and all that."

"You must have had a charming time, and rolled, as you said, in imagination."

"If you don't behave I shall tell Joey my wonderful secret and we'll never tell you at all, until we are ready to present you with a all, until we are ready to present you with a sealskin sacque."

"Go on, 'Light o' Life."

shape of the old tower and that end of the Quadrangle?

"Well, I had a bright thought; but you know I have had so many that we have got a little bit tired of them, and so I kept this to myself. But the next day I worked out in water-color, on a square of Whatman board, the chapel tower and a glimpse of the old buildings of the an Eiffel-red sunset behind it to make it sell, and edges of snow to make it look Christmas-y. Across the bottom I lettered, in very quaint Gothic letters, 'Souvenir of Old South Centre,' 'Souvenir of and a line of a carol.

"It must have been lovely. "It was really a clever sketch for me, and only took a few hours. Now, be it known unto you, most excellent Emily, this same Christmas card was peacefully ly-ing in my little black bag through all the morning's wanderings. Not, I may say, without a purpose. In fact, my fell intent from place could afford. Mrs. Loraine after seek-ing in vain for music scholars had betaken berself to making shirts, while her young sister conducted their small bousekeeping operations, and at the same time tried to turn a very marked talent in painting to account, thus far unsuccessfully. Mrs. Loraine was a widow; her little Joey, a

"Oh, he hovered."

Mrs. Loraine was a widow; her little Joey, a three-year-old boy, was the pride and the joy of the two women. Although in all its ex-ternals their life was a dull round of small duties and petty auxieties, varied by many disappointments, a spirit of bright hopefulness and undannted courage never left them. Their simple meals were always seasoned by Lite's gay, piquant talk; and the downfall of each new carles was unade a source of meetingent new castle was made a source of merriment instead of bitterness.

Mrs. Loraine always said that the reason for her sister's overflowing fountain of spirits lay in the fact that she was not only a Sunday child, but also a Christmas child. She was not only "blithe and bonny, and good and gay," but she was furthermore so sweethearted. so full of helpfulness toward all the world where she touched it, that nothing—so Mrs. Loraine said—but the spirit of Christmas itself falling upon her, could account for it; and so she was fond of calling her her little "Christ-

Certain it was that with each approach of Christmastide and her own birthday, Lite's whole nature seemed stimulated to fresh ac-tivity, and to new impulses of love and service for those about her.

A fortnight after Lite's first interview with Mr. Duilley, during which she had painted perpetual chapel towers, as she said herself, for the "dear, delightful public," and had earned a corresponding number of dollars, we find a corresponding number of dollars, we find the sisters again in their small apartment.

Mrs. Loraine was using the fast vanishing daylight in cutting out work, standing at a table before the window, when there came a knock at the door. Lite was in the kitchen preparing tea: Joey, cherabic with his fair, curling hair, big brown eyes and white pina-fore, opened the door, his mother following him. A stranger, a young man with the sen-fore, opened the door, his mother following him. A stranger, a young man with the general aspect of a student, bowed respectfully, and handing her his card asked if Miss Gilbert lived there, and if she were at home.

Having received the caller with the quiet dignity which belonged to her, Mrs. Loraine left him to the polite attentions of Joey while she went to the kitchen to summon Lite.

"What, a caller with a card?" whispered the girl, "How surprising! For me, did you say? Who can it be? Emily—it is Strong of '91"—and with this Lite fainted in pentomine; but, instantaneously recovering, went mime; but, instantaneously recovering, went into the next room and received her caller with a business-like air which greatly amazed

She had guessed that he had come to order some of her work, as she knew he frequented Mr. Dudley's picture store. He made known his errand at once with no unhecessary ceremony; but Mrs. Lornine, loc ing on from her place at the table, caught the sudden surprise in his face when Lite met him: naturally, thought the sister, he was not expecting anything so lovely, and she noted the girl's grace and charm of manner with new pride.

Mr. Strong wanted to know if Miss Gilbert would enlarge the motif of her very pretty Christmas card, making a picture of it taking in a little more of the Old South Centre, and painting it by moonlight instead of sunset light.
"Let me think," said Lite, considering.

"You want it in three days?"

"Yes," replied the young man, "it is only a week now before Christmas, you see, and it is to be sent a long distance. I want to have a certain window in Old South in the picture for an especial reason. My classmate, Dutton, died within the year. He was a fine fellow, an only son—it was a very sad affair. His mother is beart-broken, you know, and all that, and I want to send her this little sketch, with Dutton's window in sight. He was un-commonly fond of the walk about the Quad-rangle and Chapel by moonlight, and I think would like to have the thing on that ac-

"Ob, I see," said Lite, gently. "I wish I could do it." Her manner was less business-like now, "But how can I manage the moonlight? I have never seen the Chapel at night."
"Couldn't you guess about how it would look?"

Lite shook her head with decision.

"The shadows, you know, must be done properly. I would not like to make it up artificially. I would not like to make it up artificially. I would rif there is a moon now."

"Yes, it is almost full," returned Strong, eagerly. "I wish you could see it to-night, it is going to be fine."

There was a moomentary pause, and then he added.

"But of course you can't stand out on the side-walk to sketch it."
"I did the other from memory," said Lite,

"but this is so different, I should want to be perfectly accurate."

"Certainly, that is just what I am thinking about." He heshtated, and then, with an extraordinarily frank and winning smile, ex-ordinarily frank and winning smile, exclaimed—

"I think I have a brilliant idea! At least I will submit it to you. My aunt, Mrs. Ford, lives in that old-fashioned brown house diagonally across from the Chapel; perhaps you have noticed it—strangers are apt to. Early Colonial, you know, and all that sort of thing. Now, how would it do for you to let me take you there this evening—let me see, the moon must rise about seven o'clock—and let you make the sketch from her parlor windows? You could paint at your leisure, and be warm and comfortable while you were doing it."

Having referred this proposition to her sister, who approved it, Lite consented to accompany Mr. Strong to the house of his nunt at half-flast seven o'clock that evening. Mr. Strong then, with a slight timidity, inquired what her price for the picture would be. Lite boldly replied five dollars, and he departed leaving the girl in a whirl of excitement, with flushed cheeks and brilliant eyes.

"To think of it, Emily," she cried, "such a coruscation of splendor—to earn five dollars all at once, to do a lovely thing for that poor mother, and then to 'behold grandeur' in a University events mantion excepted by Strong University avenue mansion, escorted by Strong the magnificent, Strong der einzige-' the lamb

""The lion in the chase? It is too much.
What can I do to perpetuate the emotions of what can?"

"I would suggest that you put the tea-kettle on, and let it and your rapture boil in unison."

"Hodled rapture!" murmured f.ite, with an sir of infinite contempt, and vanished through the kitchen door.

No girl who reads this story will be surprised to hear that Lite spent an unprecedentedly long time upon her toilet after ten; and I am confident that every girl who reads it will be glad to be assured that although her black cashmere dress was neither modish nor hand-some, and her hat and jacket were simple and inexpensive, Lite looked so extremely pretty that the valiant heart of Strong '91 smore against his ribs when he met ber at her door that evening. If she had been a princess in-stead of a poor working girl he could not have escorted her to the house of his aunt with more chivalrous and deferential attention.

"They were all so kind to me," so Lite told her sister as she laid her color box and portfolio down and threw herself into the one rocking-chair, upon her return. "They did not stand off and regard me with the cold, aristocratic stare with which I am familiar, but left me to myself, to do my work after they had greeted me with the sweetest cordinlity. had greeted me with the sweetest cordinate.

Mrs. Ford is a picture—white hair, dark eyes, and such a gracious smile. Miss Ford, I am confident, was appointed a committee on me (perhaps she was self-appointed) for she would occasionally leave the others—there was a number of young people there in the music room—and cores over to my window."

"What did Mr. Strong do?"

"Oh. he hovered."

"Oh, he hovered."
"Did you succeed with your sketch? I suppose it is only laid in now."
"That is all, but I think it will be good. "That is all, but I think it will be good. The tower was so fine against a clear sky, with one wonderful cloud, the spirit of the place seemed quite different at night. I like to do it, Emily, for that poor fellow's mother. I wish it did not have to be paid for. I wish I could do things for people. I wish I could make somebody happy with just one smile, as Mrs. Ford did me."

"But why do you want to be so economical."

"But why do you want to be so economical, little sister? Your smiles are what Joey and I live on—food and fire and sunshine itself, Light o' Life—but we don't want to be reduced to one. Do we, Joey ?" Upon which Lite snatched her small nephew up and hugged him close, that Emily might not see the totally unreasonable and absolutely indefensible tear that was making rapid progress to the tips of her eye-lashes.

The day before Christmas came. During the week Lite Gilbert had finished the painting and taken it, as Mr. Strong had directed her, to Mr. Dudley's store to be framed. Mr. Dudley had paid her five dollars, which he said Mr. Strong had left with him, and six more which he owed her. Lite wished that she might have known whether Mr. Strong had liked the picture, but nothing was said on that rount. that point.

"Five dollars must go for rent," said Lite, "and two for stupid old flannels; but the other four shall be spent for Christmas, every blessed cent of it—if we live on beans a month to pay for it, as we are likely to do, for I can't go on painting Christmas cards any longer, that is morally certain. I wonder what we shall do next."

Accordingly, that afternoon she put away her painting materials; Mrs. Loraine closed her machine; Joey abandoned the mangy cot-ton flannel rabbit and rattling tin goat with which his time was chiefly occupied, and the three started from the tall, faded block in the narrow street, to make holiday and prepare to keep Christmes.

keep Christmas.
"First to the market." commanded Lite, who directed the line of march; "we must secure the turkey and crunberry sauce before we subject ourselves to the temptations of the great city, or who knows but we might ignominiously end with a paltry chicken, without

"We don't any of us like cranberry sance, to be sure," remarked Mrs. Loraine, quickly; "but then it is orthodox to have it, and let us be authodox or die" be orthodox or die.

"Most likely Mrs. Hannibal likes it, any-returned Lite. Mrs. Hannibal was the lame and somewhat unpleasant old lady who, being, as Lite put it, higher up in the world than they—that is, having a fourth story room above them—and being quite alone, had been invited to Christman dinner.

mas dinner. They made a merry round, our easily pleased trio, of the crowded, brilliant shops, enjoying the fine things they looked at, and the simple things they purchased with equal enthusiasm.

Moments of great mystery intervened, when

Mrs. Loraine suddenly vanished, and Lite discreetly did not try to find her, knowing only too well that she was at a glove counter, look-ing critically at small black gloves with more ing critically at small black gloves with more butions than she had any business to be pay-ing for, thought Lite. But then, who cares? Isn't it Christmas? And isn't it blies to be ex-travagant once in the year? Then, on the other hand, Lite would be missing, having ap-pointed a place of meeting farther up the street. Of course her sister did not see her tripping into a book store, and did not dream, would not have been seen dreaming that she would not have been seen drenning, that she was asking for a copy of Kate Lanborn's
"Year of Sunshine," which they had both coveted so long. As for Joey, he was the victim of more delusions, was more circumvented, deceived, misguided and talked about behind his hack that afternoon then are how of his his back that afternoon than any boy of his inches in Hamilton.

Home they came at last, their arms full, their purses empty; tired and cold and merry. And merry they were all through supper, which did not take long, being a fast before a feast; and Joey was put to bed to the music of "A Night Before Christmas," properly intoned by his devoted aunt. The small black stocking was picked up from the floor and brought out into the sitting-room to be filled by the same young person, and it was only then, and not till then, that the cheer and the courage failed. For Mrs. Loraine sat by the table, unfolding small paper parcels, with tears dropfolding small paper parcels, with tears drop-ping fast on Joey's things. They had to come at last. Last Christmas Eve the boy's father had brought home the mysterious bundles, and together they had filled the tiny stocking, and had stood by the bed afterwards, looking at the curly head and the precious little face, and had whispered to each other—"He is ours." "You must gree darding." Life mid. "it

"You must cry, darling," Lite said; "it would be worse not to. I think maybe Fred knows we are trying to do our best, don't you? And God does. And we love our boy so that he will have his full share of love—he can never be poor in that way, even if Fred is not here."

Then they cried together awhile, not bitterly, not in rebellion or discouragement, but with a grief so sacred and pure that it brought God very near.

An hour later a daintily-gloved and aristo-cratic hand knocked upon the gray-green panels of the sisters' outer door. That it was daintily-gloved and aristocratic is of small moment, but that it was a womanly and a gracious hand is important. It was Miss Forel's hand. She had gome to invite Miss Gillhers hand. She had come to invite Miss Gilbert, and also Miss Gilbert's sister and the little boy—she knew all about them, it seemed —to spend Christmas evening at her

"We are to have some very simple charactes and tableaux," she explained, "almost entirely impromptu; and we want Miss Gilbert to help us. Her artistic sense will be the thing we especially need, and I have fixed upon her to take the part of Cinderella. But I must tell you how delightedweall are at the house with your little water-color for poor Mrs. Duton. It is simply exquisite! So many have seen it and are experted know who usinted at is simply exquisite? So many have seen it and are eager to know who painted it. I never saw Tom—my conain, you know—so pleased with anything. I assure you, Miss Gilbert, that if you would like to take orders you will be kept busy for some time to come. Oh, and would you give lessons? I want my niece to begin this winter, and I have not seen any one; water-volor work that I like we any one's water-color work that I like as well as yours."

Lite expressed her willingness to give lessons, and her various emotions of gratitude and pleasure, in terms as adequate as a certain choking sensation in her throat would permit. Miss Ford having added a few tender and tactful words, for she felt the sort tender and tactful words, for she felt the sort tender and tactful words, for she felt the sort tender and tactful words, for she felt the sort tender and tactful words, for she felt the sort tender and tactful words, for she felt the sort tender and tactful words. row of the little scene into which she had entered, bade them good-night and went on way to make some other people happy. That was her way of keeping Christmas Eve.

No more tears fell upon Joey's stocking.
Eager hopes and plans had sprung suddenly into life, and sorrow made room for them as she could afford to do, her place being her own forever. The door against which Life had forever. The door against which Lite had been besting so long with impotent hands had awang wide at last, or so it seemed that night, and a fair field stretched before her. For it was only a chance to work that the girl wanted, to do what she was capable of doing, and curn her labor's worth.

The next day was a glorious one for Joey, for whom the possibilities of the five-and-tencent store had been thoroughly tested. With white and trumpets calors and three tip. whips and trumpets galore, and three tin horses—falsely so called, to be sure, but that made no difference—what more could a small boy ask? To see Joey revelling in this wise, and to see Mrs. Hannibal devour turkey and cranberry sauce were sources of joy to Mrs. Lordine and Lite, pure and undefiled; but the crown of the day was the evening at Mrs.

It was not exactly a brilliant company which was gathered there, in the society sense. There was a noticeable absence of diamonds and point lace, and other manifestations of magnificence, but there were many interesting magnificence, but there were many interesting looking people, and no absence of brain or culture. Mrs. Ford's companies were the wonder of all who knew her. She had an instinct for bringing people together who would be made happy by meeting one another; a faculty for finding out tired and discouraged men and women who had distinctly reached the point of needing social enlivenment. On this restiguiar. Christops night, something the point of needing social enliverment. On this particular Christmas night something like this was the make-up of the company. It was not an occasion of "the lame, the halt, and the blind," although Miss Ford was "at home" to these also. There was good music, and Christmas games, and afterwards the characters and tableaux of which Miss Ford had arollen.

Mr. Strong and half a dozen other '91 fel-lows, with as many bright girls, had these in charge, and Lite Gilbert was promptly drawn into the inner circle. It was many months since the girl had had such a frolic. Of course it did her good to the tips of her fingers and the soles of her feet, the pure nonsense, the gay laughter and fun which went on continuously behind the scenes, and of which she and Strong soon became the soul and center. By common consent she took the part of Cinderella in the tableon which closed that churnds. The scene chosen was that in which the Prince fits the slipper on Cinderella's foot. There were the Haughty Sisters, with elevated noses; there was the fair-haired Ash-maiden, in a rapped calico dress which was yet, somehow, vastly becoming, sitting on a three-legged stool; and there was Strong '91, gargeous to see in a plumed hat and his cousin's plush wrap, kneeling before her bolding up a yellow glass slip-per, and trying his best not to look like a clerk in a shoe store.

The scene was greeted with much applause, and an outburst of merry languing was caused by Joey, who called reprovingly from his mother's lap—

"Aunt Lite, fwy don' 'oo mend 'oo dess?"
Upon this the curtains were rushed furiously together, leaving a biatus of several feet at the side, and being pulled apart again, the Prince was discovered leading Cinderella gallantly forward by the hand, all regardless of the de-forward by the hand, all regardless of the deficiencies in his costume which had been designed only for a side view.

"How do you dare, Mrs. Ford," asked a dowager friend who sat beside that hidy, "to introduce your nephew to such a charmingly pretty girl? I should think he would find her irresistible."

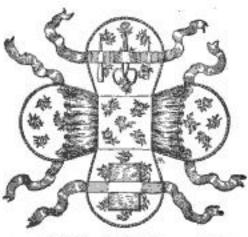

"And what if he down to have the property of the property of

"And what if he does, my dear?" was the reply. "She is as good, I fully believe, as she is pretty. What can the boy do better than to fall in love with such a girl?"

And strangely enough, this was precisely the conclusion reached that evening by Strong of '91. And for Lite herself, we can only say that the new, strange happiness in her young heart was the latest and best gift which Christ-mas Day had brought to "a Christmas girt,"

QUITE A DAINTY WORK-CASE

THE illustration shows an extremely pretty and novel work-case, or, as our grand-mothers would have called it, "lady's companion." When it is opened out flat, as in the drawing, the shape is suggestive of a fourleafed clover; in order to close it up the rib-bons are drawn together and tied into small bows at each corner. It is made of card-board covered on the outside with pele pink silk and on the inside with white linen, on which tiny scattered roses are embroidered in delicate colors. The pockets are also of silk, and some of the ribbon is sewn down as indicated, to take the scissors, stiletto, bodkin and needle-

WOMEN OF CULTURE

Particularly Commend the New Monthly Magazine

Mirror of Fashions.

It is Bright, Newsy, Unique, Immensely Helpful to Every Intelligent Woman.

25 CENTS

WILL SECURE IT FOR

6 MONTHS!

(SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY OFFICE.)

32 Pages, Fine Paper, Profuse and Artistic Illustrations. You Need Its Practical Hints,

CHRISTMAS FAIRS AND BAZAARS:

In the December number. Striking novelties in booths and cos tumes, elegantly illustrated.

COSTUMES FOR FANCY DRESS PARTIES:

In the January number Historical and Original, with numerous valuable illustrations. It is NOT a dry, technical

" Deess-Makee's Journal

SEND NOW-stilver or Postal Note.-This will MIRROR OF FASHIONS, 111 Mill Street, Rochester, N. Y.

Mr. Beecher As I Knew Him

By Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher

IN SIX PAPERS

THIRD PAPER

BEECHER had been emphatcally assured before accept ing the call to Indianapolis that the city was beauthy. I was healthy. I was not strong in health, our little daughter was very iil from teething, and Mr. Beecher was, naturally, anxious for us. He had been particular in his inquiries whether "chills and fever" prevailed there, us we had heard, but the emphatic "No" reussured us.

EARLY TRIALS IN THE WEST

UPON reaching the home of the Elder of the church where we were to be temporarily located, we at once had our worst fears realized. The hady of the house was wrapped in blankets, two small children were ill in bed, and a chair beld an older daughter—all shaking with "chills and fever."

Weary with a long journey and with a mother's fears thoroughly aroused for my feeble baby, is it strange that tears would come when, as my would come when, as my husband entered I said, "Oh! Henry, they are all sick with 'chills,' and you were told no one ever had them here!"

You must be mistaken, Mrs. Beecher; everyone has chills and fever, more or less, constantly, said the lady.

"No!" said Mr. Beecher. "we were emphatically told that it never came

No other word was said and we were escorted to our room. I was astonished that he had said no more: but, on looking at the stern eyes, the pale and closely-scaled lips, a part of his character I had never seen before was revealed; his perfect silence and power of self-control, under what he felt was a wrong done to himself, but which he saw it was too late to prevent. No re-proaches, no comments.

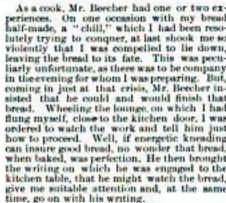

Only a few weeks after we were both taken with "chills and fever"; then congestive fever set in, and both were very sick, too sick to know that one of our good friends had taken the baby to her own house, or that, in great slarm, futher Beecher had been sent for. After recovering from this unusually severe attack, we often had "chills and fever," but in a milder form. But during our ten form. But during our ten years' residence at the West, Mr. Beccher's rich store of good nature and merry way of meeting annoyances, furnished a silver lining to many a dark cloud, which even "chills and fever" could not long obscure.

OUR INDIANAPOLIS HOME OF TWO ROOMS

WITH a salary of six bundred dollars a year it was not an easy task to secure a bome, and it looked as if the Lawrenceburgh experience was to be gone through with again. From one place to another we moved, until at last there was a small place for sale at a price which would be thought in the East exceed-ingly cheap. The house was one-story, hav-ing two square rooms in all—one small bed-room and a broad veranda which could be used for a kitchen. Some of the people offered to buy this place for us, if, by living on five hundred dollars a year, Mr. Beecher could, each year, pay them one hundred dollars until the house was paid for. The offer was ac-cepted, notwithstanding the visions of taking boarders and sewing, which it foreshadowed. To be free from perpetual moving was worth this additional labor. One room was to serve for entrance into the house, for parlor, study, and bedroom; the other to the dining and workroom. The bedroom was so small that I was obliged to make the bed on one side first, then go out on the veranda, raise a window, reach in and make the bed on the other side. Not such very troublesome work after all, when one gets accustomed to it; viewed in that light, how very few of life's duties are hard. The little kitchen—partitioned off from the veranda—was just large enough to allow a passage between the cooking table and the stove passage between the cooking union and into the dining-room without burning my dress; and my kitchen table was only divided table by the partition. from Mr. Beecher's study table by the partition. For nearly seven years this was our home—a home full of cares and no luxuries; but a very happy home—for many reasons the happiest we ever knew, for we were less separated there.

BETWEEN KITCHEN AND STUDY

W ITH little ones around me, keeping no servant, and with the "chills and fever," I was not able to attend church regularly, or have the pleasure of going with my husband to many meetings of great interest. If compelled to, one can shake with a chill and yet pelled to, one can shake with a chill and yet manage to give attention to such household affairs as must be done, and also keep the lit-tle ones out of danger, if not always out of mischief—with less annoyance, at least to others, than to shake in church. But with all these discomforts, I had a far more thorough knowledge of Mr. Beecher's inner life, his thoughts and feelings than I ever had after we came East. The study and cooking tables, as already stated, were separated only by a we came East. The study and cooking tables, as already stated, were separated only by a thin partition. All that he wrote or was preparing to write—sermons, letters or addresses—I was called to hear. A quick rapon the wall, or a shrill whistle, was a signal never disregarded whatever my occupation might have been. If washing, I dashed the suds from my hands, or if baking, cleansed them from flour, and seated on a stool by his knee, had the privilege of hearing whatever he had prepared. But for this blessed experience I could have had no time or opportunity for intellect-

There chanced to be more than the usual number of callers that afternoon, and he could not refrain from boasting of his morning's work and exhibiting his cookies to every one who came. Of course each caller was invited to try one or more, and they did. Before night I managed to get up and attend to the supper. After setting the table, I went to the cake box for the cookies, but found none. He had given one after another to the callers.

As a cook, Mr. Beecher had one or two experiences. On one occasion with my bread half-made, a "chill," which I had been resolutely trying to conquer, at last shook me so violently that I was compelled to lie down, leaving the bread to its fate. This was peculeaving the bread to its fate. This was peculiarly unfortunate, as there was to be company in the evening for whom I was preparing. But, coming in just at that crisis, Mr. Beecher insisted that he could and would finish that bread. Wheeling the lounge, on which I had flung myself, close to the kitchen door, I was ordered to watch the work and tell him just how to proceed. Well, if energetic kneading can insure good bread, no wonder that bread, when baked, was perfection. He then brought the writing on which he was engaged to the kitchen table, that he might watch the bread, give me suitable attention and, at the same kitchen table, that he might watch the bread, give me suitable attention and, at the same time, go on with his writing.

But for this inconvenient chill I was to have baked a cake, and still hoped to get up and do it before dinner. But Mr. Beecher, elated with his success in bread-baking, was determined to try his hand at making some cookies; so between shaking and laughing, I gave him directions, and he made and baked the cookies as successfully as he had done the bread, and both proved all that could be desired.

There chanced to be more than the usual number of callers that afternoon, and he could rake box for the cookies, but found none. He had given one after another to the callers.

This was his first and last experience in bread and cake making.

Rumors of this and our mutual interchange of labor in times of sickness, gave rise, doubtless, to the ridiculous stories of Mr. Beecher's severe labors in his wife's department.

"What good will they do?" they asked.
"What good?" Mr. Beecher used to say.
"Why, make you better and happier every time you look at them; try it a year and you will never ask that question again."
Then he determined to use all his influence towards cultivating this taste in his paradors. towards cultivating this taste in his people as far as he could without being aggressive. He was seldom seen without being aggressive. He was seldom seen without a rose or a rare flower in his hand, and when he neet any one in his walks or calls, he would give them to those who seemed most likely to appreciate them. "It was given by our minister," and, at first, that was its chief value. Sometimes he would take a seldom to the second second seemed to the second second seemed to the second take a choice rose or plant to invalids, telling them how to watch its growth and have it taken care of, assuring them they would find it would take half the tediousness from their sick-room; take bulf the tediousness from their sick-room; or be would describe some beautiful plant in bloom in his garden, and if he found any token of interest in his description, would point to some spot in their yard where, he told them, it would look finely, and add, "If you would like it, I will put a slip of it there and tell you how to treat it."

In this pleasant way, while being very happy himself in his flowers, he doubled his own pleasure by thus gradually developing a floral interest among his people. When we left Indianapolis, few cities could boast of finer ornamental shrubs, choicer flowers or a better assortment of fruits, selected with more correct taste.

rect taste.
Mr. Bescher thus proved the truth of what he often said, that there were few persons who had not—hidden, perhaps undreamed of by even themselves—a natural love for flowers, which, if but touched and quietly cultivated, would in time be developed strongly.

A GARDENER AT TWELVE YEARS

MR. BEECHER'S love of flowers and all beautiful things in Nature was of him and in him from his earliest youth. The sur-roundings of his Litchfield roundings of his Litchfield home as a boy developed the inborn trait.

While studying at Mount Pleasant, in Amberst, his love of flowers was so noticeable that a gardener in the village gave him the use of a little spot in his garden where he was at liberty to dig and plant whatever he pleased. Seeing his interest in such work, the man took pleasure in giving him useful hints by which his tastes were practically developed, and so as to be best calculated to insure success. With this kindness in aiding him, the boy of twelve and thirteen learned to find more enjoyment in spending his enjoyment in spending his play hours in planting, weeding and bringing his flowers forward in the greatest perfection than in any other recreation.

On one occasion the chaptain of Mount Pleasant found him at work over his flowers, watching over his flowers, watching them with great delight, and said to him: "Henry, my boy! Those are very pretty; but do you think such things are worthy to occupy the time and thoughts of one who has an immortal soul?"

Easily abashed and very shy before such authority, Henry did not look up or attempt to answer; but when the chaplain passed on, he continued his work. When referring to this afterward, he used to say, "I wanted to tell him that since God Almighty had taken time to make such trifles, I couldn't seeig for me to cultivate, look why it was wrong for me to cultivate, look at and enjoy them.

DR. LYMAN BEECHER AND HIS FAMILY

ual improvement, for the needle or the kitchen are not usually supposed to help much in that direction. I never felt sure if Mr. Bescher did this with any idea of advantage or help for him-self, or, with his thoughtfulness, saw that it was the only help in that line I could hope for.

HIS LACK OF CONFIDENCE IN HIMSELF

To one always ready to give so much zeal and courage to any cause which claimed his special service, it was singular to note how distrustful Mr. Beecher was of his ability to distrustful Mr. Beecher was of his ability to succeed. In his earlier work, this lack of confidence in himself was sometimes painful until he rose to speak. But generally the moment be stepped upon the platform all thoughts of himself disappeared.

Many times when going to speak on a subject of special interest which I greatly desired to bear, he would say, "Oh! don't go! I am sure I am going to fail and I don't want you to be present." For several years I yielded to such a request, and anxious and troubled lest he should fail, waited his return. But he invariably came home cheerful, and would say, "I had great liberty; now I wish you had gone. The audience appeared greatly intergone. The audience appeared greatly inter-ested and very appreciative. They gave me great comfort and courage," and he would ap-pear happy and surprised. As I came to undermoods better, I no longer feared any

MR. BEECHER AS A DOMESTIC HELP

No man could have more cheerfully or More efficiently lent a helping hand in the home than did Mr. Beecher in those times of sickness and hardships. He would do a great many things in the kitchen all with apparent ease, except washing dishes and sweeping. These he used to think might be " put off to a more convenient season.

HIS LOVE OF FLOWERS AND FRUITS

N Lawrenceburgh we did not have a foot of I ground where we could raise a flower, but Mr. Beecher rarely came bome without a handful of flowers which be had found growing wild by the wayside, so that in our little rooms we always had a few flowers. But when we went to Indianapolis the yard around the house we occurred had weveral peach and cherry trees. occupied had several peach and cherry trees, some rose bushes, and ample space to raise such flowers as we were able to secure, and Mr. Beecher was not slow to make the most of it.

After the first year, we secured an acre of good land for a trille, and every spare moment was devoted to the care and cultivation of that. It was through Mr. Beecher's editing "The Western Farmer and Gardener" that he "The Western Farmer and Gardener" that he was able to buy this land for a garden, and it soon became a source not only of great enjoyment but of pecuniary profit to us, for from nurseries both West and East who advertised in the paper, came seeds, plants and bulbs of the best kind. Our garden soon grew quite famous for having the best and choicest, and many were glad to procure their vegetables from it. Our habit of early rising was of great service to us here, while "chilis and fever" were so ready to seek us it was not safe to work in the garden after the sun grew hot. Mr. Beecher's morning writings and my morning's work was always done by lamplight before day-dawn, and thus we made time to go to the garden, some little distance from the house, as soon as the sun had dried up the dew, and work till the heat made it unsafe. Closing the house and taking the little ones with us we used to repair to the spot around our home where we found the most enjoyment. Some valuable fruit trees were now also sent, and Mr. Beecher took great pride in his fruit and vegetables, but more in his flowers. Some of the people thought it childish for their parson to think so much of his flower-beds.

FINDING SERMONS IN NATURE

A LL through his life the garden was ever A. his favorite resting place. Wherever we lived, flowers were round and about him, and in their cultivation he found rest and re-laxation from his other duties.

Our garden at Indianapolis was a special source of joy and rest to him. His church labors, after the first year, were very severe and exhausting. Then came a season of unusual religious awakening and interest that meetings were held every evening for many weeks, and each night Mr. Beecher preached or exhorted at these. Each of these services was followed by an Inquiry Meeting, and of these he was always in charge. Then every day he would ride into the country among many of his par-ishioners and look after cuses of deep interest.

This interest spreading, he was often called to other places to be absent for days, speaking constantly. This continued over a year. He had no evenings free, and seldom a leisure hour. Such continued labor began to wear upon him, and it became important that he should seek some change or relaxation. But he did not seek it by ceasing to work; and, as would say, be could drive one kind of work out of his mind by turning to some other en-tirely different. The work in his garden was of great service to him during this excitement. but it could not prevent him from dwelling upon his church work, and, therefore, he did not secure the needed change or rest.

[Mrs. Beecher's fourth paper will appear in the January Jounnal, in which she sketches the real beginning of Mr. Beecher's great career, his early fearlessness of utterance, the removal to Brooklyn, etc., etc.].

THE GIRL WHO LOVES TO SING

Eminent Singers Give Their Best Advice for Her Benefit

BE SURE YOU HAVE A VOICE

BY CLEMENTINE DE VERE

HE advice which is used as the title of this article is important to be observed in its reference to both quality and quantity by girls who have any intention of making public singing their profession; though it is a matter of far less importance, in its latter connection, to those who may intend to sing only for their own pleasure, to study for a better ap-their own pleasure, to study for a better ap-preciation and enjoyment of the singing of others, or to teach vocal music. To those who intend their voice to be their bread-winner, in the capacity to which I have first alluded, the title-injunction is the most import-ant that can be given any girl.

In the three cases cited but the slightest quantity of actual vocal strength may be present, provided that the vocal cords are in a physical condition to emit the musical tones. It sometimes occurs that this is not the case, that the threat can not, from its defective formation, resound or reverberate as it should

It sometimes occurs that this is not the case, that the throat can not, from its defective formation, resound or reverberate as it should be able to do in the production of a voice; but this is unusual. The tones then being present, even in the slightest quantity, the rest depends much upon the cultivation.

The best way to discover whether or not you have a voice is to subsult yourself to a thoroughly good teacher, and abide by his or her judgment, although, if you possess good intelligence, musical appreciation and a really artistic sense, you should be able to judge for yourself whether your tones are true and sweet, and those are the only requisites necessary for a commencement in vocal education. Strength, steadiness, volume and ability come with training; but sweetness and trueness are natural gifts. These can hardly be acquired.

The opinion of your friends and relatives in this matter, unless they are more learned than loving, will be of but little value to you. They are, as a rule—because in their ignorance and affection they condone and overlook most elarine faults—the worst crities and advisers.

are, as a re-beside in their ignorance and affection they condone and overlook most glaring faults—the worst critics and advisers that a girl can possibly have. I remember a famous prima-donna once telling me that when on her tours of this country—more here than elsewhere, because most foreign lands have their national consequences over their national consequences. have their national conservatories open to the public, and because, in America, girls of a lower stratum have ambitions beyond their station and abilities—scarcely a morning passed that fond parents did not bring for ber approval and examination embryo Pattis and Conchination and accounts these Scalchis. And it was a rarity when these singing birds could even follow a scale, thus showing by their lack of natural ability how thoroughly unprepared they were for a career as a public singer.

Therefore it is better, when possible, to sub-

Therefore it is better, when possible, to sub-mit yourself and your voice to a thoroughly good teacher; one who can have no prejudice either for or against you, and who should, therefore, as he is interested in his art, prove an unbiased and a safe judge. Flattery may be pleasant, but truth is potent, and a girl of yound ambitions cannot have too much of the latter.

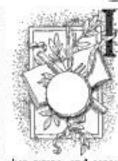

The question which naturally suggests itself The question which naturally suggests itself next is, "How am I to know who is a thoroughly good teacher?" And it is a very difficult question to answer: difficult, as much because of the different schools and methods of singing, as because of the different characters, voices and abilities of pupils and teachers. One man may be an absolute master of the style of singing; can show you all the little delicacies of expression and enunciation, the proper accentuation of important, and the passing over of unimportant, words, and yet passing over of unimportant, words, and yet may not know the first principles of voice production or execution. Again, a master who may be able to develop for you a voice of large proportions from one so small as to be scarcely perceptible, will quite possibly give you nothing of technique—if one can apply this phrase in vocalization. If you can find a teacher who combines execution with voice teacher who combines execution with voice production and development, you have found a thing of value, and the safe person to whom to submit your voice as well as your vocal instruction

But suppose that he tells you that you have no voice—a thing which happens but rarely, most people possessing at least a small quan-tity of that article; but if this excellent teacher shall tell you that—although you have the love of music, and the intelligence and in-dustry necessary—your throat is defective in its formation of the vocal cords, the only its formation of the vocal cords, the only thing for you to do is to resign yourself to his judgment and abide by it. If you cannot do it, that is if you have no voice, do not try to sing. The effect is painful to your beavers and satisfactory only to yourself. The truly artistic spirit is unselfish and is less desirous always of self-enjoyment than of famishing always of self-enjoyment than of farnishing pleasure to others.

But if you have only the smallest quantity of voice, cultivate what you have; develop more and learn the art of singing. That is all you will find it necessary to do in order to become a very pleasing singer. I say "all," but it is a very large "all." It represents months and even years of close application, patient study, continued practice and care. But the adherence to them will give you—provided you have started with the requisites—a style which will charm, and a voice which will be to yourself and your nearest and dearest, if not to the public, a constant source of refined

WHEN TRAINING THE VOICE

BY MARIE ROZE

I is when a girl is train-ing her voice that she should be careful with her diet, and look well to the little things in life which bring us good health. Colds and draughts are, of course, always things to avoid most rigidly. A girl who voice cannut be too eareful when going out into the open air-in her wraps, and especially in the manner in

into the open air—in her wraps, and especially in the manner in which she protects her chest and throst. Another important thing is rest, and plenty of it. A girl who is irregular in her hours of sleep will feel it in her voice.

As to diet, the girl should avoid sweets of all kinds. There is nothing better than food of the plainest kind. Pastry, nuts, almonds, raisins, pickles, rich sauces are simply poison to a singer. All these are indigestible, and a singer, above all people, should partake of only that class of food which digests easily. Never eat closer than two hours before you sing. I go further: if I sing at eight o'clock, I eat at four in the afternoon. As regards fluids, all are harmful if taken in immoderate quantities. Milk is good, but it is best when mixed with soda-water or seltzer. Wines of any kind are injurious, and I cannot be too emphatic in warning all girls who aspire to be singers to abstain from them. I have known some of the most promising voices to be utterly ruined by even the smallest indulgence in wine. Fresh and ripe fruit always makes a good diet for a singer, especially grapes. Very often—almost daily I might say—I eat a pound of grapes, and find them the best possible tonic for the vocal cords.

The voice is regulated by the health of its possessor, and just as she takes care of that or neglects it will she make a success or failure. A good voice cannot come from an unhealthy constitution. If ever two things were inseparable, they are good health and a good congitution. If ever two things were in-separable, they are good health and a good voice. With the former, the latter is possible; without it, vocal excellence is impossible.

IS CONSTANT PRACTICE NECESSARY?

BY CLARA POOLE

NE must be careful in receiving the answer to this inquiry, to dis-tinguish between practice of the voice and exercise of the same organ, else my opinion on this subject is likely to be received with question. I do not believe in constant prac-tice unless it is possible to have such prac-tice with a teacher; but I do believe in the constant use of the voice under the care of a person competent to prevent the little carelessnesses and errors which unguarded practice is likely to make

If a girl expects to make much of her voice, by which I mean if she intends to sing with style, method, good taste and expression, either in public or in her home, the usual two lessons a week, with the daily practice at home, are, in most cases, useless. I believe in daily lessons, or, better still, in morning and afternoon lessons. sons daily. This obvious the necessity for practice alone, and enables the pupil to give her voice the exercise necessary to secure its flexibility and best effects, under intelligent guardianship.

A teacher may, and frequently does, spend the time allowed for the semi-weekly lesson in endenvers to eradicate some particular fault of method only to have the pupil leave her in order to "practice," as she calls it, at home; in reality, to fasten the fault the more firmly. It is the most difficult thing in the world for this to be otherwise, as faults which are perfectly evident to a teacher—because of unrecognizable in the majority of cases to a pupil. And if they are unrecognizable, how much more is it impossible for the pupil to guard against them! I wish I could urge more forcibly the economy and wisdom, as well as the necessity, for such a course. These qualities possess often so much more of weight in an argument than does absolute need; per-haps because their effects are so much more visible to the uneducated. To the true musician the effort of misapplied practice is at once only too evident.

Let me suggest, also, the crying evil of lengthy, as well as of misapplied, practice, Under no circumstances should the voice be used continuously for more than half an hour. I think there is but one opinion in this matter, and that is, that longer continuous use tends to destroy both the quality and capa-bility of a voice. Even opera singers, who sing during a two or three hour performance, have always a rest between their lines.

Therefore, let me say, if you can in any way practice with your teacher, or take daily or semi-daily lessons, do so, and your reward will be more than adequate; for I consider that one can accomplish more with daily les-sons, or two lessons a day—under the direct supervision of an instructor—in one year, then in ten, by taking only two lessons a week.

THE ART OF KEEPING A VOICE

BY MINNIE HAUK

FTER a girl has gone through the training of a voice, and she feels confident that she has been blessed with vocal powers, it is natural for her to ask: "How can you keep a voice against etc?" This question is asked of all singers, and, certainly, none is more insportant. Care and good health are undoubt-for the preservation of health are undoubtedly the first requisites for the preservation of the voice. A void draughts, where the cold wind blows; avoid getting over-heated, and do like Mr. Haggard's "She," avoid getting in the fire. Don't, after singing, do as I have frequently seen scores of girls do—stand with a low-neck dress before a window, or sit with quentity seen scores of giris do—stand with a low-neck dress before a window, or sit with an exposed neck between an open window and a door left ajar. "But I am so warm and nervous," is the general excuse, "and I must get some air!" Yes, my girl, but that is no reason why you should get a cold, too, and, perhaps, ruin your voice!

The greatest danger to a voice is overwork. Nothing will ruin vocal powers so much as to overtax them. Each constitution has just so much vitality, and when that gives out it is useless to force things. The wonderful organs that go to make a voice are delicate, and not impervious to the recklessness of the fortunate possessor. It is marvelous how so many singers escape the exposures that so frequently occur on the lyric stage. We have to change dresses so often in one opera, frequently appearing in a bridal costume in one scene, and in the next wearing a heavy garb, that every chance is given to contract a cold. What are the preventives? As soon as we go off the stage, we wrap ourselves up and keep warm. The exertion of acting and singing on the stage keeps up good circulation. In grand opera the exertion is very great, and oftentimes, in sustained lyrical flights, the voice is put to a test which the audience, I am afraid, does not sufficiently appreciate. Now, it is evident that if one sings too often in a week, the voice cannot stand the strain any length of time. Grand opera singers have imposed upon their voices, and the result has been they gave out in a few years. I made my débest twenty years ago, and my recent appearances have convinced my friends that my voice is as fresh as ever, simply because I take care of myself. Singers ought never to sing more than fresh as ever, simply because I take care of myself. Singers ought never to sing more than twice or three times a week; they should live a quiet, moral life if they want to keep their voices. Society life is the worst life for an artist, Study the laws of health, for health is the voice. Study the laws of health, for health is the voice. Sound sleep, wholesome, simple food, and exercise enough, will do more to preserve the voice than all the drugs or nostrums in the universe. Healthy people have no insurance against colds if they expose themselves. Oftentimes, strong people expose themselves, contract colds and die of consumption. Well, weak lungs are not friendly to an operatic voice. Avoid ardent spirits as a beveruge is another caution, perhaps more applicable to woice. Avoid ardent spirits as a nevering is another caution, perhaps more applicable to male than to female singers. Many a noble voice has been literally drowned into silence by indulgence in strong drink. Shakespeare, when he says, "Oh, that men should put a thing into their mouths to steal their brains away!" could have added, "and their voices, too!"

It is easy to say, "Do this," or "Do that," and give directions how to keep the voice; and give directions how to keep the voice; but it is well known that what might affect one singer will produce no effect whatever upon another. The main thing is, to study your own constitution, and live up to it. Know yourself, and then treat yourself in the best possible manner. No time is ever wasted which is spent upon the care of a good voice. In the matter of colds, no one can tell when the least exposure will be the beginning of an attack. Going out in the cold night air, something—a shawl or cape—should be put over the mouth to keep away the wind. I always wear a "cloud"—Orenburg shawl. In countries like Mexico, where the air is somewhat rarified, the ladies, coming out of the theures in the evening, always place their mantillas over their mouths.

There are a thousand and one precautions

There are a thousand and one precautions necessary to protect a voice and keep it fresh and clear; and the girl who has found she possesses a voice and has trained it, must not think the hardest part is over. Two words, however, constitute good advice—Be healthy. The road to success, for a lyric artist, is not one strewn with roses. The first requisite is a good voice, and the necessary training is often very ardious and discouraging. But any one who has the genius of song in her soul will not care for the work. I practice daily, and never permit my voice to fall into a longing for that supposed elysium known as innocuous destretude. A singer, to interpret music di-vinely, must feel; but those who do not feel when they sing last much longer. Yet the greatest artists—those who make the deepest impression—must be emotional. It is a continual struggle and a continual dissatisfaction with one's self, and a craving to perfect one's self at every performance. I find, always, there is a point I have forgotten, and which I leave over to do next time. If I had no leave over to do next time. If I had no emotion, I would be satisfied with what I do. but as it is there is a continual desire to do better. I do not believe in artists who think they are perfect. There is no such thing as being perfect. The true singer—the girl or woman who loves to sing-is always ambitious to do better. This is wise and commendable. But don't overdo; be true to yourself, and you will not only be true to your voice, but you will ascertain for yourself the art of keeping your youn powers in their best form.

A DANGER TO AVOID

By ITALO CAMPANINI

ERSONALLY, I do not believe in voice build-ing. Nature must give a girl a voice or else she will never acquire one. I often have the question asked if a voice can be made to do this or be made to do this or that. My answer is, that the natural voice can do so much and nothing more. Every singer with a modi-cum of common sense, should know cum of common sense, should know just what his or her voice can do, and not recklessly stain it by attempting to sing in a large hall. Straining a voice means the beginning of the end. One pure, natural note, is a joy forever; but a falsetto note is the ghost of departed sweetness. I can explain what I mean better by making a rather trite but true comparison. If a man has an income of one hundred dollars per month, and lives up to it, be never saves anything; but if he only spends eighty dollars a month, he has twenty dollars left. That twenty dollars represents reserved capital. Now, if a singer has a voice of a limited compass, and she attempts to go beyond it, or keep up to it, she will inevitably break down. It is the law of compensation and nature. It is far better for a young lady who has a small but sweet voice, never to attempt to sing in a large hall. A man knows just how far he can jump, and singers know what their voices can do. Well, now, if a man who knows he can only jump eight feet tries to jump twelve feet and falls, he can only blame himself. Oh, but why did he not consult friends or a professional athlete?" some one will ask. That would have done no good, because the man knew what he could do himself. Now, young girls who are taught at home, or even in conservatories, soon find out what strength and compass their voices have, and if they reckservatories, soon find out what strength and compass their voices have, and if they reckcompass their voices have, and if they reck-lessly attempt to go on the stage when they have voices that are inadequate, I do not know how it can be prevented. Voices should be well cultivated. I have heard small voices that were sweet and fresh because they were natural and not strained. A young lady had better, by far, cultivate her voice, if a small one, for parlor singing and have it natural, than ruin it by straining for a greater com-pass. She can give her friends in her parlor at home a treat that would make no impression on an audience in a large concert hall. It is better to have a sweet voice in a halt. It is better to have a sweet voice in a room eight feet by ten, than to have a cracked, falsetto voice in a big concert hall.

DEMANDS OF A PUBLIC VOICE

BY LOUISE NATALL

'HEN a girl or woman arrives at the deter-mination that she wishes to make for herself a career as a public singer, she must contemplate carefully the considerations which influence her to such a decision. And the considerations which influence her to such a decision. And of all the considerations which appear, the one which she should weigh the most carefully, is whether or not she possesses a voice capable of public singing: for but few of the lovely parlor voices one hears, no matter how thoroughly they may have been trained, possess this capability, and it is of the different quantities which, when added together, produce it, that I have been asked to write.

First and foremost comes what is known as the "carrying quality," that placing or bringing out of the voice with a resonance and sound which enables it to be heard at the extreme end of the concert hall, no matter how softly the vocalist may be singing. Some volces possess this quality of carrying, naturally: but with a good method, it can, is some case, be acquired. An instructor who teaches a good method of singing—by the proper placing of the voice—will impart the knowledge of its attainment in his first lessons to his pupil, and, after this, the intelligence to appreciate its presence or absence, and careful efpupil, and, after this, the intelligence to appreciate its presence or absence, and careful efforts to secure and retain it by study and practice, will bring the desired quality. With it in possession, there need be no concern as to the amount of voice one has; for a small voice with this carrying power is better than a large quantity of vocal strength without it.

The tones of the voice, too, come in for a share of consideration. They must be, either share of consideration. They must be, eather naturally or as the result of training, pure, sweet and, above all, true. Constant study and practice will bring these us the other qualities. These are the requisites to the voice in pub-lie singing; but there are some other things necessary—in the woman herself. That subtle power which we of later days, for lack of a more descriptive title, have called "personal magnetism," is of the most vital importance to her success in public singing. She must, by her personal charm, as well as by her singing, carry her audience with her. They must feel her in touch with them, just as she must find them responsive to her; and, in the successful accomplishment of this, she will find new inspiration,

A woman need not be beautiful, although beauty is certainly no barrier to the public singer; but let her have a proper cultivation of voice, sing conscientsously and be in sympa-thy with her audience, and our debatoste has the elements of success, at least, and is sure always of a respectful hearing.

Digitized by Google

THE BROWNIES THROUGH THE YEAR

A NEW SERIES OF 12 ADVENTURES OF THE FUNNIEST LITTLE MEN IN THE WORLD

By Palmer Cox

FIELDS were lying brown and bare; signs of snow were in the air;

And in the leafless forest drear No more the songsters charmed the ear, When cunning Brownies met and planned A task well suited for the band.

Said one: "That glorious day is near That is to young and old so dear; Because it calls those truths to mind So advantageous to mankind, And brings to every generous heart The wish to take an active part In cheering up the homes of all With presents, howsoever small."

Another said: "Through all the year No better season can appear Than this for Brownies to combine, And in some noble action shine. The field is wide, as all can see; No neutral arms need folded be; But to a Children's Home, near by, We will to-night our thoughts apply, And, in no weak or sparing way, Our mystic powers at once display; For not alone the Christmas tree We shall supply with labor free, But ere we leave it standing there It shall the choicest presents bear That can the sparkling eyes invite, Or fill the heart with pure delight."

To learn the task that must be done-Though full of danger or of fun-Is all the Brownies care to know. At once a willingness they show To carry out the scheme as planned, With all the means at their command.

As when the sun through orchard trees Looks down upon the waiting bees, And tells them foliage now is dry, And all the blossoms open lie, And quickly spreading in their flight They dart to woods and meadows bright; So Brownies with a sudden start In all directions now depart

Some to the forest started out ind a tree, both tall and stout, That would support the loads that they Intended on its limbs to lay; /hile others traveled to the townith lengthy lists

all jotted down

Determined to ransack

the place Before they homeward turned a face, However well the doors were barred, Or large the "No Admittance" card. And well they carried out their plan As here and there they freely ran

From candy shops, and places where They sought a certain sort of ware, To largest buildings they could find Where goods were sold of every kind; Upstairs and down, as business led, The busy Brownies quickly sped. Said one-while they were on the race To find some goods to suit the case-We haven't time such things to make As we require, so we must take

What other hands than ours have made To meet the great demands of trade; But well we know that nothing's lost, However much the things may cost; For greater good will surely flow Through what we take, and what bestow, Than people think who are content

More ways than one may blessings fall On worthy heads, both great and small; The loss that causes tears and sighs May prove a blessing in disguise. We better know where everything Will greatest good and pleasure bring Than those who mostly tax the brain

At bargaining for private gain. We Brownies neither buy nor sell, But give and take and prosper well, And muse how little people know Where next our handiwork will show."

In time, the scattered Brownies met Those who had gone the gifts to get, And those whose task it was to fall A Christmas tree to hold them all. The tree was promptly boisted there, And firmly fixed with greatest care, Until it stood as when it strove To overlook the silent grove. work was found for every hand; The ladders soon were in demand,

And whatsoever would unite With something else to form a height On which to climb and stretch around Till every branch its burden found. Sald one: "My friends, we seldom find A task as pleasing to the mind;

I fancy I can see the eyes Of children widen with surprise, And see the smiles extend so free From cheek to cheek when this they see,

And learn that not a single tot In all the place has been forgot. boys-the guns, the skates and bats; For girls-the dolls and rubber cats, books, the toys and fancy things

PALMER COX Christmas to the market brings: And candy, colored red in streaks, To sweeten all their teeth for weeks."

But battles are not always won By those who have the tight begun; And though our good intentions may Be such as no on should gainsay, And all our toil, or fighting free, Be righteous in a high degree, We may by trials be distressed, As if our cause was not the best. So Brownies did not pass the night Without mishaps that wakened fright; Where ladders, of the greatest length, Were lacking in the proper strength To bear the crowd that clambered high, Their gifts upon a branch to tie; Or where they broke some rude affair, On which they stood to do their share.

And round the floor the presents rolled That at the time they chanced to hold; received distressing whacks, That gave them broken limbs or backs. By coming down from greatest height Mid candy, horns and weapons bright,

Some costly works were shaken loose, That were not made for roughest use; And bravest hearts were filled with dread As something crashed high over head. And it was dangerous to throw A glance above, the cause to know.

Of nuts, to serve for winter's store When generous autumn is no more, Some active Brownies, spurning all

The chairs and ladders,

And hands that seldom with actions bold

lost their hold,
Till to the brittle
top they passed
And made the Christmas presents fast.

So work went on, as it must go

When Brownies all united throw

Tis hard to tell or paint aright

Their daring skill and mystic power, into the labor of the hour.

Their acts that long December night Upon one page, however wide, Where pen and pencil must subside.

But those who know the Brownie band,

May well believe no idle hand Was resting there, that had a chance The undertaking to advance.

One, running out one time to spy

If signs of day were in the sky, Mistook the northern lights in play

For early hints of morning gray.

So with the false

Indeed the work

alurm he ran, And almost overthrew their plan.

was acarcely more Than half-way through,

when at the door

with such a shout,

It brought their eyes all pop-

The tree itself was nearly felled

Through their commotion

ping out;

The rogue appeared dared to crawl From limb to limb,

Here fell a doll, in spite of care, And there a goat or cotton hare; Down whirling through the branches fell The felt-made elephant as well, With wiggling trunk, a glassy stare, And saw-dust spouting from a tear, To roll about, as if in pain, Upon some sun-dried Asian plain.

But then, the Brownies' skill sublime Stood them in hand at such a time; A tap, a twist, a shake or two And broken things were good as new.

That had been scattered round the room; The shattered limbs of dolls were set By those who first the patient met: And all the surgeon's skill was shown At splinting up the broken bone, Till on the tree they took their place Without a limp or loss of grace. At times misunderstandings rose, And comrades almost came to blows. When some an injury received, Or were at rash remark aggrieved; But calmer heads would get the floor, And words like these soon peace restore: "Be careful of your hand, my friend,

And let it not in wrath descend; For many a hand with hasty stroke The silver links asunder broke, That neither vows, repentant strain, Nor scalding tears could mend again," Like cunning squirrels when they try To hide away a good supply

But neither slip, nor fall, nor break, Can make the Brownie band forsake A task their willing hands may find, Till they are satisfied in mind. So there they climbed about and tied The handsome gifts on every side, And niled some things around the base That were denied a hanging place, Till every child that slumbered there, Was sure to have its proper share. Then one remarked, with smile of pride, The task has much our patience tried, But still this thought the heart revives, We've done our best to brighten lives." And when the work, at last, was through, And Brownies from the place withdrew, They left, indeed, a Christmas tree That made the children shout with glee.

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

An Illustrated Family Journal with the Largest Circulation of any Magazine in the World.

Published Monthly by

THE CURTIS PUBLISHING COMPANY

At 433-435 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa. With Press-Rooms at 401-415 Appletree Street

> Edited by EDWARD W. BOK

in association with

MRS. LYMAN ABBOTT ("Aunt Patience") MISS RUTE ASHMORE MARGARET BOTTOME ROBERT J. BURDETTE KATE UPSON CLARK FOSTER COATES

MAUDE HAYWOOD EMMA M. HOOPER MRS. LOUISA KNAPP MARY F. KNAPP ISABEL A. MALLON MARIA PARLOA EBEN E. REXFORD ELISABETH ROBINSON SCOVIL REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D. KATE TANNATT WOODS

Advisory and Contributing Editors. With representatives at London and Paris.

BRANCH OFFICES:

New York: Potter Building, 38 Park Row Boston: 7 Temple Place, Cor. Tremont St. Chicago: Chickering Hall Building San Francisco: Chronicle Building

LONDON OFFICE:

53 Imperial Buildings, Ludgate Circus, E. C.

English Subscription Prices: Per issue, 6 pence; per year, 6 shillings, post-free.

Philadelphia, December, 1891

A HANDFUL OF HOLLY

N ancient times, the old chroniclers tell us, it was a pretty custom, on Christmas morning, with the most courtly of the English gentry, to lay at the feet of the fairest maid in all the parish roundabout a handful of holly. A happy maid, indeed, was she who on the morn of the birth of Christ received this token of of the birth of Christ received this token of respect to her pure womanhood. Presents were not then so freely given as in our day; but who will say that Christmas Day had less of a joyful significance to the resy-cheeked and bright-eyed maids of "merrie England?" Because Dame Fashion decrees it, we are returning more and more in these days to the customs of our grandmothers in many things, and I am just old-fashioned enough sometimes to think that we are not so very far from wrong when we turn the kaleidoscope a from wrong when we turn the kaleidoscope a little backwards.

little backwards.

And my wish upon this Christmas of 1891, to each of the mothers who read my words, is an old-fashioned one. We are getting so progressive in these days of ours that we are crowding all too rapidly out of the lives of our children those little beliefs and "supposins" that, years ago, made happy the bearts of the young. Why is it that so many mothers of to-day seek to absite the fairy-tales of childhood before the child has inhaled their fragnance and enjoyed their wondrons. their fragrance and enjoyed their wondrons charm? We want to go shead in this world, my friend, but let us not go too fast. We want the little ones in this century to believe, just as they did years ago, that some-thing of the supernatural transpires on each great holy day of the world. That if the sleepy little eyes will wake early enough on Easter morning, for example, they will see the sun dance in the heavens. We want them still to believe that the wish made on the hot-eross bun on Good Friday will come true be-fore the year is out. We want still that faith in the pretty belief that the new bit of ribbon worm on Whit-Sunday will bring group in worn on Whit-Sunday will bring upon its wearer an attendant good spirit for the year.

And then when Christmas morning comes, let all the wise horses, all the soft-eyed cows and everything that lives in a stable still get down on their knees early Christmas morning, just as they did centuries ago, in bonor of the little Child that was born at that time in a stable. We lose nothing, my friend, by letting this faith remain in the little minds in our homes. Soon enough will the world shatter the pretty story, but don't let it be your hand that tears aside the gazzy curtain. The child-ren who early lose belief in these things are the ones who make unhappy men and women; and, please God, we don't want our children to be anything but faith-loving men and pureminded women.

So, on this Christmas morning, let your Editor come to each of you, wherever be your home, in this land or across the seas, and place at your feet a handful of helly; and may the fragrant aroma of the shining leaves bring to your memory the beliefs of your childhood, and that of your mothers be-face you, and in their remembrance may you determine that they shall rest in the mind of your children and in their children's children Be old-fishioned in this idea; let the rest of the world pass you if it will, but let us each seek to perpetuate the Christmas of the olden EDWARD W. BOX.

Christmas-tide was the pleasure of the Editor to present to his Journal renders a gar-land of Christmas wishes, twined by a dozen of the women of America. This year the greetings come to American women from the greetings come to American women from their sisters "over the sea." To the Editor of the Journal this pleasure is a special one, since it was his privilege to personally gather the greetings as they are here presented to his readers. For this purpose he made a hasty visit abroad last summer. With each message of good cheer here printed there was given an additional personal one by the writers to the Editor, who now extends them to his readers, in the united wish that each of the readers of these greetings may have the brightest of these greetings may have the brightest Christmas, the fullest pleasures of the day, with not a cloud to darken the horizon.

ADELINA PATTI'S CHEERFUL MESSAGE

MADAME PATTI we all know; her voice has charmed us often. She has sang before us, but hitherto has never written to us, "I am glad, indeed, to send this," said the great singer as she penned these words:

T is a pleasure to me to express most cordial I T is a pleasure to me to express most cordial. Christmas greetings to the women of America through the Editor of The Ladies' Home Journal. From my heart I wish for them all the joy, jolity and good cheer popularly associated with the festive season. As I write this in my home, in the beautiful Swansea Valley, I recall with pleasure that one of the songs American women are fordest of bearing me sing is "Home, Sweet Home," and Christmas-tide is essentially a season which brings out all the beauties of a happy home. It teaches us how much real joy is to which brings out all the beauties of a happy home. It teaches us how much real joy is to be found in considering and contributing to the happiness of others. There is, more especially, so much that we can'do for the children to brighten their little lives at Christmas-tide; and I always like to think that at that time of the year the children of the poor are not forgotten. Last Christmas was the first one that I have been able to spend in my home here, at Craig-y-Nos, and it will ever be a memorable one to me from the fact that I was able to provide nearly twelve hundred poor people of the Swansea Valley with poor people of the Swansea Valley with Christmas comforts, and make them feel that they, too, had some share in the closer of the universal holiday season. This year, though I shall be at sea on Christmas Day on route to once more sing before you, the children of my Weish home will not be forgotten. Again, a Merry, Merry Christmas to all! ADELINA PAVII-NICOLINI

FROM THE DAUGHTER OF DICKENS

SOME way or other we always associate the name of Dickens with Christmas, and I was pleased, therefore, when his daughter said most earnestly to me in England last summer: "Do let me give you a Christmas greeting for your American women. My father loved them all, and his daughter is not less fond of them." And in a few days there came to me these lines, accompanied by a note as warm in its allusions as are the sentiments here expressed :

ON Christmas Day would I greet you, dear sisters of the newer world! Dear of the newer world! Dear mothers, you who are telling your children, gathered round you, the story of the lowly manger-bed; of the Holy Child, tended by manger-bed; of the riory Child, tended by the gentle Virgin Mother, all hall! Some of you may already have tressures in "Sunny Paradise!" There your babies of long ago are awaiting your coming. O, happy thought! bright and lovely Christmas to you! My childless sisters, who have never known, are never to know, the joys of materalty, take comfort into your hearts through the children of your more privileged relations and friends. Children are so quick, and seem to have such a subtle knowledge of the yearnings we, who love them so, bear toward them, that, believe me, they shower upon us a world of passion-ate, tender and faithful love.

My more unfortunate sisters—if such there be who read these words—listen to the chines will ring on Christmas morning. Take heart of grace. Look up and see the picture of the most compassionate, merciful and di-vine of men as He hends down to the weepling Magilalane, in pity, in love and in forgive-ness! Rise up and follow her; aya! follow her to the very foot of the cross. So shall this Christmas-tide be a happier and more hopeful one than you have known for many a day.

My profty girls—for you are all prefly, I now—much happiness, much fun and frulic, much joy; but in your wealth of youth and beauty do not forget the wants of the poor and needy! Merry Christmas to you still Manus. Dickness.

EDNA LYALL'S PEACEFUL GREETING

THOUSANDS of our women know the sterling novels of "Edna Lyall," and how characteristic of that pen is this simple yet earnest Christmas message which the author wrote in her Eastbourne home:

A CHRISTMAS greeting from the other side of the Atlantic to the women of America! It has always seemed to me the most difficult of problems to combine in daily America! It has always seemed to me the most difficult of problems to combine in daily life the two parts of the Christmas motto; for the effort to show "good-will toward men." Is only too apt to destroy "peace," and to make home an uncomfortable place where several over-worked people sleep, eat, and discuss plans. Words written by John Foster early in this century often come to my mind. "If I had the power," he says, "of touching a large part of mankind with a spell, amid all this inane activity, it should be this short sentence, "Be quiet, be quiet!"" Can we, any of us, do better than take his spell and try to weave it into our "I urrying life?" We are, most of us, like children who cobble in haste to the end of a long seam, and then are remaineded that a quarter of the amount, carefully done, would have been far better. Surely, home life would be happier, and philanthropy more helpful if we would but let the peace of Christ rule iv, our hearts, and learn that rest is not selficances, and bustling overwork so true service.

Enna Lyall.

FROM LADY MORELL MACKENZIE

WHILE the name of Sir Morell Mackenzie has come over to us as one of England's greatest physicians, that of Lady Mackenzie has hitherto been withheld from Americans. And yet, from few of England's women is the American abroad upt to receive more hearty hospitality than in the home over which Lady Mackenzie presides. A sincere admirer of American women, the wife of the great medical practitioner evidences that regard in her message across the sea:

To all my sisters on the other side of the Atlantic I send a garland of Christmas wishes: To the maiden, that the secret hope of wishes: To the maiden, that the secret hope of her leart—if a worthy one—may be crowned with fulfillment; to the young mother, that the babe at her breast may be a link between two lives which nothing can break; to the matron in the mellow maturity of her prime, that her heart may be brightened by the prosperity of her husband and the rich promise of her children; and to her whose sun is already sloping toward the west, that the evening of her life may, like the close of a perfect day, be undimmed by sorrow.

MASGARET MORKLE MACKENZIE

MARIE ROZE'S RETROSPECTIVE GLANCE

N the minds of lovers of the best operation music the name of Marie Roze has a pleasant place. With her, admiration for America and its women is not gauged by mercenary motives. Our country won the heart of the famous singer years ago, and in her London home one sees on every hand evidences that that affection has not died out. Many were the words of loving cheer which accompanied the following to its present destination :

THERE is no gentler custom in all the world than the greetings of Christmastide. It is the one season of rejoicing, when men and women and children join hands and make a circle around the world. It is a season make a circle around the world. It is a season of forgiving and forgetting, a time for the wiping away of tears, when enemies should shake hands, and when the blessed word forgiveness should be uppermost in all our minds. It has been my good fortune to spend Christmas in many lands, and always under the most cheerful circumstances. The human heart is the same the world over. It makes little difference whether the color of one's skin be white or black, or of what race they come, or what creed they believe in—Christmas is the day when all enmitties are forgiven, and new day when all enmittee are forgiven and new oay when all committee are torpoven and new friendships are established. I love the Christ-mas times; I love to see the little children, with their toys, playing about the house with never a thought of the rugged road of life their weary feet must one day press; Hove to see the young husband and wife happy in each other's love, for it is in the sanctity of home that society finds its corner-stone; I love to see the old man and old woman, the grandfather and grandmother, whose beads are covered with a crown of silver hair; I love to see the poor at Christmas, for then the great heart of human nature swells. What thoughts come to me as I write! I go back in fancy to the days of my childhood. I can see the toys that I played with. There is the old room, and every particle of furniture and every picture on its walls are familiar to me. There is the loved and loving mother and father, and all my good friends of my childhood days pass before me in glorious procession. How happy I was then, and who of as would not ex-change all the bonors and rowards that have come to us through our adult life for the joya of our childhool Christmas days? I would love to be a child again, and as I cannot I wish it were possible that the glorious myth of Kris Kringle and his pack of toys and goodles had nover been explained to me. It is really too had that we have at all times to face the realities of life. And it will be so until that day when we shall again become as little children. Happy day! Happy Christ-mas-tide to the women of America. MARIE RUSE

THE PEN THAT WROTE THE WOOING O'T

NO hand is always so ready to write something in favor of the American woman as is that which years ago gave us "The Wooling O't," and has since given the world so much other worthy work. With a frank sincerity all her own, the "Mrs. Alexander" of literature and the Mrs. Hector of her friends, gave me these words to present to the Journal readers in their Christmas issue;

Teaces the Atlantic for the blessed Christmas time. This, above all others, is the feast whereon we should lot "the dead past" of offences great or small "bury its dead;" while the memory of loving kindness, of benefits, should glow with fresh life, and stand out in electric clearness against the checkered background of bygone years. For all the good gifts the American people, as a race, has bestowed upon the world, we English women thank you. For the noble thoughts, the subtle pictures of character, the analysis of endives, the faithfulness to high standards in their works which your poets and philosophers and story-tellers have sent to help us on our upward, thorny way—for in all these you have had your share—we thank you with warm gratitude! For the conquests over nature, the sphinx whose riddles your scientists force her to reveal, the allevation of suffering, and the untilities. riddies your scientists force her to reveal, the alleviation of suffering, and the uplifting of mankind, we laud and magnify your mighty men, rejoicing in the gifts of their hounteens hands.

mighty men, rejoicing in the gifts of their bounteous hands.

Let us press forward in union; for ours is the grand battle with ignorance and sloth and the dullness of mean cnvy, and each day shows more clearly that it is our mission to march hand in hand in the pursuit of true freedom—enfranchisement from the tyranny of cvil. So let us bury the erring past, sorrowing for our sins and mistakes with the softness of genuine humility, not the bitterness of mortified self-love. And, taking up our lives afresh, strengthen and beautify them with "Self-reverence, self-knowledge, self-control," and all the gracious growths that spring from this grand trial. "Pence be within your walls!" oh, women of the new world, "and plenteousness within your palaces!

ANNIE ALEXANDER

MRS. KENDAL'S WOMANLY GREETING

F Mrs. Kendal it may be truly said that she represents what is loftiest and best on the stage of to-day; and in this pretty sentiment her womanly qualities come to the fore:

SPEAK the same tongue, am warmed and SPEAR the same tongue, am warmed and cooled by the same sun and wind; but I have one slight disadvantage (some think advantage); I am an actress. Now, it is generally supposed that a creature who paints her face, and wears different gowns, cannot retain the same simplicity of thought as other women; but this is not the case. Never believe anything of the kind. In fact, believe nothing detrimental to others exceedible at nothing detrimental to others, especially at Christmas time. No; remember

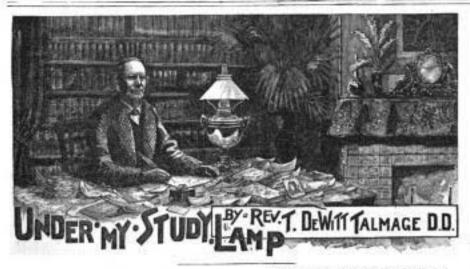

"Stage masks may cover honest faces. And hearts beat true beneath a tinsed rube!"

Now, isn't that a pretty sentiment? Do you know Peg Woffington said that? She also said something else rather nice. She said to her lover:

"Oh tell me, tell me you love me. Outy say so! Never mind if it is true or not."

Now, you pretty, nice, bright, cunning, smart (you see I speak the language) American woman, can you say this of all your friends on this Christmas day of 1891? Yes! you can. Mador Kendal.

A ND it would have been easy for the Journan's Editor so have secured pages of these "greetings 'cross the sea," from England's most noted women, but sufficient are here given to indicate to the women of America the loving estimate placed upon them by their sisters in the mother country. Whether one listens to the words of Mrs. Gladstone, as she speaks of the "dear women of the new country," or hears the author of Robert Elsmere" acknowledge the debt kindness under which she feels to her readers in America, or talks with the charitable Countess of Aberdeen, as her eyes brighten with the mention of American women, the conviction comes quickly home that a closer bond of love exists nowhere in this wide, wide world of ours as that which binds the bearts of the English and American women. The differences of the past are forgotten, the wonderful progress of our land excites no envy, the superior beauty of our American women is not made the basis of a jealous spirit. There is extended but one feeling by the English women toward their American sistersthat of sisterly affection and good-will. As never before in the history of the mother-land are American women welcomed to English homes; their coming is eagerly looked for, and their presence means general pleasure, English bospitality knows no limit when once extended, and the thousands of our American women who visited English shores during the past summer, will be able to approciate, best of all, the hearthese and thorough sincerity underlying these "greening in 2012 by Google

T is December again, and once more my pen is lifted to send my Christ-lifted to send my Christmas salutations to the readers of The Lades' Home Journal. How quickly time seems to move! And the last month of a year finds many always in a reflective mood. With one year behind us, how natural to look forward to what the next will bring us! Reflections crowd upon us, and with the flight of the year there comes to us a with the flight of the year there comes to us a sense of the flight of our own lives.

THE DECEMBER OF OUR LIVES

I HAVE heard it said that we ought to live as though each moment were to be our A as though each moment were to be our last. I do not believe that theory. As far as preparation is concerned, we ought always to be ready; but we cannot always be thinking of death, for we have duties in life that demand our attention. When a man is selling goods, it is his business to think of the bargain he is making. When a man is pleading in the courts it is his duty to think of the interests of his clients. When a clerk is adding up accounts it is his duty to keep his mind upon the column of figures. He who fills up his life with thoughts of death is far from being the highest style of Christian. I knew a man who used often to say at night, "I wish I might die before morning!" He is now an infidel. But there are times when we ought to give ourselves to the contemplation of that infidel. But there are times when we ought to give ourselves to the contemplation of that solemn moment when to the soul time ends and eternity begins. We must go through that one pass. There is no roundabout way, no by-path, no circuitous route. Die we must; and it will be to us a shameful occur-rence or a time of admirable behavior. Our friends may stretch out their hands to keep as back, but no implication on their part can us back, but no imploration on their part can hinder us. They might offer large retainers, but death would not take the fee. The breath will fail and the eyes will close and the heart will stop. But this ought not to be a depress-ing theme; who wants to live here forever?

LOOKING TOWARD THE SUNSET

THE world has always treated me well, and every day I feel less and less like scolding and complaining. But yet I would not want to make this my eternal residence. I love to watch the clouds, and to bathe my soul in the blue sea of heaven; but I expect when the firmament is rolled away as a residual. when the firmament is rolled away as a scroll to see a new heaven, grander, higher and more glorious. You ought to be willing to exchange your body that has headaches and sideaches and weaknesses innumerable, that limps with the stone-bruise or festers with the thorn, or the stone-bruise or festers with the thorn, or flames on the funeral pyre of fevers, for an incorruptible body and an eye that blinks not before the jasper gates and the great white throne. But between that and this there is an hour about which no man should be reckless or foolbardy. I doubt not your courage, but I tell you that you will want something better than a strong arm, a good aim and a trusty sword when you come to your last battle. You will need a better robe than any in your wardrobe to keep your arm in that place.

WHEN THE DAY IS DONE

CIRCUMSTANCES do not make so much difference. It may be bright day when you push off from the planet, or it may be dark night, and while the owl is hooting from the forest. It may be spring, and your soul may go out among the blossoms, apple orchards swinging their censers in the way. It may be winter, and the earth in a snow shroud, may be winter, and the earth in a snow shroud. It may be autum, and the forests set on fire by the retrenting year; dead nature laid out in state. It may be with your wife's hand in your hand, or you may be in a strange hotel with a servant faithful to the last. It may be in the rail-train, shot off the switch, and tumbling in long reverberation down the embankment. I know not the time; I know not the mode; but the days of our life are being subtracted but the days of our life are being subtracted away and we shall come down to the time when we have but ten days left, then nine days, then eight days, then seven days, six days, five days, four days, three days, two days, one day. Then hours: three hours, two hours, one hour. Then only minutes left: five minutes, four minutes, three minutes, two minutes, one minute. Then only seconds left: four seconds, three seconds, two seconds, one second. Gone! The chapter of life ended! The book closed! The pulse is at rest! The feet through with the journey! The hands closed from all work. No word on the lips. No breath in the nostrils, Hair combed back to lie undishevelled by any human hands. to lie undishevelled by any human hands. The muscles still. The nerves still. The lungs still. The tongue still. All still.

WHEN LIFE RECEIVES ITS SEAL

O'N earth with many of you the evening is the happiest part of the twenty-four hours. You gather about the stand. You talk and laugh and sing. You recount the day. You plan for the morrow. You have games and repartees. Amid all the toil of the day that is the goal for which you run, and as you take out your watch or look at the descending sun you thrill with the thought that it is toward evening. So death comes to the disciple! What if the sun of life is about to set? Jesus is the day-spring from on high; the perpetual morning of every ransomed spirit. What if the darkness comes? Jesus is the light of the world and of heaven. What though this earthly house does crumble? though this earthly house does crumble? Jesus has prepared a bouse of many mansions. Jesus is the anchor that always holds. Jesus is the light that is never eclipsed. Jesus is is the light that is never eclipsed. Jesus is the fountain that is never exhausted. Jesus is the fountain that is never exhausted. Jesus is the evening star, amid the gloom of the gathering night. You are almost through with the abuse and back-biting of enemies. They will call you no more by evil names. Your good deeds will no longer be misinterpreted or your honor filched. The troubles of earth will end in the felicities of heaven! Toward evening! The bereavements of earth will soon be lifted. You will not much longer stand pouring your grief in the tomb like Rachel weeping for her children, or David mourning for Absalom. Broken hearts bound up. Wounds healed. Tears wiped away. Sorrows terminated. No more sounding of the dead march! Toward evening! Death will come, sweet as slumber to the cyclids of the babe, as full rations to a starving soldier, as evening hour to the exhausted workman. as evening hour to the exhausted workman. The sky will take on its sunset glow, every cloud a fire-psalm, every lake a glassy mirror; the forests transfigured; delicate mists climb-ing the air. Your friends will herald it; your pulses will beat it; your joys will ring it; your lips will whisper it: "Toward evening!"

THE ORIGIN OF DREAMS

THE ORIGIN OF DREAMS

DEFORE the year closes I want to answer two leading questions which have lain on my desk for some time from Journal readers: One sister asks: "Do you believe in dreams?" I will tell you just what I think.

I believe that the majority of dreams are merely the penalty of outraged digestive organs, and you have no right to mistake the nightmare for heavenly revelation. Late suppers are a warrant deed for bad dreams. Highly-spiced salads at eleven o'clock at night, instead of opening the door heavenward open the door infernal and diabolical. You outrage natural law, and you insult the God who made those laws. It takes you from three to five hours to digest food, and you have no right to keep your digestive organs in struggle when the rest of your body is in somnolence. The general rule is, eat nothing after six o'clock at night, retire at ten, sleep on your right side, keep the window open five inches for ventilation, and other worlds will not disturb you much. By physical maltreatment you take the laider that Jacob saw in his turb you much. By physical maltreatment you take the ladder that Jacob saw in his you take the ladder that Jacob saw in his dream and you lower it to the nether world, allowing the ascent of the demoniacal. Dreams are midnight dyspepsia. An unregulated de-sire for something to eat ruined the race in Paradise, and an unregulated desire for some-thing to eat keeps it ruined. The world dur-ing six thousand years has tried in vain to digest that first apple.

HOW TO HAVE PLEASANT DREAMS

HOW TO HAVE PLEASANT DREAMS

I will give you a receipt for pleasant dreams. Fill your days with elevated thought and unselfish action and your dreams will be set to music. If all day you are gouging and grasping and avaricious, in your dreams you will see gold that you cannot clutch, and bargains in which you were outshylocked. If during the day you are irascible and pugnacious, and gunpowdery of disposition, you will at night have battle with enemies in which they will get the best of you. If you are all day long in a hurry, at night you will dream of rail-trains that you want to catch while you cannot move one inch toward the depot. If you are always oversuspicious and expectant of assault, you will have at night hallucinations of assassins with daggers drawn. No one wonders that Richard have at night hallocinations of assessins with daggers drawn. No one wonders that Richard III, the iniquitous, the night before the battle of Bosworth Field, dreamed that all those whom he had murdered stared at him, and that he was torn to pieces by demons from the pit. If a man spends his life in trying to make others happy and is heavenly-minded, around his pillow he will see cripples who have left their crutches, and processions of celestial imperials, and hear the grand march roll down from drums of heaven over jasper parapets. You are very apt to hear in dreams what you hear when wide awake. WHAT AND WHO IS WOMAN?

What and Who is Woman?

NE dear sister writes me and asks if I will answer the question which she gives as:
"What and who is woman?" Until you get a better definition, my sister, I give you this:
Direct from God, a sacred and delicate gift, with affections so great nothing short of the Infinite God can tell their bound. Fashioned to refine and soothe and lift and irradiate home and society and the world. Of a value that you do not realize unless your mother lived long enough to let you know, or in some great exigency of life when all other resources failed, you were reinforced by a wife's faith in God, that nothing could disturb.

Speak out, ye cradies, and tell of the feet that rocked you, and the anxious face that hovered rocked you, and the anxious face that hovered over you. Speak out, ye nurseries, and ye homes now desolate or still in full bloom with the faces of wife, mother and daughter, and help me define what a woman is.

A STORY OF CHRISTMAS DAY

NEVER like a Christmas season to pass without telling to some one a thrilling incident which happened at my house just eight years ago this coming Christmas. Perhaps I have told it to you, but I think not. We had just distributed the family presents Christmas morning when I heard a great cry of distress in the hallway. A child from a neighbor's house came in to say her father was dend. It was only three doors off, and, I think, in two minutes we were there. There lay the old Christian sea captain, his face upturned toward the window as though he had suddenly seen the headlands, and with an illuminated countenance as though he were just going into harbor. The fact was he had already got through the "Narrows." In the adjoining room were the Christmas presents waiting for without telling to some one a thrilling inroom were the Christmas presents waiting for his distribution. Long ago, one night when he had narrowly escaped with his ship from he had harrowly escaped with his ship from being run down by a great ocean steamer, he had made his peace with God, and a kinder neighbor than Captain Pendleton you would not find this side of heaven.

THE FAITH OF A CHRISTIAN SAILOR

E had often talked to me of the goodness If E had often talked to me of the goodness of God, and especially of a time when he was about to go into New York harbor with his ship from Liverpool, and he was suddenly impressed that he ought to put back to sea. Under the protest of the crew and under their very threat he put back to sea, fearing at the same time he was losing his mind, for it did seem so unreasonable that when they could get into harbor that night they should put back to sea. But they put back to sea, and Captain Pendleton said to his mate, "You call me at ten o'clock at night." At twelve o'clock at night the captain was aroused and said: "What does this mean? I thought I told you to call me at ten o'clock, and here it is twelve." "What does this mean? I thought I told you to call me at ten o'clock, and here it is twelve."
"Why," said the mate, "I did call you at ten o'clock, and you got up, looked around and told me to keep right on this same course for two hours, and then to call you at twelve o'clock." Said the captain, "Is it possible? I have no remembrance of that." At twelve o'clock the captain went on deck, and through the rift of the cloud the moonlight fell upon the sea and showed him a ship-wreck with one hundred struggling passengers. light fell upon the sea and showed him a ship-wreck with one hundred struggling passengers. He helped them off. Had he been any earlier or any later at that point of the sea he would have been of no service to those drowning people. On board the captain's vessel, they began to band together as to what they should pay for the rescue, and what they should pay for the provisions. "Ah," says the captain, "my lads, you can't pay me anything; all I have on board is yours; I feel too greatly honored of God in having saved you to take any pay." Just like him.

WHAT GRANDER CHRISTMAS GIFT?

What Grander Christmas Gift?

O H, that the old sea captain's God might be my God and yours. Anid the stormy seas of this life may we have always some one as tenderly to take care of us as the captain took care of the drowning crew and the passengers. And may we come into the harbor with as little physical pain and with as bright a hope as he had; and if it should happen to be a Christmas morning, when the presents are being distributed and we are celebrating the birth of Him who came to save our shipwrecked world, all the better, for what grander, brighter Christmas-present could we have than Heaven? have than Heaven?

7. be with Talma

Dr.Talmage

The Readers of the Journal.

May I ask you to carefully read the announcement contained on the last (outside) cover page of this issue?

I feel quite sure that you will be greatly interested.

T. De Nitt Talmage

This young lady examines the young

"Johnnie, where is Carlsbad?"
"Part of it in every drug store in the United States."

"How do you make that out?"

"The Carlsbad Sprudel Salts are imported from there, and are the solid evaporations of the Sprudel Spring.

What have they done for you, that you know so much about them?

"Why, they have cured papa of his dyspepsia, and in the place of a cross father, they have given me a kind and loving parent."

Dyspepsia will spoil the most angelic temperament. Too much bile inactivity of the liver will start it. Carlsbad Sprudel Salts. A standard, a never-failing remedy. The genuine have the signature of "Eisner & Mendelson Co., Sole Agents, New York," on every bottle. Price, 75 cts. A sample bottle mailed upon receipt of 35 cts. Mention this Magazine.

Scotch Fratrics Jean pres Joods. This season. Wansel Brothers

Tiresome Darning!

Women, save your eyes and your hands. Men, save your wives and your money.

The pointed end of the old style stocking rowds the toes together, and the Big Toe in order to regain its natural position forces itself through the fabric. Result-discomfort, darning.

The New Shape in stockings allows the toes their proper posi-tions and is consequently

The Most Durable and The Only Comfortable.

Ingrowing Nails, Corns, Busions, etc., due to the old style stocking, prevented or relieved by Wankenhose.

If your Dealer hasn't them, send to us, Medium or beavy Cotton, 25 cts.
Fine Cotton, 26 cts.
Soft Liele, Merino or Wool, 20 cts.
Cashnorre, 75 cts.
Fine Cotton, extra quality, 50 cts.
Ralbriggran, 60 cts.
Cashmere, $1.00. Men's Try Pair.

Mention size shoe, and whether man's or woman's.
Illustrated catalogue free, on application. WAUKENHOSE COMPANY, 76 Chauncy Street, Boston, Mass.

TEEL-PLATE at third the cost, Rost quality, Free energies, J. S. C. Thompson, Manharitan, Ka.

CAMDS! New Sample Book Sc. W.S. CASU CO. Casta: S O O O

This Department is conducted and edited by RUTH ASHMORE, who cheerfully invites questions touching any topic upon which her young women readers may desire help or information. Address all letters to RUTH ASHMORE, care of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, Philadelphia, Pa.

T IS ringing again. It is telling once more that gracious news that there shall be "Glory to God on high and on earth peace, good-will to men." It's been a year since these bells rang, and so I want you to step forward, come out from the maks and tell me how you have fought the battle of life this last year.

fought the battle of life this last year.

THE GIRL OF THE PASSING YEAR

HAVE you given glory to God, in word, in deed and in look? Have you made life about you so joyful that peace and good-will have come down and shed frugrance over all? about you so joyful that peace and good-will have come down and shed fragrance over all? Has the hasty word, the angry look, the petalant reply been counted as of nothing? How much good-will have you shown to the erring brother or sister? How much and how often have you put out a helping hand and the word that should go with it, the word that says "Be of good cheer, you are among us and you are with us, the little Child born so many years ago makes no distinction between the sinners and those who are not, and He came into this world not to save those who had already made a place for themselves, but to show to the sinner the way to joy and happiness, and to make life better and easier for him." "But," say you, "you question so much why life be made easy for the one who does wrong?" My friend, until you make virtue as attractive as vice you will never lead a sinner in the right way. There will never be sweet, pure, honest good-will until we have fewer Pharisees and more Samaritans. It's a little bit of a sermon this, on Christmas day from me to you; but it comes in with the old, old text, that the bells are chiming out, the hearts are beating forth, that the holly berries whisper out and that all are chiming out, the hearts are beating forth, that the holly berries whisper out and that all over the earth makes the mother hold the haby closer to her to hear at once the tune and the words sung by the angels so many years ago, listened to by saint and somer alike to-day, those same dear old words that mean joy is with us as the carels go out.

"Glory to God on high and on earth peace, good-will

A CHRISTMAS WISH TO MY GIRLS

A CHRISTMAS WISH TO MY GRISS

I WANT every girl among you to have the happiest, merriest, most blessed Christmas day that can ever be made. I want that which you think should come unto her should be hers. I want her to be my girl, and you know my girl is one who, while she has her proper pride, still forgiveth much and will overlook and count as vain the trifles of life—the misrable mean little trifles that make life unhappy if you let them. The tiny, tiny little speck that eats up the beautiful peach. I want her to have a year full of joy and happiness, I want her to think of the mistakes of inst year and be careful enough not to let them happen and be careful enough not to let them happen again. Like me, she may have had illness come unto her, long, tiresome and painful. Like me, she may have seen the angel of death come in the door and take away the little white blossom that was there, but like me I want her to read a that with the approximation. want her to resolve that with the sorrows have come joys, with the grief there has been merriment, and that now we both intend to do the very best we can, taking for our Christmas motto, "There is always a star, that one of Bethlehem, abead."

THE BROTHERLESS GIRL

THE girl without a brother is especially to be pitted. She is the girl who is never certain of getting the pleasures of life unless she is very attractive. Of course she has no brother who she is certain will take her everywhere; she is apt to get a little bit vain, for she has no brother to tell her, as only a brother will, of her fisalts and mistakes. It is only the somewhat doubtful tact of a brother that an-nounces "I wouldn't walk up street with you in that frock," and the girl whose brother says this to her may be certain that he is only expressing the opinion of other girls' brothers. He may not do it in the most gentle way, but he does tell the truth, and if you ask him why paying a visit to another girl is more desirable than to one you know, he will sit down and look at you, and then he will say: "Well, you see, it is just this way: From the time you get there she is a nice girl who gives you a pleas-ner waterms and not be found that over the there she is a nice girl who gives you a pleas-ant welcome and yet doesn't gush over you. She is entertaining, and yet she has a fushion of putting down nusty gossip or silly talk among whoever is there. She is a restful sort of girl, she is not always wanting to do some-thing that tires you half to death and where the game isn't worth the conde, and when she says good-by to you, you feel certain that she is pretty glad you came, and that she will be glad to see you another time, but that she doesn't look upon you as the one and only man in the world;" that is the kind of a de-scription that the brotherless girl can't get. Then she doesn't bear of men that a fellow would rather not have his sister go with, and she is very apt, poor dear, to make a few little mistakes. Probably the wisest course for her to pursue is for her to choose as her most in-timate friend a girl who has a wise brother; then she can resp the benefit of his counsel.

A PLEASART EVENING'S AMUSEMENT

A PLEASANT EVERING'S AMUSEMENT

COMEBODY, a very nice girl, wrote to me the other day and said that they lived off far in the country, had few evening visitors and didn't know what to do with themselves.

They were all fond of reading, but they didn't want to read all the time. Now, I am going to make a little suggestion to there, that, it is possible, may take up some of the time they very wisely regret to waste. The newspapers and magazines are full of interesting subjects, and when one thinks out a special topic it is marvelous how many articles and paragraphs you will find on just that subject. Take, for instance, the histories of the different queens—
Catherine of Russia, Elizabeth of England, Mary Stuart of Scotland, Marie Antoinette of France—and look through your numerous papers and books until such paragraphs or bits about them are collected; then paste them each under their own heading. The work of clipping and armaging is a rest from the reading and you are making at the same time a very valuable book. A friend of mine, a young artist, has created just such a book, and she chose for her subject the story of women artists. Even the poets contributed to her stories, and when the book is all done, if it ever will be, for it has now grown to be three books and seems likely to increase, she will have in her possession a veritable gold mine that some day may be of great use when will have in her possession a veritable gold mine that some day may be of great use when the small amount of silver in the finy purse has entirely gone. We do much for pleas-are that afterwards turns out to be a profit to us, and we never quite know which is pleas-ure and which is profit.

ACROSS THE BEAUTIFUL BLUE RIVER

ND He took the little child and set it A ND He took the little child and set it in their midst and said, 'Suffer little children to come unto me, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven.'" I am sure that every one of the lovinggirls who reads what I write, and who sweetly or kindly writes to me of her joys and sorrows, will suffer with me for a minute at this happy day to know that my little namesake, Rath, has gone to that wonderful place where "There shall be no more weeping, for God shall wipe away all tears." She came for just a little while—just long enough to make us feel how empty life had been without her and them—she slept. I am talking to my girls, and yet I am talking, too, to talking to my girls, and yet I am talking, too, to talking to my girls, and yet I am talking, too, to those who have a little baby across the beauti-ful bine river waiting for them. How can you ever do anything wrong? How can you ever say an unkind word? How can you ever grow hardened and unkind and full of all the grow hardened and teached and that of all the wicked things when a poor baby as unsoiled as any dove is waiting to welcome you over there? Wouldn't you fear to look your baby girl in the face? Your other children grow up, become men and women, see how hard life is and are bruised and burt. The little baby that and are bruised and burt. The little baby that died is waiting for you, waiting for you just as it left you, unspotted. Waiting to take you by the hand and lead you before Him who said, "Of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." And there is my little Ruth, and when the joy bells ring if she is not laughing at her happiness here she is surely singing it in Heaven, in honor of that Babe who came on earth to save all mankind.

THE ART OF CHRISTMAS GIVING

The art of Christmas Giving

I has been nearly two thousand years ago since the first beautiful Christmas gift came on earth, and it was received with gladness and joy by shepherd and king affice. Today, in memory of that, I give you some little trifle, because I love you, but I give it so ungraciously you scarcely like to take it.
A pretty way to send a gift is to do it up up in one of the colored tissue papers, tie it with the extremely narrow ribbon that can be bought for a few pennies, the whole twelve varis, and so give your friend the pleasure of yards, and so give your friend the pleasure of untying the mysterious box, of removing the pretty ribbons and of coming to the surprise at last, the something for which she has longed at last, the something for which she has longed for many a day. I know a woman who has wanted a pincushion ten years, who in that time has gotten two diamond bracelets and in-numerable rings, but the long-looked for pin-cushion has never come. She still hopes for it, and believes that this year will certainly bring it. You say, "Why not buy it?" Well, now, whosever bounds a pincushion without the inwhoever bought a pincushion without the in-tention of giving it to somebody else? It is always a something given to you and not bought. Give with a loving and full heart, and never, under any circumstances, give that which you begrudge. Such a gift will bear no fruit for you, not even the honest fruit of thanks. You can quote as many times as you want that "Unto him that hath shall be given," and so it shall become it is just this way, my friend: it shall, because it is just this way, my friend : You possess the gifts of gentleness and gracious-ness, of politeness and of goodness and these are gifts that call others to them. If people are cross and disagreeable there is very slight inclination to wish them A Merry Christmas; if they are irritable and suappish nobody cares whether they are blessed with a Christmas present or not, but unto her who hath the graces that I have cited, will certainly come a basket full of good gifts, "pressed down, shaken together and running over."

WHAT YOU WANT. VIOLET * * TO KNOW * *

[Under this heading I will cheerfully answer each month any question I can, sent me by my girl readers-RUTH ASHMORE.]

E. B.-I. H. S., means "Jesus Hominum Salvator." L. C.M.—As you have laid aside craps it will not be proper for you to assume it.

Q.—It is in best taste to wait until a man friend asks permission to call upon you.

C.—If you are in deep mouraing it is in very task taste to go to places of amosement.

Blossos —A conversation must be kept up as long as the gentleman who has been presented to you remains by your eide.

Sun-The body is best developed by proper flood and regular exercise; and I would suggest a regular course of Russian baths.

E. N. D.—If you wish to improve your English do you not think it would be a good size to join the class of English liberature and study exmeetly all through the winter? Grace A.—If your sallow complexion is from a tor-pid diver, I would suggest trying calomet tablets. If they do you no good, then you had better consult a physician.

W. C. H.—In the Jewish and Catholic church cosmins do not marry, nor do I think it is approved of in the Charch of England, or, as it is called here, in the Proms-tant Episcopal church.

Conv.—I would suggest your consulting with the president of the Conservatory of Music as to a good and substitute store for the state of A. white singe, or non's veiling, will make a very pretty graduating dress.

A PLOCK OF GIRLS—It is not only had manners but it is absolutely volgar to answer the personals in any newspaper. Almost any girl will reap sorrow from such as action, and she will have nobody but herself to biame for it.

SUSAN N.—When a gentleman is presented to you, you simply how to him. In escerting any one home, a gentleman sees whoever he is caring for to the door. It is not customary to ask your men friends in the house at a late hour of the night.

ANNIE AND OTHERS—I have said a number of times, and repeat it, that a man who is old enough to pay a visit is supposed to be capatite of looking after his own cost and bat, and of knowing how to put them on without the accisiance of his bostess.

MARY L. AND OTHERS—It is not necessary to send regrets to wedding invitations, but it is a pretty court-ery to send a note or tologram at the time of the wed-ding, expressing your hopes of happiness for the bride, and your congratulations to the groom.

AN APPLICATED READER—If your nose gets red whenever you are extremely warm or extremely cold, and the remainder of your face is colorises, it would seem as if your circulation were in bed order, and I would advise you to consuit a physician.

A PAPTEFUL SUBSCRIBER-As the occoa-bester is soft, apply it to the eyelrows with the tip of your finger. Do not use too much, and apply it toward the ends of the systemes, so that the hairs are flattened down and made to look smooth and glossy.

M. L. A.—In sending a regret to a reception the use of a visiting eard is in very had form. Write out your regress and address them to the bestess, though in leav-ing cards within two weeks, as you should, one for the hoston and one for each of her daughters is required.

YOUR WISTERN PRIKEND—At disner pie or custard is served before froit; stewed or fresh fruit is served flest at breakfast. Agentleman is introduced as "Mr. Brown," and he is spoken to in that manner. If one does not understand what is said it is quite proper to ask that it might be repeated.

W. A. H.—Stomming renally means the going through the parts of a large city where the wretched, sasful and the descripte live. Semethness it is done with the intention of helping them; sometimes, under the care of the police, it is simply a visit of curiosity, a something certainly not to be commended.

An Internsteen Beansus—It is absolutely impossi-ble for me to say whether two people will or will not be happy in their married life if the bushand is younger than the wife. Some marriages such as this have not very happily. A great many have not, but the people concerned must decide for themselves.

Styles Pex.—To thoroughly cleares your face wash it well every night with bot water and a good soap. In the morning give it another wash with legal water; this about make the sit in clear and white, and unless you have some bodily allment your eyes about be clear. If, however, you are billious, or suffer from indirection, i should advise your consulting your family physician.

C. H.—The initials for napery may be embroidered in the usual heavy fieldion, or simply eithed with the thread. I should think six table-clatts, six pairs of sheets, six drawn towels, six dozen aspikins and one dozen deliles would be sufficient for a bride in erdinary circumstances; and is you are not going to be married soon you will not find it difficult to accumulate this number.

INEXPERIENCEN—I have never heard that drinking very warm water before meals would reduce the flesh in fact, I think either very warm or very cold maker will tend to increase it. If you do not wish to accept an invitation that has been sent you, and yet have no other engagement, simply write while you thank Mr. Brown for his exercise, that you are unable to accept his kind invitation.

A Quarticoursu Spirite—A hostess wears any pectly house drees at an afternoon ics. Usually the hours are from four to six. The bostess should stand near the door if R is an etaborate ten; but, if not, she may be seated has behind the tea-table. The guests do not remove their wraps unlies they should be very heavy costs. Gestlemen, of course, remove their costs and hats, leaving them in the hall.

Constant Reader—In writing thanks for a wedding present it is wisest to make them in the third person if the people are strangers to you; but if one context from friends, address your envelope to "Mr. and Mrs. Jones"; then write baside "Bear Mrs. Jones:—Pray second my thanks to you and to Mr. Jones for the pretty gift you have sent me. I appreciate it very much, and am gind to think that I have two such good friends. With added thanks and all good wishes, I am, dear Mrs. Jones, yours cordially, Alice Smith."

J. L. B.—For more of the context of the contex

J. I. R.—For general warr in the country I would advise a giove somewhat heavier than the ordinary indressed glot; I think it is called the Blarritz glove; it has boose wrists and so buttees. For evening the gains for daysline wear the ordinary Japanese fans, chosen to maich your costume, are pretty. A small son our beclia of dark blue, dark green, beaven or whatever color you may fancy, with a pretty handle, may be used in place of a parseol. White dresses still be in vogue and quite late in the fall.

8. B.—One gains the most benefit from a good toilet water by petiring a few drops of it is the water in which you bethe. Strawberry cream may be gaiten in any large store which makes a speciality of toilet satcles. The read old-fashioned cold cream is to be preferred where there is a little bruke or a spet that needs to be besief up. Any inflast-powder can be used after bathing, with a good and harmless effect. Personalty, I prefer toth violet powder and perfume, but this is, of course, entirely a matter of special fixing, for there are many other pleasant and good ones.

E. M.—A residence approximation of the second statement of the second statement and good ones.

F. M.—A greatleman usually says, "Will you take my arm?" and offers it: but sometimes be offers it without saying anything, and a bright girl, understanding, accepts. When two ladies are walking with a gentleman, he takes the outside of the pavernent, the lady who is best acquainted with him takes the arm and the other lady walks close beside her. It is neither good form, nor is it pleasing to a man, to place tim is the proction of a sandwich. When some one has been kind chough to escort you have the strainly polite for you be express thanks for the kindness.

WATER.

The Violet Water manufactured by Lazell, Dalley & Co., of New York, is a most delightful and refreshing addition to the toilet.

It combines the fresh odor of Violets with the delicate perfume of Florentine Orris.

A bottle of this elegant perfume should be on every toilet table.

Put up in 4 and 8 ounce fluted bottles, at 50 cents and $1.00.

Ask for LAZELL'S and take no other.

PERSIAN BOUQUET.

This is one of our olddest and most popular perfumes for the handkerchief-very rich and lasting in odor. by all Druggists.

MANUFACTURED ONLY BY

Lazell, Dalley & Co.,

155 William Street, NEW YORK.

The List of Presents which you give CHRISTMAS, 1891, should include a Silk Umbrella. Here is your opportunity. Crasp it! *3.00 THE READ UMBRELLA

TRADE

FOR GENTLEMEN & LADIES. A Silk Umbrella of special quality, Very low prices. Sent free on receipt of cost. We guarantee satisfaction. Write at once for our free catalogue CHARLES F. READ & CO. 45 BROAD ST., BOSTON, MASS.

Have You

a Camera?

IF NOT, EXAMINE OURS.

E. & H. T. ANTHONY & CO. 591 BROADWAY, N. Y.

MANUFACTURERS AND PROPERTIES OF PHOTOGRAPHIC INSTRUMENTS AND SUPPLIES.

iii Years established in this line of busines Amateur Outlits in great variety, from $7.56 up. Send for Illustrated Catalogue, or call and examine.

5c. NEW AND FUNNY, THE HUSKING BEE.

MR. COATES cheerfully invites questions touching any topic upon which his young readers may desire help or information. Address all letters to FOSTER COATES, care of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, Philadelphia, Pa.

UGGESTIVE, indeed, are the Christmas days of the year. They are blessed days to the people of the world, for they tell of One who came to bear all burdens. They are days when families are reunited, when romping boys and girls come home from schools and other cities, and home is home indeed—joyons days for parents; neverto-be forgotten days for children. They are days when broken friendships may be restored; days when broken friendships may be restored; when the gentle art of giving may be practiced to its fullest extent by all; days when old wounds made by thoughtless words should be healed and new friendships made; days when we should stand forth as God intended we should always be, loving, helpful, brave and strong. December is the month when the heads of great business houses look around carefully at their employes to note the most deserving boys who should be promoted for faithfulness, or whose pay should be increased for services well performed. December is the month of Promise. The bow of peace and good-will is set in the sky. Every star that glitters is a hope for better things.

THE YEAR THAT IS JUST AREAD

The YEAR THAT IS JUST AHEAD

In a few days we shall begin the new year. The old one is quickly going, a year of success for some and failures for others. What of the days to come? Many of my readers will form good resolutions, and I hope they will be able to keep them. For myself I care little for either boy or man who has not sufficient strength of character to do as conscience and duty dictates, without making resolutions every few months. Is it not better to begin life aright, following the path of duty at all times, and under all circumstances? Every boy who reads these lines knows whether he is daily doing his duty to God, to himself and to those whom he serves. No boy can succeed by doing wrong. No great name has ever been founded except on the eternal principles of truth and justice. No great fortune has ever been built except the foundation stone was honesty. The year that is to come will bring its trials, its cares, its vexations and its disappointments, as well as its successes and pleasures. Some boys will fail and others will succeed. If failure comes through doing one's duty honestly and fearlessly, there will be compensation in knowing that self-respect has not been sacrificed. If success comes by dishonorable means, it will only be temporary. My word of advice to you, my younger brother, is to make only one resolution for the coming dishonorable means, it will only be temporary.

My word of advice to you, my younger brother, is to make only one resolution for the coming year: "Do Right!" In that, you have epitomized every manly principle. It is a condensed Golden Bake. It is a sound business maxim. If followed, it will bring you fortune and peace of mind. It is the philosopher's -contentment.

CREATING YOUR OWN OPPORTUNITY

O'NE of the many boy renders of the Jour-NAL writes me about his mother. He is employed in a dry goods store in a small western city. He writes that the work is dis-tasteful to him, the hours long and the pay poor. He believes he is capable of better poor. He believes he is capable of better things, and is anxious to try some other occu-pation. His mother, however, is a believer in letting well enough alone. She does not like changes. She has faith in the things that are rather than the things that are to be. She is afraid her son may wander away from her, per-haps, and so she will not give her consent to the lad seeking a new occupation, and he, brave boy, follows her advice, while he writes to me for an oninion how he can better himto me for an opinion how he can better him-I could tell him just what to do, but I cannot, Locality, the boy's abilities and other considerationsenter into such a question as this. No one can offer advice for individual cases where the information at hand is so limited. But as there are thousands of other boys situated the same way I cannot ignore the matter. There is only one way out of it, and that is for the boy to create an opportunity to help himself. The boy who waits and hopes without doing anything to help himself will wait and hope in vain. He must begin by being on the alert in vain. He must begin by being on the alert for new ventures. He must seek them out. He must equip himself mentally to be able to fill new positions. He must be skillful in mathe-matics, well read, have an evenly-balanced business judgment and be a quick reader of human nature, to find the flower of success in a barren field. Great opportunities come to those who seek them. Fortunes are made only by men who are not afraid of toil. Per-severance is just as essential as honesty or any only by men who are not alraid of toil. Forseverance is just as essential as honesty or any other of the manly traits. One of the greatest achievements of the century—the laying of the Atlantic Cable—was accomplished in the face of almost insurmountable difficulties.
Cyrus W. Field would not listen to his colaborers when they told him again and again that success was impossible. He did not despair for one moment. He kept working until be had succeeded in accomplishing his purpose.

THE BOY, OR HIS MOTHER?

THE question naturally arises: "Is a boy's mother justified in keeping her son em-ployed at work that is uncongenial to him?" ployed at work that is uncongenial to him?"
I think not. It is unfair to the boy. He should be encouraged to find employment that suits him better, so that his life labor may be a pleasure to him instead of a dreadful nightmare. Happiness is to be found only in employment that we love, the doing day by day of work that ennobles and makes proud, and makes every laborer, no matter how lowly his excumption feel a kingly pride in his toil. A occupation, feel a kingly pride in his toil. A boy who begins life in a struggle in which he boy who begins life in a struggle in which he has no heart will soon become neglectful of his duties, and once he starts on the downward road there is no telling where he will stop. Distasteful toil leads boys to seek pleasures that should be found in work to places where they might not otherwise go. And yet I have no doubt the mother of my little correspondent thinks she is doing right. Every mother wants to see her boys get on in the world, but, with advancing years, mothers sometimes lose their enthusiasm, and are apt to regard the world as selfish, and view promises as thin air. Their feet have been bruised upon the rough roads of experience, and they have the right to be heard. It is not the mother, but the boy, who should take the responsibility of changing his occupation. Let him understand that he must fight his own battles. Let him feel and know responsibility and be wise enough to see an opportunity when it comes above. and be wise enough to see an opportunity when it comes along.

THE MOTHER TO THE BOY

SOME little man reading these words may possibly misconstrue them, and think I mean that he can act without his mother. No boy can ever afford to grow beyond the counsels of his mother. The boy who loves and obeys his mother is the boy who is going to succeed. The boy who begins by loving his mother and is not ashamed to own that love before all the world, may be sure that he is on the right road. I know it is the fashion, in these days, to despise grey hairs, and oftentimes ridicule the advice of a mother, but it is an unmanly, ungenerous thing to do. It is becoming too much of a fashion, also, for beys ofttimes to speak disrespectful of their mothers. It sounds smart, for a time, perhaps, and it may create a ripple of laughter among other boys who do not know what filial tenderness or devotion is, but let me tell you, among other boys who do not know what filial tenderness or devotion is, but let me tell you, my young friends, it is a reprehensible practice, and no true boy will countenance it. Your mother is your best friend. She will do more for you than any other human being. No matter what troubles you may have, or how low you may sink, she will cling to you always. He kind to her. Go to her for advice. Show your love for her by those little affectionate attentions that will bind her to you. It is never unmanly to kiss your mother in pubis never unmanly to kiss your mother in pub-lic, but positively emobling. Make much of her every day and hour. Be solicitous about her health and amusements. Anticipate her wants. Make her labors light. Keep her comwants. Make her labors light. Keep her com-fort and welfare always in view. Strew her path through life with consideration and love, and in the years that are to be you will be proud of yourself for having done it. And some day, many years off, you will sit in the twilight of your room, and her voice will come come back from the beautiful valley of dreams, whispering words of encouragement to you as you fight on in the struggle of life. The closer a boy keeps his mother to him, the closer he is always to the best influence in this life. he is always to the best influence in this life.

HOW TO SPEND THE LONG WINTER EVENINGS

THERE are many ways to spend these lonely winter evenings. There are plenty of games, and a variety of entertainments, even in the smallest villages, but I would like all my boy readers to devote one evening a week to study. I am very fond of anusements myself, and want all healthy-minded, vigorously constituted boys to be. And yet it is best not to give up six evenings each week to pleasure. Take one evening to perfect yourself in the study in which you are most deficient. Or, if you possess a fair education, take up the study of languages. By devoting one evening a week for three months to French, German or Italian, a boy can make rapid progress, and to be able to speak a foreign language is of great value these days, even if one does not go abroad. But then I hope all my readers will some day be able to visit the old world. Such a visit is a splendid education. How many boys will begin to get ready for such a visit now?

THE NECESSITY OF SELF - RELIANCE

A GREAT many letters have come to me from readers of the Journal since I took charge of this department. Some came trom grateful fathers and mothers of boys, who seem to think that these plain talks with boys are beneficial. Letters from boys have come from almost every State in the Union, from big and little cities and the rural districts as well. For the kind words of encouragement, and the good wishes contained in these letters, I am grateful. A great many questions have been sent to me to be answered, and I have taken the pains to reply to hundreds of letters by mail, where matters seemed targent. Let me say again, however, to all the boy renders of the Journal, that I am more than anxious to help them in any way I can, but I have not the time to hunt up information that they may themselves obtain from an encyclopsedia, or even an ordinary book of reference. I want my readers to learn how to help GREAT many letters have come to me cyclopedia, or even an ordinary book of reference. I want my readers to learn bow to help themselves. Do not rely on others for anything. If you are uncertain as to this, that or the other statement, or do not understand any of the problems that daily present themselves, take the trouble to go to the fountain head for information. If this department of the Journal has any reason for existing it is to impress upon boys the necessity for relying upon themselves and not upon others. When in doubt, do not be content until you have in doubt do not be content until you have satisfied yourself on the question in dispute, and then study the matter so thoroughly that you will never forget it.

A TRADE OR PROFESSION

A PERPLEXING problem that confronts every boy is whether he should learn a trade, or study to enter one of the professions. Next month I will try to throw some light on this by a practical article considering the matter from many points of view. There is much to be said, and I have some views to express.

HERE IS A PUZZLE FOR YOU

N the meantime let me help you to spend A one of your winter evenings. I give you just below here a puzzle to work out. The story is this:

A THREE-WORD COMBINATION PROBLEM.

"In the first part of this story a very small word is missing in twelve places. In the second part another and different word, twice as long as the first word, is missing eight times. This second word is one that is used by printers. In the latter part of the story a third word, twice as long as the second word, is missing five times. Supply the twenty-five omissions and complete the story. By combining the three missing words make a sort of robber. There are just enough letters in the three words to make the two words-sort of robber I mean."

To such of the first five how who will send robber I mean."

To each of the first five boys who will send To each of the first five boys who will send to me between the dates of January 5th and 15th, the correct solution of this problem, I will send a new one-dollar bill. Do not send your answers before the first date given or after the last date. No answer must reach here before January 5th, or else it will be thrown out. The names of the five successful boys will be printed on this page in the February number. Address your letters to me, care of the Journal.

The state of the s the resident and a second interest and a second Three-Word Combination.F

When I was ld I was very fond of skting. Mny time I have spent whole frempoon on the ice nd returning Item given whole even ing to the sport. It was Il I could do to brek wy from my fromite sport to return home t bedtime. A cruic on the ice was one of my fade I cut etures and letters in eturesque profusion and exed out smooth eces in far corners for my ctorial field. As the boys used to say I had a le of fun though the cold often noned my fingers. At any it was sport worth having and if I appear to pabout it do not be me and I will be ofull do not wish to be considered a pro

POPULARITY

Does not always indicate the best judgment, but the popu-larity of the

Is based on a reputation that has been gained by sterling qualities, and they now stand Without a Rival.

POPE MFG. CO., 77 Franklin Street, BOSTON. orb Houses: 12 Warren St., NEW 10RE; 201 Wahani Ata, CHICAGO, Factory, HARTFORD, CONS.

FOR THE BOY?

KNEE PANTS.

y all-wool. For boys from 4 to 34 years old, nighty made. Laised styles in great variety. No sergalo in any other store. Send postal for am-cess of the goeds and rules for measuring. Clethes o your nearest express office for your examination; paying. If they do not suit you, they will be

The Monarch Frieze ULSTER $12.

Dark Oxford mix, all-wool weven goods. Plaid Flamel Litring, double-sticked edges, extra long, with wide Ubster Collar and Muff Pockets. Sample pieces of the material seat free.

Uniters seat C. O. D. with privilege of examination before paying. If you can't wait for our Colailogue and samples of cloth, send us your chest measure in inches, drawing measure stugy over vest and inder the coal, and we will send the Usiter at once, fit guaranteed.

Boys' Sizes of the Monarch Priese. Ages 14 to 18, $10. 39-page Illustrated Catalogue of Men's and Boys Cothing, Hats and Furnishings sent free to any address.

PUTNAM CLOTHING HOUSE, Chicago, III.

THE HOUSE PATENT SCROLL SAW

Tales saw can be used one week and if not satisfactory can be returned and the money will be refunded, less charges for transportation.

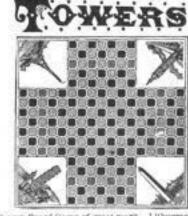

All from and street extraordine, and the wood inhies. Thursday, easy running, cheap. Price with extra designs, saw-blades, hand drill, etc., scott with lather and turning tools, $10,00. Send 4 cents for my 40-page catalogue of seroll-saw goods.

A. H. POMEROY.

Division L, 220 Asylum St. HARTFORD, Cosm.

THE BEST HOME GAMES.

A new Board Game of great mern. Lithographed in Colors. Forty-eight Counters, slegantly made in tom-position, are used in the game.

BUY IT. YOU WILL LIKE IT.

Price, $1.00 Each. These gapose are on sale by leading book, stationery, and by stores in the United States, or mailed, postpalit, by

SELCHOW & RIGHTER,

390 Broadwilling Mel Dy Google

The purpose of this Department is to bring the members of the Order of The King's Daughters and its President into closer relations by personal and familiar "Talks" and "Chats." All letters from the "Daughters" bearing upon this one and special purpose only, should be addressed to MRS. BOTTOME, care of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, and she will be glad to receive them. Please do not, however, send letters to MRS. BOTTOME concerning membership in the Order, or business communications of any nature. All such should be addressed direct to the headquarters of the Order, 158 West Twenty-third street, New York city, and prompt attention will be given.

HE joyous day has come! Joy to all, because the greatest gift is for all. Some may have diamonds or other precious stones; some may be, as we say, loaded with gifts; but all gifts, all precious things only mean, only hint at God's great gift for all the race: The gift of His dear Son!

RICHES OF A PERSONAL CHRISTMAS

AM so happy, as I think of all the sorrow-ing hearts that read the JOURNAL, that I I. ing hearts that read the Journat, that I can go to every one on Christmas morning and whisper, "He is yours!" and that means that every good gift is on its way to you. I feel sure that as soon as we are prepared for it this universe will be at our disposal. It means more than any of its have yet taken in—that to love the Lord Jesus Christ, that to serve the poorest and meanest of the humanity He loved and died for, means untold wealth for us in the future. I have been made so happy in the months past by being greeted by those to whom I thought I was an entire stranger. Everywhere, among the mountains, at the seastore, by the rich and by the poor the first words have been: "We know you, Mrs. Bottome; we take Tim Ladius' Home Journal." So at this Christmas time I feet my riches.

THE TRUE MEANING OF CHRISTMAS

THE TRUE MEANING OF CHRISTMAS

I WISH I might see the gleam of the silver on the many thousands that will read my "Happy Christmas!" as I repeat the dear old words. You have made my Christmas this year so very, very happy by your loving appreciation of the little I have done for you!
Your grateful love has been so blessed to me!
Ah, dear "Daughters," my beaven has begun on earth; love has always been heaven. Somehow it is the only thing that has ever filled us.
Since a little girl I have sung the dear old hymn of Charles Wesley—
"For love I sigh-for love I pine.

hymn of Charles Wesley—

"For love I sigh—for love I pine.

This only portion, Lord, be mine—
Be mine into better part."

And my Christmas joy this year is not in the gifts I shall receive, or the gifts I make, but my deep joy is that while I can say,
"Jesus is mine," all my Sisters, in every clime, of every shade of color, the rich and the poor, for the rich cannot be truly rich without Him, and the poor cannot be really poor with Him—all have a right to say,
"Jesus is mine!"

I heard some time ago of a beautiful woman, a Jewess, who said: "I do not think Jesus was the Messiah; but when I heard, after my anly little boy died, that Jesus said: 'Suffer the little children to come unto me,' I have been interested in Jesus ever since then. I think they are the most beautiful words ever uttered."

O deer ones you who any "How can I

O, dear ones, you who say, "How can I have a happy Christmas with my darling gone?" think what Christmas means—Life! Immortality brought to light by His coming. Joy! Joy forever is the meaning of Christmas.

WORKING GIRLS IN A PALACE

YOUR words: "Do not forget us working girls," have lingered with me, and I have not forgotten you. I thought especially of you last summer while I was at Newport. I met such noble women that seemed to rep-And 1 met a number where should have been so glad to have seen you all -in a palace. A friend who is interested in our working-A friend who is interested in our working-girls, and whose guest I was, invited a large Circle, that she started years ago, to meet me in her beautiful home; so I not only had the pleasure of meeting the dear girls, but they had the pleasure of seeing the interior of the beautiful bouse. Afterwards, in the supper-room, I passed from one to another, and said, beautiful bouse. Afterwards, in the supperroom, I passed from one to another, and said,

"Don't you want to tell me what you do every day?" and so many were represented, as they said: "Teaching kindersarten school, type-wri..ing, stenography, milliner, dressmaker," and three smiling ones said, "Uncle Sam's girls,"—post-office. Any of them would have graced a palace. And as I looked at them and talked to them, and then thought of the large number they represented, I saw another palace—the only palace that will be enduring—the palace of character. The palace we are to live in forever; all others will be left some day. I had in the "talk" said to them:
"You perhaps wish you could live in a palace; it is much greater to be a palace than to live in one." Perhaps you feel like asking me if I only talked to the young girls who were invited to meet me at my friend's, and if I left Newport without speaking to the many who could not be there? No, indeed; before I left the working-girls' clubs were invited to meet me at the Masonichall. WORDS TO YOUNG BREAD WINNERS

WORDS TO YOUNG BREAD WINNERS

I AM so glad that the favored women of our country are taking more and more interest in our working-girls. So one evening I had the pleasure of telling them all about our lovely Sisterhood, in a hall where all of different faiths could come and feel at home. On the platform were Protestant and Roman Catholic women of Newport. One Name united us, and we let all the other differences go "In His Name!"—the Name that charms our fears, and bids our sorrows cease. I hope, as we come to the last mouth of the year of 1891 and look forward to the new year that will soon be here, we shall feel that we are indeed going forward in that Name!

Be brave, dear girls; I know it takes courage to endure, but the Master whose name you wear over your heart endured the cross for us; and as you think of Him, love Him, trust Him, work for Him, you will come more and more to realize that life is only, after all, the dressing-room for eternity. And earth's distinctions will soon pass away, and you will enter on your inheritance of everlasting joy. God bless you, every one.

ONE OF THOSE LITTLE PERPLEXITIES

A T this Christmas time, this anniversary of A T this Constmas time, this anniversary of

A a Gift, a Gift from God, I want to answer "the perplexities" you write me you have in regard to believing that you are The King's Daughters. A letter that was so sad to me said: "While our desire to live in conformity with His will is so faint that we get no further than the desire, and the 'living' is all contrary to and incompatible with Christ's no further than the desire, and the "living" is all contrary to, and incompatible with, Christ's example, how can the Father own us? I cannot understand that we are owned until we are serving, and I sadly fear I shall never be fitted to do that. Probably all I can ever do is to be gentle and considerate toward those I meet from day to day, in the task of earning my living, easing life's journey for them in ever so slight a degree."

And where does the gentleness and consideration come from but from God, whom Christ said was "our Father" that is in you. All good is of God. You say, "you cannot see good is of God. You say, "you cannot see how He can own you when you do not do His will." He certainty does not own you for an obedient child; but He owned the prodical son as a prodigal child. And Christ told that parable to show us the relation of the Father parable to show us the relation of the Father to His sinful children.

At this time our attention is called every time we hear the words, "Happy Christmas!" to God's gift. Now, the question is, whom is the gift to? To what chass? Christ said, "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son."

THE STRENGTH OF OUR BELIEF

THE STRENGTH OF OUR BELIEF

OF course, only those who receive the gift can have the joy of it; and the receiving is the believing that Christ meant what he said, and to say: "He is mine." So knowing is conditioned on believing; believing is the only channel through which, in the nature of things, the joy can come. My dear friend, you will never know God is your Father, and that you are the "Daughter of the King," until you believe you are. And you must believe that Christ is your Saviour before you are saved; for in believing is salvation. You have a right to say, "My Father! My Saviour!" as much as the predigal son had a right to say, "I will arise and go to my father." You know you have a spirit, and God is the Father of spirits. And Tennyson was right when he said was right when he said-

"Speak to Him, thou, for He hears, And spirit with spirit can nees : Closer is He than breathing— And nearer than hands and feet,"

LIKE UNTO A NEW LIFE TO YOU S soon as you really say, "My Pather! My Saviour!" and act it, all life will be changed to you, your interior and outward life. You will feel you are rich, no matter what may be your outward circumstances. You have a Father; your Father is King; you are His daughter—not His perfect daughter, but you have a perfect Father, and Christ will be to you your elder Brother, your friend, and the only friend that can save you from the love of sin; the only friend that can make known to you more and more the love make known to you more and more the love of God. You will then know life, not mere existence. A friend I once told you about used to tell of the three Fs-Facts! Faith! Feeling! We can only feel He is our Father by faith; and faith is believing a fact. It is a fact that God is our Father, who sent His Son to be the Saviour of the world; and by believing this fact we feel happy, we feel rich, and we come to know God and Jesus Christ whom He lath sent. And thus we feel the inmortal tides of the life eternal in us. Oh! that all the "Daughters" would come home to their Father. to their Pather.

A WORD TO THE "SHUT-INS"

PROMISED you a little space in our De-I PROMISED you a little space in our De-partment, and in speaking to you I am indebted for the help I hope to give you to the dear "Shut-ins" who have written to me this month. One writes to me that the cross that she now wenrs with I. H. N. on one side means to ber that she is not to trouble others with her ailments. She is to give to them her cheerfulness under trial. And I am so in-debted, personally, to one who will not call herself an invalid, though I know she is, and set in writing to me wants to cheer and enherself an invalid, though I know she is, and yet in writing to me wants to cheer and encourage me. She belongs to a Circle numbering sixty—"The Steadfast Circle." She says, "I know I am only one, but if there were not ones there would never be millions." And then she gives me a favorite little verse, which she says she has sung for years, and she thinks every "Daughter" of our King ought to sing it (and so do I). It is a translation from Victor Hugo—

"Be like the bird that, halting in her flight, Bosta on a bough too slight,
And feeling it give way beneath her, slags,
Knowing that she halt wings."

I am so sure you want to hear what this

I am so sure you want to hear what this dear "Daughter" says that I will give you her words. "It says to me—this little verse of Victor Hugo's—thateven though we often rest on earthly friends, we can safely do so; for when they give way, or are taken from us, we know we are not going to fall or fail. We can yet sing, 'for we have wings.' Yes! underneath us are the Everiasting Arms; and whatever we may rest ourselves temporarily with. neath us are the Everiasting Arms; and what-ever we may rest ourselves temporarily with, Christ is with us; and whatever of pain or suffering comes, yet we can sing, knowing we have Him." Then she says, "Please do not think me an invalid, though I know I shall never be well again."

I think the angels, who never knew pain, bend wonderingly and lovingly over that dear "Daughter," and over every "Daughter" who bears the image of Christ in suffering, and look forward to the time when they can talk look forward to the time when they can talk over with them the grace the King gave them to follow Him in suffering. God bless you, dear "Shut-ins" that are not shut out from the companionship of Jesus.

A LESSON FROM A PHRASE

A LESSON FROM A PHRASE

COMETIMES the simplest of things teach of us deep lessons. I stood, a little time ago, in a crowd at a railway station, and overheard a young man ask a girl-friend, pointing, as he spoke to another person standing hear, "Are you together?" "It was all I heard. The words had a carious sound—"I'm together"—and after repeating them to myself a number of times, I said, "Well, if that is true, it is a good state of affairs—if you are really together." There are so many people who are not together in themselves; they are separated in conscience and conduct—the affections perhaps going in one direction, and conscience saying, "I cannot go with you." It is a wonderful thing when the whole person is together. It is rare—this perfect harmony, companionship in oneself. We often hear the question, "How did you enjoy yourself?" and perhaps the answer is, "Very much," when the person was enjoying something else and would not, could not, enjoy herself if left alone. It is a great thing to really enjoy yourself—to feel that you are "never less alone than when alone." To be really all together in oneself—the will, the inclination, the conscience—is the work of a life-time.

The discord all over, and the whole being like a well-tuned instrument giving out the beautiful music while the chords are swept by the hand Divine! If you will look deeply into the meaning of things you will see that the discipline of life is meant to bring about this harmony, and it will be well for us to think of Faber's lines—

"The discord switchs, that grabes so harstly in life's song!"

The discord to witch, that grabes so harstly in life's song!

The discord is within, that grates so harshly in life's "Tis we, not they, who are at fault when others seem so wrong!"

f remember once standing as a young girl by the side of my plane, white the tuner was with one finger striking the note, and with the other hand screwing the strings, till I wondered the plane did not seesam "I cannot stand this"; and yet be was putting the instrument in tune. Let us, dear "Daughters," during this coming menth, take everything that comes to us, and everything that goes away from us, as God's discipline to put us in harmony, to put us "together," so that we shall be a beautiful whole in His sight—living our true life "In His Name."

A FEW PERSONAL WORDS

PLEASE do not write to me, if you can possibly help it, without writing your name and address on an envelope; I cannot always make out the correct name or address.

I receive hundreds of letters asking for ti-nancial help. We have no fand for the relief of poverty. I wish we had. All the Circles are independent in their work, but they are are independent in their work, but they are willing to relieve where help is needed near them. So, instead of sending to me, send to any Circle in your place, or write to the Secretary in your State; or, what is best, form a circle to meet the need.

In New York, as in London and elsewhere, have been started what are known as "Neighborhood Guilds." I think the name suggests a principle we might well follow out as far as possible: let cases needing financial help be relieved by neighborhy interest. So, if there should be some case peculiarly appealing, denot wait to send away from home for help but form a circle at once on the growned. but form a circle at once on the ground. Your loving sister, "In His Name,"

Margard Britime

IMPERIAL GRANUM.—This standard preparation for children and invalids, is steadily moving forward as the years roll by, winning hosts of friends wherever its merits become known. We have been familiar with it for many years, and now take pleasure in describing a recent remarkable case with the facts of which we are personally cognizant:-

A lady of———, Mass., was so reduced by disease and from the effects of the powerful drugs necessarily given to relieve her sufferings, that she was attacked with black cholera morthat she was attacked with black cholers mor-bus, and for days lay in an unconscious condi-tion, life being sustained by champagne. As a last resort she was sent to a Boston Hospital, so weak that she had to be moved on a bed, and her physician said it was almost impossi-ble for her to recover. At the Hospital the physicians began using Imperial Granus, a one-half tenspoonful at a time, which after several trials was retained, and the quantity increased, until the patient after four weeks treatment, during which she lived entirely on Imperial, Granus, was discharged from the IMPERIAL GRANUM, was discharged from the Hospital comparatively well, and so built up that in eight weeks she endured successfully a severe surgical operation, and to-day is, to use her own words "in perfect health."—The Cottage Hearth, Boston, Muss.

IMPERIAL GRANUM.—A neighbor's child being very low, reduced, in fact, to a mere baby skeleton from want of nourisbment, as nothing could be found which the child could within. retain. At the urgent request of friends the parents were induced to try Imperial, Granum, parents were induced to try Imperial, Granum, which proved of such benefit to the child that it grew and thrived beyond all comprehension. At the same time I had a child sick with cholera infantum; on being presented with a box of the Granum, with the high recommend from this neighbor, used it, and continued its use to raise the child; and I firmly believe this had all to do in saving the former child's life and the greater part in restoring my own child to health. A. C. G.—Lonard's Illustrated Medical Journal, Detroit, Mich.

SOLD BY DRUGOISTS. Shipping Depot, JOHN CARLE & SONS. - NEW YO NEW YORK

The

Daylight

If you can light a certain lamp with less trouble than you can any other, and if your servant can keep it clean with less trouble than she can any other, you're bound to buy that lamp, other things being equal. The Daylight is the lamp then.

Send for our ABC book on Lamps.
Craighead & Kints Co., 33 Barclay St., Lamp.
N, Y.

Two Hollitay Presents. "Crumbs from the King's Table," by

Margaret Bottome,

Being original, daily meditations for a year. Price $1. Being original, daily meditations for a year. Price $1. Also, The King's Daughters Reyal Callendar for 1802, the only Calendar published in the interest of the Order. The pad, containing one scripture tent for each day, is mounted on silver-faced read board, the same shape as the 18ths silver cross, with the letters i. H. N. and a representation of the beautiful flower Forget-nets. On the lower arm is a crown of thorns, and the words "In Hementhenace of Ma." On the reverse solid is a clear and distinct yearly Calendar. Price 53 contains Either of the above sent by mall on receipt of price. Address E. Scutt, Publisher, Di. W. 21d St., New York,

HAS COME TO STAY. Patent Novelty Folding Coin Purse.

Over 50,000 sold. Most Popular, receiv and least bulky purse made. Ask your draier for it, or I will mad one-in black, red or brown merosco-on receipt of 40 ceates in full culf for 10 ceates, or gointhic seal, 90 ceates. The trade supplied. Write for prices, All parties are some captured against tufringing.

MILE MANY PACTURES.

JAMES S. TOPHAM, 1231 Penn. Ant., Washington, D. C. "" Digitized by Google

CHRISTMAS ON THE HEARTHSTONE

HE blessed Christmas festival is the one day in all the year when care should be put aside. The "bad days and sad days" of the year that is almost over lie behind us; almost over lie behind us; let the very memory of them be banished as we prepare to make the feast a joyful one to the children around us. What better possession can we give them for their future lives than the remembrance of hours of unclouded happiness in their childhood's home? When they are old enough to appreciate them they will recall with inexpressible tenderness the sacrifices that were made to give them pleasure.

WE are so absorbed in the struggle of living we do not always realize that we are making history, and that the present will soon be the past. The children's future lies, in a great measure, at our mercy. We are shaping and moulding it day by day by the form we give the present. Let a flood of sunshine rest on these holidays when they look back on them from the heights of toiling manhood or suffering womanbood. Let them be able to say, "We did have such a good time when we were children!" Such memories are a precious possession that no after sorrow can dim. Would not many a mother check the impatient word, and many a father hesitate over the hasty prohibition, if they remembered that their children would not forget them in the years to come? the years to come?

PERHAPS some careworn little mother will say, "If we could afford it, I could give the darlings a perfect day." It does not take much money to make children happy. The mysteries and surprises which delight their souls can be achieved without the expenditure of much more than time and patience. Some of the best things money cannot buy; and those that they will recollect longest may be the fruit of their mother's loving ingenuity. loving ingenuity.

THE words "Christmas" and "Santa Claus" always recall to one family certain "cruller ladies," as they were fondly called, which they invariably found in their stockings on Christmas morning. They were only doughouts, cut into a shape which it required a vivid imagination to believe was intended for a woman. The voluminous skirts were marked with a diamond pattern, imprinted with the edge of a knife blade; but the most artistic embroidery adorning a masterpiece of Worth's could not give more pleasure than it did. The masculine counterparts of these charming creatures were not as great a success. Their legs would break off on the slightest pressure, and it was seldom that one of them emerged from the stocking wholly uninjured. It was a carefully preserved fiction that Mrs. Santa Claus made these delicate creations, and it was a matter of wonderment how they were transported without breaking.

CHILDREN love to have a finger in the pic, and like to help in whatever is going on. They are deprived of a great deal of pleasure when everything is done for them and nothing remains for them but to enjoy the labors of others. They should be encouraged to prepare little surprises for one another, to assist in decorating the house with Christmas evergreens, if they are to be had; and, above all, to remember at this time the poor and needy. These are not those alone that lack this world's goods; there are many lonely ones whose nearest and dearest have gone and left them with few to remember them. To these them with few to remember them. To these the children can carry Christmas cheer.

It seems as if this birthday, which was the beginning of a life of such self-sacrifice as the world has never seen equaled, was a fitting season to learn the beauty of self-denial, and the blessedness of spending one's self in the service of others. Mothers must not take all this lesson to themselves. Let the children share in it; they will not be less happy because they have been gently led to be more courteous, more unselfish, more forbearing in honor of the Christmas-tide, whose key-note is reace and good-will. There are bearing in honor of the Christmas-tide, whose key-note is peace and good-will. There are those who look back with poignant anguish least Christmas; or others further past, when they, too, were full of joy. Although personal happiness is over there remains the power to bring sunshine to some desolate hearth, and to find peace in the reflection of its light. There is no heart so heavy that it may not help to give to others a "Merry Christmas!"

ELECTRIC ROBERROS SCOVEL

WHY DOES NOT THE BABY WALK?

BY HATTIE LEONARD WRIGHT

ET the baby stand, for a minute, barefooted, on the floor or table. As the full weight comes upon the feet the tiny toes the feet the tiny toes slightly separate and bend downward, as if to grasp their support.

Place baby's shoe on the table. Observe that the whole sole does not touch the table. The toe bends upward at an angle of at least thirty degrees. Look at the sole of the shoe. Be-sides the upward bend at the toe, you will find it rounded off, from the center toward the front and sides, and from the ball to the in-step. Probably the heel is as convex as if it were moulded on the inside of a diminutive saucer.

In looking for shoes the only thing approaching a hygienic model to be found was a little shoe with a flat sole of soft, white leather, so soft it would hardly last through one day's travel of the busy little feet. From shop to shop I went, and at last found shoes whose soles were approximately flat, but the toes of even these turned upward. I was struck with the prevalence of badly-shaped soles; I mean badly-shaped from a physiological standpoint. The best of them turned up at the toes, so as to throw the weight of the child back upon the heels, greatly hindering the use of the toes in walking. Nearly all the soles were so rounded, from center to sides and from front to heel, the beel having its own peculiar conrounded, from center to sides and from front to heel, the heel having its own peculiar convexity, that there was not a square inch on any one of them that was even approximately flat. Added to these defects of form, many of them are so stiff that a wooden sole would be equally flexible; and, generally, the stiffest soles (of the cheapest shoes, of course) are most wickedly convex. The convexity is less in proportion as the size increases, being less in numbers 4 and 44, than in 1's, 2's or 3's.

The cose are of the utmost importance in walking, especially the great toe. The poise of the whole body depends mainly on the great toe.

of the whole body depends mainly on the great toe.

Stender feet, with arched insteps, are much admired. Every one of us would be delighted to have our baby's foot grow to be slender, daintly arched and smooth-akinned. But at the very beginning of development, baby's shoe lays the foundation of weakness and consequent deformity.

The dainty arch we so admire is formed by the bones of the instep and heel.

Take a wire, curved to form an arch, and rest its ends on a table. Holding one end down firmly, push the other spward and outward. The curve is lessened and the arch flattened. The bones of a baby's foot are as easily bent as this wire, and the turned up toe of the shoe is slowly and surely lessening the "spring" of the natural arch of the instep by pushing upward and outward at its forward extremity. Philosophy tells us "an arch is capable of resisting a much greater pressure than a horizontal or rectangular structure composed of the same materials." So, in lessening the natural arch of the foot, it is made less able to bear the weight of the body.

The inside line of the shoe sole should be almost or quite straight. The outside line does not so much matter, as the shorter toes require less room. Some shoes for men and women form almost a point at the toe. Babies' shoes are not so bad in this respect, but even they show some inclination to convergence of the outside and inside lines. When the in-shoes are not so that it this respect, but even they show some inclination to convergence of the outside and inside lines. When the in-side line of the sole is deflected toward the center, it must bend the great toe with it. This tends to open the great toe joint, and fibrous tissue begins to form they have all the side of the they have a sole they are they for the the first three

An old physician says that for the first three years of its life a child should run barefoot. Under existing conditions, this advice seems impracticable. The next best thing is to select impracticable. The next best thing is to select babies' shoes with all care, and to see that they are replaced before being out-grown.

If some manufacturer will go to a good physician for a few hints, and construct a baby's shoe on physiological principles, then send his illustrated catalogues to physicians he may make a fortune for himself and serve the cause of physical development.

BANKING FOR LITTLE FOLKS

KNOW two young married people who instituted the practice of reserving all the five-cent pieces that each received in making change as the special property of the little boy that had come to them.

One of Mr. Stockton's "ginger-jars" always stood upon the mantel, and its cover came off religiously after every mercantile transaction that left a five-cent piece in the peoplet of either parent; and one would be transaction that left a five-cent piece in the pocket of either parent; and one would be surprised to see how fast that little jar filled up. In it was also pieced any piece of money that grandpapa or grandmamma bestowed upon the small bit of a man. Whenever the contents amounted to five dollars this sum was placed in a savings bank to gather interest as the ball increased in size. And such a ball does increase faster than one would think—in this case at the rate of about twenty-five dollars a year. The interest, and the various —in this case at the rate of about twenty-five dollars a year. The interest, and the various principals, will make quite a little fortune when the boy is a young man and ready to begin life for himself, either to start him in business, or to help him through college, while the parents will hardly feel the expense at all; for five-cent pieces often melt mysteriously and unsatisfactorily if they remain at large in one's pocket. It is just as wise to save in this way for the little pirl; for she will need it sometime as much as would a boy, either to make her feel a bit independent when either to make her feel a bit independent when she is married, or to help her to an education

A "ginger-jar" is an ornamental article for the manfel. Wouldn't it be a good idea to have one and dedicate it to the baby?

CHILDREN'S PLAYTHINGS

CHILDREN'S PLAYTHINGS

CHILDREN in these days are so provided with every conceivable toy that their ingenuity is not sufficiently taxed, and not being thrown on their own resources for amusement their imaginative and creative shiftly has not enough opportunity for developing.

We have in our home a little one who never cared for manufactured toys. From a little baby, amused with the pan and clothes-pins, to a six-year-old toy, full of ball and tops and mathles, he has always derived most pleasure from toyarf his own centrivance.

One which has afferded amusement for a long time is the "toboggan slide." A simple affair the "slide."

Mother's lap-beard, raised at one end to give a steep or gentle incline as saised the players, and the "toboggans" made of little strips of table of incline, as succeed the players, and the "toboggans" made of little strips of table of incline, as a succeed to give a small round stick at one end, this to give weight to the front, and the form of the real toboggans as seen in pletures.

The first was a rude affair, rolled over a bit of lead pend and planed. But of course, after mother had guiten the idea, it was easy to improve, and a few slitches took the place of the pin. Hours have passed quietly and accriedly, too, with this simple contrivance, for reading was inaspirated and carried on until even old falks were interested.

This was several years ago, before the time of top making with botton modds and matches, that spin better than any other top ever could spin, But the "toboggan silde" has come to stay in our home, and has been handed down to every one of the little ones with ever-increasing interest.

A SEVEN MONTHS' BABY

A SEVEN MONTHS' BABY

A SEVEN MONTHS' BABY

THINKING perhaps my experience with a "seven the meaths" below might be of benefit to some one, i determined to write this letter. My bathy weighed four pounds, dressed, at birth, and was too weak to nurse, so has been brought up on the bottle. I have tried merly all kinds of prepared foods, and all ways of preparing milk, and the only one which agreed perfectly with her was a prepared milk powder. After she was a year old I prepared her food that, one-half milk, one half outbeal gread and the "powder," according to directions. I take two tableopoonfuls of coarse oatmest to a quart of water and steam three hours, turn is a dish and use from the top. Since three months old she had had a tepid both in the tub every morning, remaining in the bath only a second. I fleed her every two hours, and after feeding lay her down and she goes to sleep by herself. I have been very regular with her, and have never ladthe least trouble. I take her out at least four hours every day. She sleeps the rest of the time and all right. I do not seed her through the night. When she was too small to wash in a tub she was chaffel, but I used in reson and corn-starch for powder, and she recovered perfectly. I only use the napking sonce: then they are put in the wash. She has never been a left troublescense with cutting her teeth, or in fact at all. She is a thoroughly well, good baby. All that I have done for her has been in accordance with a declar's orders. She has always been very constipated, and I have given her a hot water injection every day until ladely, when I have been giving her cod liver oil, which has regulated her bowels. She is eighteen months old now, weight twelve pounds and has eight teeth.

P. E. S.

DO NOT STIMULATE BABY

Do not try to make buby notice; do not try to make him forward; stupid bables make wise men and wemen; be content to wait for his intellectual development until a later date. Give bables a chance to rest while they are bables; they will probably never get the afterward.

BABIES A PLEASURE

MOTHERS, don't think of your babies as burdens.

Mothers, don't think of your babies as burdens, but has beaven-sent blessings, then the care of them will not be work, but pleasure.

ANNA.

WASHING NAPKINS

HAVING four dear babies myself, I would like to contribute my mite for the benefit of other dear babies. In washing boby's napkins, do not put a particle of sods or washing powder in the waiter, as it will irritate the skin very quickly. I have from white rinc ointiment in the best remedy for chaffing, for superior to vasciline. Wash the parts thoroughly with white soap and warm waiter, daily, dry well and if inclined to chaffe apply a little of the oliment, and I am sure the result will be satisfactory.

G. E. W.

A BABY CARRIAGE ROBE

I HAVE a very presty and greatly admired robe for huby's carriage, which was very inexpensive. I bought one yard of pink elderdown fannel (seventy-five cents per yard), lining it with pink sateen of the finest quality. A large pink satin bow in the center adds to the beauty. I intend having ribbon-worked dashes done on my robe; and on a blue one Surget-menots would be quite presty.

Some Questions Answered

Mns. M. W. M.—It is dangerous for an inexperienced erson to prescribe for the sick from a medical book. It much safer to consult a good doctor.

M. P. S.-Your baby is remarkably forward for a child four months old.

ANNOUNCEMENT CARDS

The proper form is:

Mr. AND Mrs. JAMES SMITH
Announce the birth of their son WALTER JAMES SMITH December 1st, 1891.

The cards are engraved and the plate can be ordered through any stationer.

DRESSING CHILDREN AT NIGHT

H ow shall I dress my children for the night? The eldest is three and a half and very restless.

A SCHECKIBER.

Take off all the day clothing and put on flamel night gowns, made long, to extend at least half a yard below the feet. If the feet cannot be kept covered have soft bed socks, knitted or crocheted, to protect them.

WOULD you tell an anxious mother how to treat an attack of croup?

Piace the child in a warm bath, lift it out and roll in a warm blanket and dry carefully without exposing it. Rub the neck and class with warm oil. Give an emetic of one teaspoonful of powdered alum mixed in syrup or honey. Follow with a second dose if the first does not cause vomiting. Send for the doctor. After the attack protect the child with warm clothing, and do not let it go out when the weather is cold or dams. weather is cold or damp.

BLACK. DRAB and WHITE. Sold by all LEADING RETAILERS Marshall Field & Co., Chicago, FERRIS BROS., Sele Manufacturers and Patienter 341 BROADWAY, N. Y.

DOES YOUR BABY CHAFE EASILY?

LY-CO-DINE,

Nature's Own Nursery Powder,

CURES

as hundreds of readers of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL can testify. If your druggist does not keep it, send 25 cents in stamps for large sized box to LAZELL, DALLEY & CO., 155 William Street, New York.

MIZPAH" VALVE NIPPLES

WILL NOT COLLAPSE. Make nursing easy, and prevent much colic, because they admit air into the bottle as the milk is drawn set, and prevents a vacuum being formed. Sample free by mail upon request, with valuable information for cleansing and keeping nipples sweet and healthy.

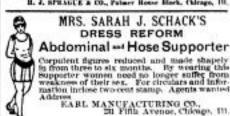

WALTER F. WARE, TO S. Third St., Phila., Fa

BABY WARDROBE PATTERNS
Complete outilt, 25 improved patterns for infants' clothes, Also 25 of short clothes, Either sel with full directions for making, amount and kind of material, by mail, sealed, 56 cents. Patterns absolutely reliable, HINTS TO EXPECTANT MOTHERS, a look by trained upon for such as a contraction. ok by a trained nurse, free with each set of patterns rs. J. BRIBE, P. O. Box 2038, New York.

INFANTS' and CHILDREN'S Outfit No. 1, 9 pieces, $10; Outfit No. 2, 18 pieces, $10.

Two dresses, postpald, $2.75. Send two cents for free samples and catalogue. An extra Wanten.

B. A SPRANGE & CO., Polser House Block, Chirago, 10.

CREAM

Cares Chapped Hands, Face. Lips or any Roughness of the Skin, prevents tendency to wrinkles or ageing of skin, keeps the face and hands soft, smooth and plump. It is also highly recognizeded for applying and hedding face powder. Once tried always used.

oned. For tall to an on-Bigithizeneth-by---G00gle

EDITED by MARY F. KNAPP

This Department will hereafter alternate each month with "Artistic Needlework," so that both of these branches of woman's handiwork may be distinctly and more fully treated. This month both departments are given with a special view to holiday work.

Both Departments are under the editorship of MISS KNAPP, to whom all letters should be sent, addressed to 20 Linden street, South Boston, Mass.

Terms in Crochet

Terms in Crochet

Ch-Chais: a straight series of loops, each drawn with the hook through the preceding one. Si st-Silp attach: put hook through the work, thread over the hook, draw it through the stitch on the hook. Si o-Single croches: baving a stitch on the hook, put the hook through the work, thread over the hook, draw it through the work, thread over the hook, draw it through the work, thread over, draw it through the work, thread over the hook.

Dictional countries that the hook through the work, thread over the hook, then put hook through the work, thread over and draw it through two stitches. To thread over the hook through the work, draw it through two stitches. To thread over the hook through the two remaining slitches. To the thread it through the thread thread it the thread it through the work. The slitches are worked off two at a time, as in double. Li to Long treble crochet: Twine the thread three times round the hook, work as in trable, bright the thread three times round the hook, work as in trable, bright the thread three times round the hook, work as in trable, bright the thread three times round the hook, work as in trable, bright the thread three times round the hook, work as in trable, bright the thread through two loops four times. Poor Picot: made by working three chains, and one single crochet in first slitch of the chain.

AN ICE-WOOL HEAD-SQUARE

ATERIAL required: 2 boxes of ice-wool and a large size bone

crochet needle, 1st row—Make a chain of 4 stitches join.

2nd row—ch 3, single crochet in first stitch of ch 4, ch
3, s c in second stitch, ch 3, s c in third stitch, ch 3, s c in fourth stitch.

3rd row-Ch 3, s c in second stitch of first ch 3 of last row, ch 3, s c in second stitch of first ch 3 of last row, ch 3, s c in same stitch (this is the first corner); ch 3, s c in second stitch of next ch 3, chain 3, s c in second stitch of next ch 3, chain 3, s c in second stitch of next ch 3, chain 3, s c in same (this is the third corch 3, chain 3, s c in same (this is the third cor-ner); ch 3, s c in the second stitch of next ch 3, chain 3, s c in same; now you have the four corners, which you must be careful to keep even through the square.

4th row—* Ch 3, s c in second stitch of ch 3, chain 3, s c in same (which is the first corner). Ch 3, s c in second stitch of next ch 3; repeat from * through the row four times in all.

Continue in this way until your square is the size you wish. Each row will have one more ch 3 between the corners than the last.

For Border: 1st row—(You have finished corner). * single crochet in second stitch of a corner). *single crochet in second stitch of first ch 3, 5 d c in second stitch of next ch 3; repeat from * through the row; 5 d c will come in the second stitch of ch 3, at the corer; join. 2nd row—Ch 6, s c in top of third d c, *, ch 3, d c in a c between the groups of 5 d c, ch 3, s c in third d c.

Repeat from * through the row. At the corner put 1 s c in second d c of group of 5 d c, ch 3, s c in fourth

After the last corner, ch 3, join. 3rd row—ch 3, 4 d c in third stitch of ch in third staten of ch 6. where you joined the last row. *s c in s c, 5 d c in d c, repeat from * through t he row. At the corner, s c in s c, 5 d c in sec-ond stitch of ch 3, s c in s c, After last corin s.c. After last cor-ner, join.

ser, join.

4th row—slip the wool along to the third d c, ch 4, d c in s c between the groups of 5 d c, ch 3, s c in top of third d c, ch 3, d c in s c, so continue through the row, working the corners. working the corners like second row. After the last corner d c in s c, ch 3, join.

c, ch 3, join.
5th row—ch 1, 5 d c in d c, s c in d c, 5 d c in d c, continue in this way through the row. At the corners, same as the third row, join.

as the taird row, join.

6th row—The same as the second row, after last corner, ch 3, jein.

7th row—ch 3, 4d c in d c where you joined.

*s c in s c, 5 d c in d c; repeat from * through the row, join.

Sth row.—The same as the fourth row, maksin row—the same as the route row, max-ing ch 3 after last corner, join.

9th row—ch 1, *, 5 de in de, se in se, 5 de in de, se in se; repeat from * through the row; join. Ice-wool comes in colors—pink, blue, pale salmon, black and white.

A KNITTED ANKLET

MATERIALS: Brown Germantown wool, 1 ounce of white Shetland wood, knit-ting needles No. 12 and No. 8. Four or two needles may be used. If two needles are used there will be a seam to sew up; while with four needles you simply knit round and round. With the brown wool and No. 12 needles, cast up 64 stitches and knit I plain and I seam for 80 rounds, then bind off loosely.

For the lining cast up 40 stitches of the Shetland wool on No. 8 needles, and knit plain 46 rows, binding off loosely. Sew the lining to the outside on upper and lower edges and fluish off both edges with a brown scallop.

CROCHETED TRIMMING WITH BRAID

OR this edging, a braid with five medal-lions separated by a plain space about an inch in length, is used. It can be procured at any notion store at sixty cents per box of one dozen pieces. As cents per box of one dozen pieces. As it launders very well and is strong enough to wear a long time, it is specially good for babies' dresses. With No. 50 cotton make 1 s c in each of the four loops of the first medallion; ch 5 and repeat to the plain part of the braid. Ch 5, 1 s c in each loop, ch 3, 1 s c in middle of last 5 ch; ch 2 1 s c in each loop of the 1 s c in middle of last 5 ch; ch 2, 1 s c in each loop of the next medallion; ch 3, 1 sc in opposite ch 5, and repeat to next plain part of braid. Ch 5, 1 s c in first loop, ch 5, skip one loop and take 1 s c in the next. Repeat to next medal-lion. Thenrepeat from begin-ning. Make the desired length in this way and you will have a series of deep scallogs. Cut off the braid and join these scallogs by repeating the prooff the brind and join these scallops by repeating the pro-cess on the opposite side of the braid, which brings it into the proper shape. For head-ing, make I s c in the middle 5 ch at the top of a scallop; ch 3, I d c in second 5 ch; ch 3, thread over twice to make a thread over twice to make a triple crochet, but make half of it in the next 5 ch and the other half in the 5ch opposite, bringing it out as one stitch. Ch 3, 1 d c in next 5 ch; ch 3, 1 s c in top of next scallop. Repent to end. Finish with a row of squares formed by 1 d c, 2 ch, repented all across.

LADY'S CROCHETED SKIRT

MATERIALS: Germantown wool-4 skeins of blue and 4 of drab; coarse tricot needle.

Yoke-Make a chain of 55 stitches; * with the blue, and work three rows in afghan-stitch. Next work one row with drab to the 8th-stitch from the end of the row, which forms the top of skirt, then one row to the 16th-stitch from the top in drab. Repeat from * until there are thirty-three stripes of drab. Finish with three rows of blue.

Flounce - Make a chain of 75 stitches; with drab wood; work 8 rows; then work two with blue, 2 drab, 2 blue and 2 drab. Next work 8 rows with blue, 2 drab, 2 blue, 2 drab and 2 blue. Repeat from * until you have 6 broad stripes of drab and 6 of the blue, and then join together. In making the flounce, the following directions with drab wool; work following directions must be exactly fol-lowed: First row, plain tricot; after that make 1 chain at beginning of each row to form an extra stitch, and leave off a stitch at end of each row, keeping the same num-ber of stitches all the time, but giving the flounce a bias appear-ance. Fasten yoke to flounce with chain of 5 stitches, enught first in the flounce and then to

Through the open-ings made by these chains of 5, a blue rib-chains of S, a blue ribbon, No. 7, may be run and tied in a bow.

At the waist finish off the skirt with one row in d c, putting 1 ch between. Through this a cord and tassel may be run. The opening at back of yoke may be finished with a scallop.

Border of Flounce-1 row in drab shells of 5 stitches, 2 rows of blue, 2 of brown and 3 of blue; the last blue row having 6 stitches in each shell.

NARROW WHEEL EDGE

MAKE a chain of 4 stitches, turn.

1st row—Make a shell by putting 3 d c in first stitch of ch. Ch 1, 3 d c in the same stitch. Ch 3; turn.

2d row-3de under ch1; ch 1, 3 d e under the same. Ch 4; turn.

3rd row—Make a shell in shell. 1 d c in top of first d c at end of row. Ch 3; turn.
4th row—Shell in shell, *1 d c. 1 ch under ch 4, sepeat from * until you have 8 d c with 1 ch between. Catch with s c in the last d c of first row; turn.

5th row—1 s c, 2 d c, 1 s c under each ch 1.
You will have seven small scallops, shell in shell, I d c at end of row, ch 3; turn.
Repeat from second row.

A HINGE CURTAIN

I've most houses of modern style, the doors are hung with heavy hinges that leave a wide "crack" when the door stands half-way open. This space, usually one or two inches wide, is often an annoyance, when the door opens upon the hall where passers can see through it into the room, and it sometimes gives rise to an unpleasant desurch of air gives rise to an unpleasant draught of air upon the bed.

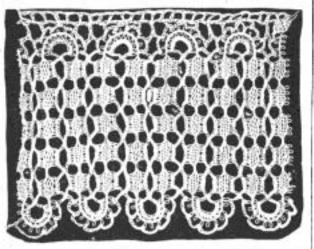

apon the bed.

A'device, both pretty and effectual, is made of a strip of crochet work of coarse gray macremé-twine, which should be nearly as long as the door and about six inches in width. Any pattern of shells, with open spaces between them, will answer. Let the spaces be wide enough to run in through them a three-inch satin ribbon of the desired celor. Finish the bettom with a frince of the macreméat the bottom with a fringe of the macremé-twine. Hang it upon the upper hinge on the inside of the door, or fasten in place with two small tacks.

AN INFANT'S FIRST SHIRT

By K. R. FOLGER

MATERIALS: Saxony yarn and bone needles. Cast up 40 stitches, knit 12 rows of garter stitch—twice across is a row—then knit 2 stitches and seam 2 stitches, for 12 rows. Divide the stitches, taking off 20 on a coarse thread or needle. Narrow once each coarse thrend or needle. Narrow once each time across in front to shape the neck, until you have 4 stitches left for the shoulder. Bind off. Take up the 20 stitches from the thread, and lenit other side of front. Cast up 40 stitches for the back, and knit same as the front half, calls not leave an exercise. only not leave an opening.

Sew both halves together—under arm seams—also the shoulder seams.

For the sleeves: Cast up 16 stitches, knit 2, seam 2 the desired length; sew them up, then sew them in the arm's eye. Crochet a scallop round the neck and sleeves. Run in a baby blue ribbon.

CHILDREN'S PLAY HARNESS

MATERIALS: 6 ounces of heavy German-town yarn, 6 little sleigh-bells, and a a hone crochet needle.

Make a chain of 12 stitches; join in a ring with a slip-stitch; turn the flat or right side of the chain on the inside and crochet once around with the single creschet-stitch, putting the needle through the loop on the wrong side of the chain. Keep the right side of the chain always on the inside of the tube, and hold the work so that the inside will always be toward you and your work wrong-side out. The next round and the rest of the harness is made by a single croehet-stitch fastened in the loop, made by passing the thread from one stitch to the other previous to pulling it through the stitch to form the single crochet stitch. This makes a diagonal rib run around the harness, and can be formed by taking no other stitch. The harness is very firm and durable, and should be three and one-half yards long. Sew the onds together, then crochet a similar piece the ends together, then crochet a similar piece one-half yard long and sew it to the long piece of harness on each side one-half yard from where it is joined. This makes the piece to come in front of the child at the waist-line when the long harness is over the neck. The harness will be a hollow tube, with the right side of the crochet-stitch inside. Sew the little sleigh-hells on the one-half yard that reaches from the neck to the waist-line. not to miss any stitches in crocheting, lest you make the harness smaller,

Under this heading, I will cheerfully answer any question I can concerning knitting and crocheting which my readers may send to me. MARY F. KNAPP.

G. E. M.—You will flud knitted "Teapot-holder" in May, 1888, number of Jdunnal.

READER OF THE JOURNAL-Directions for knitted allipsers "boney-comb stach" are in Book No. 1," Re-libble Parterus.

M. D.—Send your address, with two-cent stamp, to M. Ff Knapp, for information concerning "Scotch thread for fan itdy."

Miss May—We gave neck ruching directions in June, 1888.

Willi's Wiyn-You will find knitted shoulder cape in March, 1890, Jockwall.

WAGNER-The tope of the ESTEY ORGAN is very beautiful and noble.

FRANZ LISZT—Is delighted with them.

WILHELMJ-I rate the ESTEY ORGAN above any other that I have seen, is fine beyond comparison.

MME. ESSIPOFF-On no other organ but the ESTEY can be produced with such purity and precision the choir-like sound in the lower registers.

PAULINE LUCCA-I have never found in any other American organ the full, noble and sweet tone of the ESTEY Cottage Organs.

FRANZ ABT-I consider the ESTEY ORGAN unsurpassed by any other I have ever seen.

OLE BULL-The ESTEY tone is very beautiful and effective.

RUBINSTEIN—A really spiendid organ.

SAINT SAENS-The tone comes very near that of a pipe organ.

WARREN" AS SHOWN ON CUT. SOLD EVERYWHERE. MADE BY Geo. Frost & Co., Boston.

THE "LIGHTNING" NEEDLES NEW IDEA. therefore or Federal to pass the callie areals through the therefore or Federal to pass the callie areals through the fabric. The spin of the 8,9 and 19 are as large as those frend is 5, 4 and 2 of other casters, enabling the care to do better and their everlag, permitting a control throat the care to do better and their everlag, permitting a control throat is be used to a time needle. These necessits are sold by many landing the saiding desires. If you cannot obtain them, end us your order, enclosing 5 cours for each paper desired, or 25 cents for handsome case.

SEWING

BLUMENTHAL & BOAS, 367 Broadway, N. Y. EASY.

OFFER OF STAMPED GOODS. Pelt Tidy 12 x 17 in. Pinked edge Stamped, 20c Pillow Scarf 31 x 62 in. Stamped, 35c Linen Spinsher 30 x 30 in. Fringed & Stamped, 20c

All the above free for 70c. CLINTON STAMPING CO., Irvington, N. J.

DRESS CUTTING

By the Tailor Method. WAIST, SLEEVE and SKIRT CULTER. Simplest and most practical ever made Any lady can become a practical dress-cutter in half an hour. Half Price to introduce it! Send for circular, B. M. KUHN, Inventor, Bloomington, Ill.

LADIES! Guard against the loss of your watch by having it registered with The United States Watch Registering Co. Lady agents wanted. 328 Cheetout Street, Phile. Explanatory circulars mailed free on application.

LAD FS All have some dear friend or friends that they wish to remember at this season: "HOME AGAIN" is the title of the very latest, most artistic, NEW idea in a GIPT BOOK, just published, and now for the first time offered to the public. Every page is thely ILLUSTRATED in colors. The volume captivates the eye, and its piere sentiment touches the heart. Every family should have a copy on their table. It is a GEM. An elegant work at a price within the reach of all. Just the thing for a Christmas present for young or old. Price of this elegant work inclosed in a nice box, by mall, postpaid, $2.00. Satisfaction and safe delivery guaranteed. AGENTS WANTED, apply at once. Full particulars by mail Fase.

H. HALLETT & CO.,
PORTLAND, MAINE.

"A Unique Corner of the Earth" is the title of a rated blok which the Hotel del Corcensols. Coronade Beach, San Diego County, California, will send, post paid, upon application to E. S. BABCOCK, Manager DIGITIZED DY CTO

This Department will hereafter alternate each month with "Knitting and Crocheting," so that both of these branches of woman's handiwork may be distinctly and more fully treated. This month both departments are given with a special view to holiday work.

Both Departments are under the editorship of MISS KNAPP, to whom all letters should be sent, addressed to 20 Linden street, South Boston, Mass.

SOME USES OF DENIM

BY MARY A. WILLIAMSON

VERY popular material now in use for table covers of all sizes, curtains, etc., is that known as denim. It formerly came in but few shades, and was used mostly for overalls; it is now manufactured in both browns and blues, and comes in many qualities; some poor and slenzy, others fine, firm and almost like wool. The blue is nicer if washed before using; it dulls the purplish tint and makes it more on a dulls the purplish tint and makes it more on a greenish shade. There is a blue and yellow of the same twill, which, with a little decoration of gold thread and brass rings, looks very well indeed, and the best and heaviest of all is woven like duck, in blue and brown.

For the decoration of cur-

For the decoration of curtains or hangings, draw circles on paper eight, ten and twelve inches in diameter, cut them out, fold in quarters and trim off one fold so as to form an ellipse, as in No. 1. In the ellipse draw a figure similar to No. 2; do this on the three sizes and cut out the centre figures, thus making a stencil. Lay these figures upon your curtain stencil. Lay these figures upon your curtain ten or twelve inches from the top, and with them form an irregular bor-der at least eighteen inches eighteen inches deep, and with a fine brush and white water-color trace around, adding lines to join, and form a pattern across the curtain ; or, ble, make it up and down on the front.

Where a narrower band would be used, a few detatched figures could be used in the centre of the curtain, but be careful they do not fall in lines or rows. If you have tanestry not fall in lines or rows. If you have tapestry colors use them, or common ink will do.

Fig. No. 3

With quite a large brush fill in between the ellipse and the figure; a second wash may be required to cover the denim.

Either fish cord, heavy linen threads or tapestry wool will answer for the embroidery;

EDITED AND CONDUCTED BY MARY F. KNAPP

this should be conched on with any remnants of embroidery materials, silks or linens you may have, using them just as they come, the mixture of colors having a good effect. The tapestry wool may be of the beavy kind, or four light tints laid together to form one cord, to be served on with rather a long stitch on top and a short one in the material, so as to show as much of the thread used as possible. For the ellipse crochet a heavier cord of any of the materials used, and sew with the flat side down, taking stitches on each edge.

If desired, the curtain can be made three-fourths of a yard longer than is required, and this folded over the darker side to hang over, and on this place the design, and trim with tassels made of the same material as that used for conching.

Cushions of all shapes and sizes can be made of denim; some nearly two yards long for porches or door steps with a slight design across one end lined with the same; old chair covers, or a length for a wicker chair with one thickness of cotton laid between and held in place by a star worked in odds and ends of rope silks; this last is best of the browns, which never crocks as the blue will sometimes, although that could be used after browns, which never crocks as the blue will sometimes, although that could be used after washing if preferred.

Table-cloths for halls, for dining-tables between meals, and little side tables, are very useful and durable. Turn the hem so the other side comes up about two inches deep, and with the brush and white paint draw a pattern of long curves, similar to No. 4, changing it as you please. Start from the hem and run into the center or across the corners, not letting the lines come too near together, and fill in with either black, blue, or, on brown denim, red ink; work as directed for the curtains, or for a hall table use gold thread, or embroider in heavy outline stitch with any mixture of colors you may have, beginning one color well into the last used so as to form a double line in some places, or use minnow thread and outline the design, filling in with a course lace thread; this last method is very pretty. If the lovely pale old blue is desired in the denims, the goods should be boiled, laid on the grass and denims, the goods should be boiled, laid on the grass and kept wet for a number of days, then washed again and pressed; this makes a very pretty tint, and forms a very pretty tint, and forms a very attractive eight-inch border for a table-cover, with a square center of the dark shade, or sice serse, with a conventional design worked in linen or bagarren art thread, and finished round the edge with white linen fringe from three to four inches wide.

to four inches wide.

NOVELTIES IN BOLSTERS

BY M. AGNES CURRAN

NOW that bolsters are "the thing" in bed OW that bolsters are "the thing" in bed furnishings, we must turn our thoughts toward their decoration. Some are made of linen, with bands of drawn work at both ends, some adorned with out work, while others are plain, with the ends gathered into a large rosette and a scarf of bright colored silk tied in the center in a large bow. Sometimes these have a frill of lace at the end to imitate a cracker bonbon.

cracker bonbon.

A handsome and inexpensive case is made A handsome and inexpensive case is made of fine cream linen; in one corner is embroidered a large group of sunflowers in their natural colors; while coming from the opposite side and stretching half way across the bolster, is a group of butterflies coming toward the flowers. Afar off they are mere spees, but in the foreground they are their natural size. The ends of this bolster are fringed into a large tassel and finished with a bow of yellow satin ribbon. A set of bolster case and bed-spread was made of white linen, medium fineness. All over the bolster were scattered wild roses and a few leaves, and the same on the spread, while on the border was a chain of roses. Between the border and spread was an insertion of heavy lace five inches wide, the edge being finished with a valance of lace slightly being finished with a valance of lace slightly fulled. The ends of the bolster were finished the same way. The roses can be worked solid or in outline stitch, in olive, pink and yellow thread.

A MOST ACCEPTABLE PORTFOLIO

BY MARY J. SAFFORD

ERE is something easily made, inexpensive and very acceptable to the school-girl, school-boy, or busy woman who is laughingly said to prefer to "write on her knee." It is a pretty thing, too, to place on a table in a "spare room" supplied with stationery for the convenience in lieu of a weiting death

with stationery for the convenience of a guest, in lieu of a writing desk.
Cut two pieces of stout pasteboard, each ten and a-half inches long and eight inches wide, and one piece of gray or ecru linen sixteen inches wide and eleven and a half inches long.
Cut from very stiff paper—a visiting or postal-card is excellent for this purpose—two crescent-shaped pieces, one three inches long and two and a half inches wide in the broadest part—the center—and the other two inches long and one-quarter of an inch wide in the est part—the center—and the other two inches long and one-quarter of an inch wide in the broadest part.

Lay the linen flat on a table, and in the upper right-hand corner, at least an inch from the edge, trace the outline of the larger cres-cent. In the lower right-hand corner, at about the same distance from the edge, trace the outline of the smaller crescent then have about the same distance from the edge, trace the outline of the smaller crescent, then lay it across the pattern and trace a second time, taking care to avoid marking across the first one by commencing the second at the line of the first and then deswine the second then drawing the second half.

Proceed in this manner according to your taste, drawing sometimes a large single crescent, sometimes two large ones crossing, sometimes the smaller one crossing the larger. The effect is bet-ter if they are not placed too near.

Then, with olive and red rope-silk—or any colors you prefer—work around each crescent in outline stitch, using red for one and olive for the other where two cross, and sometimes red and sometimes olive for the single ones.

Lay the oblong pieces of pasteboard as closely together as possible and baste the linen neatly over them around all the edges—except, of over them around all the edges—except, of course, where the two pieces come together. Then cut a piece of linen-backed satin, olive or dark red, the same size as the linen. Cut a second piece eleven inches long and two inches wide. Fold it so that the raw edges overlap in the middle, and, on the right side, feather-stitch with rope silk—using red if the satin is olive, olive if it is red—through the band from end to end from end to end.

Cut a third piece of satin eleven inches long and five inches wide. Turn a hem an inch wide, baste it, and feather-stitch it on the

Now baste the two narrow ends and the long unhemmed end of this strip on the right-hand end of the large piece of satin, keeping the satin side upper-most, and put a second row of feather-stitching across the center of the strip, thus form-ing two pockets. Next sew the feather-

OPEN

stitched inch-wide band at the top and CLOSED bottom only, four and a-half inches from the left-hand side of the large piece of satin.

large piece of satin.

Next turn in the wide piece of satin all the way around to exactly fit the pasteboard—the raw edges of the pockets and the embroidered band are turned in too—and with a stout needle baste it on. Sew the satin and the linen together with "over-and-over" stitches as weather as worthers.

as neatly as possible.

Cut two pieces of blotting-paper ten inches long and fourteen inches wide; lay them flat on the satin, then fasten a piece of "baby" ribbon, the color of the satin, at the middle of one side of the portfolio, draw it across the sheets to hold them in place and fasten at the other end. other end.

If you desire to make the portfolio hand-If you desire to make the portfolio hand-somer, use linen-backed satin or rich broended silk for the outside also. In the latter case, dispense with the embroidery. If durability need not be considered, use white duck for the outside, embroidered or painted with rose-buds, forget-me-nots, poppies, or any favorite flower, lining with satin the shade of the blossom. White kid, handsomely painted, also makes a dainty folio.

A TASTEFUL HANGING PINCUSHION

BY E. LAING

LONG bag, one inch and a half wide, stuffed with sawdust and covered on side with a different shade of ribbon, tied at the top with narrow ribbon and a loop left to hang it up by. The pins can be stuck in all over it, or only in a row up each side. And down the center of each ribbon a design or verse may run.

A similar cushion for parlor use is made of a bag eight inches long and three inches wide, inserting a Japanese doll's head at the top of bag, overseaming the edges across the shoulders. Open-ings for the hands to extend horizontally are left at the sides. A sush and girdle of half-inch ribbon shape the doll, which is suspended from the gas by a loop at the back of the same ribbon.

ESTABLISHED 1812

Clark's "O.N.T." Crochet Cotton ON BALLS IS THE BEST.

Full Weight Guaranteed.

On receipt of 5 cents in stamps, we will mail to any address, a copy of Cark's "O. N. T." Crochet Pattern Book, with instructions.

On receipt of 50 events we will mail a 23 Gramm Ball of Clark's "O. N. T." Crochet Cotton to any lady who cannot procure the goods from her local dealer.

GEORGE A. CLARK & BROTHER,

SOLE AGENTS, 400 BROADWAY, New York.

ASK FOR BARBOUR'S LINEN THREADS.

OUTFITS Send 2c. stamp for our new -1892 Beginners Stamping Outfit Price only 25c. -1892 Roman Embroidery Outfit Price ... 50c. -1892 $1.00 "Complete" Stamping - Outfit. 52 Address: Walter P. Wesser, Lynn, Mass.

LADIES Desiring information for making or mounting Crocheted or Embrodered Suspenders kindly sense is your address for card of instructions and prices. J.W. Neith & PRESENT. Co., 959 Kingston St., Beston, Mass.

NO MORE DULL SCISSORS. Suppose will sharped the delifer block at the control of the contr

MY START AS AN AUTHOR

BY GRACE GREENWOOD

N editorial friend has requested me to write a requested me to write a little account of my "first start in author-ship." I make no spe-cial claim to modesty, yet I cannot flatter my-self that my limited experience in literature can have much interest for the unlimited elienna my friend has, even in such trifles, a strong will—something I always admired, but never possessed—I yield.

possessed—I yield.

This rash young gentleman goes so far as to call for the resurrection from the dust of some old cablact, or the profound depths of memory, of my "first manuscript." Now, it happens that I can only recall, as among my early essays, certain rhymes, rather on the doggerel order. "When I was a child, I spake as a child, I thought as a child," and a very simple one. True, I "lisped in numbers," for I had a very bad lisp. I sung original inllabys to my dolls and lectured my pets in starely verse, but seldom displayed my gifts before less indulgent auditors.

My first effusion designed for mortal ears and eyes, was called forth by a family exodus from my old country home—westward, six the Eric Canal. I was to be parted from all my little playmates and cronies, and even from my most dear and intimate friend, sweet Polty Ellis, whom I yet love to remember. On her I wished to bestow a farewell poem. There was a difficulty in the way. A weakness of the eyes had prevented me from taking any lessous in chirography, beyond what was any lessons in chirography, beyond what was called at our school "coarse hand," a sort of "pot-book" or "pot-hanger," preliminary to "fine hand." With my poem in my bead I persuaded one of my brothers to write for me

"Farewell! a long farewell, dear friend! Alas! our happy times must end! Of all my schoolinales, kind and true, There is no one I love like you.

"In Western climes may be my grave— Or I may shok 'seath Erie's wave; So keep these words with tender care, Also, the little lock of hair.

"Ah, never with a critic's eye, Leek on this verse of poetry, For, oh! remember that it was given When your dear friend was scarce eleven."

My voice broke a little at the close, as did My voice broke a little at the close, as did the measure, and my wretch of a brother pre-tended to wipe away a tear. He then asked why I had not woven my friend's name into my verse. I explained that, though deer to me, it was not exactly poetic in sound. He dissented, and quickly added some couplets of his own to show how sweetly the name "Polly" would lend itself to poesy, thus—would refer to poesy, this"We shall not find ourselves so jolly.

When we are parted, preclous Polly!
But don't give way to metascholy.
Though reading locks engilf me. Polly!
I love you more than Sue, or Molly.
Sameinthe Jane, or Ann, my Polly!
I'll name for you my new wax dolly.
And call my parrot—' Pretty Polly!"

I hope I need not say that I rejected this im-pertinent addown with scorn.

For some time after that I refrained from poetical composition—until, in fact, I could write myself, and not be compelled to dictate my glowing fancies to a scoffing scribe. Then, widly enough, though a wild, fun-lov-Then, widly enough, though a wild fun-lov-ing girl, I took, for a considerable period, most ardently to elegiac writing. I could always "small the mold above the rose," and I smiffed at it. Few deaths occurred in our neighborhood wirhout calling out some pa-thetic and pious stanzas from my pen, which was soon in great demand with bereaved friends. My brother used to say: "First, the doctor, then the undertaker, then the minis-ter, then sister." I was, at times, moved to song by catastrophes and casualities, so that other people's misfortunes were my oppor-tunities. When, one day, a certain predutory had boy was thought to have met with a fatal injury in a fall from a neighbor's pear tree, injury in a fail from a neighbor's pear tree, that some pleasant brother of mine exclaimed —"A windfull for our poetess!" The boy's mother said she hoped I would have "something sweet about Johnny, all ready for the funeral." But I didn't. I drew a line at each unregenerate urchins—and, besides, he didn't die. That kind never do.

As I increased in local fame I found I could nick and choose subjects for my starter trib.

pick and choose subjects for my elegiac trib-utes, and I did so. My plaintive strains were usually published in the local papers. The mourners saw to that. Sometimes they The mourners saw to that. Sometimes they had the verses framed in black and hung under the portrait of the deceased. I marvel at it now; for as I read some of those momodies, preserved in a musty old serap-book, they seem to me calculated to add another sting to death. My model in this solemn school of song was Mrs. Signurney. To her I sent the first poem of mine thought by good judges worthy to be published in a maguzine. She was associate-editor of one of the Philadelphia monthlies. In some manner, the great poeters did not enthuse much over my ambitious effort, perhaps thinking my mournful muse a small trespesser on her own con-

a place in the magazine. It didn't get it. No a place in the magazine. It didn't get it. No; my poor little carrier-dove of a poem, which it dreamed was to bear my name to a waiting world from the office of that magazine, was imprisoned in a common, dusty pigeon-hole, and for all I know is there yet! Only eight or nine years later, I found myself Mrs. Signorney's successor on the same famous mouthly! So rapidly may we rise to dizzy heights of distinction in our glorious Republic! When there, I somehow never cared to search for my lost verses; nor did I seek to search for my lost verses; nor did I seek to take my rewards for the old disappointment and mortification by rejecting MSS, right and left. I never had much spirit,

My poetry was mostly serious, or senti-mental; but when I took to prose—essays, let-ters and stories—my style became lighter ordi-narily, and even, at times, exuberantly gay and dashing. Still, people said my great hold was through the tragic and pathetic. I confess I tasted something of "the luxury of woe" in causing my readers to shadder and cry; and when I felt a little chill running down my back, or saw tears dropping on my foolscap, I knew it would "fetch" them. Now, I would rather be thought frivolous and common-place than produce vertebral chills by weird, place than produce vertebral chills by weird, unwholesome funcies; would rather make my readers laugh, even at my expense, than cause the least among them to shed a needless tear. Strange!—when I was glad, my strain was sad; now I am sad, my strain is glad! The more I see of the real tragedy and sorrow of this sin-marred and death-shadowed world, the less I feel like inventing anything of the kind. The more I see of the bremedlable suffering and more I see of the irremediable suffering and unrest of life, the more do I fear to sound its dark and troubled depths.

Though I have done a great variety of literary work, I have left untrod many paths which lead others to fame and fortune. I have not yet produced a didactic, a dialectical, or detective novel; a volume of erotic, exotic poems; a demi-mondaine play or a cook-book; have not even followed distinguished divas, dancers and divines in a tribute to a special soap; so, naturally, I am not only out of fashion, but out of pocket. The bulk of my writing has been journalistic, bound to be swiftly borne away on the tide of time. For a writer of such irregular methods, for so careless a thought-sower, flinging seed behind careless a thought-sower, flinging seed behind ber—not heeding where it fell, or thinking of a possible harvest—I have not much to com-plain of. I have had little ambition except for Press and publishers have been kind to me; and if some publishers have proved unkind. I have to blame my own deplorable lack of business training and astuteness that gave them the chance. My most widely-accepted work has been for children. It has brought me small gold, but something better—the love of my little readers-two generations of them.

The same editorial friend asks, " Is a literary

The same estitorial friend asks, "Is a literary career worth struggling for?"

I would unswer, Yes: far more than any other worldly career; that is, if one does not work for fame or gold alone, but with an earnest desire to do some little good in his day and generation, while carning an honest livelihood. If the author sets himself, with all his mind and heart, to elevate other minds with high, grave thoughts and move other his mind and heart, to elevate other minds with high, grave thoughts, and move other hearts to noble human sympathies; or to lighten them of weary care by healthful merriment, then his reward will be ample, however slim his bank account may be. But to do this he must have God, more than gain, in his thoughts. There is for him the peculiar pleasure of composition; the first passionate interest, the breathless dashing off of the sketch; then the calmer revision; the harmonizing and clarifying of style; the roundmonizing and clarifying of style; the round-ing of sentences; the claboration of a fine idea, even the resolute lopping off of exuberant expression: the dainty dissatisfaction with a word; the persistent search for a more supho-nions synonym—all is joyous oil for the true artist. Success, appreciation, honor, count for very much to any author; but a deeper happi-ness than they can give comes and abides with the consciousness that though Fame be caprictous and Fortune clusive, he has from the first meant well by the world in general, including publishers and sinners.

Yes; for an author of good heart, good aims, and a large capacity for toil, a literary career, with all its struggles, or because of its struggles, is "its own exceeding great reward"; but not for the literary empiric, the dabbler in helicon, the indelent pretender to an art, the sublime difficulties and possibilities and solemn obligations of which he has not the faintest conception. Ah, no! He who audaciously poses as a genius, with but one attribute of greatness—ambition—and that of a discussion of the properties of the properties. cased fungue-growth; the conscienceless, slovenly workman, who, as he writes, thinks and dreams only of his publisher and little public; cares more for his "royalty" than his public; cares more for his "royaliy" than his norality, and fears God less than the critic—he, after much struggling—or, rather, straining—hungering—or, rather, hankering—for renown, and gaining a little chesp notoriety, will probably at last declare, with bitter cynicism, that "a literary career dresn't pay." Such worthless interlopers, crowding themselves into the make of an honorable guild, are bound to come to this conclusion, sooner

LITERARY . QUER!ES

Under this heading the EDITOR will en-deavor to answer any possible question con-cerning authorship and literary matters.

C. F.—Schiller is pronounced Shil-ler, and Piscola, Physicsecia.

M. H. S.—I do not know to whom Tennyson referred in the quotation you give.

E. E. M.-The authorship of "The Saxe Holm Stories" is attributed to the late Helen Hunt Jackson. W. B.—Leggatt Brothers, of New York, and Leary's, of Philadelphia, buy old books. Write to either or both of them.

Mass R.—I cannot direct you to any particular house or journal which cares specially for translations. This branch of literary work has been much overdone.

AN ASPIRANT—"The Ladder of Journalism, and How To Climb It," by T. Campbell-Copeland, price 30 cents, would be useful to you. We will forward it to you on receipt of price.

HELEN-41) The pages of THE LADIES' Hong JOHN-NAL are always open to new and original contributions. (1) You must determine to what department your tal-ents are best adapted.

E. L. M.—"The Life and Death of Jason," a poem by William Morris, is a sect of Utopian remaines. He was considered a here by the people; but the work is more of a lake of adventure.

8. N. H.—"The Youth's Companion," and "Wide Awake," published in Boston: "Et. Nichoine Maga-sine" and "Harper's Young Feople," published in New York, are the best magazines for children.

PRIVIE—Read the articles, "When You Address the Editor," and "I Wish I Could Write," which appeared in this Department in recent issues of the Journal, You will find excellent and practical advice in them.

Pattence—You would have considerable trouble in finding a publisher to take your song and publish it without cost to you. This is rarely done, unless of ex-ceptional merit, the author invariably paying the first cost.

J. L. J.-I do not find anything regarding the post. Wahsel-to-bo. Mrs. Harrist Maxwell Converse, of New York, schopled by the Senes, Indians, of New York, is a postess and known by the name of Ya-te-wah-tob.

LEARNER—It is possible to be ten labored and exact in your writing; on the other hand, it would not do to be carriese in the proper use of language, and your methods of expression. It often pays to rewrite. Study carefully the tyles of the best authors.

6. W.-(1) Heisen Hunt Jackson was the author of "Mercy Philletick's Choice." (2) Julin C. Fletcher is the author of "Kismet." (3) T. Campbell is the author of "Getrude of Wyoming." 16 "Buran Chollidge" is the sam de plume of Miss Sara C. Woolsey.

6. M.—(1) Proctor's "Poetry of Astronomy" is published in London. We can obtain it for you. The price is $2.60. (2) The authorship of "The Breadwinners" has never been definitely settled. (6) The family name of the Eart of Warwick is pronounced Nev-il.

E. W.—(1) Temperance stories are best suited to periodicals entirely devoted to the interests of temper-ance work, as "The Volca," of New York or "The Union Signal," of Chicago, (2) All magnetices print sessays,—the point of acceptance turns upon their merit. E. S. N.—Publishers will receive book manuscripts.
But it is best to write first and obtain permission to send it, as it will be apt to preceive more attention. They will reject or accept. If the latter, the chances are that they will propose the terms upon which they are willing to publish.

E. A. M.—Translating as a profession I do not consider a very good one. It is open to competition from every source, and is, at the best, a presentions means of carning a livelihood. New fields have to be sought and new authors brought to light. Your success will depend on your ability to do this.

H. P.—The Mubibliarata, the predigious Indian opic, has never been completely translated. It contains over two bundred and twenty thousand lines, being seven-field greater than the Hind and Odyssey constined, "In-dian layle" and "The Seng Colectal" by Edwin Arnold, are extracts from it; size the Bhagarad-Gia.

Sweet Statem—I should be delighted to farnish you a list of books to be read both for instruction and amosement, but neither time zer soarce will permit. Read Richardson "The Choice of Books," which will greatly assist you. We will send it to you if you desire. The price is $1.00; also "100 Best Books," price in conta

It. V. P.—(1) See "Young Author," in March number of the Joversat, which will explain to you about copyright. (2) It is eminently scoper to send your manuscript from one publisher to another. I would not advise your sending a story that has been published, though not paid for, without the full statement of the field.

A. M. W.—Type-written copy is always preferred (2) A story accepted, published and paid for, is the property of the publisher, and he can issue it in any form he pleases. The subble has no right therein on-less stipulated beforehand. (3) The publisher will at-tent to the copyright, as it belongs to him, not to the subble.

E. J. E., J. I., J. B., Beller-I have been unable to find trace of any of the following books for which you have inquired: "Str. Headred dold Bollars; or, Ar The Prison Gaiss," by Samuel F. Wood; "The Hely of Bandelph Abbey," "Hiver Knife; or, A Social Dag-ger," by Gilva Lovell Wilson. They do not appear in any of the book catalogues.

my of the book cutatogues.

S. L. T.—(1) If you can get your novel published first as a scrial in a magnature of repote. It is certainly advisable to do so. If published in book form, it is difficult to advise whether to sell the manuscript outlight or accept a reyality. If it should not be a success, you round gain by selling outright, On the other hand, if it should be a success, you would to all probability be the gainer by receiving a reyality. (2) Write on facebeen size paper, one side only.

SENSIBLE PRESENTS FOR CHRISTMAS

THERE are two series of books which, as gifts for the holidays, cannot be surpassed by any others of their class. The first is bound in an imitation of silk rep, with back and front padded covers, benutifully illuminated in colors. On every leaf there is a plate, which is a perfect work of art, descriptive of the text. The books measure 9x7 inches and contain from forty to sixty pages. The titles are as follows: "Rock Me to Sleep, Mother," "Some of the River," "The Eve of St. Agnes."

are as follows: "Rock See to Steep, Mother,"
"Song of the River," "The Eve of St. Agnes" and "Songs from Fanat." Price, 75 cents each.
The second variety is bound in imported pudded monotint covers, in imitation of antique vellum. The illustrations, on fine paper, are the work of the unot famous American artificial and all proportions of the property of the proper tists, and will recommend themselves to every one who has an artistic taste or an eye for pic-torial beauty. The titles are: "The Low-Back'd Car," "Gray's Elegy." "Seven Ages" and "Drifting." Price, 60 cents each.

"Dritting." Price, so cents each.
These two sets are the pick of this senson's holiday gift books. The Ladurs' Home Journal will give one of the above to any person sending them one yearly subscriber and ten cents additional. Unless the subscription and the ten cents additional come in the same encents additional. Unless the subscription and the ten cents additional come in the same envelope the book cannot be sent. No exception can possibly be made to this condition. The particles, 120 Panes. All about Electric Bells, better the book of the condition of the condition.

FAMOUS FRENCH WOMEN.

Everyone is talking about the delightful volumes on the Famous Women of the French Court. Have you read any of them? They are graphic and vivid narratives, with historic accuracy and the breathless interest of romance.

SPECIAL OFFER: In order to introduce them to the readers of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, we will send the first volume, "Marie Antoinette, and the End of the Old Regime," to any address, postpaid, for only $1.04 (regular price, $1.25). Do not miss this chance. It will amply repay you in good reading.

In ordaring mention THE LADIES' HOME !OURNAL.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS, 743 and 745 Broadway, N. Y.

What One Mother Did.

You have heard vaguely, perhaps, of the Chautauqua Reading Circle, but do you know what its plans are? Do you never feel the need of reading good books systematically? Should you not like to take up a definite course during the coming

One reader writes: "I am the mother of eight children and have done my own work during the four years, with the usual amount of sickness that follows such a family. My cares have been great, yet I would not be the woman I am to-day had it not been for the C. L. S. C. work that has employed my mind in thinking of better things than the every-day cares of life."

Address The Chautonqua Office, Drawer 194,

BOOK AGENTS WANTED for DARKNESS DAYLIGHT

or LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF NEW YOUR LIFE.
A Christian woman is narrative of Mission work done "In His Name" in tough places, revealing the "tense life" of the suclessed of New York" or mean by a common." B describes Goodwork in the slame, and gives a famous detective 10 years toperiences. He flee, Reichen Campbell, Col. Thos. W., Lames, and Immediate Thes. Hyrmen Chief of the N. J.
Lescoines. Will 25-6 anguarings from flesh light placing pulse of scenes in Bartice New Fort by Dry and by Night. Peru and good, full of tears and single. It is an airy of Temperators, a witness to the power of the thought on book for every home.
Mighten any. "Out good It." Lesipois Written enderse it.
297-5,000 Agents Walvier, Men and Warnen. 297-2800 a month mode. 297 Blattance is no historymon, for or Pay Protofic and give Activit Joreas. Well for giventure to A. D. WORTHINGTON & C., Harreters, Conn.

LEAD KINDLY, LIGHT.
By the late Cardinal Newman. THE PURE IN HEART.

GLORY TO GOD.
Three expulsite Devotional Poems Beautifully Bastrated by Alice and F. Corthyn Price. In book form. It pages. Limp caver. Price, 30 cents each. Sent by mail, on receipt of price, by RAPHAEL TUCK & SONS CO. (Limited), 296-300 Broadway, New York.

SENT Ser Annual Hotiday Catalogus of Books for Kasas, just ready. The largest and choicest assectment of books for 20 to 60 per cent discounts offered by any booksellers in the United States.

FREE Ser Neut your address on a postul card, median Test Lanus: Hours Joranan and accept will be mailed to you free, by ESTES & LAURIAT, Boston, Mass. 299-305 Washington St., opposite "Old South" Church.

LADY In every town to sell our fine DATE BOOKS & GAMES Nothing like them in the market. Attractive Instructive ACENTS and 8al able. You can ACENTS Make Money Now is the time to do it. Terms to Agents the beet, send for circulars and see. WANTED prepaid, so distance is no hinderance. Address Ad prepaid, so distance is no hinderance. Address AMERICAN PUBLISHING CO., Hartford, Ct., Enston, Clockmati, or St. Louis, Mention this maner

AYS-PLAYS

Amaieur Theatricais, Temperance Plays, Drawing-room Plays, Fairy Pays, Ethiopian Plays, Onkie Books, Sissakers, Pantomimes, Charades, Jarlor'a Wax Works, Burnit, Croft, Theatricai Face Preparations, Wass, Harnds, Monsinchus and Paper Scenery. New Catalogues, con-taining mong novelties, fail description and prices son FREE: PREE: T. H. FRENCIS, 285 West 23d St., K.Y.

Anthe workers recognition for "SHEPP'S PHOTOGRAPHS
SHEPP'S of the "CORLD" produced as an ourtion of the state of the sta PRI in 6 peach: Ebr H. H. Harris, Gardell, Pean, Re to 20 allerte. The grinter OF THE WORLD. book on outle Man. OF THE WORLD. much illustrated circulars and irreps from Seeks on profit. Perisht paid. Resettled outle calls Hot. Address Gisbe Blais Architecture (call to the Address Gisbe Blais Architecture) Ca. 785 Chrony et Street. Philistophia. Pa.

ZANTHON A Novel, by James
The Adversarial attractions will entitle it to a place in every bons-chold in the land. Just published by THE BANCROFT COMPANY, San Francisco, Cal. Bluminated paper covers, 75 cents: cloth, $1.25.

NAME BOOK An arristic little volume containing Eleven Handred Christian Reds. Parents will find it a priviless treasure when they are looking for appropriate navors to bestow upon their little roses. Book beautifully printed on fine ensoreled paper. Handsome cover. Bound with silk cord and tases? Each book in a box. A suitable Christman (dlf. Malled Sic 80 Cents.

B. M. CRIDER, Publisher, YORK, PA.

$65 A Mouth not board or highest com-mission and 30 days credit to Agenta, Teachers, Biudenss, Young Men or Laddes to carross for New Book, P.W. ZIEGLES & CO., Prindriphia, Pa., or St. Lesh, Sa.

*.* Miss Maude Haywood will be glad through this Department to answer any questions of an Art nature which her readers may send to her. She cannot, however, undertake to reply by mail; please, therefore, do not ask her to do so. Address all letters to MISS MAUDE HAYWOOD, care of The Ladies' Home Journal, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE REVIVAL OF PYROGRAPHY

THE art which is variously called pyrog-raphy, poker-work and burnt wood etch-ing, although a novelty in the sense of being new to the general public of this generation, is in reality the revival of a mode of decoration which should deservedly rank high among the

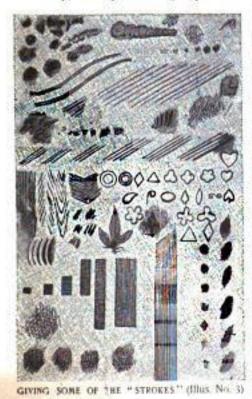

THE NEW MACHINE (Ellus, No. 1)

"minor arts." It was undoubtedly practiced among ancient and savage nations, and coming down to more recent times, examples of the work are to be found in some of the old English churches, in which figure subjects have been represented chiefly in outline, the background being deeply burned away.

THE DIFFERENT "POINTS" USED (Illus. No. 2)

For the enlightenment of those who now hear of this work for the first time, let it be explained that pyrography is the art of drawing upon wood with a red-hot tool, and that when well done, the result is highly decorative and artistic. The various woods burn differently, and by exercising a judicious choice, according to the subject in hand, per-fectly distinct effects can be gained, and the character of the design emphasized. Former-ly the drawing was done with irons of assort-ed shapes and sizes, which were heated either in the fire or more conveniently in a spirit lamp or gas stove, while pokers literally (hence one of the names given to the work) were employed for the large pieces, or for back-ground surfaces. The principal drawback to these rather primitive tools was the difficul-ty of regulating the ty of regulating the heat of the fiery pen-cil, but at the same time it must be actime it must be ac-knowledged that wonderfully success-ful results have been attained by enthusi-astic workers in spite of being thus handi-capped. The fact that will doubtless cause by to be come widely popular in this country, as well as on the other side of the water where the taste for it where the taste for it is already widespread, is that a machine (Illustration No. 1) has been invented, by means of which the point, which is made of platinum, can be kept constantly in working order, and the heat regulated to any intensity desired.

The outfits necessary, including these ry, including these instruments, have been, within the last few weeks, imported by a firm in New York, which is agent for them in America, OTHER SPECIMENS OF and they will proba-bly soon be obtainable throughout the

OTHER SPECIMENS OF "STROKES" (Illus. No. 4)

AN EXAMPLE OF ANIMAL WORK (Illus, No. 5)

country.

It should be understood by those ambitious It should be understood by those ambitious to try their hands at this most fascinating work, that the principal qualifications in order to achieve success—for the manipulation of the machine is comparatively a simple matter—area good general knowledge of drawing and of light and shade. It is not an art preminently suited for the amateur who possesses will be noticed by the contract. skill in neither, but it is, on the centrary, capable of a great deal where the artist can boast of taste and imagination in addition to the technical requirements already mentioned. At the same time designs may be traced and transferred to the wood, and afterwards gone over with the point, with tolerably good result, even where art education is considerably lack-

The selection of the wood used for this work is a matter of some importance. It should be well sea-soned and free from knots. Holly, syca-more and lime are recommended as the light woods, while bass wood, if carefully chosen, also answers very well, and being cheaper is good for beginners to practice upon. Holly, when burnt, shows a very dark line, and is therefore suited to subjects where strong contrasts are desired; and sycamore is far the best for delicate or fine work, giving an almost infinite gradation of tones. A few experiments upon samples of various woods will teach an artist more about them than a column of writing on the subject. Other kinds which are specially well adapted for pyrography are oak, ash, elm, tulip, chest-nut, cedar and teak.

All the materials necessary for a beginner come in the box centaining the outfit, already come in the box centaining the outfit, already described, although many will soon find a second "point" very useful. Illustration No. 2 shows the various shapes in which these points are made. Figs. 2 and 4 are the most useful for general work. Figs. 9, 10, 11 and 12 are attachments for stamping patterns, which are employed in borders and for other decorntive purposes. The points should be carefully treated, as they are the most expensive item of the outfit, being made of a valuable metal. The benzoline, by means of which the heat is maintained, should be handled with due regard for its inflammable qualities. Although gard for its inflammable qualities. Although not daugerous in the ordinary way, a serious explosion might occur if it were spilled too to heat the point in the spirit lamp, when starting work, but after that the lamp is no longer required, as the action of the bellows maintains-and regulates the heat. It is well to practice various strokes on a trial piece of wood for the first attempt, and not to rest content nor to start on a drawing until a tolerable clear even line can be readily produced. Illustrations Nos. 3 and 4 give good suggestions for the kind of strokes that will be found most helpful for this exercise, showing gradations of tone, with ideas for the treatment of background and rounded surfaces. If these of background and rounded surfaces. If these are at first thoughtfully and studiously copied, the worker will find that they have been a great assistance when later on the reproduction of designs from nature or from copies is attempted. The lines should be made coarser and bolder than they appear in the illustra-tions.

All kinds of subjects are suitable for the burnt wood work. Flowers and foliage are employed in designs under every conceivable form, either conventionally or realistically treated. The subject may either be light, with a dark background, or it may show dark, the plain wood being left for the ground. The latter is perhaps essier to manage but the former is usually more effective. Sometimes the background is burnt away very deeply leaving the design in low relief. Figures and land-scape can both be rendered with very decorative result, and portraiture has been also undertaken with great success. Illustration No. 5 gives a good example of animal work in pyrography, exin pyrography, ex-ecuted in the early part of this century. The strokes and the technique generally may be studied with advantage. That the rapid and

That the rapid and andden rise of this art into popular favor is likely to be lasting, is principally owing to its possibilities for interior decoration, which at once lifts it out of the ranks of mere play-work. Architects have been quick to appreciate its value, having in-deed been of the first and probably the and probably the most important of its promoters. It is particularly suitable for the enrichment of the paneling in hall, library or dining-room, and large surfaces in public buildings can, by its means, be rapidly and effectively decorated. At a recent exhibition of pyrography, examples of this art were shown plete decoration of a as applied to the complete decoration of a small apartment—walls, ceiling, flooring and furniture being all of the burnt wood work.

N painting in oils from the life, some prefer to I painting in oils from the life, some prefer to put in the first painting entirely in burnt umber, with no body-color whatever, but the method taught in one of the Parisian schools is to begin directly in color, with an extremely simple palette, yellow-ochre, cobalt-blue, vermilson, crimson-lake and cobalt-green only being allowed for the flesh, with black and burnt sienna for dark

Round brushes are usually to be pre-ferred to flat ones for portraits, because the after are apt to lead to the affectations of clever brush-work. In painting backgrounds either may be used indifferently. or perhaps the flat brushes have the ad-

The following is quoted from a letter of advice to begin ner from an artist of experience in different methods of art education: "Contrary to the opinion of many, I should say never, near paint from copies. It will not teach you to see for yourself. Begin at once from some real object, it may be the simplest thing, merely a tube of paint and a brush, but whatever is chosen, copy from reality, paint what you see, not what some one else sees. Copyists, when they come to work from nature, reproduce the effects they have imitated, not those before them. As you can only draw what you see, if your drawing is wrong it is because you did not see correctly. As a matter of fact the hand will always answer to the eye, though it is difficult to realize it at first, and people who do not draw never find it out. They think they can see things and cannot draw them, but in reality they do not see them, they only look at them, and copying will never teach you to see for yourself. An excellent plan is always to draw afterward from memory whatever you have been working at

In sketch-classes, for rapid drawings a very good effect may be obtained by the use of rod and white chalk only or together with char-coal, upon brown or yellow paper, the latter ground particularly lending itself to wonder-fully truthful representation of the flesh tones, capable of showing all the warmth and color of life. It will be found extremely beneficial fac-simile of above cut.

INDIVIDUAL BREAD and BUTTER PLATES ===

In Best Quality French China.

Decoration is a Beautiful GOOD GOLD BORDER.

SIZE, 51/2 INCHES.

ONLY $5.00 PER DOZEN.

Charges prepaid to any point in the United States.

PITKIN & BROOKS.

Importers,

Cor. State and Lake Sts.,

CHICAGO, ILL., U. S. A.

Be Not Deceived.

STERLING SILVER INLAID SPOONS and FORKS

See that the spoons and forks are stamped on the back E Sterling, Inlate, HE. None genuine without this stamp Sterling Silver is iniald at the exposed points; then plated entire with pure silver, preventing any wear whatever. Guaranteed 25 years.

Ask your Jeweler for them or send for catalogue, Accept no substitute. THE HOLMES & EDWARDS SILVER CO., Bridgeport, Conn.

THE ART AMATEUR.

SUPERB COL- FOR ORED STUDIES AND PICTURES, including Roses, Water-Lilies, Peaches and Grapes, Moonlight Martine, Landscapes, Dog, Cab Meeting, Swallows, Female Portrait shown in three progressive stages, [These progressive Icasons in oils and scater-culors are a special feature for 1822.] &c.

& 3 MOS. SUBSCRIPTION

beginning with any month, in order to secure this most liberal offer [the ordinary price for all it includes is $2.75] you must cut cut this advertisement and send it direct to the publisher, MONTAGUE MARKS, 25 Union Square, See York, C./Historical Carlogue of over 200 studies, free. With sample cupy and 3 colored plates, 25 conts.

The Art Amateur gives numerous working designs for Pyrography, with full instructions.

PYROGRAPHY, or Poker Painting.

A REVIVED ART made easy by the use of Paquella Hydro-Carbon vapor apparatus, (Patenied.)

F. W. Devoe & Co. possess the sole rights to sell this apparatus in the United States for artistic decoration of wood, etc. Complete apparatus, with license to use, for sale by dealers in Art materials.

Circular and particulars met for a manu-

F. W. DEVOE & CO.,

ARTISTS' MATERIALS, TUBE PAINTS,
Pastel, OIL and Water-Color Outfits,

Fulton and William Ste., New York, and 17d Randolph St., Chicago, Ill. Evisitation 1862. Impairies receive premps attention

CAMEL HIRE WHITE PROPERTY OF A SHOOTHER STORES TO LADIES!! Send 188 paid for a cannot I segrett's Ersansel Paint, paid for a cannot I segrett's Ersansel Paint, paid for a cannot I segrett's Ersansel Paint, paid for the White, Rhack, Lt. Phine, Phine, pear the lamp.

The method of working the machine is shown in Illustration No. 1. It is necessary to make many such studies of the head or single limbs from the living model

ON HOME DRESS MAKING

> MISS HOOPER invites, and will cheerfully answer any questions concerning home dressmaking which may be sent to her by the JOURNAL sisters. While she will answer by mail, if stamp is inclosed, she greatly prefers to be allowed to reply through the JOURNAL, in order that her answers may be generally helpful. Address all letters to Miss Emma M. Hooper, care of

> > UNDER SPECIAL CONDITIONS

Women just before maternity cannot wear ordinary styles without causing remark, which every modest woman shuns, and what to wear or how to make it in such a manner as to insure them comfort and at least a moderate degree of becomingness and fashion, becomes an important question.

TO INSURE COMFORT AND BECOMINGNESS

OW women under special domestic conditions shall dress, is a subject that interests many, but all domes-tic publications fail to notice how much relief, judging from the nu-merous letters received, they might give large portions of their readers. Women, just hefore readers its way of handwork has gone over the land, women are taking an interest in the old-fashioned art of mending and darning that surprises one not conversant with the present state of revived, if not lost, arts. Naturally, mending is not darning, and vice terra, but they blend together like two harmonizing shades. Pattence and practice will bring forth wonderful results, as I believe that any woman can mend and darn well if she only wills to do it, and keeps on trying until her object is attained. Many good seamstresses cannot mend, as they never have time to devote to such work; but do not say, "I cannot mend," for you can, if you will, and it is fascinating work to watch the old garment made new, or a rent become almost invisible under the nimble fingers.

THE ART OF MENDING

THE MATERIALS TO USE

THE MATERIALS TO USE

N EVER put new, stiff muslin with old, as from sheer perverseness the old will tear around the edge of the new. Buy several yards of light-weight muslin, wash and boilit soft, and iron out. Keep this for all patches and new pieces to be put in underwear, using 10-thread to sew with. I do not approve of coarse thread or needles in sewing if the material will take a fines, as the former tears. of coarse thread or needles in sewing if the material will take a finer, as the former tears old goods when pulling the thread through. In patching a piece of muslin cut the new piece much larger than the old, and do not fell down the seams of the patch. This will raise a storm, as raw edges are not usually considered a neat finish, but they are at least comfortable, and a thick seam is not if on a thick fabric. Overcast the edges, run the sides around, turn in the edge of the torn part, hem them down, and you will have a flat patch, be it on muslin or flannel underwear. boys' trousers, etc. Always press a patch on the wrong side when it is finished. Use linen thread for mending men's or boys' clothing, or sewing their buttons on. Lace is mended or sewing their buttons on. Lace is manded by basting it on a piece of embroidery leather and working the hole over with lace thread, coming in tiny balls, to imitate the pattern as closely as possible. Lace curtains are quickly and easily mended by pasting with starch a piece of net over the tear, and press-ing it on with a warm iron. When a button tears out, leaving a great hole, cover the space with a piece of the material trebly doubled, sewing it down on all sides, and then sew the button on again. button on again.

TO MEND WOOLEN DRESSES

WHEN a dress tears, it is nine times out of ten a zigzag line that is made, to try the mender. Baste under this a piece of the new goods, pulling the ragged edges close together, and running a line of long stitches close to the tear, and a second one two inches beyond. Ravel long threads from a bit of the goods; if you have none, use fine sewing silk, goods; if you have none, use fine sewing silk, and darn with them over the unsightly gap, making even attiches over and under the work, running them certainly balf to an inch beyond the hole. When done, apply a damp cloth to the wrong side, and press with a warm iron, first pulling out the basting threads, or the marks will be pressed in the goods. If the tear takes a piece out of the cashmere, or whatever it may be, then baste a new piece, as before, under the torn edges, and use ravelings in a fine darning-needle. This time make three small stitches beyond the edge, on the dress, and two stitches over the edge on to the dress, and two stitches over the edge on to the dress, and two stitches over the edge on to the new or inserted piece. Darn all around in this manner, pulling the thread evenly, and keeping the patch perfectly smooth over the palm of the left hand. In this manner the center of the new piece is not covered with stitches. When done, lay a cloth over the right side of the patch and press it with a warm iron. I have seen this kind of a patch unde by French nuns so beautifully that it could hardly be found. Do not burry with mending, and do not begin a difficult or long task of it when tired.

A FEW PRACTICAL HINTS.

IN buying dress goods, always have at least half a yard left over to mend with, or make a new collar, cuffs, etc. Save all the small pieces for mending, as any gown is apt to be torn. If in the liabit of remodeling gowns buy a yard extra material for this task. Save old linen, not only for mending purposes. but for bandages, etc., in time of illness. Old towels are useful for mending, to cut the good portions out and hem for wash rags, and also for cleaning-rags. Old stockings may be cut down for children, and thus every "old thing"

There is much to say on the subject, and this is only a beginning; but next month I will take up the subject again and continue until it is exhausted.

*DRESSMAKERS *CORNER **

Under this heading I will cheerfully answer each month any possible question on Home-Dressmaking sent me by my readers. EMMA M. HOOPER

I must ask my correspondents to write me just how their pieces are cut up when they wish information regarding the remodeling of a gown; and also to state the occasions for which a certain costume is wished, when asking how to make it. Another point is in regard to an outfit of any kind, which can be more plainly written of if the writer will tell me how much she wishes to spend upon it. One more important item is- to be brief, yet give necessary detail in an explicit manner.

Mrs. H. K.-Von will have to consult a dyer about our cordurey cleaning well. It is a difficult under

"Sweet Statemen"—I four that this is too late to be of any service to you, but, if not, have a plain front, flat sides and gathered back to your skirt, with a border of vefter six inches deep in front, and narrowing to three inches at the sides. Cont basques, with cuffs, collar, pockets and revers of velvet. Plastron of surah or china silk.

A. E. D.—You should have told me the length of your pinsh skirt. If the plash runs up to the tell, you can make a "bell" skirt of it, and out of the drapery skirt of it, and out of the drapery skirt of coat-pieces and high sheeves to your basque. If it does not run to the belt, get new Henrietts, or a plaid, to make up with the present basque, and keep the plash to use as a trimming only.

B. A. E.—If your complexion is clear, the frackles will not alter the becomingness of any color. As you are rather slender, the present styles of dress goods and costumes just salt you, yet you are not soo than to avoid stripes. Navy-bite, reddin brown, dark green, clear gray, cream, pale bine, some of the heliotrope shades and dark, rich reds you can wear.

BRUNK—Differes is not as becoming an evening color as it is during the day. The faint rese-pinks are exquisite in the gaslight, and trian prettily with chillion ruilles, headed with the composition passementeric, showing several delicate shades in wire and beads. This is from torty to seventy-five cents, as inch in width. Roffies of chillion, not gathered, are from twenty-five to sixty-five cents when four inches deep, the price depending upon the amount of embroidery.

MINNIE R.—Pronounce like it was spelled rayceda, mignosietie-green. Gendarme, rtr., a French soldier; the color is a peculiar blue, worn by the French army, The pian bed-skirts will be worn. Bend me your address if you wish the name of the chart sent you. Wear pink, eid-ress, pale yellow, navy-blue, dark green, red and yellow-browns, cardinal and pale blue, perhaps. The pialn skirts, pointed bodievs and cost baspies. If flat over the bigs and pointed in front, will become yes.

Mas. J. McC.—Your complaint is very natural, but there seems to be no remostly for it except to wear a little drapery on the front of the skirt, jacket fronts to the basque and a long wrap, like the deep capes now worn. For the house the loose-fronted teagowas are restainly the most appropriate. Certainly, do not lose your needful exceptse. I do not think that you can possibly wear the Newmarket, as it is such a plain-filling garment. If possible, get one of the long capes in a dark color.

H. D.—Golden-brown, navy-bine and black, lit up with a color, will protably be safe shades for you to salect. Old-rose is becoming to a sallow complexion, it the eyes are dark. You can have good serge and cashniere gowns from seventy-five cents to one dollar a yard; an excellent cloth is one dollar and fifty cents, a flat Bedford certling is one dollar and the entry-five cents, and figured cheviots and camel-hair goods are from serventy-five cents. Trim with slik gimp bull an inch wide and twelve to sixteen cents a yard.

"Weary Mothers"—Unless your camel's-bair is very wide you have a short pattern. Have a nearly plain skirt in the front and sides, with a box-plained or gathered back. Head the bem with brown or green gimp, thirteen cents a yard. A round walst opened in the back, with the fronts full from the shoulders, brought down to form a slight point; high steeves and plastron of sunh, the celor of the gimp, or sleeves of the dress material, if there is sufficient. Finish the lower edge of the walst, wrists and collar with the gimp.

G. B. G.—The tea-gown is permissible for receiving the ordinary calls, but not for a bride on her "at-home" days, when both the visitors and hosters are sup-posed to use more executing than the pertilest of tea-gowns implies. After your first wedding calls are made you can wear the ten-gowns, but for the first three or four Wednesdays wear a handsome home gown, which should differ from an ordinary street costume. One of light weolen goets, having yoke and coreslet of velvet, and trimmed in jet glung, would be stylich made in princesse style.

in princesse style.

GUILLETTA—A boy of ten years can wear long transers, if it is wished; but knee trousers are usually worn by city boys until they are at least twelve years of age. A pink veivet toque, trimmed with a black pompon, and black veivet strings, would be very pretty, a little jet adding much to its appearance. You do not tell me how much cloth or veivet you have, but the veivet could only be used as a vest in a long coathasque. Sievess of the cloth, unless not afte to match high thick silk gimp. I regret that you have met with such misbrunes.

Extra —Such — see

Entra-Such a girl as you describe can wear gray, it up with a vest of old-rose, deep pink or cardinal. Black not, for a costume, is too old for a girl of sixteen, stay young while you can, for youth never returns. Make the gray gown with an almost pink skirt, having a fan-back, and a ruffle across the edge, headed with slik ginp. Coal basque, having high sleeves and hip pockets, finishing all redges with the braid. Bevers of the same, also edged, or revers, collar and pockets of velvet, and not edged with the gimp. Full plastron of pink, etc., chim or sarah slik, and wear ribbon of the same color basied in the neck.

same color basied in the neck.

FLORA—You wrote your letter too late for an answer before this issue. I am sorry to disappoint any one, but a letter written *eptember ?th could not be asswered in the October basis. I think you have selected an excellent plan far your girl-friends to get a full knowledge of Title Lautow Hours Journal. A rese-pink crépon, light weolen goods trimmed with chiffso ruffles, bearled with passeemmenterie, would be very presty for the hanquet, and then answer for an evening dress. This is one deliar a yard and forty inches wide. A chira sikk at sevenity cents would be both twenty-seven and thirty-two inches, according to the quality.

Mes. J. K.—The value skirts now worm must prove china stik at seventy cents would be both twenty-seven and thirty-two inches, according to the quality.

Miss. J. K.—The plain skires now wern must prove becoming to you, only in place of a ruffle head the same with narrow sitis gings, of use a narrow border of velvet. A void the cont basques, and wear a pointed bodies having a deep, coat-tail back. There have been several articles in the Jot KNAL upon proper dressing for stout figures. The fashion-plates are made by French ideas usually, and they think a tail, shouler figure makes a better picture. Send me your address, and I will enclose you a few pictures suitable for little women. Breitle-shaped trimmings and tapering revers are becoming to short people, also moderately high sieeves and collars, and the very untily trailing skirts now worn. Braili your long hair and twine it in a long-shaped relifient the maps of the seek to the crown of the head. Wear narrow-striped goods.

F.—Cream albatross is thirty-nine inches wide, and sixty to seventy-five cents. I would much prefer a cream cripon, a cryp wooden fabrie, and ratice than this a cream china silk, twenty-two inches wide, and seventy cents a yard. If you get the cripon at one dollar, forty inches, make with a plain front and sides, and fan-platied back, lying five inches on the floor at the center-back. Trim with a bias ruffle, ten inches around the slight train; head with slik ging, at fifteen conts; basque pointed back and front, with a slight V-shaped neck, and long, full-topped sievers. Trim the lower sign, wrists and seek with chiffun ruffles, from inches deep, theiry cents a yard, using six yards, honded with the ging. Crochet buttons, while slippers, for one dollar and fifty; while surely givers, one deliar and fifty; while surder givers, one deliar and fifty; while surder givers, one deliar and fifty; while surder givers, one deliar any address. Trim the ton-gount with his knew collar, deep cuffs and revers of jabots of black lace.

O commence with the underclothes, have them on deep yokes, and wear warm, not thick or heavy garments. An easy-fitting corset or corset waist will do no injury if worn properly, and will give a much better figure to the wearer. For a street dress have figure to the wearer. For a street dress have stripes or plain colors, rather dark than light, and a wrap like one of the long capes now worn, if the person is tall. If of a short figure, one of the full length wraps having a close back and peasant fronts below a yoke will prove more becoming.

The dress skirt should have the usual narrow fan-back now worn, and a slight drapery in front near the top, which is given by cutting the front about four inches longer, and arranging three or four folds diagonally into the belt. The bodice may be a coat, jacket or pointed basque. In any case it should open pointed basque. In any case it should open from the shoulders over a loose vest made like a drooping blouse of soft silk. Have nothing very tight in fit, but shapely, and to give as long lines as possible.

SOME OTHER SUGGESTED DESIGNS

SUCH a skirt as the above may also be worn with a bloom front with a blouse front made with a lining . The soft China silk is especially adapted for this purpose, for its clinging qualities. Over this is worn a blazer having a snug back, rolling collar, high sleeves and loose, cutaway fronts. This suit is appropriate for the house or street, and is prettier made of plain goods, with a trimming of silk gimp or rolling collar with a trimming of silk gimp or rolling collar and cuffs of velvet, with a border on the skirt to correspond. Odd skirts may be worn in the house with the half loose tea-jackets of surah or China silk or cashmere, which have either loose fronts meeting in the center or cutaway fronts over a loose vest. Jabots and frills of lare at the neck, wrists and down the front edges serve to disguise the figure. Tea-gownare becoming, as they are made with a demitrain and loose fronts. A Watteau back is better than a plain princess, as it narrows the figure. The loose fronts of a soft material may fall loose from the neck or be slightly canght at the waist-line. Anything like a belt should be avoided, also cross-wise trimmings, short bodices, yokes or round waists. The dress bodies, yokes or round waists. The dress skirts should be cut with an upward curve at the top in order to have them hang evenly at the lower edge.

A FEW RECENT CHANGES

SOME new princess gowns for the house button from the shoulder to the edge of the skirt. From the knees down the sides are left open, showing a facing of contrasting goods. Chiffon and silk frills trim a bodice from the shoulders to the point of the bodice where they meet. Others are gathered around the back of the arch and continue down the the back of the neck and continue down the front on either side of the battons to the point where they are narrowed. The sleeves of all costumes are very full above the elbows, some of the latest having a puffing around the top of the arm sides of velvet cut on the bias, doubled, and five inches wide before it is folded. Deep cuffs on bishop sloeves are funcied of a second material. Velvet yokes and correlets may be said to fairly "rage." Sleeves of the dress felicies and a contraction material. of the dress fabric or of a contrusting material are equally fashionable. Slender figures like the double cont basque, which shows a second skirt part of velvet longer than the upper one of cloth, etc. The five-gored skirts trimmed with gimp down each seam are increasing in number. Many French skirts have a width of five yards, very plain, and lab! in a triple box-plait in the back; is styled the "umbrella" skirt. Borders and ruffles are put on decreasing from the state of deeper in front and tapering toward the sides

Some of the princess gowns made for slender figures are without darts, having the fullness drawn as smoothly as possible over the fitted lining, and caught in tiny plaits running under a cincture belt or girdle. Others have a short, pointed basque-front, with the outside material cut on the blas, so as to fit without any fullness. The skirt in such a case is of may fullness. The skirt in such a case is of the plain "bell" shape, slipped under the basque, with the back cut as a princess, and the opening down the left shoulder and arm seam made as invisible as possible.

OUR elegant catalogue is full of just such bargains. You can order one of these garments and return it at our expense if not highly satisfactory. We send them C. O. D., with privilege to examine if desired. Our garments are all our own manufacture, made from the most beautiful and best materials in the latest correct shapes and styles, and the extreme low prices insure an enormous sale. Write a postal for our catalogue to-day. Mention THE LADIES' HOME

The Above Cuts Shore: No. 366 Our World beater, 40-inch, $25.00 sacque-isade from extra-fine rich seal Pinsh, Silk Rhadanes lined and duished like a scalskin worth $41.00, only

No. 349 Made 30 inches long from same elegant Plash as above sucque, fined with rich satin and has fibest Astrachan revers; only.

No. 320 Made 25-inches bing, from rich seal Plant. Deep facing since saids lining, fasters with six seal bare; worth $25.00. § 55 to

No. 133 Made Z-Inches long from fine wool Cher-erron; color, cream-brown: half-fened with selln, but fine Mountain Wolf revers; worth fally $800,000;

No. 197 Extra-dose Black Bedford (ved Talma Cape. Full vest and cost sleeves, large Astro-chan collar. Handsemely finished and relationed, only

CHAS. A. STEVENS & BROS., III State Street, Chicago, III.

CASH'S WOVEN NAMES, INITIALS and FIGURES.

Embroidered in Fast Turkey-Red Cetton on fine Cambric Tape. Far superior to Marking-lisk for household linen, and invaluable for newing on to socks, blankets and other articles for which Markleg-Ink carnot be used.

KEPT Specif. Evira Small.

AND

COMBI-

SATION

12

ILLUSTRATED BOOK (with woven patterns of material) free by post. Address

J. & J. CASH, 92 Greene St., N.Y.

VELVETS

nt 75 cents, 87 cents and $1.00.

LION+E SILK VELVET

at $1.25 to $2.50 per yard.

Made of finest Silk and pronounced best "ELBERON" trade mark stamped back every second yard.

of every second yard.

"LION & E" trade mark stamped selvedge every second yard.

For sale best dealors in United States, and in Philadolphia: Sharpless Bros., Homer, Le Boudillier & Co., Strawbridge & Cathler and others. Write Agents, 40 Greene Street, New York City, If you cannot secure genoine goals.

A Stocking Foot Pattern for reflecting weeth our that the senine will not have been will be mailed you on receipt of the cents. Try 18. ECONOMY PATTERN CO., P. O. Box 457, Reading, Pa.

PURCHASING In New York done without extra com-noopen, as West Full Gille Con Syn Google

HATS AND BONNETS FOR CHRISTMAS WEAR

By Isabel A. Mallon

SUMMER hat always seems like the historical butterfly who, although he was very beautiful and of many colors, met his fate and came to an untimely death by being drowned in a tea-cup. When the sum-mer hat is taken off, the roses and the lace and the fluffy trimmings and the soft ribbons all have what women call and the soft ribbons all have what women call

"a mussed look," and do not seem as if there were any future in store for them. With the winter hat it is different. There are always pieces of velvet left over from last season, shapes that may be altered, feathers that may be curied and velvet that may be steamed into good condition. These, of course, are to be used on the rather dressy hat; for the jaunty walking hat is almost entirely without decoration unless a knot of ribbon, a tiny wing or a pompon be counted as such.

A JAUNTY AND PRETTY HAT

THE soft felt hats for wear with the tailor-made suits or for traveling are at once jaunty and pretty. In shape they all tend to the Tyrolean, a slight difference being shown by their being shorter in the back, higher or lower in the crown, as is most becoming. The colors are black, dark blue, speckled blue, mauve, emerald-green and golden-brown. In almost every instance almost every instance almost every instance a broad or narrow band of ribbon is about the crown, and the dec-ration, which is very simple, is placed on the left side a little near the front. Occasionally it extends over the edges, extends over the edges, but oftener the loops are quite inside the rolling brim.

A typical Tyrolean hat is of dark blue cloth finished with binding such as is used on men's cloth bats. About the cloth hats. About the crown is a two-inch crown is a two-inch band, perfectly smooth, of dark blue velvet, and on the side is a double box-plait of the velvet, which stands up a little above the crown and has its ends concealed by a smart little bow of velvet, (Illustration No. 1). If one does not care for one does not care for so elaborate a walking hat, then a loop of ribbon with a wing stuck through it, or a tiny bird, is in good taste. Pompons are also liked in these hats. The tall, stiff grenadier-like pompon should be placed just in front.

THE STYLISH CONICAL CROWNS

A TYPICAL TYPOLEAN HAT (Illus, No. 1)

THE conical crown is noted not only in hats, but in bonnets, and is really most attractive. Dainty little bonnets either of velvet or felt have this pointed little crown, and set up well and easily on the head. When they are felt, a decoration of rather elaborate they are felt, a decoration of rather elaborate velvet is just in front, so that its softness comes on the hair. Small beads, usually the pris-matic ones, outline the edges, and some fanci-ful trimming gives a chic air to the entire chapeau. The Toreador has a very conical crown which, by causing the brim to stand a little further, makes it more becoming than before. The new turbans also have conical crowns and are decorated by an inch wide binding of velvet, and have an elaborate ar-rangement of loops and knots of velvet the omning of verves, and have an elaborate ar-rangement of loops and knots of velvet the same hue, just slightly to the side and front. Such a hat as this could only be worn by some one who does not need the softening effect of a bang, for it requires to be placed well forward on the face.

on the face.

A very pretty little bonnet (Illustration No. 2) is of dark brown felt with a conical crown shaped down short and straight in the back, while in the front its brim is broader and bent into scallops. It has its entire edge outlined with brown prismatic beads; that is, while one sees many colors, the brown one is the principal. Valuet had in house, folds is degree access. pal. Velvet laid in heavy folds is drawn across the front from each side, and is pulled down into one of the curves, where it is held by a brown crescent. Starting out from this are three branches of heather which, while they stand up a little yet turn directly to the back. The ties of ribbon velvet are fastened under a knot just in the back, and coming forward are looped under the chin.

THE WAVING PLUMES

PLUMES big and little, dark and light, falling and standing up, are in very gen-eral favor on the large hats, especially on those that are bent in some odd or picturesque way. The favorite mode of arranging them is in the stiff fashion known as the Prince of Wales. When there are two bunches of feathers on the hat or bonnet whatever it may be, those in front being somewhat smaller than those at the back, they are tied together with a nar-row ribbon which, in addition to their being wired, gives them the air belonging absolutely to the plumes of his royal highness the future King of England. On large hats, plumes ar-ranged in this way are very high and are really very trying to the face, as they stand up, rowivery trying to the face, as they stand up posi-tively in an aggressive manner and give none of their pretty softening effect to the skin. Really, though, it must be confessed that they have a rather smart air which-is-most at tractive.

Emerald green plumes are noted on brown ats, brown on green, gray on gray, blue on Emerald green plumes are noted on brown hats, brown on green, gray on gray, blue on black, and, of course, the usually rich effect of all black plumes on black hats is seen. The black costumes call for these, but very often women who do not care to wear an all black costume gain a bit of color by having contrasting tips on their chapeaux. For evening wear somewhat long plumes, white having pink, blue, shrimp or yellow tips are worn, and these usually are arranged so that they fall loosely over the hat, and although reall; firm in position flare up in a way that would fair loosely over the hat, and atthough reali-firm in position flare up in a way that would suggest their going to join the original ostrich from which they came. These feathers, be-cause they are odd, must be rich and fell, for when decorations are unique they must be so perfect that they can bear absolute criticism. when decorations are unique they must be so perfect that they can bear absolute criticism. A very odd bonnet for evening wear consists of a coronet of cut jet with white Prince of Wales tips at the front and back and narrow ties of white velvet ribbon. This gave to its wearer a rather queenlike look, but the women who admired it knew that it had to be done up with the same care as if it were a crown of diamonds, inasmuch as the finely cut jet facets will easily drop off and so require to be done up in cotton, wool or soft tissue paper. A quaintly pretty hat intended for street wear is of brown felt, the shape originally being a low crown with a broad brim, but it is bent down here and up there until the original shape is altogether forgotten. It comes almost to a point in front, and there a small bunch of emerald feathers fall, while at the back a larger bunch forms the decoration, and long green gros grain striper come from the long green gros grain strings come from the back and are looped in a large, somewhat stiff bow just under the chin.

Although so much has been said about trimming bonnets at the back, and although they are seen decorated with feathers and aigrettes until they look like Eiffel towers in millinery, still milliners who look into the future do not hesitate to say the trimmings will return to the front again, as they the front again, as they have no becoming qualities when they are qualities when they are placed so far from the face. Just now opinion is divided by their being trimmed both at the back and from so that really everybody ought to be suited. It is certain that bonnets will be small, although one resembling the poke of some years ago, and worn much off the face is brought forward and is gaining considerable favor, still I cannot but think that the quiet, ladylike capote made either of velvet, felt or cloth, varied by its trimming, or its size, will continue in fashion at least one season longer. season longer.

AMONG THE PICTURESQUE HATS

A MONG the picturesque hats the most becoming is the one which Lady Clancarty, of famous memory, were on her pretty head when she went to King William to plead for her husband's life. It is a low crown hat with a broad brim, bent a little at the back with a broad brim, bent a little at the back and front so that it arches at each side. The decorations are usually, because one wants to be historical, two plumes, one starting on the right side from under a clasp that must be diamonds, it is so bright, and which falls far over the rim and rests against the hair. The other, a shorter feather, starts from the back under a tiny bow of velvet and comes forward well on the crown to give it a fluffy look.

THE BECOMING SPOON-SHAPED HAT (Illus. No. 3)

It must be confessed that nothing is so becoming to the feminine face as velvet. Consequently the announcement that tall velvet hats, large or smalt, will obtain this season, has been received with gratification. Of course felt ones will be worn, but to be absolutely as Madame La Mode dictates, an all-velvet hat is requisite. They are made large and bent in every pretty picturesque way suited to the face. The bonnets are made small and fit right down on the head, bring-ing the hair out in a most effective manner.

THE STYLISH CONICAL CROWN (Illus. No. 2)

THE SEASON'S SMALL HATS

THE SEASON'S SMALL HATS

The plateau hat, which has set so daintily on many a bead this last season, is now brought out in velvet and decorated with loops of ribbon at the back. It always had the air of flying off the head of whoever wore it; but in velvet it loses a little of this look. A very smart one to be worn with a black and red gown is of black velvet laid in folds from the back until a shell-like effect is produced. Very high ribbon bows of bright scarlet stand up from the back, and from among them are Very high ribbon bows of bright searlet stand up from the back, and from among them are three tiny black feathers tied with a red rib-bon, exactly as are the feathers that belong to the Prince of Wales. Another round hat that is very becoming to a young woman is a straight turban of grey felt; about the crown is a band of dark blue velvet which shows just a little above a bright covered with one is a band of dark blue velvet which shows just a little above a brim covered with gray krimmer, the fur, by-the-by, which a great many people call, in mistake, grey astra-chan. Just at one side is a cluster of pompons made of the fur. Of course, a hat like this is in-tended to be worn with a special coat, and in this case it is with a gray cloth trimmed with gray krimmer.

SOME QUIET HATS

THE liking for the spoon-shaped hat has not by any means disappeared, and many of the new shapes, especially those with medium brims, show the point that so many have found becoming. A girl with golden-brown hair which she means shall be seen, has gotten for the winter season a hat that will resemit this. permit this.

In shape, the hat shown in Illustration No. In shape, the hat shown in filustration No. 3 has a low crown and a medium brim, faced with velvet, that rolls up slightly all around the head, and is cut to a sharp point just in front. It is outlined with a fine gold passementerie, and at the back, where the trimming is, are loops of heavy satin ribbon with gold aigrettes standing from them. This hat being on a band stands far from the head, and gives the hair an opportunity to be seen to best adthe bair an opportunity to be seen to best advantage. One says quiet, and then talks of gold decorations, which sounds a little queer. But in this case the gold has been so carefully arranged that never for a moment does it look out of place.

FOR YOU AND FOR ME

Now, it's just this way. You and I probably each want a pretty bonnet; not being second cousins to Crossus, we can't walk in and order bonnets as we would blackberries. But I tell you what we can do. If we are not elever enough to make bonnets for our selves, and I regard it as more than eleverness— I think it's a talent—why, then, the best thing for us to do is to wait. Wait until the rush for bonnets is over; wait until the general woman has satisfied her soul as far as the bonnet is has satisfied her soul as far as the bonnet is concerned, and then go to a fashionable miliner's, pick out your chapeau and coolly ask him his price. Somebody says that half the secret of being well served in stores is to retain a coolness of manner that overwhelms. He will probably say twenty-five dollars. You can look at the material and decide whether there is anything that will be left over for next season, and if there isn't you can depart to another fashionable milliner's. When you get there and discover the very bonnet that has been tempting you for many weeks, try it on and have them tell for many weeks, try it on and have them tell you again that it is twenty-five dollars. Then turn to the milliner and offer her ten, and the chances are she'll take it. And this is the reason why; she knows she's going to have to carry it over the season and risk the moths dining on it next summer. She also knows that it didn't begin to cost her twenty-five dollars, and that she has made a greater profit on other hats, so that she can afford to lose a little on this. Most important of all, she's gained a customer, and there is no doubt about the more an who were a treater for dollars. it that the woman who gets a twenty-five dol-lar bonnet for ten dollars will return some day and bring a friend who will pay thirty-five for an eight-dollar one. This is the diplo-macy of millinery and the faith of lovely

Langdon & Batcheller's GENUINE THOMSON'S

Glove - Fitting

--- CORSETS. ---

Best on Earth. DO YOU WEAR THEM?

*FURS* 1891~ SEASON~ 1892 Latest and Exclusive Styles. (ADESTIN Gentlemen's

Experition A.JAECKEL ~ FURRIER DA

11 EAST 19TH ST., NEW YORK

SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED GATALOGUE

WM. SIMPSON & SONS'

Printed Fabrics.

CROCK CROCK

IN SHEER INDIA LINONS PRINTED EFFECTS

WARRANTED ABSOLUTELY FAST

Ladies, Send Stamp for Primer.

I do shopping of all kinds Blaht years' experience Google

THE SMALL BELONGINGS OF DRESS

By Isabel A. Mallon

MRS. MALLON will be glad to answer any question about woman's wear which may be sent to her by JOURNAL readers. She asks, however, that she be permitted to answer through this Department in the JOURNAL; though, if stamps are inclosed, she will reply by mail. Address all letters to MRS. MALLON, care of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, Philadelphia, Pa.

FTER having been on earth goodness only knowshownsany years, it has at last been discovered that the beauty of a neck is retained by permitting it to go uncovered. In the old days neither the Romans nor their con-temporaries were anything that even resem-bled a collar, while the few nations who did affect collars had the few nations who did affect collars had them made of magnificent jewels, so that they rested like neckhoes far down on the neck itself. With the high collar, or even the collar that we call medium, came a noticeable change in the throat and neck. The one lost its firmness and whiteness, and the other became bony and unbenotiful. So, afterall, the only way to really keep one's neck beautiful is to wear it not necessarily uncovered, but with a soft finish at the throat and keeping the neck unhamat the throat and keeping the neck unham-pered by stiff linen.

ONE of the prettiest of the new handker-chiefs is black crops de chine with a bor-der of fleur de lis wrought out in gold thread as its finish. These are shown in white, scar-let and supplies blue. Of course, they are merely decorative adjuncts, but they can be made a very smart addition to the toilette. Fushionable girls have for every-day use large linen lawn bandkerchiefs with a hemstitched border and a half inch wide lace edge. The initials are wrought out in the corner in very

THE deep square veil that comes in rose point, appliqué, or an imitation of either and in all white, has not had the same approbation given here that it obtained both in Paris and in London. Whether it is that it is and in London whether it is that it is not writted to the American considerate and the constitution of the con not suited to the American complexion can-not be found out; but it is undoubtedly for one of these reasons that the delicate real lace veil has not met with the same approval.

HATS of all velvet, inclining somewhat to the beef-eater shape and having a high cluster of feathers at one side, promise to be in vogue during the season. They are shown in golden-brown, olive, gray and billiard

In making up the plaid costumes for the winter a plain color is, in almost every instance, combined with the plaid in one way or another. Capes of the plaid in one way or another. Capes of the plain cloth, high puffed sleeves of it, pocket laps and somerimes a smooth band about the edge of the skirt placed just as fur is, will be affected. In many instances a cost of the plain cloth is liked, and really when the plaid is one that permits the use of a blue or green or dark scarlet plain cloth coat with or without fur trimpings it will be found to give a pair of sensitive. mings, it will be found to give an air of special style to the gown.

It is interesting to know that an intelligent hair dresser claims that blondes cannot be done away with; that blondes are essentially the beauties of civilization, and that they cannot be driven away. He says that the blonde can dress more effectively, and that a well-kept blonde has ten years' advantage in the point of youthful looks. You can not exputage her in favor of the brunette even in literature, for in the novels turned out during the past year there have been three hundred and past year there have been three hundred and eighty-two blondes to eighty-two brunettes.

THE jewel pins that were so popular at one time have lost their prestige, the sim-pler tortoise shell, jet or amber being in their place. Indeed, the loop of plain shell, which can be so expensive and which, when imitated, is so chemp, has rather more vogue given it than any other.

FOR evening wear at concerts or the oper T nothing is quite so pretty as a tiny bon-net formed of a wreath of roses with black ribbon velvet strings to the them in position. They are usually placed rather well forward on the head, and pinned at the sides to the bair by tiny little pins with white heads.

B LUE and white striped silk blooses will be worn during the winter with the cutaway jackets of blue cloth. It is always supposed that over these will be assumed a long cloak or cape that will hide the little jacket

IN colors this season the blues are rather gray in line while the grays either have a tinge of lavender or lilac, or else show a greenish line deepening into mignonette or sage. The heliotropes are more than ever suited to those brunettes who have a clear complexion, but the warmen who is unfortered everything. but the woman who is unfortunate enough to be sallow should never wear or permit to be near ber any shade of the delicate line. But the glaring emerald green is not only at once trying, but loud, and can not be commended even for the much quoted lady who has the skin of a peach. The popularity of black is very great. The soft wools, or mixtures of silk and wool being shown especial favor. A black wool gown is always refined not ladylike. So she who can get only one gown will be wise in choosing that it shall be entirely in the fashion by being black. A LTHOUGH organionally odd colors are noted in gloves, still the various tans and gray shades, as well as the white and the black, are really the ones worn. Though pink, blue or deep yellow may match a costume, it is not in good taste to wear them.

F one wishes to be economical and freshen I up black satin slippers it can be easily done by covering them entirely with finely cut done by covering them entirely with finely cut jet beads. Sew each one on separately and then they will not be likely to come off. Another very pretty way of concealing the ravages of time on slippers is to have a bugegauze rosette, made very pully, standing up well and high from the slipper and in this way accomplishing two things—that is, the instep is made to look higher and the greyish look of the satin is completely hidden.

If during the season you intend to wear white gloves very much, take the advice that I have gained by experience, and though they cost a little more, get a glacé glove in preference to the undressed glove, as they will clean much better and do not so easily show that they have been undergoing the scouring

THE gold girdles, that is, those of wide gal-loon and having on them a deep gold buckle, will be worn all winter. They are not expensive and will look well with a cashmere or black stuff dress of any sort.

VERY young girls who are permitted to go to informal parties usually have plain skirts of light silk, or nuns' veiling, finished around the bottom with a festooning of crepe de chine. The bodice is a draped one, and should always be high at the neck and long in the sleeves. The Valois sieeres, that come in a point down over the hands, will be found most becoming, as young girls are apt to be slender of arm and a little awkward of hand.

A PRETTY way to finish a night dress is to scallop, with colored thread, that part of the placket which laps over, and then to embroider all over the collar and ouffs, which, by-the-by, are outlined in the same way, tiny flowers, that is, daisies, rosebuds, forget-me-nots or butter-cups, in the same color and after the flat Kensington fishion. In addition to their being very pretty, some suitable work is afforded for a great many idle hands.

NO evening dress is too elaborate or too light a texture not to have fastened quite near the edge and between the back and front a huge bow of broad velvet ribbon appliquée-i flatiy in place and made to look as if it were holding two parts of the gown together. Bows made in this fashion of very broad braid are liked on cloth gowns.

'N this day, when enormous hats are seen, it I must not be forgotten that small ones are also in vogue, and a tiny bit of a woman must not look as if she were being extinguished under an enormous hat covered with rich plumes when she would look daintier and prettier in a turban or small bonnet, both of which are good form.

MONG the most becoming veils may be A cited the one of thin net that has upon it tiny stars of cut jet; this veiling is rather expensive, but it will wear well, as the jet stars are each sewed separately in place and so have solved to many a tiny girl just how the stars stay up in the sky.

W OMEN who look well in very broad turnover collars and deep cuffs of white linen are making them fashionable by wearing them; when they are becoming they are so very becoming that the wearers cannot be blamed for the energy with which they push them, but as they are unbecoming to so many it is almost to be hoped that they will not be generally adopted,

A VERY presty Christmas gift for one's sweetheart or one's brother is a hand-some brush having a back of tortoise shell with a monogram or cipher cut into the shell itself. This with the comb is strapped in a pretty leather case and possesses the two desirable qualities of being ornamental and ase-

ONE of the most curious rings seen lately is of aluminum with a very dark ruby set in it. The ring looks almost black, and it is only at night that the stone is at its best, and impresses one with its great beauty, LTHOUGH the style of the new hats rather demands that they should be set forward, still it is well to remember that a hat brought too far over the face is at once trying, and gives a rather hard, bold look.

THE busy woman finds a useful ornament for her chatelaine in a pencil that exactly imitates a match, and which may suggest to the looker on either that she is matchiess, or her match has been found.

WHAT is known as the sharp-pointed Spanish bong is very much in vogue. but it must be remembered that the hair must grow in this way for it cannot be cut in this shape or trained to it.

FURS $888 184FIFTH AVENUE NEW YORKCITY

CRAVATTES AND MUFFS.

MINK......$15 per set and upwards SABLE ..... 25 BLACK PERSIAN. 15

-- PPPPPPPPCCCCCC---

PRICE-LISTAND-FASHION-PLATES ₩₩·SENT·UPON·REQUEST·₩•粉

6th AVENUE, 20th to 21st STREET, NEW YORK.

Importers and Retailers

BLACK MARTIN, 15

ORNAMENTAL HOLIDAY GOODS.

The Largest and Finest Establishment of its kind in the Country.

When the readers of this magazine are looking for souvenirs suitable for the Holiday Season, they would do well to inspect our large and varied stock of goods before purchasing. We feel sure we can do better by you, both in quality and price, than any other house in the country. For the convenience of those of our customers who live out of town we issue semi-annually a large catalogue which illustrates and describes our many lines and gives full information as to ordering goods by mail, etc. The Fall and Winter edition now ready (sent free upon application). Send for one early, as the supply is limited.

FORTY SAMPLES

of the cloths and plushes of which we make the gaments, to select from, on receipt of four cents in stamps to prepay possage. You may select any style gaments you device from our castingue, and we will make it to order for you from any of our cloths or plushes or plushes. Our samples include a spheadld line of new Diagonsis. Cheviota, Benevier, Kenseys, Chiachillas, Heddord Cords, Camely-bair, Wide-water, Clays, rough and smooth cloths, Imported and Domestic Cleakings in blacks, colors, stripes, plaids and all the new shades, combinations and effects also a line of English Seal Plushes in different qualities. We showed cloth and plush by the yeard to ladies who desire to make their own gaments. The NATIONAL CLOAK CO. 21 Wooster St. N. V. City.

THE NATIONAL CLOAK CO., 21 Wooster St., N.Y. City.

DRESSMAKING SIMPLIFIED.

Free Didays to lead at your own home.
Free Didays to lead at your own home.
Free Didays to lead at your own home.
THE MeDOWELL CO.
West 140 News, New York Ob-Bend 35 cents for copy of our elegant Preach Fashion books explaining how to cut latest style garmont.

LADIES, DON'T FAIL

To Send a Two-cent Stamp for Samples of

KING PHILIP Cambric. KING PHILIP Lawns. KING PHILIP Nainsook.

Above goods are unequalled for LADIES', CHIL-DREN'S and INFANTS' wear. Should be found on shelves of every retailer in the United States.

KING PHILIP MILLS 85 WORTH STREET, - NEW YORK.

Special attention is called to this celebrated brand of Bleached Muslin, which for fineness and durability is unsurpassed. This cloth is manufactured with great care, particularly for and is guaranteed not to Crack or Turn Lellow.

LADIES' UNDERWEAR and GENTLEMEN'S SHIRTS, in 36, 41 and 45 inch widths.

Inquire for this brand, and take No Substitute.

In purchasing garments, ask for Pride of the West. For sale by all leading retail

FUR COATS AND FUR TRIMMINGS

By Isabel A. Mallon

HE gowns and jackets of the winter season are themselves cut with such the winter season are themselves cut with such great plainness that the use of a flat or band decoration is necessary upon them. Of course, the preference is given to fur, though it is mingled so often with braid or feathers on the elaborate gowns that indeed it is suited thoroughly to the house gown, the street costume or the beautiful dress that is to be worn in the evening. Fluffy trimmings are given the preference, and although a great deal of astrachan and gray krimmer (which is often incorrectly called gray astrachan) are noted, still, mink, or its limitations are given a decided preference. Russian sables are the finest fars in the world, and equally, of course, the little animals are the smallest, and are the most becoming, the soft, fine light from the fur bringing out particularly well all the good of the complexion, and toning down all that is bad.

I think we women always like to know a little of the removal belowing to particularly well as the proposed to the complexion of the complexion and toning down all that is bad.

is bad.

I think we women always like to know a little of the personal belongings of people, and so I was interested when I was told by a large New York furrier that the finest sables in this country belonged to Mrs. C. P. Huntington, and the finest chinchills to Mrs. Langtry, who used it to line a sapphire-blue velvet cost. It's rather nice to know about people who have such beautiful things, even if one can't possess them one's self. After Russian sables, the favorite fur trimmings are Hudson Bay sable, mink, black marten, stone marten, blue fox, black fox, black bear, Persian, as-trachan and krimmer. Most all these furs are very closely imitated, and even in a store like Gunther's a thoroughly good imitation intended for a dress trimming can be gotten.

A FUR TRIMMED GOWN (Illus. No. 1)

HOW TO PLACE THE DECORATION

THE favorite mode of arranging a street gown is, first of all, to think over your material, next of all whether you are trimming a new dress or freshening an old one. In the case of the old one you need to hide the spots and to make your trimming act as a good friend, and charitably conceal all de-fects. Now, suppose you are buying a gown and you fancy a black serge; your skirt is made with extreme plainness, and your bodice basque has long skirts that reach almost to your knee. You are like old Grimes' cout, all buttoned down before, though your collar is not quite so high, nor quite so close-fitting as it was last year. Your sleeves are raised high on the shoulders and shaped in to fit the arm. There is the plain dress. Now select your trimming. Get an inexpensive quality of quality of either bear or marten, choosing this because it always sews out wider than it is. Have a band of it about your skirt at the front and sides, pipe your cost with it all around the edges, so that about an inch of fur shows, and then have a turn over collar of fur as the neck finish. You may or may not have cuffs; the furriers say they are not fashiomable and the dressmakers say they are. Just a little below the waist-line put rather deep pocket laps of the fur, and behold? your costume is transmed, and is really a very smart one. For your bounet choose a tiny black felt, pape it with fur, and put a Prince-of-Wales bunch of bright elive feathers at the back, tying them in place so that they may look as if placed there carelessly, and yet the strings will come from under them and be looped just in front. Now this gown is plainly shown in libustration No. I, and she who will make over a gown, or would have a new one, cannot do better than use this for a model.

THE FASHIONABLE FUR COATS

THE FASHIONABLE FUR COATS

EVERY year it is announced with the interpolarity that the seals are fast dying out, and yet with the same regularity beautiful fur coats are developed, and make happy the hearts of a good many people. I think I have said before that I regard a seal-skin coat as a good investment; it looks well, it can be altered from season to season, and one that has seen and one that has seen eight years of good, honest wear looks me honest wear looks me straight in the face as much as to say "stand up for us," and so I do Experience is the very best teacher, and ad-vice is not worth giving unless it has experi-ence as its background.

THE LATEST SEAL JACKET

THE new seal jacket is the veritable Louis XV. It comes almost to the knees, fitting quite closely, and has, at the proper distance below the waist-line, deep pocket laps that are vandyked on the lower edge. The collar is a straight one, broken just in front in two points. There is no trimming and no cuffs on this coat, and its beauty depends entirely on the perfection of the seal and the fit. Another jacket, and Another jacket, and one that will be much liked for younggirls, is that which is known as three-quarters length; it is loose in front, has a large turned over col-lar, and fits in the back : it is double-breasted, and fastens from the shoulder straight across the corsage to the edge. The sleeves are full and drawn into deep cuffs. What is known as the seal sacque is always in fashlon. It is double-breasted, has a slight slit up the back, and is decorated with a deep Russian collar. It has plain sleeves slightly ruised on the shoulders.

SOMETHING HOVEL IN FURS IT is most desirable, as well as most eco-I nomical, to get something pretty in fursthat will form a neck trimming which is detachable. Capes are not always desimble, especially if they are to be worn by some one who is stout, or who does not find the cloth coat sufficiently warm. By the-by, the new capes of fur are made longer, fit more closely, and have a decided point in the back. The novelty, how-ever, is the Elizabethan ever, is the Elizabethan collar. It is made of sable or sable tails, mink or mink tails, and then of any of the rather close furs in vogue. The collar stands high up above the neck with a slight flare, fastens close nader the chin, and under the chin, and comes down forming a plastron which covers almost entirely the front of the bodice. This is accompanied by a muff to match, and the set, which may be gotten in costly or more expensive furs, will be found to add to the shape of the figure and to be very stylish in its effect Just how it fits is shown in illustration No. 2.

CLOTH-TRIMMED COATS

HEAVY serges, diagonals, smooth cloths and camel's-hairs are made after the Louis XV fashion; have piping of some pretty fur. pocket laps, cuffs, col-lar and muff to match. The cloths are shown in all colors, but I particularly recom-mend black camel's-hair, as at is very much in vogue, and is becoming and warm. The dark blues look well trinsmed with saluk, but have not that suchet which pertains to a black cont. In all things this year black will be fashionable, THE SMART CRAVATTE THIS YEAR

A GAIN the little mink and sable and Per-A GAIN the little mink and sable and Persian lambs are shown just as they are when alive, and to be put right around one's neck. They are fashionable, not so very expensive, and with a muff to match make a very pretty finish to a plain coat. Apropos to these cravattes it must be remembered that they may be certainly appreciated as a delightful Christmas gift. Muffs are made of the skins of all animals, though I can't quite make up my mind whether the seai is an animal or a fish. They are much larger than before, and consequently give a more dignified air to the woman who carries one. The fluffy furs, such as the black marten, black fox, and their imitations, though they may be the same size, really look much larger than do those with the close hair. After all, in buying a muff, it is just as well to get a big one, for it can always be cut down small, while a little one can't be cut up large.

up large.

CLOTH AND FUR CAPES

COMBINATION A COMBINATION of cloth, velvet and fur makes one of the most beautiful and useful capes that can be imagined. It is long enough to cover one's back and high enough to keep one's neck warm; in fact, it comes almost to the knees. The one I saw had a deep under cape, reaching to the knees, of ing to the knees, of pule gray cashmere. Above it was a gray velvet coat that seemed to be three capes, but was in reality only one, having the edge finished with a row of chinchills, and two rows above this of the for, at regular inter-vals, gave the triple effect. The collar was high, and the lining of gray brounds. This shows the cape as it was worn in the street.
(Hlustration No. 3.)
When it is intended for evening wear; it is made sufficiently long to cover the entire claborate this cape is, in reality, very simple, and the home dress-maker should be able to make one like it. If the expense of a velve upper care is not do.

the expense of a velvet upper cape is not desired, why, then, one can have it of the cashmere, which is pretty, and the same effect would be produced. In all-black, with a black far; in white, with a brown fur and in gray with a black, brown or gray fur, this useful and unique little cape would be most becoming.

THE BOA AND MUFF

THE long fluffy box, which has always re-tained its prestige in London and in Paris, is shown in black bear, blue, red and black fox; indeed, in all skins that give the soft look only gained by the long-haired fur. A woman who can wear a well-fitting cloth gown, with just a chumois bodice under it and who does not need a who does not need a who does not need a wrap, often chooses the long bea and the big muff as the warm-looking adjuncts to her get up. To a tall, slender girl one of the large muffs with a fur boa is executally bebox is especially becoming, and as fur is not as contrary as feathers, which will lose their good looks in damp weather, it is certainly wiser to choose the skin rather than the fuzz of the early ostrich. Nobody ever connects fass and furs, because fars have a beauty of their own, but five and feathers seem as natural as furs and luxury. In wear-ing your boa do not tie it; instead, have little ribbons on it that tie just where you wants confine it and want to confine it, and you will then find it will not only look better but wear very much longer.

Now, will you remember what I say, just my usual little last word, that the triuming which is effective does not always need to be expensive, will rule in the world of trimulage, and, consequently, when

R IN FUR (Illus, No. 2) consequently, when you are looking out for what you wish to make rich your pretty gown, by all means thouse the wooly, finfly animal who is sacrifired at the shrine of beauty and I do not think you will find I have advised a roughly.

Many ladies wear Black from choice; many from necessity; others, still, because it is in the prevailing fashion.

The attention of all is invited to our Mourning Department. We have a complete variety of Crapes, Henriettas, Drap d' Alma, Melrose and the other novelty weaves of the finest all-wool and silk-and-wool Black Goods.

If you wish a Black Dress that will be a comfort and of excellent service, write to our Mail-Order Department, stating what you desire, and we will gladly send you samples from which you can confidently make a selection.

JAMES McCREERY & CO.

Broadway and Eleventh Street, New York.

B. & B.

IF we offer you a wider range and more varied assortments in every line of Dry Goods-

IF the qualities are as good

IF the prices for such qualities are-say in nine cases out of ten, lower than you are get-

IF if you can trade with us through our Mail Order Department with as perfect satisfaction as at any counter-is it not to your interest to do so?

Any reader of this JOURNAL who will write to us for samples of six qualities of Bedford Cords and six qualities of Broadcloths (prices from $1.00 to $2.50 for 48 and 50-inch stuffs), will find upon comparison that each quality in both lines is 15 cents to 35 cents a yard less than the goods are usually retailed at.

So with every other line of Dry goods in these stores.

Our Fashion Journal and Catalogue, too, contains much that is of special interest to every reader of this JOURNAL. Send your name and address for a copy.

BOGGS & BUHL, 115, 117, 119, 121 Federal Street, ALLEGHENY, PA.

MADAME GRISWOLD'S Patent Skirt-Supporting Corsets AND SKIRT SUPPORTERS,

For circulars and terms to agents send to

MADAME GRISWOLD.

923 Broadway, New York; 7 Temple Place, Boston, Mass.; or to General Agents, M. M. Wygnat & Co. Fredonia, N. Y.; J. B. Putnam, 126 State street.

A STYLISH, SENSIBLE CAPE (Illus, No. 3)

THE ELIZABETHAN COLLAR IN FUR (Illus, No. 2)

DOMESTIC HELPS AND CULINARY HINTS

Helpful Suggestions from Experienced Minds

HOUSEKEEPING AS A PROFESSION

By EDETH DECKSON

YOUNG housekeeper only recently said to me after years of failure: "For the next two or "For the next three years I am going to make housekeeping my business. I mean not only to learn bow to do everything connected with it, but also to study and find the best and most simple methods of managing the whole."
If that intention should be carried out, there will be no danger that that young woman's housekeeping will not be successful. It is a fact that many women regard the care of a home too much in the light of an in-care of a home too much in the light of an in-cidental, one among many occupations which they propose to carry on. Some of them are musical, artistic or literary in their tastes, and see abused if household cares rob them of the time they wish to devote to their favor-ite pursuits. Some are engaged in various kinds of charitable work, which they consider of more importance than the doing of the of more importance than the doing of the numberless little things about a home, which may take a whole day's time, and leave one at night with the unsatisfactory impression of at ingot with the binatismicroy impression of having accomplished nothing.

Few women are so fiverably situated that family cares will bee often hinder them from all other occupations. Disappointment and discontent then are felt by the woman who had expected to be able to follow without in-had expected to be able to follow without in-terruption some chosen pursuit.

But why should a worman complain because she is too busy to find the time for all the study, benevolent work, or visiting that she would like to do? No sensible woman would find full because she has to work. It is what her husband does, whatever his wealth may be, said, if she be wise, she would not wish to be released from it. eleased from it, be released from it.

The woman who is a clerk, a seamstress, a teacher, an artist, or a writer, does bird work day after day with little leisure for self-improvement or recreation. The average house-keeper has more leisure than she could have in any other business. She is liable to have days and weeks of hard work, when help is not to be found, and there is company to be entertained, or sickness in the family. But she is no worse off then than women in other employments. employments.

The woman who is too poor to hire any help, but must do for herself all the work of her bouse, with a family of little children to care for, has a hard time. But even such a one works no harder than a large part of the women who are earning their own living. The care of a home with all it involves, considered simply in the light of an occupation, is, un-doubtedly, for the majority of women, an easier life than any of the employments by which a living may be earned.

which a living may be earned.

The married women, therefore, has no reason to think that her life is exceptionally filled with care, and to repine, unless she is too indetent to be willing to work at all. True, she may not be domestic. She may be a sunsician or a teacher, and have absolutely no gift or liking for a domestic life. Such a woman should not marry and enter upon home duties.

The difficulty is that women marry willing to make a business for life of the care of their bomes. That is what marriage means to the majority of women. A man goes on to the uniority of women. A man goes on with his costomary work, but whatever a woman may have done before marriage, afterwards there is commonly but one busines for her—that of caring for her bome.

The married woman who is unwilling to sc-cept this for her life-work will be discontented cept this for her life-work will be discontented and unhappy berself, and will be the cause of unhappiness to ber family. No woman has the right to condemn her family to a boarding-house existence, or to leave to others the care of her home and children, in order that she may follow more congenial pursuits, if she tries to do her duty by her family, and, at the same time, to devote herself to some other work, the conflicting demands upon her time and strength will hinder her from being time and strength with times our goes occupantly in either undertaking. She also experiences a great nervous strain under which many women break down, resulting from the consciousness, in whatever one may be doing that something else needing attention is being neglerted.

This is not saying that women ought to confine themselves to the round of their dointestic employments. However busy a woman may be, she can and ought to find some the for reading and study in the line in which abe is ness interested. In her lessure hours she may be able to write books, paint pictures, or accomplish much in any other direction in which she has a talent. But if a woman wishes to be happy and not to break down in strength and health, let her look upon the care of her toone as her profession in life, and regnal all other pursuits as simply occupations for her hours of leisure

If she does not down this a work worthy of such a monopoly of her time and thought, she should not have married. Having done see should not have married. Having done on, she is in the position of many a man who finds too late that he lies chosen a life-work that is uncongenial. The only sensible and beave thing to do, is not to abandon one's home, like the begoine of Ibean's "Doll's House," nor to neglest it, but to try by extra diligence and palms to scales up for the lack of cutural adaptation to one's work.

RECEIPTS FOR A CHAFING DISH BY MARIA PARLOA

ADDITION to those receipts for the chafing dish which I have already given in recent is-sues of the Journal, I add the following final four which will, I think, give a pleasing satis-faction to those who will give them a trial:

CREAMED LORSTER

CREAMED LORSTER

YOU will have emough to serve three people if you use half a pint of cream, one pint of lobster cut into small pieces, one heaping tablespoonful of butter, one level table-spoonful of flour, a grain of cayenne, one teaspoonful of salt andone teaspoonful of lemon juice. Senson the lobster with all the cayenne and a little more than half the salt. Put the butter in the granite-ware dish and place over the lamp. When the butter is melted add the flour, and stir until the mixture is smooth and frothy; then gradually pour in the cream, frothy; then gradually pour in the cream, stirring all the while. When the sauce boils up stir in the lobster. Now put hot water, to the depth of one inch, in the lower pan. Set the upper pan on this and place all over the lamp. Put on the over and cook for ien minimum. utes, stirring frequently. At the end of this time stir in the lemon juice and serve at once.

FRENCH PEAS

TURN one can of petit pois in a strainer and let about a quart of cold mater mn over them. This is to rinse off the water with which they were surrounded. Put them in the chaling dish with one tablespoonful of butter, one tenspoonful of sugar, one gill of water and one level tenspoonful of salt. Place over the lighted lamp and cook for five minutes.

CANNED TOMATOES

PUT into the upper dish one generous table-spoonful of butter and one teaspoonful of flour. Stir over the lighted lamp until the butter bubbles; add one plut of camer tomatoes, one-fourth of a teasquoutul of pepper and one level teaspoonful of mit. Cook for ten minutes, stirring frequently. For some tastes a tenspoonful of sugar in a desirable addition.

BLANGUKTTE OF CHICKEN

You will need for this, if three or four peo-ple are to be served, one pint of cooked chicken, out into delicate pieces; one gill of white stock, one generous gill of cream or rich white stock, one generous gill of cream or rich milk, two level tablespoonfule of botter, one level tablespoonful of floor, a saltapoonful of pepper, one tenspoonful of lecton-juice and the relk of one egg.

Season the chicken with two-thirds of the salt and all the pepper. Put the butter in the granite-ware dish and place over the lighted lang. When it is matted add the floor, and attraction most small smooth and feedly. Gradually add the proper.

etir until smooth and frothy. Gradualty add the stock, and when this boils add all the cream the stock, and when this boils add all the cream except about two tablespoonfuls. Now add the remainder of the salt, When the sauce boils up add the chicken and stir until it boils. Place over a dish of hot water the dish in which the chicken is cooking, and after setting both over the lamp, cover, and cook for fifteen minutes. Beat the yelk of the egg well, and add the remainder of the cream to it. Stirthis into the blanquette and cook for one minute longer. Take from the boiling water, add the lemon-juice, and serve.

It will not harm the blanquetta, before the egg is added, to cook over the boiling water for egg is added, to cook over the bolling water for ten minutes longer than the time given; but it would spoil it to cook len seconds longer than the given time after the agg is added. Should it be inconvenient to use chicken stock, substitute a gill of water and half a ten-apopulul of best extract

THREE WINTER DESSERTS

DISHES WHICH TANCE GOOD AT THE ESD OF A REARTY WINTER MEAL

GOOD dish of orange fritters can be made by taking four oranges, peel thora, taking off all the white pith without breaking into the pulp divide in four or five pieces through natural divisions of the orange: dip each piece into cons-mon batter, and fry in hot land. Serve on nap-kin with powdered sugar.

A GOOD PLUM-PUDDING

ONE and one-half pound raising, one and three-quarters of a pound of currants, one pound of figs, two pounds moist sugar, two pounds of bread-vrumbs, sixteen aggs, two pounds to recurrence, sixed also enge, two pounds finely chopped suck also onness mixed courtied peel, one onnes ground not neg, one ounce ground cinnamon, one-half ounce bittar almonds, one-half pint molasses. Mix all the dry ingredients together and moisten with the ergs; when all well mixed, floats a strong past-ding-bag; put in pudding, the well, and look eight hours. A nice same is to take one cupeight noise. A nice sains is to take one cap-ful of sweet evens, whites of three eggs and three tablespoolints of possibled sugar. When the cream is chilled, wide and put in a roof place, beat the whites stiff and add sugar and eream. Any flavoring may be used.

GERMAN COFFEE CARE

O'sk quart milk, eight anners sugar, eight onners butter, a little salt, two ounces yeast, lemm flavor, flour, six eggs. Make a soft sponge of the milk, yeast and flour; let it rise. Then add all other ingredients. Make a stiff dough, adding all flour required. Let the again, rull out, put on a pun and let it rise again. Brush it with egg, aprinkle sugar and choppedalmonds on top and bake, mends may be omitted if desired.

TO MAKE A CHRISTMAS CAKE

AS TRIED BY A GOOD HOUSEKEEPEN

MANY are the ways to make a Christmas cake, and the following receipt may have nothing of newness about it, yet the results which it has brought warrant us to put it before our readers with a cordial indorsement. It will make a thoroughly satisfactory Christmas cake, provided, always, the direc-tions are carefully followed.

DETAILS OF MAKING THE CAKE

One pound each of sugar, butter, citron and currants; two pounds of raisins, seeded; one and one-half pounds flour, two-thirds of a cup of currant jelly, twelve eggs, one teaspoonful soda, the same of salt; a dash each of cayenne pepper and black pepper, and one cupful of molasses. Divide the flour into two parts; into one part put one teaspoonful of cinnamon; one natmer, grated; one-fourth teaspoonful of cloves, and two-thirds teaspoonful of allspice. Mix fruit with the other half of flour. Cream the butter and snugar, add the eggs, well beaten; dissolve the soda in warm water, and stir in the molasses. Mix all well together, and put in pans lined with buttered paper. This will make two large loaves. Bake in a moderate oven for two bours. The result is a Christmas cake which will delight the heart of a good housewife and please the pulates of those who can it.

TWO GOOD CHRISTMAS DESSERTS

BY A SOUTHERN HOUSEWIFE

ONE of the most toothsome of orange jel-O'se of the base toomsome of owage jet-lies can be made as follows: To two quarts of calves foot jelly, that has been well clarified, add three pounds of lost sugar, the juice of two lemons and of six oranges, the thinly-pared rind of two oranges, oranges, the thinly-pared rind of two oranges, and one stick of cinnamon broken up. Beat slightly the whites of six eggs and mix all well together in a preserving kettle. Set it on the fire and let it boil briskly for half an hour, then throw in a cup of cold water and let it boil twenty minutes longer. Have a flannel jelly-bag, made shape of a V, scald it and pour the jelly into it carefully. Tie it where it can keep warm while the jelly runs through. Then set the bowl of jelly in a cool place to get firm. get firm

DELICIOUS CHOCOLATE PUDDING

Beinchous chocolate Pubblish

Oil. four ounces sweet chocolate in a quart of milk; when quite dissolved, pour over a pint of bread crurabs and let it stand for an hour or so. Mash the bread well and, if there are any pieces of crust, it may be passed through a sieve until a perfectly smooth mass is obtained. Add four well-beaten eggs, a cupful of butter, two of sugar, a little grated nutmer, a cup of stoned raisins, and another of binnehed almonds, Steam for an hour.

Premium with an order of $20.00.

ENGLISH PORCELAIN

Floid Band Dinner Set. No. 200, 100 Pierr Decorated in There Medical Premium with an order of $45.00. Or pucked and delivered at depot for $9.00 (ash Price, packed and delivered at depot. $14.00, an Elegant Set.

WE are IMPORTERS of Ten and Caffee. China and Coochery, and do the largest Ten and Caffee business in Bosom (direct with concessors). We also carry a large which and sell at the lowest possible Cash provide Diamon and Ten Sees. Silver-plained We ret. Lamps, also Large Cartains used Table Lipes how own importation. To those who take the library and related to get up (Sibbs of Ten, Caffee, Saiges and Extracts, we do not premiate the library has and cotter free and trailed the model invested and set a premiation and you got grade that are direct from the IMPORTERS. If you but Ten and Caffee from your graces you pay three or four provide and pay to a four-live in the largest stall value for the largest dealles in this country it was eladged from the relating proces showed a gradit of via pot company in the publishes at the paper will testify to our undoubted relatability. We do a business of green $100,000 yearly, and our Cash wides Ten and Caffee rates. Our filestrated Price and Premium Line tells the whole story. We like to mail it to all who write for it. It costs you action and Price and Premium Line tells the whole story. We like to mail it to all who write for it. It costs you action out will interest you. It is payer.

THE LONDON TEA CO... Still Washington Strant. Boston.

THE LONDON TEA CO., 81! Washington Street, Boston.

PERFECTION CASE TINS, how recover, False recoverd TACOMA Pour Count Court to Contract and Pour Count Court to Contract parties for fact parties before the Contract of Contract Court to Contract Court Cour

 Miss Parlia will at all times be glad, so far as she can, to answer in this Department all general domestic questions sent by her readers. Address all letters to Miss Maria Parloa, care of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, Philadelphia, Pa-

O most of us Christmas would seem incomplete were the green decorations left out. Even the poor woman who lives in one or two rooms in some dirty tenement house will save money enough to buy a few bits of holly. All sorts of evergreens are used sorts of evergreens are used to keep them in, it is best to buy the greens when they are first brought into the market, as they are then in the best condition.

As a rule, the branches of bolly that bene many berries upon them will not be so fresh and full of leaves as the others. Buy a few branches that are well filled with berries, then be generous with the greener branches. Pile all but a few as flat as possible, putting on top be generous with the greener branches. Pile all but a few as flat as possible, putting on top those having berries. Cover these with the plain branches, and the. When you get them home, sprinkle well and place on the cellar floor. They will keep fresh for a week or two. If you buy laurel, put the bunch in a pail of water and sprinkle; then place in the cellar. This is the most satisfactory green, as it will keep bright all winter if the water be changed every day and the leaves be showered generously at least once a week.

WHAT TO DO WITH CHRISTMAS GREENS

IT is best not to put up the decorations un-til the afternoon before Christmas. The halls, sitting-room, dining-room and library are the most appropriate places for the holly. Place large branches over mantels and side-board and some of the pictures. Fill the fire-places with large dishes containing holly and laurel, unless you are to have a fire at once haurel, unless you are to have a fire at once.

Have long sprays of English ivy in small wide mouthed bottles which can be hung behind picture frames. Twine the ivy around the supporting wires and the frames. Do not hang the greens near a fire or over a register. They carl and wilt very quickly when ex-Posed to dry heat.

At least a week before Christmas get at the At least a week before Christmas get at the florist's about fifty cents' worth of the green stuff called "Wandering Jew." This will fill several bowls and vases. Arrangeit gracefully in the various dishes, and fill with water. After wiping the outside of the receptacles perfectly dry, place on the corners of mantels, book-cases, etc. Change the water every other day. To do this do not disturb the plants; simply hold the vase under the faucet and let the fresh water run until all the old is displaced. In a week's time the vines will have grown into a graceful, luxuriant mass, and with care they can be kept in this condition for months.

for months.

for months.

Smilax, asparagus fern and other delicate vinea can be used for pictures and statuary, but the expense pats them out of the reach of the majority of people. There is a hardy wild fern which all florists keep now and sell for about ten cents a dozen sprays. Buy a few dozen of these and place them on the cellar thoor. Sprinkle well and they will keep for weeks. A large bowl filled with these and a few flowers will make an effective piece for the center of the dinner table; or, the bowl can be placed on a low table in any of the rooms. the rooms.

These suggestions are for people with modest

ONE WAY TO MAKE CHILDREN HAPPY

SINCE Christmas is so much the children's festival the woman who can make dainty things that will please the eye and the palate too, adds much to the pleasure of the little folks. With a few kinds of colorings that are harm-less and a plain ising she can make some very pretty cakes. Let her make a good cup cake, bake a part of it in two thin sheets and then add to the remainder candied almonds, cherries and apricots, all cut fine. Bake this in a sheet, having it about an inch thick. When this cake is cold it can be cut into triangular and square pieces and be ised with white and colored leing. While the icing is soft, sprinkle some of the candled fruits over it. Out one of the thin sheets of cake into two parts. Spread one half with some kind of jelly or jam and place the other half on this, pressing down firmly. Cut this into squares and then into triangles, and ice half with white scing and the rest with colored icing. Put a candied cherry on each piece that has white icing. The second thin sheet can be cut into squares, covered with white icing, and have a candied cherry placed on each corner. When the icing is bardened, short notices can be written in the center of the sales. Have a fine bringh and some melted chocolate for one part and the unbeaten yelk of an egg for the remainder. It pleases children to find their own names on a little cake, especially if there be a message also,

AN IMPORTANT DUTY OF THE HOUSEKEEPER

WITH the cold weather the duties of the When seems become more exacting, because so much depends upon the atmosphere of the house. In summer one lives out of doors a great deal; windows and doors are constantly open; there is no care as to the heating of the house; social duties are of a more informal character, and one takes life more easily. It is true one has to be more watchful of the food, because in bot weather it spoils so quickly; but this is not burdensome when every part of the house can be open to the fresh breezes. It is so important that the entire house should be kept sweet, well ventilated and properly heated that I need not apologize for devoting some space to these matters.

VENTILATION OF THE HOUSE

HEALTHFUL animal or vegetable life cannot be sustained without fresh air in plenty. At this season of the year we are apt to forget this, and keep our houses too carefully protected from the air. Living in rooms that have not a proper supply of pure air lowers the vitality and makes one feel the cold much more. It is an agree to think you cold much more. It is an error to think you can keep a house warmer without fresh air than with it. A thoroughly-aired room heats more readily than does the one where the is vitiated.

Air the sleeping rooms the first thing in the morning, no matter how cold the day. Have at least one window in one of the upper halls at least one window in one of the upper mans in which a ventilator can be placed; or, if that be inconvenient, have a strip of board about four or five inches long, which placeun-der the lower sash. This will give fresh air without a draught, and is a good way to ven-tilate sleeping rooms when one fears an open window. If the windows of the sleeping room be so arranged that the wind blows up-centile hed alone a serven near the bed. room he so arranged that the wind blows upon the bed, place a screen near the bed.
Always keep some rooms warm while the others are siring, and give them a thorough flooding with fresh air when the first rooms are comfortable. The house that is kept well ventilated and at a regular temperature throughout the winter will be much safet for occupancy by both sick and well people than the one where the bousekeeper has the mis-taken idea that she wastes the beat by open-ing her windows for at least a part of an hour in the morning, leaving a little corner where health and sweetness can steal in unobserved.

KEEPING THE PLUMBING SWEET

THE care of the plumbing is an important duty; yet, provided there be nothing wrong about the plumbing at the start, and the supply of water be constant and generous, this duty will not be found a hard one. The bousekeeper should impress upon the younger members of her family the importance of theroughly flushing the closets. She should at least once a day personally see to it that there is sufficient flushing. The best time for this is after the morning work is done.

The laundry tubs should be thoroughly riused after washing, being generous with the water, that no trace of suds shall be left in the pipes.

After the mid-day work is done, and again at night, the pipe in the kitchen sink should be thoroughly flushed with bot water, if possible. In case there be no hot water, be gen-erous with the cold. Once a week put half a piot of washing soda in an old sauce-pan and add six quarts of hot water. Place on the fire until the soda is all dissolved; then pour the water into the pipes, reserving two quarts of it for the kitchen sink.

Have an old funnel to use in the bath-tub and besine, that the hot soda may not touch any of the metal save that in the pipes. Particles of grease sometimes lodge in the sink pipe and cause an unpleasant odor. The hot soda dissolves this grease and carries it away.

Copperss will remove odors from drain pipes. Put one pound of the crystals in a quart bottle and fill up with cold water. Cock tightly and label. Write "Poison" on the label. Pour a little of this into the pipes whenever there is any odor.

I will say right here that if thorough flushing and an occasional use of the hot soda will not keep the pipes sweet there is something not keep the pipes swert there is something wrong with the plumbing, and it should be attended to at once.

It seems as if one need not caution people in regard to throwing Into closet or basin any substance that might clog the pipes, but it is because of ignorance or carelessness on the part of the people who me these conven-iences that much of the trouble with the pipes arises. Here are some of the things that should never have a chance to get into the pipes: hair, lint, pieces of rags, no matter how small; matches, fruit peelings, etc.

PROPER MANAGEMENT OF FIRES

THIS is the season of many fires, and for this reason, to many housekeepers, a sea-son of trials. A coal fire is like some people; it will stand a certain amount of nagging, pressure and neglect, but it will make you suffer in some way for all your abuse. On the other hand, with uniformly fair treatment, it will repay a hundredfold in comfort.

The demands upon the kitchen fire are va ried. Sometimes we want a very hot oven or surface, and again we must have only a moderate amount of heat. The degrees of heat must be regulated by the various checks and must be regulated by the various checks and draughts in the range, rather than by the use of a greater or less amount of coal. In the morning remove all the ashes and cinders. Put the shavings or paper on the grate loosely, and then put in the kindling wood, crossing the pieces, that there may be a free circulation of six. Once all the draughts and light the of air. Open all the draughts and light the fire. As soon as the wood begins to burn, put on some coal. Let the fire burn ten min-utes; then shut all the dampers, but keep open the draught in front of the fire. When the coal begins to burn well add enough fresh fired to come product to the top of the living of fuel to come nearly to the top of the lining of the fire-box. Keep the front draught open until all the coal has become ignited, but not until it becomes red hot. Now close the front draughts and the fire will be bot enough for anything you may want to do for hours to come. Should you want only a moderate heat there are checks with all modern ranges which enable you to make the combustion very slow. If greater heat be wanted, open the draughts, and in ten minutes you will have a glowing

These are the great secrets of always hav-ing a good fire when you want it: Do not let the coal burn to a white heat; when you do not require a hot fire, open all the checks; when you want a hot fire close the checks and open the draughts; and, of course, the moment there is no further need of a hot fire, close the draughts and open the checks again.

A fire built and managed in this manner can be used constantly for four or five hours.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE FURNACE FIRE

THE furnace fire should be shaken down A few shovelfuls of coal should be put on and A few shovelfuls of coal should be put on and all the draughts opened. The ashes should then he taken up. As soon as the coal begins to burn well and the fire looks clear at the bettom, put in enough coal to come almost to the top of the fire-pot. Keep the draughts open until all the gas has burned off; then close them, and later, if the fire be too hot, open the checks. Except in extremely cold wenther this is all the attention that ought to be necessary through the day. The fire must be raked down and fresh coal or cinders put on in the evening, but a small amount of coal will answer for the night, unless the draughts have been open the greater part of the day.

On an extremely cold day it may be necessary to have the draughts open a part of the time and some coal put on at noon.

All the clinkers should be removed when the fire is raked down in the morning. The water pan should be replenished at least once a day. Some careless people leave the ashes for a day at a time at the bottom of the furnace, where they absorb the heat, robbing the hoose of its share.

If the furnace fire be allowed to burn to a house of its share.

If the furnace fire be allowed to burn to a white heat it will be ruined for that day unless more coal be put on a little later. The cold-air boxes must admit enough air to drive the hot air through the house, but not more than can be bested.

Heating stoves and open grates are to be managed as far as possible the same as a fur-nace. With the stove there is no trouble, there being plenty of checks and draughts. The open grate is not so well provided.

CARE OF THE BATH-ROOM

THE bath room should have special atten-THE bath room should have special atten-tion daily, and once a week a thorough deaning. A woolen carpet is not desirable for this room. The floor may be of tiles, or of hard wood, stained or painted, or be covered with lignum or oil-cloth. Of course, there must be a rug or two. The Japanese cotton rug is cheap and pretty for this purpose; or, one can make rugs frem pieces of carpet. Each morning have the washbasin washed clean and the bowl in the water-closet washed. If the bath-tub has been used, have it washed

If the bath-tub has been used, have it washed and wiped dry. Dust the room, and hang the soiled towels where they will dry before being put in the hamper provided for such things.

Once a week give the room a thorough cleaning. Wash the toilet articles. Wash all the marble with scap and water, and if there be any spots that are not easily removed, put a little sand soap on the wash-cloth and rub the spot well. The bowl in the water-closet should have a good scrubbing with sand soap. Rub the bath-tub with whiting, wet with household ammonia, and then wash it with plenty of hot water and wipe dry.

Never use for the bath-tub sand soap or any substance that would scratch, unless it be an enamel tub, in which case no harm will be done. Clean the faucets with whiting. Take a long handled boot-buttoner and draw from a sogn annuel observations and a value to the waste pipes all the bits of lint that have gathered there. Dust the room and the floor, wiping very dry. Now lay down the rugs, which should already have been well beaten and sired.

WOOL WADDING FOR COMFORTERS

SUBSCRIBER asks where she can get A wool lining for comforters.

This is a much more expensive article than cotton batting, but it is very serviceable. It can be bought at a first-class dry-goods store, and is usually found at the lining coun-ter. It comes in sheets about a yard and three-eighths long. Two sheets are enough for a comforter. If only a thin covering be wanted one sheet will answer, as it can be split. The two lengths cost in colored wool $2.50, and in the white, $3.00, from which the excess of oil has been removed, Is absolutely pure and it is soluble. No Chemicals are mad in its preparation. It has more than three there the strength of Cocoa mixed with Starch, Arrowroot or Segar, and is therefore for more econumical, cooling less than one cents cup. It is delictous, non-ishing, strengthening, EastLY construe, and admirably scapted for invalids as well as for persons in bealth.

W. BAKER & CO.'S

Sold by Grocers everywhere. W. BAKER & CO., Dorchester, Mass.

"Best men oft are moulded out of faults." But the best cakes are moulded out of SELF-RAISING Buckwheat.

MORGAN" ODORLESS BROILER

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

BURNETT'S FLAVORING EXTRACTS

Are the only kind we have in stock.

ACKER, MERRALL & CONDIT.

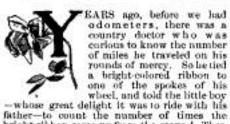

Dec. 24, 1890. New York.

Glace

SEND $1.50, $2.25 or $1.50 for a main-ple, put up to Japanese banket, and supplying the passions, Ori-

A Department devoted entirely to an interchange of ideas among our band of JOURNAL Address all letters to AUNT PATIENCE, care of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, 433-435 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa.

bright ribbon came up from the ground. Then it was easy to tell, with sufficient accuracy for his purpose, how many miles he node, by multiplying the circumference of the wheel by multiplying the circumference of the wheel by the number of times the bright ribbon came up.

In this good mouth of December is placed the bright mark which shows that one year has rolled around again. Happy are we if this blessed Christmas notes progress in the right direction. For movement is not always progress. Bid you ever see a locomotive wheel turn round and round on the track without moving the train forward an inch? I remember how, in one beautiful spot through which moving the train forward an inch? I remem-ber how, in one beautiful spot through which I often passed in the days of my girlhood, the brilliant leaves of autumn fell upon the rail-road track and made the rails so slippery that the engine could not go forward till sand was sprinkled upon them. So the mere fact that one glad festival has come again does not assure us that we have made any advance. Some of us neethors, have been too merry in assure us that we have made any advance.

Some of us, perhaps, have been too merry in the sunshing hour; some have struggled hard in the cloud and fog, but could not climb the steep and stony way. Whatever has been the past—however unsatisfactory—this is a blessed time when we may make a new start.

Unto us is come again in this sacred Christmas a Helper, who can not only strengthen us for the days to come, but can take from us the stain and the emptiness of the past. So, with gladness in our bearts, forgetting all that has vexed and hindered us, let us, with His strength, take up life with fresh vigor.

THE servant question is such a weighty one that we are sinking under it. Do tell as more of these blind cases who want work. The very thought of their wishing to work is a recommendation, for in my State, Tennesse, the servants expect wages, and then want to work when they please, and to do what they please. I cannot see look the blind can fill a servan's position; how can they dust, wall on the table, wash dishes and the many other detire about a bouse, whom skipt?

Fluxes let is hear from you on the most interesting subject. Oh! to think of faving competent servants, thus enabling one to read, and think about something beside housework.

M. E. C.

Till ANKS for your kind and encouraging words in the July number respecting blind girls in demestic service. As I am a newly adopted niero, please encourse me from putting muself or my kome on exhibition. Enough to say, that, although I am blind, I grades to look well to the ways of my feites, and in addition in the various tasks which I reserve for my own bands, I can, in an emergency, do almost anything essential in the considert of my family.

In avercoming difficulties, every blind woman has berough private methods. Usually much time and strength are saved by an occasional glance and word from some sessing person—il may be only a child.

We have all had glets in our kitchops who might be called diri-blind, "Where there's a will, there's a way," and, with a love for cleanliness, a scientific noqualitance with the chemicals and applications to be used, and with flort well-trained series, the average woman will even flad a way to make windows and clother clean.

I knew of a blind lady, the wife of a city physician, and mother of several small children, who does all her ewo bonesswork—except sume of the dradgery—and nee family scaling testion.

C. B. A.

Thank you for giving us this glimpase into

Thank you for giving us this glimpse into your home. It is not a merely idle curiosity which leads us to wonder how you manage your work. We are so helpless with our see-ing eyes closed that we cannot understand your powers.

I WOU, LD like to say a few words on the subject of weeken draping themselves in motoralay, hoping that when the alteration of the budges of sectory is called to it, they will use their wide influence in pathing an end to this barbatous credom.

that when the alleration of the budgers of sectory is callent to it, they will use there wisk indicators on pating an end to this buttatures cretices.

While there is consenting touching in the fittle hand of empereum is made and in the hand of empereum in the many made in the setting a woman robod in breve habiliments of wee. I know from conversation with many women that they have this the theoresisters best they have set the moral courage to break the sharkites of custom and declare themselves free from in bombany. When one dockness themselves free from in bombany. When one dockness themselves free from in bombany. When one dockness themselves free from its bombany. When one dockness themselves free county in the relative to some morphing for him. As if our grief was measured by the depth of our empereum its set in the set of the woman of the Niortee of the trainer to show her good sense or stopping it. How themselves is the thought that in the mides of our new grief we noted turn our alteration to proceeding these habous gainments for the fineral, and that, too, at an expense which many can but ill afford. What hours of we show the dead by giving our pretty colored clothing over to the mothe while we make surjective of not wearing the present spire of common intelligence, we beg the lenders of fishion in set the example of not wearing the present spire of moning, and in a short these the crision will be one of tradition only, become mark of herewever as the curviese, for a short for the reason of the stable and in a single and inexpensive; I at the curviese, for a thick we shrink from when our hearts are hierefully that for here as simple and inexpensive; I at the curviese job a which we shrink from when our hearts are hierefully that for

Just as in some places flowers, or a sheaf of whent, take the place of the old-fashioned weeper" on the door, so a more suitable nourning does takes the place of the heavy. glooney crape and the unwhalesome and hid - on well and we are grateful for the change.

A ND here, as the door opens, we see the "touching little band of crape" round a man's bat; and we case our chatting for a moment to hear in quietness a brother speak.

I AM a man, and therefore have no right to intrade upon the petvacy of your inner circle. But I am constrained to say, that to your effection This Labrics Hosia Jocussa to make the many dear wives, who look to you for coursel, impler in their hasbands and to their homes. I believe you are doing a work that will be owned and blossed in Heaven.

And I make bold to address you this letter, that I may send you the casy of a Bills posm which I have, and which, if it might dud a place in your widely-readingles, might be "light in the durkness" to many a troubled soil, and might out the heartrachs for the joyous and fortearing love that ence was.

My own young wife was faitely taken from me, and before love's first devotion had worn away comugh really to call such lines into requisition. But others who are privileged to live longer, though not so happily with the loved companion of their choice, will certainly first in this little poem a solution of many a trying crick in their filters.

The poem I sut from a samp of waste paper some years ago, and is exactly as I copy it.

A QUARREEL

A QUARREL

There's a knowing little prevert,
From the sensy land of Spain;
But in Northhand, as is Southland,
In its meaning clear said plain.
Look it up within your heart;
Nother lose nor lend it—
Two it takes to make a quarrel;
One can always end if.

Try it well, in every way, Still you'll find it true: In a fight, without a fixe, Pray what could you do! If the wrath is yours alone, Soon you will expend it— Two it takes to make a quarrol: One can always end it.

Let's suppose that both are weeth, And the strife begun; if one shall cry for "Peace," Soon it will be done. If but one shall span the breach. He will quickly belod it.— Two it takes to make a quarral; One can always end it.

WHY is it that beauty is so much more essential in woman than in man? Women strive for higher intellectual situatiments, and the way is open for them in do so. And yet, unless they add beauty to their list of secompilatizents, they are called "lishes strecking," —therally, strong-minded—and other correstic epithets. From the fays of our childbood so labor under peruliar deactromagns. We are told we enset and clind frees, jump floress, run races, play bad, or indulge in any other beauthful exercise, else we will be called "Tombolya," We must be, as the old trunsery rhyme telesus. "Cur mother's hady-get."

Is it a wooder that very few of us grow up with strong, healthy bedies, it frames for strong, vispertes minds," As we grow towards recomminded we are taught to dance gracefully; to sit and fold our little white lands; to "look up with a smile and look down with a sigh," as one of the sterner sex bendes e'er to with all the witchery of his irrestellible smile. What matters it that we may be brilliant conversationalists—our wit a sharper those as two-edged sweet? If we are plain, it is all for mangint, I have in mind, at I write, two selects. One, highly occumplished, a fine electricitist, and an after mentions. "Us frinnessly, however, she has not an attractive face, and lacks endirely the quality denoted style.

The other stater, extremely beautified, but with few accomplishments, is the favoritie of society.

"How beautiful at he one: How grift is the other?" is the comment upon them, with no reference to the noble work in which the side is engaged.

O, that word plain, it is all our little word of but five letters!

You exaggerate the trouble. Many a girl, this being because of a factor of but five letters!

You exaggerate the trouble. Many a girl. thinking herself plain, becomes self-conscious, and puts herself one side. Fuir faces attract men and women; but fair faces alone do not hold the affections or the attentions of men or women. There must be good qualities behind the beauty. To be sure, sweetness of temper and gentieness count with many men for more than intellectual attainments, and mere knowledge or skill will not please perma-nently. I believe that a fine spirit is more than a fair face, or a cultured mind; and I can assert, from many years of observation, that the women who have the strongest hold on men and women are the true and pure and loving bearts.

I HAVE charge of a guild of young ladder, beonly be sunder, whose ages are from differen to twenty years. They are mostly working its, and of moderate means. We are all communicates of the Protestant Spicers, and charge all resumments of the Protestant Spicers, and charge a large guild room, with a plane. Now, what to do to make the evenings pleasant for the gifts is one of any treather. In the summer we take little outlage, them that to them. We take our laster little outlage, them that to these. We take outlasted little outlage, then these to the sound we start his sampley afternoon, take the car to some distant point, find a charch and attend service. Many things one can find to do be summer; but what for the bidg winter evenings? I would like, for one thing, to find some good short stories be read, in one sitting. I like Mrs. Whistory is the story of the story of the long to read about. If you could find some bely for me. I whisk you would also be helping many a Sunday school teacher, who is trying to bely young people with hose event amusement.

You will find belastful suppositions.

You will find beloful suggestions, from time to time, in the Journal, about evening entertainments. The last (November) issue contained an entire page. Have you ever rend Mrs. Ewing's short stories.

BAVE been matried sever years, and my husband is list on alregal; be to an house treat with a good many faults. If fact out of patience with him I just suit of solutions of court inty own faults and I also being to sail it separate. Find we cannot be traily happy notices are belong to their last take all our troubles to 44 m. May 1. T. It.

NOT long ago I received a letter from a dear friend of mine to a little town in Texas. I wish I could send you the whole letter, but it is too long; I copy the part I think will interest our friends and sisters issest, and trust (if it is printed) "Janet" will read it and find ter let a little less hard in comparison.

Waltter's Wife.

"Ministers in these new countries have a hard time; my heart aches for their families, for they are educated and refined, and the love of the beautiful is as strong as in the older States, and but little here to grarify it.

"Just think: our minister at the most gets but six handred deliars a year, and with a wife and six week, levely calibrest, and the many calls a minister has to give, and give freely, too, you can see how the wife and little coses must be denied all but the bare necessities of life.

levely children, and the many cash a minister has to give, and give freely, too, you can see how the wise and fluthe cose must be denied all but the bare necessicles of life.

"Somehow I feel like writing you a little about what the church has had to do since I come been. We have always worshiped in a small room under the ledge room of the Masseas. All demoninations are free to use it, and affert, we (the Methodists) had service one storday in the month, and Sunday-school every Sanday: them, for two or three years, service twice a mostle; then the minister wasted to live here, as it was on the railroad and of eary across to other places; so we made a great effort and built a little parsenage of three rooms; not a room finished, lest rough boards inside, and only one room celled overbead. Now the time has come that we must have a boase of worship; and we have, by hard work, get finide enough together to pot up the frame, and finish on the outside; then it will have to wait until another crop is stade and sody to part to not led it, as it is in the white do something to get the parsonage more comfortable.

"We have one of the nicest and sweetest of ministers' wives, and I long to see her have more of the comforts of life. But the men are all interested in the church, and do not conspreted the fact that the little uncompitalning body inside the parsonage is giving part of her life is making the best of its roughness.

"I see it, and bong to do something, but can't see how, as yet. I am not a good poloneer; I like some of the comforts of life as i go along.

"Fancy yourself in a room of rough boards, except the Boar, open to the peak of the roof the best of an almost tropical summer beating down, and the ferrest which which the first and honding up a business for themselves and children in this new country.

"There are no plastered hones have among the common houses; all that are finished are ceiled with boards, then painted.

"There are no plastered hones had public-spirited, but are all making homes and building

We forget sometimes that, while business men choose ploneer life for the sake of what material improvement is to come to them and their children, ministers have no such expec-tation to help them endure present discom-forts. On the contrary, the probability is, that when the community is established in the comforts of success, the minister will have worn himself out in the hardships of his work, and a younger and stronger and more "interesting" man will be wanted. He must then betake bimself to another "frontier field" or to a place too poor to have a choice, and his wife and his children must struggle for a chance to live. That such children do live and do become noble and useful men and women is as true as it is straine. women is as true as it is strange.

I TOO, must answer "Anna Mary," I have been married over eight years and my instand has never spoken ose cross word to me, in house cleaning time nor at any other time, and I don't believe if it were necessary to have the whole boose sors up at each that it would make any difference with his temper, for he could see the reason for it as well as I can; he is not only pissason through it, but always willing to help in any way possible and will say, "I can't broable to cook much, for you are fired coosign without,"

8. A. M.

...

It is seeing together that makes it easy for people to live together. And it is sympathy and feeling, and not reason or judgment, which make the common sight possible. Two people may differ very much in judgment and yet be in thorough accord in the carrying out of plans for which one of them must be responsible.

I know of one remarkable example of a husband and wife so different in temperament that their tastes and objnious seemed oncosed:

that their tastes and opinions seemed opposed; but in matters where he naturally had the de-ciding to do, his wife was as cheerful a co-operator as if the course were of her own choosing, and he accepted her arrangements in her department, though with an occasional humorous protest. A more perfect union could not be, yet had it not been for the strength of the love which brought them into sympathy, there could scarcely be imagined greater cause for controversics and unhappy differences. And the strength of that love could not be weakened even by death.

. . . DEAR "M."—As I am near your age and have met with some of the difficulties you devidenced. I wish, my dest wisher, to tell you of my exparience of suffingerowment withouts teacher. I have derived the greatest benefit from reading about, as Annt Pathorecasty less you. But I did not improve satisfactority in pronunctation until I pursued the following plan: I periodomeed the word correctly twenty-five times, and used it correctly in several sentences. This I continued for two or three days, and after a lange of time reviewed my lesson. I kept in not of the words I sudded. I found it setvisable to take so more than two or six weeds a day, and not more than two or six weeds a day, and not more than two or an alone, as two in the morning, two at more, etc. I then had plenty of time to think of them, and this constant repetition became, as it were, a part of one. I have nise found the followings of great help:

"Woods and Their Dess," by flictuari Grant White; "The Orthopist," by Alfred Ayres. "The Orthopist," I would not be without.

A Section Flow with a plant of the most of the section of the section of the continued of the section.

books you commend are very useful.

You certainly made a wise plan, and the

. . Do not say you are too busy, or too sad, or too poor to make some Christmas cheer for your children. "Bread and cheese and kisses" are a feast, and the Christ-child will bless a meagre tree which is draped with love. You will grow glad, my dear sister, in the doing of the simple things; your ingenuity quickened by desire will suggest surprises, and you will maryel at the case with which you accomplish

And if your home is full of joy and your ourse heavy with coin, send the light of Christmas into every pinched and darkened home you can reach.

For "we who have light, we must make our light brighter, and thus show our love to Thee, Lord, for Thy gift," With loving greetings, and a happy Christ-

Aunt Patience

RESCUED AT LAST.

A Hard Struggle to Save the Lives of Two Little Children.

When our baby was about three months old," said Herman Lasher, proprietor of Hetel Rockton, Little Falls, N. Y., "he was reduced to just skin and bones. He had not strength enough to ruise his eyelids, and, hence, was unable to see.

"At that time I was living on my farm, about three miles from Middleville. One day my wife and daughter thought the little fellow was dying, and I started at once for a physician, who sent me back with a box of lactated food. We succeeded in getting him to take it, from that time on he lived on this food, and has grown to be a strong and healthy boy. We certainly owe his existence to lactated food."

Тик Мактеля Новгово

The beautiful children whose faces are shown above, testify in their sturdy health to the great good of lactated food. In regard to the younger, their father, Mr. R. Hosford, Danville, younger, their father, str. E. Hossoru, Danvine, Ill., writes: "From the first day of our use of lactated food, we could see its merit. Baby did not throw up its food as it did when we used other preparations which we tried in vain."

"A babe of fourteen months was so run down and weak that it could not sit up alone.

Intelligent and careful parents who are for-tunate enough to know of inclated food, will not permit their children to be without it. It is a preventive of cholers infantum and bowel troubles, and is a perfect food that makes and keeps the little ones healthy, happy and Lactated Food is sold by drugglets, or mailed on receipt of price; Seta, Sects., 81.06. Interesting book of "Price Bahise." and handscome hirthday used free to any mother sending baby's name.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & Co., Burflegton, Vt.

THE BABY'S DELIGHT EXERCISING MACHINE

ts an invainable aid to every mother. It amines the baby and at the same time gives hint an exercise that is highly beneficial; strengthens his limits: prevents bow-legs; teaches blin to walk and gives him a general strength and vigor that will go far to ward off all infantile diseases.

PRICE, $3.00. REND FOR CINCULARS.

THE WILDER MAN'F'G CO., - Salem, Mass.

"PARTED BANG." Mide of neural CURLY MAIR guaranteed becoming to lating who went their partial. Si up, according to the act of the preparation, 82. But Goods, Co. Barrier, etc., Sent C. G. D. may be not rather hands and the manufacture for Illustrated party from E. H.E. H.M. S. State St. Contract Name Hall, Chicago.

A RELIABLE WOMAN

Wanted in every trianty to establish a Corset Pariot for the sale of Dr. Nichole' Celebrated Spiral Spring Corsets and Classes. Wages 480 in 45 per month, and expenses. We furnish complete stock as recoignment settlements meetably; 81 sample Corset free, Send Petrits postage for sample and terms.

NiCHOLS MFG. CO., 378 Canal St., New York.

SELF-THERADING NEEDLES. Blad down on Act.

NEW ENGLAND CONSERVATORY
OF MUSIC Founded by & EBEN TOURIÉE.
Call Parill EL EN Therefor.
Gives Unequalled Facilities for Thorough and Bystematic Instruction in all departments of Music, the Fine Arts, ric. at very reasonable rates. A Bafe and Comfortable Home for Lady Puolls. Special Provisions for Beild Help offered to prospective punits who are reedy and talented and who can turnish satisfactory references. For full information address. Frank W. Hale, Gen'i Monager, Franklin Sq., Soston.

METROPOLITAN COLLEGE OF MUSIC,

NEW YORK CITY.

Leading Musical Institute of America.

Dudley Buck, Albert Ross Pursons, H. R. Palmer.

Emilio Agramonte, Harry Rowe Shelley, Geo. M.
Greene, Charles B. Hawley, Ciliford Schmidt, H. D.

Hanchett, M. D., Sumner Salter, Edwin Gordon Lawrence, Etelks Utaset, are among the distinguished members of the Faculty. Boarding Department for Indies, Circulars on application. Address M.W. Greene.

Soct'y and Trens., 19 and 21 E. 14th St., New York.

GRAHAM'S Is known everywhere as Briefest and Best; used by the best Beporters; taught in the best SHORTHAND Schools. In pury, 58 for through mounts. Typewriting included.
A. J. WESHAR, 188 Requires, S. Y.

SHORT-HAND Send for Catalogue of Books and helps for self-instruction by HENN PITMAN and JEROME B. HOWARD, 16THE PHONOGRAPHIC INSTITUTE, CINCINNATI, 6810.

CINCINNATI CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC. Miss Clark Baux, Directress. Established 1867.
Ladies from a distance may board in the Conservatory, where they are under the personal supervision of the Directress. Stadens may enter at any time. For catalogue, address Miss Cl. ARA BAUR, Cincinnati, Ohio.

SHORTHAND they'ly taught by mail in THREE Smonths. No shading no position, connective vowel method. Persin Shorthand Institute, Detroit, Mich.

SHORT-HAND thoroughly taught "by mail." and first five lessons. Circulars free. Book PITMAN COLLEGE, - Box 404, fit. Louis, Mo.

HOW SHALL THE CHILDPEN PASS THE SABBATHS

This cut represents a Temple, printed in altractive colors, soomted on 1 in board, and dissected into 8 pieces. Size this 2 is in the trends of the Bala, with number of chapters in each vock, form the structure. On the reverse tide is the map of Palestine. Nothing can be more entertaining and instructive for children on the Sabath. Even very young chalten only being the trends of the prominent chergy men and small provided the prominent chergy men and small provided to temple before they can appreciate insured in the small provided to temple before they can appreciate insured. It is endograted by prominent chergy men and smally school workers. It commends itself to every an appreciate insured in the control of the co

Proce BISHOF JOHN H. VINCENT, D.D., LI.D. CHAPTACACA, N. Y., July 15, 1881.

"The Tempts of Knowledge is a very ingestions device, it think it would be an admirable help in early house. Yours faithfully, Address JOHN B. VINCENT."

ALICE J. CHAMBERLAIN, GALESBURG, ILL.

BRUSH STUDIES

CLOSTRATED with COLORED PLATES by LIDA CLARESON, is the Leading Feature of INGALLS' HOME AND ART MAGAZINE. Other popular departments are EAST LESSONS IN ART, HOUSE-BOLD DECORATION, CHINA PAINTING, DOMESTIC HELPS FOR THE HOME, THE KING'S DACISTERS, YANCY WORK AND ARTISTIC NOVELTIES, CORRESPONDENCE. ANWERS TO QUARTER, etc. Each sampler is shedy ILLESTRATED. Subscribers keep the Magazine as a Text Book for future reference. Single copies 13 cests; $1.00 per year.

LIDA CLARKSON'S

Easy Lessons in Drawing and Painting.

First and Second Series. Price. Scents each. Every one delay, or wisiding to de, DRAWING or Painting should own these Books are prentical the INSTRUCTIONS are so plain that a children understand and use them. We will send BOTH of these books.

FREE I to any one sending us 35 cents Ingalls' Home and Art Magazine.

Address J. F. INGALLS, Lynn, Mass.

ORPHEA MUSICAL BOX

to the Latest Invention in Swiss Musical Boxes.

They are the sweetest, most complete, durable, and perfect Musical Boxes made, and any number of tunes can be obtained for them. Also a complete line of all other styles and since from 2 cits, to since.

The Largest Mock in America. The most appropriate wedding, anniversary, and holiday present. No Musical Box can be Guaranteed to wear well without Gaugachi's Safety Tune Change and Check, Fast, in Swiftnersland and in the U.S. Gen. Agenta Concert Organs. Send stamp for Prices.

Old Music Boxes carefully Repaired and Improved.

DALITO CHILL. 0. OCALO. 1020 CHESTMIT ex-

GAUTSCHI & SONS, 1030 CHESTNUT ST.

SELL MUSIC a liberal Bal.

Woodward's Musical Monthly. Send Surrouts and re-ceive sample copy with fre complete pieces of latest score and dustramental trust. Aftern Bep'l E. Woodward's MISHAL SURTHLY, MS Benefery, Ser York,

MUSIC SALE to reduce our stock of mineric we will send by we will send by posses full send posses and grant full send posses full send pos

AGENTS WANTED for nur new book, Child's Life of Outfit misted on receipt of Sc. Address NATIONAL PUBLISHING COMPANY, Chicago, 10.

O BEAUTIFUL CHRISTMAS CARDS and sample copy of St. Louis Magazine for IOC This quality cards sell in all pterce for it ets IOC such J. Gillmore, 95 Olive M., St. Louis, Mo.

TWO ENTIRELY DIFFERENT THINGS

TO YOUNG AUTHORS WHO ARE UNCONSCIOUSLY INJURING THEIR PROSPECTS OF LITERARY SUCCESS

BY EDWARD W. BOK

says: "Some critical friends to whom I have submitted this pronounce it excellent"; or,
"My family and all my friends have complimented this year highly." very highly. Or, again, some one will say," A literary (or editerary (or editeral) friend, whose critical judgment is acknowledged by the public, has read and enthusiastically praised this." After a while, the manuscript comes back to the author, and she rises in wrath, not to those "critical friends," her "family and friends," or the "literary friend," but to the editor. The judgment of the former is undisputed; it is the editor who is at fault, and cannot appeared as evol who is at fault, and cannot appreciate a good thing when he sees it.

Now, my friends—and I am talking to hundreds with sore little spots in their hearts towards me—let me give you a few words of plain, every-day common sense. When you send a manuscript to an editor, don't tell him these things. They have no more influence with him than has water on a duck's back. This sounds a little hard, doesn't it? But, nevertheless, it is true—very true. Use a little common sense and figure it out for yourself. No matter how good a literary judgment your family or your friends may have, what do they know of a certain editor's policy? What do they know of the magazine's needs? They may know something of literary standards; they may be able to pass upon your style, the accurracy of your expression, the interest of your article. All these things they may know, and know perhaps better than does the editor—although from some of their recommendations I am inclined to doubt it. But that your article is just the one for which the editor to whom you send it is looking, they do not know. Neither do they know but that the editor has accepted an article on the same subject as yours a week before, and yours is therefore useless to him. Or, that he may have under ject as yours a week before, and yours is there-fore useless to him. Or, that he may have under order an article on the same topic. These things your friends do not know; the editor does. Be charitable, and give him credit for knowing a little. If he didn't know what he wanted he couldn't hold his position. Editors are not engaged to ornament publishing offices.

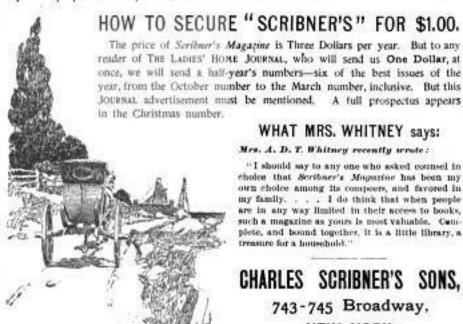

A NOTHER thing: your own family and friends are the poorest critics in the world to you. Their love for you makes them blind, renders them partial, and their opinion prejudiced. You may be sensitive, and they, well knowing that fact, would not tell you that your article was bad even if they felt it to be a glaring fact. The "literary friend" is no better, be he critic, publisher, editor or what not—unless you submit your manuscript to him for publication in some magazine with which he is connected. Then, if your manuscript is so good as you tell me he says it is, why did he not keep it for himself? The editor is proverbially generous, but his generosity does not extend to that point where he allows a good manuscript to pass him to some other editor. That isn't human nature, and, strange as it may seem to many, editors are human.

I't may seem to you the strangest thing in the world to have your manuscript receive the praise of friends and family, and then re-ceive the rejection of the editor. It seems strange to you because you look at it from one side; if you could look at it as does the editor. perhaps you wouldn't think it so very strange. The wonder would be more how your manu-The wonder would be more how your manuscript ever reached a reading, if you could see the mass of material which daily and hourly pours into an editorial office. An editor is more often the friend of the author than he is his enemy. I know some writers may find this very difficult to believe. But it is so, nevertheless. A young author cannot realize this at first. He finds it out as he goes along, knows more of editors and understands their methods better. I do not write all this in defense of the editor; rather, to make his position a little clearer, if possible, to those who are just stepping into the literary arena. To mis-construe the position of the editor, or blindly question his judgment, never helps an author And, as I close, let me say these few words:

NSTEAD of going to your family or your I friends for an opinion on your manuscript, be your own critic. Every man or woman in the world knows when he or she does a good thing, and where there is one who does not that one was never cut out to be an author Use your own critical faculties. He unsparing of yourself. Then, send your article out into the world, to the editor of that periodical for which you think it is best suited. But don't piu to it your father's indusement, your nother's pruse, your sister's opinion, your friend's recommendation. Save that ink for your next manuscript. Don't waste your time telling editors what they ought to do, or what some one else blinks they should do. What your friends think of your manu-script, and what the editor thinks of it, are two entirely different things, and, take my word for it my frietal it never pays to con-series of articles on the life of the people in great cities and their improvement, with a special view, of course, to the condition of the poor, and the means that are now on trial or may be taken to improve it. It is proposed to make a series on a scale never before attempted, and written by authorities so high in their respective fields that the plan will appeal to all civilized people everywhere. The work will not be confined to the cities of the United States, but will touch upon the chief places where a study of the situation will be helpful for purposes of comparison, as for their own intrinsic interest.

WHAT MRS. WHITNEY says:

Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney recently serute:

"I should say to any one who asked counsel in choice that Scribner's Magazine has been my own choice among its compeers, and favored in my family. . . . I do think that when people are in any way limited in their access to books, such a magazine as yours is most valuable. Cemplete, and bound together, it is a little library, a treasure for a household."

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS,

743-745 Broadway, NEW YORK.

HARPER'S BAZAR FOR 1892.

HARPER'S BAZAR is a journal for the home. HARRER'S BAZARIS a journal for the home. It gives the latest information with regard to the Fashions; its numerous illustrations, Paris designs and pattern-sheet supplements are indispensable alike to the home dress-maker and the professional modiste. No expense is spared to make its artistic attractiveness of the highest order. Its bright stories, amusing comedies and thoughtful essays satisfy all tastes, and its last page is famous as a budget of wit and humor. In its weekly issues everything is included which is of interest to women. The Scrinks for 1892 will be writsues everything is included which is of interest to women. The Scrials for 1892 will be written by Walter Besant and William Black.
Mrs. Oliphant will become a contributor.
Marion Harland's Timely Talks, "Day In and Day Out," are intended for matrons, and Helen Massall. North, will specially address girls. T. W. Hioutsson, in "Women and Men," will please a cultivated audience.
Questions of etiquette and ceremony, and inquiries about dress, are fully treated in the department of "Answers to Correspondents."

Mrs. Candace Wherler will tell people how to beautify their homes, in a series entitled "The Philosophy of In-door Decoration." Mary C. Hungerord's articles on Fancy-Work will appear regularly.

Mary E. Wilkins, Kate Urson Clark, Octave Thanet, Harrier Prescott Sportor, Louise Spockton, and others, will furnish brilliant short stories.

FORD. LOUISE STOCKTON, and others, will furnish brilliant short stories.

Plays and farce-consedies for amateur performances will be written by Grack Lavingston Furness, Katharine Loring Van Cott, and W. G. Van Tassell Sutphers.

Dr. Mary T. Bessell and Christine Termuse Herrice, will tell mothers how to care for children in health and in sickness. Useful cooking receipts will be given in great variety. Women's Clubs will be frequently reported. riety. Women's Clubs will be frequently re-ported.

The last page has a national reputation as a compendium of wit and humor, enlisting among its illustrators McVickar. Hype, Stern ER, Frost, SMEDLEY, and other eminent artists

TERMS FOR HARPER'S PERIODICALS.

Produge Fere to all Subscribers in the United States, Canada, and Mexico.

HARPER'S BAZAR, per Year, $4 00 HARPER'S MAGAZINE, per Year, $4 00 HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE, " 2 00

Bookselfers and Postmarters usually receive subscriptions. Subscriptions near direct to the publishers should be accompanied by Post-office Money-cloder or Bradt. When no time is specified, subscriptions with the current number.

Address: HARPER & BROTHERS, FRANKLIN SQUARE, N. Y.

The correct Writing Papers for society, foreign and every-day correspondence are BOSTON LINEN, BOSTON BOND, and BUNKER HILL.

Superior in quality, modernte to price. If your dealer does not keep them, and us your address and see add forward you our com-plete assiples free.

BAMUEL WARD CO., Bid it Franklin St., Roston, Mass.

ANCDON 2153 Seventh Avenue ART STATIONER.

WEDDING & SOCIETY PAPERS, Engraving and Stamping of the Highest Order.
Our leader on "Secrety Blattmers," with book showing specimens of magnating and Managing on the large in papers, and Principles upon Sequent. Attack designs, Creeks and Managing.

THE KINDERGARTEN. A Monthly for Home and behold before lessons, stories occupations. $1.56 a year. Sumple copies, 6 re-Alfre B. Stockham & Co., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

GOMPLETE NOVELS FREE

Upon receipt of Twelve Cents
In postage council we will send Twe
In postage council we will send Twe
Francia's those Journals. For Three Months, and to each efficient for with also send. Free one pose-part, 10 Popular Navula, relations of which is political completion near grange let Serm, as believe: Jo John Power, by B. L. Farguer, The Search Coven, by Clara Assantia. Her Manifest Dandey, My Ammada M. Svanica ; A Falso Seed. by Mrs. Advancedy; The Amenda M. Svanica ; A Falso Seed. by Mrs. Advancedy; TolAmenda M. Svanica ; A Falso Seed. by Mrs. Advancedy; TolAmenda M. Svanica ; A Falso Seed. by Mrs. Advancedy; TolAmenda M. Svanica ; A Falso Seed. by Mrs. Advanced;
In the first settled of " Data Thornes"; Jodewa, by Mrs. Jone G.
Institut Palsoling Assances and Am In S. Septems, 10 Assances Institute Mrs. The Propositive Hosen Journals; is a larger of the population of Mrs. Propositive Hosen Journals; is a larger of the population of Seathward Hosen and Bandley space, Tree with weight and Short Seathward Hosen Journal of Relative twenty Land and Assances and Hosen and Departments for the Seathward Hosen Seathward Hosen Seathward Departments for Seath Hosen Seathward and Band. Mary J. Holmer bows for all matters by Mrs. Seathwards and Band. Mary J. Holmer bows for want 100,000 are true to the state; paper published for seath of the Hosen Seathwards and Band. Mary the party published with the true merceip as and an art settled to we again to retary fair residue seath and mars in a suprament of Mrs. Mrs. Seathwards with the true merceip as and an art settled to we again to retary fair residue seath and mars was a seathward to we again to retary fair residue seath and mars was a seathward was again to retary fair residue seath and mars was a seathward to we mark to retary the with the true merceip has and, and to the two mars.
We refer to the retary of the Mrs. Mrs. T. M. LUPTON.
Publishing, 100 & 108 Hosen Bernett. Sermatic Appense and to any newspaper published in New York Corr as to one reliability. Address. F. M. LUPPON, Publishers, 196 & 168 Roads Street, New York.

GUITAR THE DIGHT COUNTY GOOGLE

This Department is under the editorship of EBEN E. REXFORD, who will take pleasure in answering any question regarding flowers and floriculture which may be sent to him by the JOURNAL readers. Mr. REXFORD asks that, as far as possible, correspondents will allow him to answer their questions through his JOURNAL Department. Where specially desired, however, he will answer them by mail if stamp is inclosed. Address all letters direct to EBEN E. REXFORD, Shiocton, Wisconsin.

IN DECORATING A CHURCH

N decorating a church for Christmas, bear in mind that fine effects do not depend so much on the quantity of flowers used as on the man-ner in which they are ar-ranged. A few flowers and plants in the hands of a per-son of artistic taste, and with a good eye for color-effects, will give excellent results, while a great quantity of flowers arranged by persons deficient in these respects, will never give satisfaction. Good taste and judgment are quite as important as flowers.

A RTISTIC effects do not depend on elabo-rate designs. Last year I was in a little country church where pine branches and country church where pine branches and Mountain Ash berries were the only materials used, and there was no attempt at elaborate work; simply branches of good size fastened here and there where there seemed to be a place prominent enough to make it suitable for decoration, with great clusters of the fruit showing through the dark-green leaves. The altar, or pulpit rather, was not "banked." A large branch was used, fastened at an upper corner, and falling across the front till it rested on the floor, with the scarlet berries lighting on the floor, with the scarlet berries lighting up the somber foliage as effectively as any flowers could. The result was charming in its simplicity. A more formal and studied scheme of decoration might have resulted in complete failure with the material used.

In decorating a church, do not wait until the afternoon before Christman, and then get at the work in hand in a haphazard fashion, trusting to a happy inspiration which generally fiels to come, when wanted, for satisfactory results. Appoint a committee to see to the work, and let it decide on some scheme of the work, and let it decide on some scheme of the satisfactory. decoration. When it has made a decision, fall to with a will, and help it work out its plans, to with a will, and help it work out its plans, but never hamper or annoy it by constant sug-gestions of changes which you may think would be improvements. In this, as in other things, too many cooks spoil the broth. If the committee possesses ordinary taste, and thinks out a definite scheme before beginning operations, the chances are that the church will present a far more pleasing ameanunce will present a far more pleasing appearance than it would be likely to if all the young people in the neighborhood came together without a plan to work on, and suggestions from everybody were received, and an attempt made to carry them out.

WHEN plants are used about the alter, and you have but few, do not set them close together, but cover the pots and fill in between them with Florida moss or something similar, colored a dark green. This will make a good background for foliage and flowers, and hide the open space.

If you have few flowers, do not scatter them. Rather concentrate them. Use them at the principal point where decoration of this kind is desired, say on or in front of the altar or pulpit. A dozen roses, or as many clusters of geraniums, will be effective when grouped together, but scatter them and the effect will be weak and this. weak and thin.

DON'T undertake more than you can carr out well. Elaborate decorations are all right in the hands of experienced persons who have plenty of material to work with, but in the ordinary church, where the expense of elaborate decorations cannot well be afforded, and the "experienced" person is generally lacking, pretentions designs are all wrong. Therefore, let simplicity, which is always ar-tistic, govern you in making beautiful the house of God at Christmas time.

WHEN flowers or other bright decorations W are hard to obtain, a most pleasing substitute is afforded by the comes of pine or Norway spruce. These, in their natural color, are very pretty, but their effect can be greatly heightened by bronzing or gilding them. The fiquid gold paints sold by all dealers in artists goods, are cheap, and produce good results. Apply two costs, so that the cone will be well apply two cuts, so that the cone will be went overed. A cluster of them, shining against a background of dark-guen, will stand out brilliantly by lamp-light. For a good deal of the decorative work about arches over the altar, the decorative work about arches over the altar, and in the making of crosses and similar de-signs, they are much preferable to flowers or fruit, as they are more in harmony with the evergreens among which they are used. Pro-vided your gilding is good, most pleasing re-sults can be secured by giving comes such a covering. Try it and you will be sure to be pleased with this new method.

FORCING THE EASTER LILY

ANY complaints come to me of failure in the cultivation of the Bermuda Easter Lily in pots. In most cases of failure the reason is apparent-plant is not under-stood by the amateur floriculturist.

stood by the amateur floriculturist.

I generally plant two or three good-sized bulbs in a ten-inch pot. I fill the pot about half full of a compost of loam, turfy matter and old manure, in equal parts, adding enough sand to make it open and porous, being careful, of course, to provide good drainage. On top of this compost, which should at first only half fill the pot, I place the bulbs, and then put soil enough over them to just cover them. This I press down quite firmly about them, and then water thoroughly, and set the pots away in a cool and rather dark corner and wait for the bulbs to start. As soon as they begin to throw up stalks, I bring them to the light, and as fast as the stalks shoot upward I add soil to that already in the pot, until it is add soil to that already in the pot, until it is full. Why do I do this? Because the roots of the plants are sent out from the stalks im-mediately above the bulbs, and in order to give them an opportunity to furnish necessary sup-port to the statks, they must be provided with earth in which to grow. I seldom find it nec-essary to furnish sticks to support the stalks when grown in this way. Unless this is done, the stalks often break over at their junction with the bulb.

the stalks often break over at their junction with the bulb.

Much depends on the bulbs you get. There are several grades. Some are small; some are inferior in quality; the best ones are three inches or four across, plump, and with a heavy feeling which shows that they are full of storest-up moisture, which denotes vitality. While the small bulbs will generally bloom if treated properly, they will seldom give more than two or three flowers, while the larger ones will often give as many as six, eight, or than two or three flowers, while the larger ones will often give as many as six, eight, or ten. They cost a little more, it is true, but they are worth the difference in price. A plant bearing one or two flowers is beautiful, but when you come to see a stalk crowned with a great cluster of blossoms, the effect is so much finer that you consider the extra money you paid for the large bulb well invested. If I could have but one flower for winter use, it would be the Bermuda Lily, as, with proper treatment, it is sure to bloom well, and all who have seen a good specimen in full flower will readily admit that there can be nothing more beautiful.

A GOOD FUCHSIA WORTH TRYING

E Storm King Fuchsia, which was so largely advertised some three or four years ago, had a remarkable sale which proved how popular this flower was, but ninety-nine out of every hundred who bought it failed atterly with it, judging from the complaints which came in. I succeeded in getting plants to bloom, but I never succeeded in getting on plants to brow well and I am our ting one plant to grow well, and I am con-vinced that the reason of failure was, in order to supply the great demand, the florists forced the plants in their efforts to obtain stock the plants in their chords to dottain stock enough to supply the trade, and consequently their plants were lacking in vitality.

Madame Van Der Strass, which closely re-sembled it in color and form, was a great im-provement, being more robust, but still it was not satisfactory in all respects. Last year a new variety was sent out under the name of Mrs. E. G. Hill, and great claims were made A small plant was sent me, and I gave it a good trial, and I am glad to say that at last we have a variety of Fuchsia having a last we have a variety of Fuchsia having a double white corolla, which I think I can safely recommend to the amateur who has tried Storm King and found it wanting. Mrs. Hill has a stordy, upright habit of growth, and is a free bloomer, and grows well under ordinary conditions, which is something Storm King would not do; indeed, the variety under consideration seems to have all the good qualities reculiar to such old and standard sorts as: ities peculiar to such old and standard sorts as Convent Garden White, Black Prince and others of that class.

Its flowers are very large, quite as large in many instances, as those of Phenomenal, the well-known variety having a double purple corolla, but quite similar in shape and habit to Mrs. Hill. In order to grow any Fuchsia well, it must be given proper treatment, and proper treat-ment consists in giving a soil of leaf-mold, if possible, with some turfy matter and sand mixed in good drainage, a half shaded loca-tion, plenty of water at the roots and overhead, when in a growing condition, and frequent shifts as the roots fill the old pots.

Never neglect to water, as one layer of this sort will often spoil a whole season's work.

NEW WINTER-BLOOMING CANNAS

WO of the Cannas of last year's introduction have proved to be excellent winter-bloomers. They are Star of '91 and Madame trozy. The Star of '91 is a dwarf grower, seldom reaching a height of more than two and a half or three feet when grown in pols. Its flowers are borne in large panicles or spikes, and are of most brilliant scarlet, touched with pure gold at the edge and in the center of the petals. Its foliage is a rich green, and the striking effect of the large clusters of vivid flowers borne well above the broad leaves is something that must be seen to be appreciated fully. As a decorative plant I know of nothing of recent introduction that can equal it. It is of the easiest cultivation in pots. A large root should have at least an eight, better, a ten-inch pot to grow in if the plant is expected to do its best, and after the pot becomes lilled with roots it will be advisable to apply liquid manure at least once a week to keep it in good condition. As soon as a flower-stalk has developed all its flowers, out it off close to the leaves. It is characteristic of this plant that new shoots are conout it off close to the leaves. It is character-istic of this plant that new shoots are con-stantly being thrown up if given good soil and proper treatment, hence its constant-flowering qualities. Give good drainage, and a compost of loam well enriched with thoroughly rotted of loam well enriched with thoroughly rotted cow-manure, or, in case this is not at hand, use bone meat. Add some sand to lighten the loam, and water well, daily. Shower the foliage often to keep down red spiders which sometimes attack it.

Madame Crozy has very large flowers of a rich vermillion, bordered with yellow. In habit of growth and flowering it is very much like the variety first described, and makes a good companion for it.

For greenhouse decoration no finer plants

For greenhouse decoration no finer plants could be selected. They have that peculiar brilliancy of color in the flower that lights up all plants with which they come in contact. For grouping, where broad effects are desired, they compare the property of the contact. they are unequalled.

AS A WORD OF CAUTION TO YOU

THE TRICKS PRACTICED BY SOME DEALERS TO HUMBUG FLORAL LOVERS

Y this time it would seem as if the tricks of the tree-peddler ought to be pretty well understood from the frequency with which he has been shown up, but from letters that come to me it seems that he is still abroad in the land, selling tree-roses which are warranted to bear flowers of several different colors on the same bush, climbing lilles and other wonderful and tous, climbing lilles and other wonderful and rare plants, and it seems that there are always plenty of persons who are ready to take the tempting bait on his book, notwithstanding the fact that they have been warned against him time and again. When I get letters from these people, I take a kind of savage delight in thinking how they got swindled, for most of them confess that they ought to have known better.

But many get swindled quite as had who purchase from the catalogue of prominent dealers. Last season a plant was sent out by several florists under the name of Rose vine, or double Morning Glory, with a glowing description of its beauty. I quote: "This is a hardy perennial, sending up, every spring, long graceful vines which throughout the entire summer are perfect wreaths of lovely rose-colored flowers. It is simply magnificent, and no cut or description can begin to do it justice. One of the grandest acquisitions of late years. No garden is complete without it."

Now, the fact is, this vine is the old and troublesome weed which farmers in many localities have fought against for years, Calystepia pubescess. Some correspondent of this stepic pubercoss. Some correspondent of this department made mention of it recently, and that mention called out the following letter from George 8. Conover, the veteran and well-known horticulturist:

A short time since I noticed in THE LADIES' Home Journal a word of enution from some correspondent regarding Calusteria pubescens. It was timely. I have wondered that there has been no more protests made about the introduction, or, rather, the redissemination of this plant. It was finely figured, strongly admitted and highly commended in the catavertised and highly commended in the cata-logues of some of our most prominent seed and plant men, last spring, under various high-sounding names. Though the flower is pretty enough, the plant soon becomes a vile nuisance. When once established, it is almost pretty enough, the plant soon becomes a vise nulsance. When once established, it is almost if not quite impossible to get rid of it, as it makes underground shoots, sometimes for quite a distance, and will break or grow at every joint. I had it forty years ago, and its habits soon made it a nuisance, and for twenty years I tried to get rid of it, but when I left the old place I left plenty of it behind me. I would as soon think of planting couch or quack grass, and it seems to me that reputable dealers ought to fully test and understand such thines before attempting to make a run on things before attempting to make a run on them. Very truly yours, "Grouge S, Conovers."

Mr. Couver does not say what he well knows to be the truth, that many of these dealers knew quite as well as he does all about the habits of this plant. But it would not do to tell the whole truth about it for that would injure its sale. In some—or most—branches of business, this would be called dishonesty.

Apics inbries, or Tuberous-rooted Wisteria, is another weed which proves extremely difficult to get rid of when once introduced, but the dealers are careful to not say anything about this. Enterprise is a good thing, but when one gets to be so very entergrising that he takes up any old plant that has been read out of the list of desirable ones for good and suffi-cient reasons, and hides its true character under a new name, and so describes it that it will be sure to dupe people into buying it, it strikes the average man that it is carrying enterprise a little too far.

"HOW BEST TO HEAT OUR HOMES"

A pamphlet full of valuable information for those considering the question of comfort for the coming Mailed Free on Application.

Send postal mentioning THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL and you will get one & promptly.

GURNEY HOT - WATER HEATER COMPANY.
MAIN OFFICE: 163 Franklin St., Seston.
HRANCHES: New York, 71 John St.; Chicago, 47 Seath Canal St.; Philadelphia, 246 Arch St.

CHOICE DECORATIVE PLANTS From the Tropics of the World.

From the Tropics of the World.

The Christmas season is approaching, and among the decorations so much used at this time there is mothing more appropriate than a few graceful FERNS and PALMS.

We have these in sines suitable for either window or dimensional decoration, and sell them at such low prices that every one may indulye their famely or good taste for at least enough to make a display. Compare our prices with others; you will see that you get doubte for the money.

An elegant Fern or heat Palms for only $1.00 has given great satisfactors of plants offered tast months for the state of the plants offered tast months for the state of the plants offered tast months for the state of the plants offered tast months for the state of the plants offered tast months for the state of the plants offered tast months for the plants of the plants

The eligant concerns or plants offered last month for $1.00 has given great satisfac-tion, and we shall continue to . Boo't fail to get our new likes-undreds of rare Tropical Plants; and intending purchasers.

THE AMERICAN EXOTIC NURSERIES.
R. D BOYT, Manager. - Seven Cake, Florida

JAPAN and Cultifornia Bulbs, Seeds, Shrubs, etc. Seed as your address, and we will mail you our beautifully illustrated catalogue of above, free. H. H. BERGER & CO., San Francisco, Cal.

Bealthy, bixprised growth and abundant blossoms produced by Bowker's Flower Food, a clean, estories, observed at meet on touch the state used on touch plants. An attractive trial pechage, enough for 20 plants I month, enough for 20 plants I month, malled, postpand for 20 class and the Prof. Maparon's treatment on "Window Gardening," and free with each parkage. Bowler Forthieser Co., 43 Chathem St., Boston, Mass. Circular free.

CANARY BIRDS that have counted by Olisess, exponent or on account of moulting, one, he made to wurths touseful symbolics by placing a cuke of BIRD MANNA is their cages. It acts alread like a charm in restoring these In their cages. It acts street like a charm in rescoring them to seen. It is an absolute necessity to the health, comfort and hygieus of CAGE Billion. It is made after the Amfressberg recipe. Sold by drugglets, green and hird dealers. Malbel seasy P. O. in the U. R. or Canada for 15 cts., by the "ran Foor Co., 600 N. 34 Se, Filladalphia, Pa. Bird Rock free.

3 Suggestions for Xmas

Amateur Photo Outfits ) Instructive. Magic Lanterns

Inexpensive.

Send stamp for III. Catalog of above goods,

THE JOHN WILKINSON CO., 200 A. 221 Shane St., Chicago

BOSTON NOVELTY CO., BOX 1540, BOSTON, MAGE

PREUMATIC TIMES. Highest hip. Prion to

BARGAINS NEW BICYC

Easy Parments, Bicyc

Weich to extra charge, MosMoreoury Dismond Sadety, all steel geringfeld Hondotter, bendere imposs

M. Amer. Charapteld, highest greeks

W. Amer. Charapteld, highest greeks re as cheapall makes now or let hd, lowest priore free. Bouse, Harard & Co., 80 as HL, Pooris, Like

For Girls

Musical Tastes

A FREE MUSICAL TRAINING WITHIN THE POWER OF EVERY GIRL.

F all offers ever made by THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, none have met with such quick response as those of a free musical training for every girl in America. At the time of the conception of these offers the one point most borne in mind was to place them within the reach of the humblest girl. For years we had heard the cry of the girl of musical tastes stifled by the lack of means wherewith to acquire her desires for a vocal or instrumental training, and we determined to make possible

A MUSICAL TRAINING WITHOUT COST

VER five hundred girls are now working for these offers. Every report coming to us tells of easy success. Girls who started only two months ago are already within a few of the small number of subscriptions necessary for success. "It has come to me almost without an effort," writes one girl, "and I can scarcely believe that the easy work of the last two weeks means twenty weeks of free vocal training for The great advantage in these JOURNAL offers is that there is no competitive element in them. Every girl stands the same chance. It is not a question of who secures the largest number of subscriptions-the girl in the smallest village has the same good chance as the girl in the thickly-populated city.

THE MUSICAL HOME WE SELECTED

THE large conservatory selected by the JOURNAL to which to send our girls, is probably the best and most liberally equipped in the country. It is the New England Conservatory of Music, in Boston. Girls from every State in the Union are within its walls. The most skilled teachers preside over it, while, in a domestic sense, it possesses all the advantages of a carefully regulated and refined home. Foreign musicians of prominence have recognized the standing of the Conservatory by personal visits and indorsement. During her last visit to this country, Adelina Patti honored the Conservatory by spending a morning in its different departments, and now recommends the institution over her own name.

WHY THE OFFERS ARE GENEROUS

THE JOURNAL is anxious that the largest possible number of girls shall take advantage of these offers for a free musical and vocal training, not because of any pecuniary profit to itself, for there is none. The simplest calculation will show, to any one who studies ffers, that we are not guided by money consideration. On the any money consideration. other hand, each successful girl whom we send to the Conservatory means an actual financial outlay to the JOURNAL beyond the income. We have merely changed our methods of advertising. We have merely We have now extended these offers beyond the time originally set for their withdrawal, but they cannot be continued indefinitely, as any one can easily see. It is important, therefore, that girls enroll themselves on our books as desirous of trying for the offers. Any girl can learn all particulars by simply writing to the JOURNAL, and details will be forwarded to her. Remember that this is the best season of the year to secure subscriptions.

** Write and we will gladly tell you all about the idea.

Address

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL Philadelphia, Pa.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS:

Only such questions as are of positively general interest will be arrowered under this title from this time on. Therefore, in saking a question, before you request a reply through the paper, satisfy yourself that an answer will be of interest to some one beside yourself. If I tan't, don't ask it, for it will not receive attention.

L. S.—Yes; a pit is excellent for wintering woody plants of the class such as Tea Roses.

Max. D.—Grange from seed bear in time, but a budded or grafted plant comes into bearing much secuer.

Et.a C.—The Geranium requires a sell of learn made light with sared, and well enriched with manure from an old cow yard.

Mrs. M. H. M.—I think some insect is at work on your Geraulums. Try kerosene emulsion, the formula of which is given below.

Mas. F. C. R.—The leaf you send is evidently from some variety of Petania. Allow branches enough to grow to give you a bashy plant. Mrs. Y's treatment for Gernoluma is satisfactory.

Saveral Correspondence—I know of no fertilizer more reliable or easier to use than Bowker's Food for Flowers, which you will find advertised in this Journal. It is very effective, cheap, and immediate in its action.

M. M. J.—now seed in the fall, preferably in Septem-ber. Cover the young plants lightly with evergreen boughs during winter. In spring transplant to the places where you want them to bloom.

Mass L. P.—I do not think the Hydrangen Rose hardy enough to stand our cold winters in your State. If left out in the open ground. I would much prefer lifting it and keeping it in the cellar. It. Puniculata Grandiflora is very facily at the extreme north.

8. D.—The Tuberose does not bloom but once. It is better to bey strong, specially grown bulbs each spring than to attempt to get flowering plants from young builders, as it is too coult here at the north to perfect them. Our summers are not long and warm enough.

Mas. H. J.—A Correspondent writes that white worms can be killed by luserting half a dozen matches, sulpher end down, in the soil. I have beard of this before, and advise its trial, experimentally. Please test it on one plant, and, if successful, try others, and report result.

"AUNT RETTIE"—Thanks for poems. The cut you send, labeled Nerlum, is intended to illustrate the Cheander, but the artist drew on the imagination to such an extent that the only way in which one can tell what he intended R to represent is by the name amounted.

N. H.—As you do not give the treatment which your plants have received, I cannot give the cause of the leaves of your plants turning yellow. Correspondents should always tell how the plants they ask questions about have been treated. From that I can often form an intelligent opinion regarding them.

an intempert opinion regarding them.

I. R.—Take up your Geranisms after the tops are killed by frost, and by them in the sun for a day of two covering at night. Then out off all but about six inches of the tops, and tie the roots togother and hang them to the celling of your cellar. Most varieties will come through all right if frested in this manner.

E. P. C.—Put Fuchsias in the cellar to remain over winter in November. Water at time of putting away, but not afterward, unless you find that the soil in the pots is getting dry as dust. Being them up the latter part of February or early in March. Then re-pot them, and, at that time, cut them back at least one-third.

X. Y. Z.—If you give your Callas too rich a soil, too much best and water, the leaf-stalks will be lacking in vitality and break easily. Bernouds Lilles are not worth keeping for a second season of flowwring in the house because you can't depend on them. For lice on Chrystartheumans, use Subjebo-Tobacco Soap. If that falls, try kerosene emulsion.

A JOURNAL Boy.—Gladiolisses are too tender to survive the winter if left in open ground. Take up the bulbs and store them in a frost-proof room during winter. In starting tiernalisms and Fachatas from cultips select tadi-woodly branches, and insert them in plates of clear sand, which should be kept very mobil and warm. Do not take large cuttings. Those two or three inches long are better than larger ones.

F. B. M.—The Colons is not worth attempting to where unless you have a very warm greenhouse for it, and then it is best to start young plants late in the season and depend on them. Tender thoses can often be wintered safely by laying them down and covering them with leaves and earth, but you can not be quite sure of their coming through in good shape. See reply to correspondents above for answers to your other questions.

T. B. C.—Box is hardy, I think, though I know of none growing in this part of the country. I do not think it would answer very well as a bedge. I would peeder American Arbor Vita. For hardy vinas, I would dvise Ceissium scanders, or Bittersweet, Whtaria and Trumpet Homeysuckie. For shading versands, I know of nothing prettier than themats. I do not think the Holly flourishes in this country. Some varieties of Hawthorn are soid by several dealers. In shrubs.

Kenosene Entrinson. Several ask for the formula. Kenosene, two parts. Slightly soir milk, one part. Chura together until the two liquids units. Where small quantities are prepared, use an eag-bester. If a larger amount is required, use a large brass syrings, which can be inserted in the liquid and worked like a pump. Great agitation is required to force the liquid and to order. Use one part of the "butter" to twelve parts water. Spray your places all over with this emulsion, water. Speny your plants all over with this emulsion, S. E.—If I wanted a Calla to flower during the sum-mer I would put the pot containing the root in ceilar-during winter, and keep it very dry. I would re-pot in spring, using a composit of mark and some well-rotted cow-manure, with a little sand, daring care to drain the pot well. Then water theroughly daily, giving liquid manure once a week after the plant lead got a strong start. Let the young plants grow if you wants the flowers. The Aster of our roadsides and pasture is a plant generally growing two or three feet high, branching freely, and bearing fring-like flowers which range in color from white to deep bine and lavesder. For green lice I know of nothing better than Sulpho-Tobacco Soap.

Totacro Scap.

Mose J. R. — Heliotropes often lose their leaves if not given as much water as they require: also, if restricted as to pot-room. The center of the ball of earth in the post is often to completely flited with they reots that it is difficult for water to penetrate it. Thrust a kutting-needle or something similar through the center to make search that water can find its way in. When any one tells you that Gerandmus for winter dowering should be started in July and August, seek them if they have ever tried year-old plants, and if they say they have not, then tell them not to presch that young plants are preferable until they know that to be the own from experience. A young Gerandom for the first six months of its life will seldom have more than one branch, and as observation will convince anyone that the amount of bloom deponds largely on the number of branches a plant has, the outer fully of advisting such young plants for winter use will be seen at once. Your plants must be old created to have a reversal branches, and it takes at least a year to grow a well-branches plant in a pot.

Over a hundred inquiries have been thrown into the waste-basket. Some were of no interest to any one except the writer; others came months ago, and it is now too late for a reply to be of any benefit; others have been answered repeatedly in these columns. Those not receiving an answer can, therefore, understand that their queries belong to one or the other of

It's a cold day

for the housekeeper when Pearline gets Take Pearline from washing and cleaning and nothing remains but hard work. shows in the things that are washed; it tells on the woman who washes. Pearline saves work, and works safely. It leaves nothing undone that you want done well; what it leaves undone, it ought not to do.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back. 263 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

T WILL BE DIFFERENT AFTER CHRISTMAS.IF! GET A BISSELL CARPET SWEEPER A NEW STYLE

Bissell Carpet Sweeper

IS THE QUEEN OF

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

It will make a pleasure of labor, lighten drudgery, save dust and wenr, and back-aches. They are beautiful machines, and lasting, perfect sweepers—our modern styles.

Look for the word "BISSELLS"

—no matter what the name. The cost will be little: the sweeper the bost yet produced by modern genius. Tis a worthy present.

15,000 DEALERS SELL THEM. BISSELL CARPET SWEEPER CO.,

Grand Rapids, Mich. 103 Chambers Street, New York.

ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS

Allcock's Porous Plasters are unapproachable in curative properties, rapidity and safety of action, and are the only reliable plasters ever produced.

They have successfully stood the test of over thirty years' use by the public; their virtues have never been equaled by the unscrupulous imitators who have sought to trade upon the reputation of Allcock's by making plasters with holes in them, and claiming them to be "just as good as Allcock's."

Allcock's Porous Plasters stand to-day endorsed by not only the highest medical authorities, but by millions of grateful patients who have proved their efficacy as a household remedy.

Beware of imitations, and do not be deceived by misrepresentation. Ask for Allegock's, and let no solicitation or explanation induce you to accept a substitute.

Grand Success! The Sleigh Ride.

POCKETBOOK

BY W. M. TRELOAR. Greatest Rusical Foreity of the Times. sollo 75c. BUET, $1.0c.
This great picco is played with bells and white, februss at libbiCreates unbounded enthroltake place 45c.
(Send lib place 45c.
(

Worth 30 cents, and made of indiation Sent; also Ebegart Shee Calabages, sent on receipt of 20 cents postage to LAPHAM'S, PALMER BOUSE SHOE STORE, Chicago, 10.

MUSIC PROF. RICE'S SELF-TEACHING STRTEM. All cas bearn much without the old of a teacher. Rapid, current. Fatabilished if years, Notes, chords, accompaniments, theretagh base laws, etc. Ten Lemones to ceets. Circulars free. O. B. RICE MUSIC CO., 248 State Street, Chicago.

HEADS AND FACES, Now to Study them. Character Reading from Photos 22 Nov. 10 cents. Phranological Jr. 81.50 a year. Sample Free. Add POWLER & WELLA, 79 Broading, New York

HATCH CHICKERS by STEAM, Imperved EXCELSIOR Incubator, Simple Perfect and Self-Reynlating Thresholds in Storemble Logenthon, Send Sc. Rotter Illes, Oata. Gisc. H. STAIL, Quincy, III

FLOWERS ALL WINTER and SUMMER: Bare Plants and Bulbs not to be had elsewhere. Two Calabogues, Bulbs and Cacif. free. Book on Cacif to cook a. BLANC OUT III ZOU Dy Google

For the Table.

Curtice Canned Fruits and Vegetables; Pure Pruit Jeilies, Preserves and Jams; "Pleasant Dresms" Mince Meat; Plum Puddings; Meat Delicacios are unsurpassed.

If your grocer cannot supply you, send direct to

CURTICE BROTHERS CO. ROCHESTER, N. Y.,

for prices, catalogue and souvenir, mentioning THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

Paste This in Your Scrap Book.

A Simple Menu

FAMILY DINNER.

Ox Tail Soup (Cowdrey's)

Radithes

Belled Turkey, Egg Sauce Egg Plant Fritters

"Cowdrey's Early Harvest Corn," Stewed with Cream

Cowdrey's Refugee Stringless Beans Baked Apple Demplings Coffee

DELICIOUS MINCE PIES EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.

Such Puckage contains material for two large ples. If your groom does not keep the NoneSuch brand, send No. for full size sackage by mail, prepaid. MERRELL & SOULE, SYRACUSE, N. Y.

Necessity is the mother of invention. With the growing use of polished brass, nickel and steel articles in domestic interiors came the discovery of Stilbona, to make and keep them bright. Stilboma is a chemically prepared charnois, which polishes or burnishes metal surfaces. It is neat; clean and durable-and never scratches.

A large sample of Stilboma will be sent to anyone who will mostlon where this advertisement was seen still friends styrents in stamps to Tex CHANDLES & BUDD Co., Gereined, Olio.

SOUTHERN BREADS AND MUFFINS

BY ELIZA R. PARKER

HE Southern housekeepers have always been noted for the excellence and variety of their bread, served at each meal. The following are selected from the receipts of some of the most famous housekeepers of Virginia and Kentucky.

TO MAKE LIGHT MUFFIHS

SIFT three pints of flour; best six eggs, leaving out the whites of two; stir in as much flour as can be mixed in the eggs, aid milk to thin, then the remainder of the flour, and five tablespaonfuls of yesst; best ten minutes, and pour in two ounces of melted batter. Have the batter stiff; set in a warm place flower minutes. Flour in greater flower minutes. butter. Have the batter stiff; set in a warm place fifteen minutes. Four in greased muffin-rings, and bake in a very hot oven.

DELICIOUS CREAM MUFFINS

BEAT the whites and yelks of four eggs separately. Mix in half a pint of cream and an ounce of butter. Add slowly one pint of flour, pour in muffin-rings, and bake very quickly.

MARTHA WASHINGTON WAFFLES

THIS is a receipt from Mrs. Washington's kitchen. Beat six eggs very light, sift in a quart of theur, add a teaspoonful of salt, a spoonfuls of yeast. Beat well, set to rise over night, stir with a large spoon in the morning, and bake in well-greased waffle-trons.

OLD VIRGINIA WAFFLES

M<sup>1X</sup> a quart of milk and six tablespoonfuls of sifted corn-meal; add a teaspoonful of salt and a tablespoonful of melted butter. Lastly add three eggs, beaten very light. Bake immediately in well-greased waffie-irons.

SALLY-LUNN

Mix a quart of flour with a teaspoonful of M. salt and a tablespoonful of sugar, in which rub a tablespoonful of butter and an Irish potato, mashed line; add half a teacup of yeast and three well-beaten eggs, with warm water to make a soft dough. Kuead half an hour. Let rise, handle lightly, put in a cakemold and bake in a hot oven.

FRAGRANT SOUTHERN BUSKS

SIFT a quart of flour; in the centre of it put two cups of sugar, one of lard and better each; two beaten eggs, two cups of milk, a pint of yeast, and one grated nutmeg.
Mix all together, work well, and set to rise.
When light make in small rolls, work over with better and sugar, let rise again and bake.

OLD VIRGIRIA LOAF BREAD

BOIL one large Irish potato until done, peel and mash fine, add a little cold water to soften it, stir into it a teaspoonful of brown sugar, a tablespoonful of lard and three tablespoonfuls of bop yeast. Mix all the ingredients thoroughly, and put the spoage in a close jar, cover and let standseveral hours to rise. Sift into the tray three pints of flour, to which add a spoonful of sait, then pour the spoage in, with enough cold water to work into a stiff dough; knead entil smooth, and let stand over night to rise. In the mornand let stand over night to rise. In the morn-ing work in flour to keep from sticking to the hands. Allow it to rise one bour, and bake.

SALT RISEN BREAD

INTO a pitcher, put one teacupful of milk fresh from the cow, two teacupfuls of boiling water, one tablespoonful of sugar, one tenspoonful of salt; into this stir a little less than a quart of flour. Set the pitcher in a kettle of moderately warm water and keep it at a naiform teacuparture, cover the receipt of kettle of moderately warm water and keep it at a uniform temperature; cover the month of the pitcher with a towel. Set the kettle where the water will keep warm. Let it stand three hours, then beat up well, after which do not disturb it. In two hours it should be light. Have ready two quarts of flour, half a table-spoonful of lard, and a tenspoonful of salt. Four in the yeast, to which, if not sufficient, add warm water to make dough. Knead well, mold in loaves, put in greased pan, and set in a warm oven to rise; after which bake slowly.

APPLE PIE AND COFFEE

BY ANNA ALEXANDER CAMERON

To make a good apple pie is an art, but here is a carefully prepared receipt: Stew some tart cooking apples until perfectly tender, and rub through a sieve. To one quart of apples (which will make two pies) quart of apples (which will make two pies) add sugar to sweeten to tasta. Throughls will be sufficient if the apple is not too acid. Sir in a half pound of nice butter and flavor with grated nutneg, or lemon if you prefer. Line a pie plate with puff paste, fill with apple and put on a top crust of the same pastry; pierca it with a fork and bake a pale brown. All pies and puddings should be removed at once from the tin piates on which they are cooked, to white ware plates which have been heated,
to prevent the pastry from gathering moisture by being put on a cold plate.

ESSENTIALS OF GOOD COFFEE

ESSENTIALS OF GOOD COFFEE

To have the perfection of coffee these things are essential; the best quality of coffee and I are essential; the best quality of coffee and plenty of it, boiling water, just fifteen minutes to cook, loaf-sugar and cream, and serving at once. Take two gills of Java coffee, ground not too fine, mix it in a bowl to a smooth paste with the white of half an egg and a little cold water. Put it in the coffee-pot that has been well scalded, and pour in it one quart of boiling water. Set it on an oil-stove and boil briskly just fifteen minutes. Take off and let it settle for a minute and pour at once in your coffee cups, in each of which you will put loaf sugar and tich, sweet cream in quantities to stit your guests. Serve it immediately. Its virtue departs in steady ratio with its best.

A Famous French Chef

once wrote: "The very soul of cooking is the stock-pot, and the finest stock-pot is

Liebig Company's Extract of Beef.'

RECIPE FOR FISH SAUCE.

Heat half a tablespoonful of flour in plenty of botter, till yellow, add as much Liebig Company's Extract of Reef broth as sauce is required, and boil well in it plenty of capers, some lemon juice, and a little pounded mace, till the capers are partially asthened; stir in a quarter of a pound of fresh butter and as many yolks of express as necessary to render the sauce rather thick. The butter will probably convey sufficient sait to the sauce, but, should this not be the case, add a little more, and pour the sauce, very hot, over the fish when in the dish, or serve it separately.

THIS IS A JAR

of the genuine. Note the signature of JUS-TUS VON LIEBIG.

"PILLSBURY'S BEST

Makes More Bread Makes Whiter Bread Makes Better Bread

THAN ANY OTHER FLOUR MANUFACTURED.

For Sale by all First-class Grocers.

WOMAN'S COMPANY

GWNED AND OPERATED BY WOMEN FOR WOMEN.

Our plan is to establish 100 factories in the United States, with money derived from sale of capital stock. Then we can easily employ 5,000 women, who will earn for us a net profit of $1,180,000 annually, assuming 75 cts. per day to be the net profit for each employé, which is a very low estimate. Our stock, now offered at $25 per share, on a basis of $5 per annum, will then be worth about $365; $25 invested now will, we confidently believe, eventually be worth $365.

WHY WILL IT INCREASE SO MUCH?

BECAUSE we have the only scientific process for causing and preserving food; no polecu; no chemicals; never spoils; cooking unnecessary; flavors retained, and it solves the communion wine question by furnishing the pure juice of the grape unchanged at all scatters.

BECAUSE women only are employed in our factories; they are surrounded by Christian influences and gaid wages which make them independent; stock is sold only to women, who will, by their interest in the company, inducence greezes to sell our goods, thus benefiting us.

BECAUSE the women running this company are excellent business women (demonstrated by their individual successes), and, with the aid of every Christian women in the quantity, are excellent to make this to present ficundal success ever accomplished by women.

Checks for the annual dividends mailed in March to all Stockholders.

Checks for the annual dividends mailed in March to all Stockholders.

Stock sold if desired on monthly payments of $2.50 per share.

All money received after 4.000 shares are sold will be returned to parties sending it, as price is then advanced 20% above par.

HOW MANY SHARES WILL YOU TAKE? THEY ARE $25 EACH, PAR VALUE.

OPPICERS AND COMMISSIONERS.

Many Allen West, Editor of THE UNION SIGNAL | Babella Bercher Hooker, stater tate Henry Word Mrs. J. B. Lewis, Lady Myr. World's Fair.

Mins. J. B. Lewis, Lady Myr. World's Fair.

Mins. Democrat. Pub. Democrat's Magazine.

Mrs. M. Duigh, wife of Senator Dolph. Washing-Mrs. M. Louise Thomas, Pres. Serveris Chib. N. Y.

Sample sent on receipt of 25 cts for express charges. No charge for the sample.

Sample sent on receipt of 25 cts. for express charges. No charge for the sample. This advertisement appears in forty papers this month, and less than 4,000 shares are now for sale. We will reserve any number of shares for you until you have time to investigate. Say how many you want held. Full information sent free. ADDRESS ORDERS AND MAKE CHECKS OR MONEY ORDERS PAYABLE TO WOMAN'S CANNING AND PRESERVING CO., 161 LA SALLE ST., Grocers Supplied by THURBER, WHYLAND & CO., New York, and SPRAGUE, WARNER & CO., Chicago.

I be permited to say : Thank heaven and VAN HOUTEN?

That makes me feel so CR. PROCESSIFF Well?"

PERFECTLY PURE.

VAN HOUTEN'S PATENT PROCESS

reases by 30 PER CENT. the solubility of the th-forming elements, making of the occus been an costly digasted, delicious, nourish-ing and stimulating drink, readily assimilated, even by the most delicate.

Sold in 1-8, 1-4, 1-9 and 1 1b. Cans. If not obtainable, enclose 25 ets. to either VAN HOUTEN & ZOON, 106 Reads Street, New York or 45 Wabsah Ave., Chicago, and a can containing enough for 35 to 40 cups, will be mailed. Heaties this publication. Prepared only by the inventors Van Houzzu & Zoos, Weesp, Holland.

the Tot Entry FLOUR BING SIEVE thank-rechester LOUR BING SIEVE Combines Sack or Harret, Sifter, Fan and Scoop, preserves four from month and mustiness. Keeps out dust, versale, etc. YOU OUGHIT TO HAVE ONE. Ask our agent or your dealer for these, if they cannot supply you, write to he. Prices | 25 Dec. 25.0 ( satisfaction to hold | 100 Dec. 25.0 ( Satisfaction Sieves A Co., 25.0 West Lake Sures, B. 43), Chinge, IL.

The Banner Lamp

Pinless Clothes Line

The only line ever invented that holds the clothes without pins; a perfect success; patent recently issued; seld only by AGENTS to whom the exclusive right is given; on receipt of 30 cents we will send a sample line by mall; also, circulars, price-list and learns to agents; secure your territory at once. Address THE PINLESS CLOTHES LINE COMPANY, 120 Hermon street, Worcester, Mass.

OLD COINS

$18,388 Paid For Mr Old Coins. Save you get, cotted before MK, a

WANTED

THE STORY EVER NEW

BY FLORENA M. YORK

ONLY an old, old story Of Infinite love and grace; Only a beam of glory Lighting a baby face. But through the rolling ages, No story half so dear; Of all earth's smoshine glory, No beams so bright and clear.

Only a manger lowly, Wherein the sweet Child lay; Only a mother holy, Watching the hours away. Only a sweet song stealing Down through the quiet skies; Only a star's soft beaming, Points where the Baby lies.

Only some shepherd's kneeling, Paying their homage sweet, Pouring their richest treasures Down at those Baby-feet. Strains of that far-off anthem Float through the world since then, Breathing of " Joy in Heaven On earth good-will toward men."

Hark! to the joyous chorus-"To you a King is born"; Star of the East now lead us, Lead us this Christmas morn. Till, like the faithful shepherds, We kneel in homage sweet, And pour our hearts' best treasures Down at those sacred feet.

Thus reads the sweet old story, Old, but still ever new; Know we the wealth of glory It brings to me and you? Know we those tiny fingers Opened Heaven's portals wide? But for that helpless Baby All the whole world had died?

ABOUT OURSELVES, YET INTERESTING

HE JOURNAL makes it a point to say as little as possible about itself in its own reading col-umus. The two or three little subjoined paragraphs are, how-ever, of interest to our readers, we think, and for a careful perusal of them we shall feel indebted to our constituency.

THE GOOD THINGS TO COME

To any reader who prefers to have the Journal's announcements for 1892 in more compact form than as set forth on the first two pages of this issue, we will send our hand-book of attractions for the coming year, if they will simply enclose a two-cent stamp. The book is daintily printed and illustrated.

AS A PERSONAL FAVOR TO US

D'N'T put off sending us a renewal of your subscription if you expire with this number, but favor us personally by remitting your dollar as quickly as possible after you receive this Jounnal. This is our busiest time, and at the end of the year we frequently receive from ten to fifteen thousand subscriptions in a single day. Then we naturally cannot give your order as quick attention as we can now. In your own interests, therefore, pray let us ask you to send us your renewal without delay. Don't put it off until to-morrow; oblige us by doing it to-day.

TO OUR AGENTS AND CANVASSERS

TO OUR AGENTS AND CANVASSERS

THERE is not an Agent or Canvasser securing subscribers for The Lanus' Home Journat, who has not been cautioned and warned against offering the paper at any rates other than the full subscription price.

We hereby give further notice that any Agent, Club raiser or Canvasser who offers a subscription at a cut-rate, or who offers a present or gift of money, or anything of value in addition to the paper itself as an inducement to subscribe, thereby forfeits his or her claim to any Cash prize which has or may be offered, and forfeits any and all Cash Commissions due for all subscriptions sent in.

OUR FREE MUSICAL OFFERS

O WING to the unusual success of the Jour-NAL'S offers of free musical or vocal training, it gives us pleasure to state that we have been able to arrange for their extension, so far as time is concerned. It was the original idea to limit the time to January 1st, 1802, but we now see how this would disappoint scores of girls who are at work to secure the prize. prizes. Hence, the offers remain good until we withdraw them.

Over five hundred girls are now working for the offers. Every report coming to us tells of easy success. Girls who started only two months ago are already within a few of the months ago are already within a few of the small number of subscriptions necessary for success. "It has come to me almost without an effort," writes one girl, "and I can scarcely believe that the easy work of the last two works means twenty weeks of vocal training for me." The great advantage in these Jour-sat offers is that there is no competitive ele-ment in them. Every girl stands the same chance. The girl in the smallest village has the same good chance as the girl in the thickly. the same good chance as the girl in the thickly-populated city.

Write us, and we will tell you all about the offers. Address.

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL. Philadelphia, Pa. A USEFUL CASE AND BAG

By Eva M. NILES

N elegant present is the night-dress case and brush-and-comb bag. They may be made of knitting-silk any shade desired.

For the case three flat bone meshes will be required, measuring respectively half an inch, quarter of an inch, and one-eighth of an inch wide. A yard of lining is used. Get two yards of inch-wide ribbon for the bag strings. of inch-wide ribbon for the bag strings. Begin at the bottom of the back of night-dress case, by putting 100 stitches on a founda-tion thread with the 4-inch mesh, and net 16 plain rows. 17th row—with 4-inch mesh. Plain netting. 18th row-with 1-inch mesh, take up two loops together on the needle and net them as I stitch, and the same all along, and there will be fifty stitches in this row.

will be fifty stitches in this row.

19th row—with the same mesh, plain netting.

20th row—with ½-inch mesh, net two stitches in every loop all along the row, which restores the original number of 100 stitches.

Net 16 plain rows with the ½-inch mesh.

Work the four open rows as before. Again
net 16 plain rows with the ½-inch mesh.

Again work the four open rows as before. Net 6 plain rows with the ½-inch mesh. And now begin shaping the flat:

1st row—work with the ½-inch mesh in plain lat row--work with the 1-inch mesh in plain lst row—work with the 1-inch mesh in plain netting.

2nd row—with 1-inch mesh, take two loops together on the needle and net them in 1 stitch. Repeat the same to end of the row.

3rd row—with the same mesh, plain netting, and omit 2 loops at the end of the row.

4th row—with 1-inch mesh, net 2 stitches in every loop, and omit two loops at the end of the row. Work 4 plain rows with 1-inch mesh, always omitting 2 loops at the end of each row. Repeat the 4 open rows, omitting 2 or 3 loops at the end of erery row. Net 3 plain rows with 1-inch mesh, omitting 2 or 3 loops at the end of erery row. Net 3 plain rows with 1-inch mesh, omitting 2 or 3 loops at the end of each row; and fasten off; this is the end of the flat. For the front of case, recommence, and work as for the back, until you get two complete lines of the open netting, and 3 plain rows of the third line of 16 plain rows, when fasten off. The front of the night-dress case must be laid level with the back piece, and both be sewed together, the two commencing rows forming the bottom of the case. And now proceed to work the netted border all round the case, taking the needle into both pieces of netting where, along the edge, the work lies double.

1st round—with 1-inch mesh, work 2 stitches into each loop of the netting, and case at the corners by doing 4 stitches into 1 or 2 corner loops.

2nd round—with 1-inch mesh, take up 2 or 2 corner loops.

2nd round—with 1-inch mesh, take up 2 loops together and not them as 1 stitch, and repeat.

3rd round—same mesh, plain netting.
4th round—with ½-inch mesh, net 3 stitches in each loop, and make whatever increase is needed at the corners.

5th round—with ½-inch mesh, plain netting.
6th round—the same.

7th round—with ½-inch mesh, net one stitch in each of 5 consecutive loops, miss 1 loop, and repeat the same; the loop that is missed must be a loop over one of the open spaces between the groups.

8th round—net 1 stitch in each of 4 successive loops, miss the loop over the missed loop of last row.

of last row.

9th round-net 1 stitch in each of 3 succes-

9th round—not 1 stitch in each of 3 successive loops, silk round mesh, and miss the loop over the missed loop of the preceeding row.

10th round—not 1 stitch in each of 2 loops, silk twice round the mesh and miss the loop over the missed loop of last row; fasten off. This finishes the border. Make up the lining for the case, and arrange the netting tastefully on it. Put a button and loop on the flap. Work the brush and comb bag to match.

Begin at the bottom of one side of the bag and with the 1-inch mesh put 60 stitches on a

Begin at the bottom of one side of the bag and with the k-inch mesh put 60 stitches on a foundation, and net 20 plain rows. Net 4 open rows as in case. Net 18 plain rows with the small mesh. Net 4 more open rows. Net 18 more plain rows and fasten off.

Make the other half of bag in same manner. Sew the two pieces together, having the conf-mencing rows at the bottom of the bag, and joining the open rows on the side quite evenly. Net a border all round as on case. The lining is cut to fit the netting, it has a deep been at the top with a double running to contain the ribbon as a drawing-string. ribbon as a drawing-string,

HOT WATER CURER.

Chronic Diseases, "What Must I Be to Get Well, and How Can I Kamp So?" An entertaining and instructive work, thoroughly explaining the "SALIBBURY" method of treating chronic diseases. By Mas. STUART, a life-long friend and associated of George Ellot, Elegantly bound. Mailed on receipt of $1. W. A. KHLLOGG, Pub., 1023 6th Ave., New York.

Hellmuth College

Education Health Home

For YOUNG WOMEN and GIRLS. Large Illustrated Catalogue sent on application. v. E. N. ENGLISH, M. A., Principal, LONDON, ONTARIO, CANADA.

AULTLESS FORMS ITTING

Accurate as if made to measure. Satin kid. Sewed by new process. Smooth insoles. No tacks. No nails or rough thread to hart the most sensitive feet, 2t to 8. AA to E. Sent to any address on receipt of price and postage, 20 cts. Money refunded if not STREETER BROS., State & Madison Sts.

OUR NEW

We take pleasure in announcing that our line is now open for travel West

VIA OMAHA and LINCOLN

and our Through Vestibuled Train is called

"THE BIG 5 LIMITED." It leaves CHICAGO daily at 10.00 p. m.; arriving at DENVER 7.40 a. m., COLO-RADO SPRINGS 7.30 a.m. and PUEBLO 9.15.

Returning, this fast train is called "The World's Fair Special,"

And leaves DENVER daily at 8.10 p. m.; arriving at CHICAGO at 7.45 a. m.

The New Route abortions our mileage to Denver very materially and the new trains are speciels for beauty and convenience, and leave and arrive at these great cities at hours practical for the tourst, and the right hour for the business man.

Solid Vestibuled Trains are still run over our former lines via Kansas City and Nt. Juseph, and the elegant service heretofore given on these course by "The Great Rock Island" will continue.

E. ST. JOHN. JNO. SEBASTIAN, Gen'l Ticket and Poss'r dgt.

We will sell at retail until the Holidays, only Each Garment packed in a beautiful box.

ENGLISH GOSSAMER CO.,

better present for gentlemen

MOST SESSIALE SUSPENDER. CHESTER SUSPENDER CO., 15 Decatur Ave., Rochury, Mous

FREE A POCKET PENCH. CHE THE PARTY AND THE P

PIANOS

Shipped from factory at special prices. Catalogue free. WILLIAMS ORGAN CO., Centerville, Iowa

FOR LADIES! FOR CHRISTMAS.

Ditson's

Latest Series! Just Issued!

Do not confound these books with the cheaply printed mustic so extensively advertised. The Ne Plus Ulura books rank with our standard works and have never been equalled at the proce.

Ne Plus Ultra Piano

Collection.

Superb compositions by some of the most fa-mous plants and composers. Very easily learned. The book is large sheet music size. 160 pages, neatly bound, in engraved correr.

Ne Plus Ultra Ballad

Collection.

100 pages, large size, containing the choicest sentimental, pathetic, devotional, and other songs, each with taxleful place or organ ac-compariment. It should be in every boose.

Ne Plus Ultra Song and Chorus Collection.

With plann or organ accompaniments. Only the most popular source are represented. Ruch sour lass a finging chorus for four voices. Just the book needed. Carefully revised to date.

Ne Plus Ultra Dance

Collection.

Every style of dance music for the piano is represented. The pieces are not difficult, but each one is a popular, captivating air.

The Ne Plus Ultra books are large sheet music size, finely printed and strongly bound. ANY VOLUME BENT, POSTPAID, ON RECEIPT OF 50c.

OLIVER DITSON COMPANY, 453-463 Washington Street, Boston.

C. H. DITSON & CO.

J. E. DITSON & CO. 1228 Chestnut St., Phila

BLACK CROW FAST

But's nited - Se, for two pair, 60s.

Muniton size wanted. Bare Money buying from Factory.

EAGLE HOSIERY CO., Germantown, Pa.

WHO HAS NOT SEEN A COPY OF

ARTHUR'S NEW HOME MAGAZINE of Philadelphia? "The best and obsapes; manyraren monthly ever published in the English language." 1,500 pages for $1.50.

SIX SHORT STORIES AND SPLENDID articles by best writers on all subjects of interest to weeken. Sample Copy Free. If you like it, you'll take it, won't you?

FREE, TO BRIGHT BOYS AND GIRLS! 10,000 PAIRS OF Raymond's Celebrated Club Skates. Send for particulars. AREKEL WEIKLY CO., New York.

Whawknit,

CASTLE CALENDAR FOR 1892

is uniform with that for 1841, which was so favorably commented upon for its artistic and literary merit, and presents exceller t pictures of twelve more famous castles of Great Britain and Ireland, accompanied by historical and faccing the property of the companied of the property of the companied by historical and faccing the property of the companied of the companied of the companied by historical and faccing the property of the companied of accompanied by historical and descriptive text. It will be mailed to any address upon receipt of soc-directed to end you a PRINGED LINES TIDY of "AN I," Plan to work it, Indanta's Book op-Ingalis' 22-pany limetrated Catalogue of DRK MATERIALS, STAMPED GOOKS, ARP ANDROW, INSTRUMENTALS, STAMPED GOOKS, ARP INGALLS HOME ANY MAGAZINE, ALL for ten 2-cent stamps (20 cents Address J. F. INGALLS, Lyan, Mass.

CALENDAR DEPARTMENT, SHAW STOCKING CO., LOWELL, MASS.

ANVASSERS Make Big Money A genuine barvest for agents. Si to 819 per day easily made. Goods sell themselves. County rights given. One outfit free. Enclose stamp for full particulars. THE SEMPLE Co., Mt. VERNON, O.

AN OWL BACH!

FASHION CATALOGUE

Containing the latest Winter Styles in Ladles', Men's and Children's wear at New York's lowest prices. Sent free by addressing

MAHLER BROS., 503 and 504. Sixth Arp., N. C. Google

THE PERFUMES WE USE

By L. J. VANCE

TH reference to the origin of perfumes there are three kinds—floral, aromatic and balsamic. Thus, we have sweet odors derived from flowers, from spaces and herbs, or from resins and musks. The ottar, or essence of perfume, is usually obtained in two ways—by distillation and by maceration.

The perfume from flowers which contain the The perfume from flowers which contain the volatile essence is extracted by distillation, which, briefly stated, is as follows: The flowers are put into a retort with about double the quantity of water. The contents are boiled by a quick fire, and the steam, as it condenses in its passage through a spiral coil, exudes the volatile essence, which is caught in a small flask at the orifice of the tube. The water is used over again for distillation, and becomes the "rose water" of trade.

Flowers which do not contain the volatile essence may have their perfumes extracted by what is known as the "hot process," as follows: The flowers are put in a copper vessel with a quantity of lard; the whole is then boiled, and more flowers added, until the grease has absorbed the necessary amount of perfume. The scent is extracted from the lard, and blended usually with other essences. Then there is the cold process. By this process, freshly-gathered flowers are placed on a layer of lard which is speend over glass trays. Every twelve or twenty-four hours, as the case may be the flowers are banned until the lard.

Every twelve or twenty-four hours, as the case may be, the flowers are changed until the lard may be, the flowers are changed until the lard has absorbed the necessary amount of perfume. The ottar of roses comes principally from southern Bulgaria and southern France.
Few sights in the world can be more beautiful than the vast fields of roses. Travelers revel in word-painting when they come to describe the wondrons charm of the valley in which Kasanlik, the "City of Roses," lies surrounded by acres and acres of flowers. In blooming time the place is
"So perfumed that

"So perfumed that The winds were lovesick."

"So perfumed that
The winds were lovesick."

The Bulgarian rose district is about one thousand square miles. So, too, many districts in France and Italy are given up to flower culture. The French ottar of roses is of excellent quality, and more expensive than the product of Bulgaria. The finest violet comes from the south of France, where they are grown under the shade of olive groves. From Italy we obtain the citric odors, as lemons and bergamot. The celebrated Parma violet is grown in Taggio. Nic. is also celebrated for violet and mignonette. The Island of Sicily raises large quantities of orange and citron for the perfamery trade.

Of the animal substance, musk is the most powerful and persistent. It is said that one part of musk will scent three thousand parts of inodorous powder. The substance is found in the pouch of the musk deer of China, Thibet and Tonquin. The musk reaching our market comes from Shanghal; it is put up in boxes or "caddies." Each box contains twenty-five or thirty musk pods, wrapped in rice-paper. The caddy is made of brown cardboard, which is covered by Chinese paper of silky texture; the outside designs and colors are usually gaudy. Some twenty-five ounces of musk are packed in this fashion.

Civet is another animal substance blending with floral compounds. It is a secretion of the African and Indian cat. Civet comes to this country in cows' horns; these horns are wrapped up in coarse cloth, on which are marked the number and weight. They contain from one to two pounds of civet. Ambergis, the secretion of a spermaceti whale, is used to give permanency to floral compounds.

Of the aromatic odors, cloves are most largely used. From the unexpended flower-buds of the clove trees is obtained a very powerful and pungent oil. Then comes cinnamon or coarse, both vieled etimulation, essential oils.

the clove trees is obtained a very powerful and pungent oil. Then comes cinnamon or cassia; both yield stimulating, essential oils. The cassia has a cinnamon-like flavor, and comes from Colna; the best clunamon comes from Ceylon.

It need hardly be said that perfumes are ex-tensively adulterated. The oil of geranium, or oil of idris, is used in the adulteration of ottar of roses, and there is no infallible test for discovering the imposition. Strange to say, art gives bouquets of delicate odor— bouquets which are not found in nature, Thus, Jockey Club, Millefleur and Mousse-Thus, Jockey Club, Millefleur and Mousse-laine, to name no others, have no existence outside the laboratory. A tincture of vanilla, added to a small quantity of the ottar of bitter almonds, rose and orange flower, gives the "extract of heliotrope." Again, a mixture of essences of orange flower, rose, tuberose and violet makes "extract of magnolia." Once more, the "extract of verbena" is made from the Indian lemon-grass, and so on

It may be interesting to add that perfumes were introduced in England in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The Earl of Oxford brought from Italy "gloves, sweet bagges, a perfumed leather terkin and other terkins."

leather jerkin and other pleasant things."

In a few years the garments of the ladies of the court were outrageously perfumed. The present English fancy is to make perfume in sticks. Another fancy is to fill a tiny buttle with a reviving odor, and to use the silver flask as a vinaigrette. It is said that some French women indulge in the folly of injecting a few drops of perfume into the blood. Of course, the experiment is dangerous, and one not likely to be repeated here. With Ameri-cans the sachet is held just now in high favor. These dainty creations of silk and lace are made for gloves, bonnets, underwear and linen. They are of all sorts and sizes, from the little pad to be slipped into gloves, to the big bags hung in the clothes press. Frankly spenking, a woman can be judged by the perflame she uses.

THE CARE OF A SEWING-MACHINE

BY HORACE N. JONES

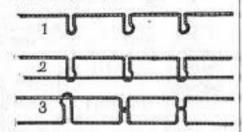

ERY few of those who run sewing-machines, or see them in operation, under-stand how this most helpstand how this most help-ful of the Nineteenth Cen-tury genie performs its work. Its accomplish-ments are so wonderful that it is taken for granted that such effects can only be produced by most complex mechanism, which none but a skilled artisan can understand. One result of this rather general misapprehension is that sewing-machines do not receive the care they should have. True, the wife complains that the machine does not run as easily as it used to, but it never enters the man's head that he to, but it never enters the man's head that he is competent to repair it, and that an hour's work on his part would materially lighten his wife's labor. He votes that the machine is wearing out—a hig dose of oil is all it gets, while what it needs to make it practically as good as new is a thorough cleaning.

It is not absolutely necessary that one should understand all about how a piece of machinery works in order to take it apart and clean it. A sewing-machine is very simple in its fundamental principles, and there is hardly a household but contains some member who is competent not only to clean a machine, but to thoroughly learn how it works, and so be able to tell what is the trouble if anything goes wrong.

There are but three important parts to the common double-thread machine—the needle, the shuttle and the feed. All the rest are mere devices for bringing these into the right lace with relation to each other at the right ime. The whole work of the needle is to keep constantly pushing the upper thread down through the fabric, making a series of bends or loops in it, as in Fig. 1, and as fast as each loop is formed the shuttle runs through t, carrying the lower thread and leaving it as in Fig. 2, only that each loop or stitch is drawn tight by the tension as soon as made, so that the real effect is more like Fig. 3. The function of the tensions is to hold the thread tight, and when they are properly adjusted the crossing of the threads will be in the center of the sewing.

If the reader will seat himself at a machine and turn it slowly, he will notice that after the needle descends to its lowest point it moves a little way up and then stops. The thread being taught all the time, this slight upward move-ment causes it to buckle or bend outward, as shown in Fig. 4.

Just at this moment the shuttle comes forward, its sharp nose enters the loop stretching it wider, so that the whole shuttle slips readily through, carrying the lower thread. As soon as the shuttle gets well through the loop, the needle resumes its upward motion, and at the instant its point clears the material, the little toothed plate, which is called the feed, pushes up against the cloth from underneath and slides forward, carrying it into position for the next stitch. The length of the stitch is regulated in a very simple manner by altering the extent of this motion of the feed.

In cleaning a sewing-machine you need a small screw-driver, a stick about the size of a lead-pencil, with a long, slender point; a piece of cotton cloth and some kerosene oil. In taking a machine apart, do not go at it in a haphazard way, removing a screw here and a Just at this moment the shuttle comes forhaphnzard way, removing a screw here and a pin there, but commence at one side and work toward the other side, taking off everything as you go that needs cleaning. Have a table at your side with plenty of room, and as fast as the pieces are removed lay them on the table as nearly as may be in the order they came off, the first pieces on the further side. Leave sufficient space between the different parts and groups of pieces so that there will be no danger of getting them mixed, and be particularly careful not to lose any of the small ularly careful not to lose any of the small screws, for they are frequently of such a thread that you cannot easily get a duplicate cut. After you have taken off all the movable parts, carefully clean the body, or skeleton, of the machine. The kerosene will act like magic in removing the hardened oil and dirt, and the sharpened stick will be very serviceable in reaching every little crevice and corner. In oiling the machine use none but the best oil; but it is a good dies to oversionally use a little but it is a good iden to occasionally use a little kerosene as it will tend to keep it free from gum. When the body of the machine is cleaned, every bearing and surface subject to friction polished bright, begin on the pieces taken off, reverging the order, starting on that which was removed last, and as soon as a piece is cleaned put it back in its place. In a few minutes you will have everything back again; oil carefully, using too little rather

Vinolia Soan

NO FREE SODA-BUT EXTRA CREAM.

Contains EXTRA CREAM instead of FREE SODA and POTASH, which remove the natural oil from the skin, hair and nails, and shrivel them up, thus causing premature grayness, baldness, wrinkles and striated nails. De-alkalized and de-hydrated,

DOES NOT DRY and SHRIVEL THE SKIN, HAIR and NAILS!!!!

The Soap recommended by the London LANCET and medical press of Great Britain.

Pamphlet showing "EVIL EFFECTS OF SOAPS," free

BLONDEAU & Cie., 73 and 75 Watts St., N. Y. Prices, 15, 25, 35 and 85c. a Tablet. By Leading Wholesalers

THE FASHIONABLE SCENT CRAB-APPLE BLOSSOM.

The New and Leading English Perfume Over 300,000 Bottles sold in England the past Year,

By THE CROWN PERFUMERY CO., of London.

"Chief among the fashionable scents of the season is Crab-Apple Blossoms, a delicate perfume of the highest quality and fragrance."—Court Journal (London), it would not be possible to conserve of a more delightful perfume than the Crab-Apple Blossoms, which is put up by the Crown Perfumery Company of London. It has the aroma of spring in it, and one could use it for a lifetime and never tire of U."—New York Observer.

THE CROWN PERFUMERY CO., 177 NEW BOND St., London.

Makers of the new and delightful KARILPA TOILET WATER, now so popular.

Beware of fraudulent instations put up by unprincipled dealers for extra gain. Sold only in the bottles of the company with the well-known Crown Stopper, as shown above. No others are genuine.

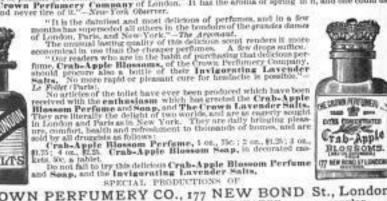

Send Stamps or P. O. Order, with full address pining written, to Caswell, Nassey & Co., New York, or Melvin A. Badger, or T. Metcalf & Co., Easton, or Ges. B. Evran, Policalelphia, and the article ordered will be sent, postpadd, to any address.

At wholesale by McKerson & Budden, Hall & Buckel, Dock & Tolket, W. M. Badger, and the sent postpadd.

paid, to any address.

At wholesale by McKesson & Robbins, Hall & Ruckel, Park & Tilford, W. H. schieffelin & Co., Musico & Baldwin, New York, and all leading wholesale Bruggists.

Digitized by Google

Our Mail Trade

is largely

Male Trade, (This is our Fall pen.) Send us your name on a postal card and we will mail you samples of our goods including our

FALL SPECIALTIES,

No. 1.—Our $15.50 Suit, No. 2.—Our $16.50 Over-coat. Seat everywhere in U. S. by mail or ex-press. Full line of pant goods always sent for the Famous Plymouth Rock $3 Panta is our leader.

Address all | Pirmouth Rock Pants Co., mail to | Headquarters at to as Eliot St., Boston.

We have seven stores in Boston and a store in Washington, D. C., Chicago, Illa, Toledo, Dayton, Little Rock, Ark., Richmond, Va., Birmingham, Ala., Worcester, Mayas, Troy, N. Y., Macon, Ga., Memphisten, Nashvelle, Tenn., Dallas, Tex., Augusta, Ga., Davenport, Iewa, Columbus, Ga., Calveston, Tex., Waco, Tex., New Unleans, La., Penascola, Fia., Atlanta, Ga., Manchester, N. H., Concord, N. H., Montgomery, Ala, New Haven, Conz., Springfald, Mass., Newport, Bir Harbor, Cottage City, Nantucket, Kanaa, Mo., Louisville, Ky., Austin, Tex., San Antonio, Tex.

Plymouth Rock Pants Co. Incorporated Capital, $1,000,000.

Full Dress Suits

TO ORDER From $25 to $40 Equal in fabric, style, workman-also. fit and finish, to $75 and $000 suits of leading houses.

Why this is possible:
Why this is possible:
We see the only Tailoring house in the U. S. making a specialty of Full Dress Garments and have every facility to the fund a lowest possible cost. It is welknown that Tailors regard the Dress Suit a mere incident in their business and accordingly charge terioes greatly out of procharge prices greatly out of pro-portion to prices charged under brisk competition for business

The Dress Suit is to-day an Absolute Necessity an Absolute Nocessity to gentlemen attending Wedthings, Receptions, Partiesete, It is not only the Correct Dress on such occasions that often other forms are absolutely problimind
Every gentleman should own a Dress Sun.
Comparatively few cloths are writable for Dress Garments.
Samples of these we mail free ou application with samples of trimmings and complete instructions for self measurement, No one out system is very sample.

for our system is very simple.

Our Customers Risk Nothing.

Garments may be reremed to us for any cause and when so returned, we obligate ourselves to pay all Express charges. We are general tailors and can furnish by mail samples of any style of goods desired. For particulars and samples address (enclosing 6 cts. for postage)

KAHN TAILORING CO., 14 E. Washington St., BOX T . INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

BOSTON is the principal city in the U. S. for the sale of custom cothing. Punts to orsier $1 and apearels. Suits $12.50 and apearels. Free samples. Agts, wanted. BAY STATE TAYLORING Co., 32 Hawley St., Boston.

PAR EXCELLENCE.

The most acceptable Christmas gift. for a gentleman.

The Genuine Guyot Suspenders. Made only by CHARLES GUYOT, Parts.

The mass of health, comben and darability, in glass top current of a pair, ECS; S poir, E-50 and II pair, ELD, handsensity packed. An inexpensive and very neeful present. If your furnisher answer spays them, write to OSTRELEGE BHOS., 937-919 Fibert St., Philadelphia; 408 Erandway, Now York City, sole supersumatives of Ch. Guyot, for the U. S.

IN RIVER VALLEY.

Farms can be had in Minnesota and North Bakots on erop and other plans to suit purchasers. No failure of crops in twelve years of actilement. Large yields of wheat and other staples. Fine stock region. Good schools and churches. Healthful climate. Great Fine wors. Healthful chimase, churches. Healthful chimase, markets within casy reach. Highest prices paid for products. For further address F. I. WHITNEY, St. Paul,

Information Minnesota.

THE NEW MODEL "HALL." PERSON TOPES THALLS PERSON TYPEWRITER,
BEST MANIPOLICER,
Terms to Agents Liberal,
POSTABLE, INEXPENSIVE, WRITER ALL LANGUAGES,
Send for Catallogue and Specimens of Fork,
Address N. TYPEWRITER CO.
611 Washington St., Boston,

XMAS MONEY, SELL OLD GOLD and fillver return mail. Est. 1880. H. Mary, Box 180, Hochester, N. Y.

WOMEN'S CHANCES AS BREAD-WINNERS

*WOMEN IN ART

(Continued from November Issue)

FROM A WOMAN'S POINT

BY SUBAN M. KETCHAM PRESIDENT OF THE ART STUDENTS' LEAGUE OF NEW YORK

OMEN may be divided into two

OMEN may be divided into two classes—those who can paint a little, and those who cannot paint at all." This was said a few years ago by one of the first artists of New York—a gentleman genial and kindly, and a favorite instructor. At that very time the Academy walls proved beyond a peradventure that women led in the Water-Color exhibition. Kate Greatorex headed the list with a superb still-life—exhibited in the Paris Salon previous; a picture magnificent in color and bold in treatment. Rhoda Holmes Nichola followed, while Dora Wheeler and Rosina Emmet by no means brought up the rear.

The new Water-Color Club numbers twenty-

The new Water-Color Club numbers twenty-seven men and twenty-six women, but of seven men and twenty-six women, but of their exhibitors only thirty-three per cent. are women. The catalogue of the last annual exhibition of the National Academy of Design (oil paintings), shows about twenty per cent. women. Of the schools throughout this country, at least seventy per cent. of the students are women, the studio classes showing a still greater percentage of women. Why, then, do the exhibitions show this reversal?

A young man visited the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia. He was profoundly impressed with the paintings. His parents mortgaged their farm to send him abroad for five years' study. He is now in the fore-front rank of artists. What parents would mortscare a firm for a daughter's study?

The name of women art students is "legion." But they do not undertake the study seriously,

The name of women art students is region. But they do not undertake the strict seriously, as men do. Girls take it up as a pastime or an accomplishment. Women too often plunge into it for bread-winning. Applications for admission to the schools not seldom contain this question, "How soon shall I be able to teach?" For this reason, "many are called, but few are chosen." but few are chosen.

but few are chosen."

Occasionally it happens that wealth and position influence sales, but the size qua non is a low price and a pleasing subject. On these accounts, women probably sell a greater number proportionately. However, the income of an artist is a matter of great uncertainty. One year an artist here sold ten thousand dollars worth of paintings; the next year he confessed his income had not been ten cents. In the same building a lady made $4000 one year; the next she did not make her studio rent. Rosa Bonbeur's "Horse Fair" brought the largest price of any picture, except an old the largest price of any picture, except an old Master. It sold in America for $55,000. The ideal club is to be found in Chicago. Ten years ago it was formed with seven mem-Ten years ago it was formed with seven mem-bers. It now numbers fifty. At their last annual exhibition in one of the galleries of the Art Institute, the men's club held its dis-play in an adjoining gallery. All acknowl-edged the women carried off the palm. They report during the ten years "not one single squabble," while the records of the men show the rise and fall of four clubs.

In no country has there been edict or injunction against women entering the field of art, as has been the case in other professions. The brotherhood of artists shows a spirit of good-fellowship, and offers kindly criticism. It is a fair field for woman, and if she does not "gwin and possess the land" it is her own fault.

There is also room for women in the "no-ble army" of collectors. A gentleman of wide experience as salesman at exhibitions in many of the large cities of the United States, many of the large cities of the United States, says it is positively true that women do not buy pictures. A man makes his selection. The wife is brought to confirm the sale, which in every instance ends it. A lady worth from twenty to forty millions of dollars was indignant at her son's paying $100 for a Diaz. The Catharine Wolfe collection was largely an inheritance. A lady of brilliant intellect, wide advestice a musician of unusual attainment. education, a musician of unusual attainment, leader of society, president of a literary club, said frankly, "A picture means literally nothing to me. I would us soon look at the society doubt as at the old Mesters." veriest daubs as at the old Masters.

* This series of papers "Women's Chances as Brendwinners," was commenced with
"How to Become a Trained Nurse" | January
"Women as Strengharders," | February
"Women as Deessaakens" | March
"Bee-Beering for Women" | May
"Women as Deessaakens" | May
"Women as Deetson | May
"Women as Tyrenghartens" | June
"The Gera, Who Wants to Traces" | September
"Women as Internow Deconations" | October
"Women in Ast" | November
"Women in Ast"

FROM AN ARTIST'S VIEW

BY WILLIAM M. CHARR

THE WELL-KNOWN ARTIST

HIS is a field of labor but recently opened to women. Twenty years ago the woman artist encountered many obstacles in her path to af-fluence and fame. But with the radical enfranchisement of women mdical enfranchisement of women into the professional and business walks of life, these obstacles and hindrances were pushed uside. Women are now admitted into colleges and academies of design, and enjoy the same instruction and privileges as men. In my own classes, I treat both sexes alike. I criticise the work without giving a thought to the author's personality. Two-thirds of my pupils are young ladies. In my parlors hang two pictures which I value as much as any that adorn my walls. One is the production of a woman who was formerly a student of mine, the other is the work of a student of mine, the other is the work of a French woman.

In view of the fact that woman's opportunity to show what she can do in the field of art has but just come, it were unjust to draw conclusions from the present status and work of woman artists. One can only look at the situation generally and judge of the ultimate outcome by the present outlook.

We have no formic Ruphael or Augusto or

We have no female Raphael, or Angelo, or Titian; but the names of Elizabeth Serani, Marie Robusti, Angelica Kauffmann, Lavinia Fontana, Rosa Bonbeur, Louise Abbema, Louise Bresslau, Berte Moresot and Mary Cassatt, sufficiently attest that in the domain

Cossett, sufficiently attest that in the domain of art, as in every other, woman, if she does not rise to the very pinnacle of greatness, may at least attain excellence of no common order.

We are told that the first portrait in relief that ever appeared was modeled from a sketch made by Kora, daughter to one Dibutades, a native of Corinth. Pliny makes mention of one Trimarata, a woman, whose pictures he had himself sees. It Pohesus. In the time of Alexander the Grene of find the names of several women artists—Circne, Aristarite and Calypso. A charming little painting by the latter, found in Pompeli, is now in the studio of Naples. Although the Romans did not espouse art so universally as did the Greeks, we are told that a woman, Laya, excelled in the painting of portraits. Down to the Middle Ages we hear little or nothing of woman artists, but the names of those whose works have become more or less well-known since then are too many for mention here.

There is no use denying the existence of a statistic agency of the statistics of a statistic and the statistics and the services of the statistics of a statistic and the statistics of the statistics of the statistics and the statistics of the statistics of the statistics and the statistics of the statistics of the statistics and the statistics of the statistics of the statistics and the statistics of the s

There is no use denying the existence of a prejudice among some people against the work done by a woman artist. But I defy any one to distinguish between two canvases, one of to distinguish between two canvases, one of which shall be the production of a woman, and the other of a man. Women are much influenced by the work of their teachers, who are usually men. In the selection of a sub-ject, they are becoming daily more and more true to art. Formerly, the decorating of china, the painting of sachet bags, the execution of dainty, meaningless groups of flora, seemed to satisfy women. Now they compete with men in the selection of their subjects. In treat-ment, they are what we understand as effem-in the selection of their subjects. In treatment, they are what we understand as effeninate. Women are not endowed with great creative powers, but they are eminently calculated to excel in all that demands grace, tenderness, fancy, quick perception and delicate poetic feeling.

Art is not to be considered as a means of livelihood. Fortune may come, but only with the years. And the long, long road uphill, can only be traversed by those who have patience, endurance, and, last, but greatest of all, money. We artists do not paint in order that our bank-books may become piethoric. As a rule, we are content to make a comfortthat our bank-books may become pictnoric.

As a rule, we are content to make a comfortable subsistence and take the notice of our work by the public as the ices and fruits of desert. Artists are wonderfully lacking in business tact, and often submit to extreme impositions. There are two qualities which I think artists need—application and wholesome conceit, or a more accurate appreciation of the

Every artist, man or woman, will find an audience. And it is in art as in music, literature and the drama. In the obverse ratio to their artistic merit will the size of that audience be. The more popular an artist's paint-ings, the wider the circle of people to whom they appeal. I would not advise any woman to enter the profession who is not able to stand unrecognized and unpatronized, for some years at least. But, putting aside the question of income. I see no reason why women should not attain as great success as men have attained or can attain. Genius has no sex.

A Christman Giff worth having is one that is hand-some, durable and the source of mending enjoyment, such a present would be se qualities of a gift with all the requisities of a first-class plano,

If not for sale by your local dealer, address THE JOHN CHURCH CO., Cincinnati, Obio.

"From Andaste to Allegro," an illustrated pamphiet, will be sent free to any one who will mention where this advertisement was seen.

PALACE ORGANS.

Over 50,000 sold during the last 20 years.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

THE LORING & BLAKE ORGAN CO.,

WORCESTER, MAS

High in quality. Beautiful designs and finleh. Reasonable prices and terms, both wholesale and re-tail. You will do wisely to find out about these goods before buying others. Catalogues free. Address

GEO. P. BENT, MANUFACTURER, CHICAGO, U. S. A.

YOUR MONOCRAM Englayed on rubber 50 cts same as the for only 50 cts, the indelibleink, Just what every person wasts to mark their Letters, Envelopes, Libens, Etc. Sent by mail prepaid. Address THE R. D. SWISSER MFG CO., Springfold, Ohio.

FASHIONABLE HAIR.

We will mail goods to reliable parties throughout the United States for approval. The new-ess styles and best of goods at lowest prices. No money re-quired until they are received. No obligation to keep goods if unsatisfactory. Send for circular. JOHN MEDINA.

FARGO'S $2.50 LADIES' BOOT

continually grows in popularity on account of its style, durability and price. It is made in all styles. Ask your dealer for it and if he does not keep them send to us for the style and size you want. A full descrip-tion and Pocket Mirror sent on application. C. H. FARGO & CO.,

CHECAGO, ILLINOIS.

OF INTEREST TO LADIES!! Send 30 cents tube of Lilliam Jelly. Indispensable in winter. unbe of Lillium Jelly. Indispensable in winter.
It will keep the skin soft and improves the complexion. Invaluable if used directly after shaving and waching. Try it and you will like it.
LEGGETT & BROTHER, 300 Pearl St. S. Y.

LADIES' BOOTS ONLY $2.00. hes, 2% to 8. B, C, D, E and EE widths. Sent, postpaid, on receipt of $2.00, In Kld, Gost or bright Dougola, Opera or Common Sense Toe.

CONSURERS' BOOT & SHOE CO. Her Ellob, Fosion, Sam. Biastrated Cutsloper sent free upon application

DO NOT STAMMER!"

CURED SIX YEARS

Mr. Elwyn Steck, 63 Chestunt St., Phila., Pa.; Mr. R. Sayferd, First National Bank, Harrisburg, Pa., and Miss Photos Pithian, Bridgeton, N. J.

Endorsed by Pretmaster-General Wanamaker, Send Sr M-page pamphlet to E. S. JOHNSTON'S Institute, 1033 Spring Garden St., Phila., Pa.

WIFE SHE CANNOT SEE SHOW THE BOXET.
$12 September 19 on the BOXET.
$12 September 19 on the BOXET.
$13 September 19 on the BOXET.
$14 September 19 on the BOXET.
$15 September 19 on the Boxet Superspecial September 19 on the Boxet September 19 on the B

STEM-WINDING MUSICAL WATCH, Pitely rands, effect closes, greated acres by seer offered. Complete Musical Instrument, size and shape of a wards, Music Blue Black attachment concealed within, plays one of the following times.—Home, Sweet Hame, Yankse Boodle, Blue Belle of bestland, Carnival of Verliee, Grandfisher's Cock, and a Walle. Entertains both old and SPECIAL OFFER. To increadure now Family Representation from the Cock of the Cock of a Beautiful Magazine 3 months for only 5.6 cents. Stamps taken. You will be delighted with it. Address BOCIAL VISITOR, SOX SIJO, BOSTON, MASS. Digitized by Google

KNICKERBOCKER SHOULDER-BRACE and Suspender Combined Expands the Chest; prevents flound Shoulders. A perfect Skirt-Supporter for Ladies, No harness—simple—unlike all others. All slow for Men. Women, Boys and Girls. Chempest and only reliable Shoulder-Brace. Easily adjusted and worn with comfect. It is a Combined Shoulder-Brace and Suspender. It provides new and improved aspenders for men's pants, and supporters for ladies' underskirts, which do the double duly of holding up and bracing up,

Sold by Druggists and General Stores, or sent, post-paid, on receipt of $1 per pair, plain, or $1,50 silk-faced. Send chest measure around the body. Address

KNICKERBOCKER BRACE COMPANY, Easton, Pn. N. A. JOHNSON, Proprietor.

No More Round Shoulders.

ORCHID FLOWER

PERFUMES

W OULD you fully satisfy the requirements of a refined taste for exquisite perfemes, use Seely's Drebis Plawer; they are delightful reproductions of the observe they are

Stanhopea, Galeandra, Vanda, Miltonia,

Anguloa, Calanthe. 1-ounce Bottles, $6.75 | Sec If not to be obtained of your druggles, we will send by mail postpaid, on receipt of price. Sold also by the pound to the drug broke.

SEELY MFG. CO., ole Proprietors of Orchal.

Detroit, Mich.

SOLID GOLD RINGS, $2.69

SPECIAL.—We have purchased a prominent maker's entire stock of fine, solid gold rings; thousands of them; immired of styles; all stor; regular value from $5.00 to $6.00; all sold to readers of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL at $5.00 each; see these;

712. Set with 3 reets and 4 pearls.

of the room complete in America.

New Hubbley Catabague, contribute in June Hubbley Catabague, contribute years a fine of the complete of the complete in the BOYS, MEN. Watches to suit people in any and every post-tion in life. Call on as if possible. We also send goods by express for examination.

21 years at the center of the wholesale district of the Watch and Jew-stry trade of this con-tinent.

HENRY ABBOTT & CO., 14 Maiden Lane, New York.

Wife or Daughter Wants the Perfect Piano

CHRISTMAS, 1891.

Spring back, adjustable forward and backward and to different heights. "It rests the back." Photo-Catalogue Free. Trade Supplied.

BLACKMER BROS. & CO., 413 Wahash Avenue, Chicago.

BERNARD MEYER, 151 Chambers St., New York. MANCHACCORNE

Fancy Boxes and Cornucopias, CHRISTMAS-TREE ORNAMENTS

For Sunday School and Home Use SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

HEALTH SUPPLIES CO., 710 BROADWAY, N.Y. BARNEY & BERRY

CATALOGUE FREE

WHY SANTA CLAUS' BEARD IS WHITE

A LEGEND: BY M. A. BIRD

URING the babyhood of Santa Claus—long, long ago—while still many good and worthy folk believed wood-sprites lived in the holes of trees, witches in caves, and dwarfs deep down under earth, there lived in far Germany, on one of the lesser mountains of the Harz, a miner, with his wife and seven children.

Deep down in the bosom of the mountains was the mine. Here the father had worked each day from morn to night to feed, even scantily, his wife and children. At last came a season of great dearth. The miner fell sick. Sadly his wife hung out of sight his leather work-suit.

The cold winter with its cruel grasp stole down from the mountain-tops; still the miner lay seek; still the dearth of food throughout iny seek; still the dearth of food throughout the little town; nowhere a mouthful to spare. The birds in the trees lived and were merry. Must the little children starve? Who had done it? "I tell you, it's the Gubich, king of dwarfs, who spoiled the crops last year. I know his pranks, curse him," said the oldest of the miners. "Who in summer steals all the respherities and strawberries? He never cuts must teles and has lived little a value, in eats aught else, and has lived like a prince, in his rocky cavern up there among the holy firs, ever since the old giant threw these mountains out of his shoe because the bit of sand hurt him. I tell you, the Gübich can make us sick with a glance, touch or breath. Save me from going near his home! Yet they say the cones off his trees are good to eat, and can be made into wondrous pretty things which sell well in the town below us. Starve or touch them? Starve I say!

in the town below us. Starve or touch them? Starve, I say!"
"Dear husband," said the patient wife, "thou knowest the holy firs; I go to gather their cones, I will sell them and buy thee food which will make thee well. Children, care for thy father while I am gone."

Quickly throwing a shawl over her head and taking a basket on her arm, out into the gathering coldness of the coming night stepped the mother. The wind shoot "continued the mother. The wind shoot "continued the mother with the stepped at the windows of the continued the and dried foliage of the mother to the gods the elements were thought. no to the gods the elements were thought to respect, and then died away among the pines in a soft, sad music, that brought tears to the mother's eyes. It was like the moun the bairns made for bread. The tears broke into a sob; half-blinded, with bent head, she reached the edge of the holy forest.

Pityingly, out from his bed of clouds, the setting sun glanced warm and tender. He shot his parting rays among the firs, and filled their deep shadows with a cheerful glow. Suddenly, into the marked pathway of his light, stepped a little man with snowy beard, who gravely doffed his leathern cap and waited for the sad mother to reach him.

who gravely doffed his leathern cap and waited for the sad mother to reach him.

"Good woman, what all'st thou? Why so sad?" broke upon her startled ear.

"Oh, sir, I mean no harm. My children starve; my husband never again will be well. I cannot see them ask each day for bread and give them none. I go to gather cones. Do let me pass and fill my basket."

"I would harm thee not, my friend," said the little man. "And knowest thou where the best cones can be found? Follow this path a hundred feet, and there they can be gathered with "—but the mother was on her way. A knowing look, a caress of his white beard, a sniff of the perfumed forest air, and the little sniff of the perfumed forest air, and the little man had vanished.

With glad feet the mother hurried on. Not a sound but the dropping of the cones broke the stillness of the forest. Faster and thicker they seemed to fall at each onward step. A perfect storm of cones. They dropped upon her head; they fell at her feet; they pelted her shoulders; they filled her basket. Frightened, the poor woman turned and fled, glancing neither to the right or left. Heavier and heavier the basket grew. Breathless and exhausted she reached her cottage door.

The mother entered and quickly barred the door. "Husband, husband, think what hus happened! On the edge of the holy forest I met a little man with snowy beard, who told me where to gather the best cones. I hurried to find them, but the farther I went the faster the cones fell from the firs. They came about my head as thick as snow-flakes in mid-winter yet the trees shoch to I. With glad feet the mother hurried on. Not my head as thick as snow-flakes in my head as thick as snow-flakes in mid-winter, yet the trees shook not. I was afraid and did not stop to pick up one; but some fell in my basket, and here they are."

"Hist,wife! Look, look thou! They are pure silver. It's the Güblich thou hast met."

Down the basket dropped. Around it grouped the mother and children. True, there lay the cones, silver every one, glenming in the fire-light as had the beard of the little man in the golden glow of the sun.

The morrow's sun had tipped the graceful firs with gold, when again the mother stood at the edge of the forest. In a moment the Gübich was before her. "Good-morrow, good soul! Founds't thou not beautiful conesyester-eve?" And a laugh rang through the forest. The mother struggled to speak. "Keep thy thanks, I wish them not" continued the Gübich. "Be thou only faithful to thy husband's words, and each cold December give to me and my dear firs a loving thought to keep our hearts warm. Now hie thee home." Not more quickly speeds the wind than the mother bome again; not more happy are the hirds than were the hearts in the miner's home that day. By night, nowhere a hungry soul on the "beautiful Hirbichenstein."

Dear Santa Claus—ever since, thy beard's The morrow's sun had tipped the graceful

Dear Santa Claus—ever since, thy beard's been white as snow!

Dear Christmas joy—ever since, madly the Harz maidens dance round the graceful firs.

CHRISTMAS CARDS BY MAIL.

Our card and booklet packets have become a necessity in thousands of families at Christman time. We will send the first six packages for $3.25 postpaid or the complete set of sine packages for $5.40 postpaid. Satisfaction branteed.

No. 1. For 56 Cents, and 4 Cents for Postage, 17 Prang
Co.'s and other fire Christmas Cards, together with cut-out forms, and a fire the christmas Cards, together with cut-out forms. aped card and a fine birthday card.

No. 2.—For 36 cents, and 4 Cents for Postage, 10 inred dimer Cards from the above publishers, togother with a shaped

No. 3. - For $1.90, and 6 Cents for Postage, a choice selec-on of 25 Beautiful Carls, of L. Prang and Co.'s, also a hand-from 6 25 Secutible Cards, of L. Prang and Co.'s, also a hard-nome sourcenir booklet.

No. 4.—For $1.00, and S Cents for Postage, a rejection of 10 of our largest and finest Cards, together with a Saota Claim Lei-ter, disstraied, and a folding Calendar for 1892.

No. 5.—For 25 Cents, and 2 Cents for Postage, 10 Prang's, Tack's, Ward's, and other beautist cards.

No. 5.—For 50 Cents, and 4 Cents for Postage, 5 Christ-mas Booklets, including one shaped booklet in the form of an ani-mal.

est in the market,"

PAPER BY THE POUND, We guarantee our prices lowest in America. Sample sheets of paper and envelopes from 10 cts. a pound and upward, with prices and number of sheets to a pound, sent on receipt of 15 cts. These papers are the current style and finish for fashionable correspondence.

SPECIAL OFFER, On orders of 89 and over we will prepay freight charges to nearest milrond station. Cuth your orders with friends and take advantage of this. Agents and dealers should correspond with us. ENGRAVED VISITING CARDS. For $1.75 we send a copperpiate, finely engraved, with fifty onds. Estimates furnished for Weiding and Case-day invitations, Street Dies, Crests and Stamping. Samples free on application. All the work is these of our premises. We comploy only the best workmen and use the finest cards. We guarantee satisfaction.

We guarantee satisfaction.

Handsome boxes of fine stationery, plain or illuminated, for 35 cents, 50 cents, 75 cents, 81.00 to $2.00 each, sure to give satisfaction.

H. H. CARTER & CO., 3 Beacon St., Boston.

HIGH CLASS MUSIC FOR THE PIANO.

WILLER MARCH.

THE WILLER WALTZ,

THE WILLER SCHOTTISCHE. The Willer Polka.

Twelve pages, music portfolio size, engraved notes, handsome title page lithographed in four colors and printed on finest paper.

Above sheet music will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of 16 cents in stamps or coin,

WILLER MANUFACTURING COMPANY,

Order now, as this advertisement will appear but once.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

YOUR NEIGHBOR

is using a "Hariman". Wire Mat at his door, and so are his "sisters, and his cousins and his sunts." We have not only made over half a million wire mats, but our ainmat sales equal 10 per cent. of the total in our line. Catalogue and Testimonials, mailed free.

HARTMAN MFG. CO., works. Beaver Falls, Pa. Branches; 302 Chambers Street, New York; 5m State Street, Chicago; 54 and 53 South Foreyth Street, Allanta, Ga. Our Mats have brass tag attached stamped "Hariman."

What A Roast!

Any one can have if they only use the

Excelsior Roasting & Baking Pan

A Triumph of Common Sense Cooking. Insures everything being "done to a turn,"—each part delightfully browned, while no part can be burned,—and preserves the junces, which alone give to a roast delicious flavor, Just as well adapted for Bread and Cake. 6 sizes, $1.50 to $2.75. A medium size sent, prepaid, for $2.00. Polished steel. Very durable. Send for circulars, describing also other Household Specialties.

M. F. KOENIG & CO., Box 542, Hazleton, Pa.

Jinner.

Christmas For in time

MOTHERS | Do you wish 8000 with which to educate your child when it is have it. For particulars, address F. P. P.BENCH, See'y Children's Endowment Society. Minneapolis, Minu.

"What Paper Next Year?"

No woman should decide without seeing that charming paper, the Housekeeper's Weekly.

Give yourself the luxury of a WEEKLY this year. It costs $1.00 a year. MARION HARLAND'S capital "House and Home Talks" each week. A weekly feast. "Fills the place of a dozen monthilies, at the cost of one,"

No pass sawries. Too cheap to give away.

Sand asc. for ten weeks' trial. **Eg-And if you are so fixed that you could do some moderately paying work for us at your home, compiling lists, nedressing, etc., please say so, nawing this faster.

Housekeeper's Weekly, 29 N. 7th St., Philada.

WE RESPIRE THE DIGITIZED by Google

And wherever else exhibited

ESTABLISHED IN 1851: 29,000 SOLD.

They combine ELEGANCE, DURABILITY, and ODERATE PRICES. Among the many other IN-COVERENTS which they consun, are the PAT-VF REPEATING ACTION, producing a touch as Busing as Elmi, of a Concert Grand Fiano; the ENT REFEATING ACTION, producing a touch as delicate as that of a Concert Grand Plano; the CAPO PASTRO BAR, which estatins that beautiful sing quality of tone, so wanting in most Upright Planos; the BUCSE PROOF PhDaL, which is an absolute protection against more getting into planos and making haveo with the felts. Sold on the most aeronomodating terms. Delivered in your house FELE OF EXPENSE and estatished on gearanced. Old instruments taken in exchange. Catalogues and full information mailed free.

VOSE & SONS PIANO CO.

OUR PEERLESS

of homes where it is not already taken, now make the following engrecodes determine the control of the state of the control of

TO BUILD IS A PLEASURE

WHEN YOU SEE THESE SEW 1891 DENIGNS IN BOOKS 4 and 5, "BOUNES and COTTACIN," Nor. 8.2 19 Inches. Contains now designs, new styles. No. 6 has 15 designs classified from $100 up to $1000, about half sudder $1000. No. 5 centains 20 designs of dwellings corting ever $1000, many $1000 up to $1000.

B each, or the two for $1.50.

C HONGERS. D. S. HOPKINS, Architect

Cor, of Ottawn Street, Grand Rapids, Mick.

USEFUL THINGS WORTH KNOWING

VERY often it is the short hint or sugges-tion that we read somewhere which proves a mountain of help at some critical time, and the following may deserve a place in the memory or the scrap-book of the cureful housekeeper.

A REMEDY FOR TENDER FEET

A REMEDY for tender feet is cold water, about two quarts, two tablespoonfuls of ammonia, one tablespoonful of bay rum. Sit with the feet immersed for ten minutes, gently throwing the water over the limbs up-ward to the knee. Then rub dry with a crash towel and all the tired feeling is gone.

ABOUT BRUSHING THE TEETH

THE question is often asked, How often should the teeth be brushed? After every meal, and just before retiring, should be the rule with everybody; but as this may seem to be so much of a task to some as to discourage them altogether, a safe rule, which all can follow conveniently, would be to brush them every night and morning; this, if done thoroughly, would no doubt prevent decay from any deposits of food which would occur. Many people who brush their teeth regularly, and have finely preserved sets, use nothing but water.

HOW TO TREAT CORMS

CORNS are somewhat a result of the constitution; but there is no question that the rubbing and slipping of an ill-fitting shoe is a frequent occasion of them. No radical cure for them has yet been discovered. They may be greatly helped, though, by being soaked for twenty minutes in warm water, then pared or scraped with a very sharp knife, and painted with iodine. Lunar caustic is excellent also, but not exactly safe, as it sometimes burns so deep as to make a scrious sore. A salve made of white or yellow wax, spermaceti and almond, or castor-oil, in equal quantities, is excellent to rub upon corns and callousness. Apply just before going to bed, after bathing, but not soaking the foot, and rub in thoroughly.

FOR PEOPLE WHO WISH TO BE STOUT

THE role to be observed by those persons who feel that they ought to be a trifle stouter, is simply this, says a very practical physician: Avoid excitement and keep your mind as much as possible in a state of repose and free from worry. People of a nervous temperament should control themselves. Learn to sit quietly for a long period, and don't rush about consuming muscular tissue by unnecessary movements. Eat all you can and as often as you can, avoiding bot things, such as bot bread, and that which is made from the finer grades of wheat. Stale bread made of flour containing a portion of the chaff, is far more nutritions than light, freshly-baked bread. The diet should consist of such articles of food as are largely composed of starch and sugar and oil. Meat in large quantities should be avoided. All things should be thoroughly cooked in order that the raw material can undergo the chemical change that otherwise would have to be deep by the stewards. dergo the chemical change that otherwise would have to be done by the stomach. Lastly, sleep as long as your time allows. These rules and such suggestions as you will observe by watching yourself, will soon add all the flesh to your frame that you want,

WASHING BLANKETS AND WOOLENS

Washing blankets and woolens: Take onehalf of a bar of any good laundry soap; shave it very fine. Pour over it a pint of boiling water, and put upon the fire and stir until it becomes a thick paste. Into this put one tablespoonful of borax and two tablespoonfuls of ammonia. Have ready a tub of tepid water softened with a tablespoonful of borax, Stir into this the soap mixture, then put in the articles you wish cleaned. Let them soak an hour, occasionally turning them over; then run through a wringer. After this rinse through clear, tepid water, being careful sever torub with the hands. Run through the wringer tagain, and hang in the sun to dry. When nearly dry, iron.

Blankets washed by this receipt are as soft as when new. Shawis, flannel dresses, in fact all woolen goods, it will wash beautifully.

SOME USES OF BAKING-SODA

sect stings Moisten a pinch o Soda with water, and apply to the wound.
For pimples, fever-blisters, burns, poison from ivy: - Mix one teaspoonful of soda with one-half glass of water, and apply with a soft cloth.

To remove sunburn :- Mix one tenspoonful of soda to one-half glass of vinegar, and apply with cloth to face and hands just before re-with cloth to face and hands just before re-tiring.

For bathing:—Add a little to the water.

For sore throat:—Hold a small quantity in the mouth, or mix a little with water, and gargle frequently with it.

For cuts and barb-wire fence wounds:—Mix one dessertspoonful of soda to one cup of boiling water and apply with a soft rag as hot as it can be endured. as it can be endured.

HOW TO PREVENT PROZEN FEET

N cold weather never wear a woolen stocking inside a thin tight shoe. To do it is to invite frozen feet. The wool grows damp and clammy with insensible perspiration, the shoe pinches the bloodyessels into sluggish torpor. pinches the bloodvessels into sluggish torpor. Betwixt them you have a frozen foot almost before you know it. Much better put a thin silk, lisle-thread or cotton stocking next to the foot, and draw the woolen one on outside the shoe. With arctics over the stockings, you can defy Jack Frost, if you are shod like Cinderella herself.

minutes every part of you is the better for a full breath of fresh air. You know it all over. So much for a flash of lightning. Now for a discovery of science. Drs. Starkey and Palen's Compound Oxygen is exactly similar in composition and effects to the clearer air of the lightning's flash. The manner of application is exactly the same, the proof exactly similar. How do you know? You feel it. You feel it all over. Nature's he!p, in nature's way, for nature's needs—that's Compound Oxygen. It was discovered more than twenty years ago. Ever since, and in widening circles it has given strength to the weak, hope to the despondent, and years of life to those given over to die. We can prove this to any one who could be convinced that there ever lived such a man as George Washington. The evidence can be had for asking.

DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal. 66 Church St., Toronto, Canada.

DON'T

To Learn Book-keeping

When you can learn it of home, within 100 hours' study, without the aid of a teacher, from GOODWIN'S IMPROVED BOOK-KEEPING AND BUSINESS MANUAL (guaranteed).—"I learned the science of book-keeping from your work in less than three weeks, and am now keeping three different sets of books. What I learned from your work in so short a time cost a friend of mine 1809, and over a year's time."—Thomas Tantraus, Skowheeping, Maine, March 20, 1806.—"You illustrate what I sever saw in any other week of the kind—practicel book-keeping."—E. H. Witturs, book-keeper for Pract & Inman, iron and steed Wistoweter, Masses, "Without the aid of a teacher, I studied your book just eight weeks, sent my work to you for examination and succeeded in obtaining your 'model.' I then canse to this city, without ever having seen the inside of a set of books, you for examination and store receipts thring 180 were about $1,500.00. I am now the firm's chief accountant, and have five direct assistant book keepers under me. It is said—and I do not think exaggerated—that I have the largest set of books in Indianapolis. The above surely stand as self-evident facts that the channet of six-vess was opened to me through the medium of your book."—WM. O. Sannaxy, head book-keeper for The Parry Manufacturing the, road carts and road wagons, Indianapolis, Ind., Pebruary 231, 1801—287-cite of books, 19 pages 281; printed in red and black; richly bound; 23,38 copies sold and 2,57 testimomials received up to October 20, 180, printed in red and black; richly bound; 23,38 copies sold and 2,57 testimomials received up to October 20, 180, printed in red and black; richly bound; 20,38 copies sold and 2,57 testimomials received up to October 20, 180, printed in red and black; richly bound; 20,38 copies and probably never see it again. Hand it to your father, husband, son or brother. He will rurely have the book gene day, if not at eace. This is and some of the contribute partitle partitle, and or your father.

J. H. GOODWIN, Room 98, 1215 Broadway, New York

Grand Orchestral Musical Boxes.

If you have not received my new catalogue you should ask for one. The Symphonion, is the only Music Box with changable steel plates. Plays

1000 DIFFERENT TUNES.

THE LATEST AND MOST DESIRABLE MUSIC BOX TO BUY. FRED. H. SANDER, Importer. 146 FRANKLIN ST., BOSTON

good Mayor

Cold Blast Odorless Feathers AND FEATHER PILLOWS are sold guaranteed free from Odor, Dust and Quills, in perfect condition and permanently busyons. Ask your dealer for them or address THE COLD BLAST FEATHER CO.,

MANUPACTURER FAULTLESS BEDDING Including Imperial Hair Mattreamen, Etc. 56 to 66 W. VanBuren St., Chicago, U. S. A.

1852

Entered according to Act of Congress in the year 1832 by Dr. A. B. WILBOR, in the Clerk's Office of the District Court of the District of Massachusetts.

Do you sak what this is? No wonder! Any prepara-

40 YEARS

and steadily gained in the estimation of physicians who regularly prescribe it, and the public who endorse its wonderful coralive properties. The amount of sales have rapidly increased until Militons of Bottles are now sold annually. This preparation is

WILBOR'S PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.

It is worthy of all confidence. It came Consump-tion, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Preumonia, Influ-ence, droachitis, Debility, Wasting Diseases and Berefulous Humors.

Be sure as you value your health and get the germine, as base imitations said to be as good as

WILBOR'S COD LIVER OIL AND PHOSPHATES

are attempted to be substituted by unprincipled deal-ers. They are not, but lack the peculiar virtues of this preparation. If your Draggist does not keep it, send direct to A. B. Wilbor, Chemist, Boston, Mass., the only Manufacturer of this Preparation.

YOU HAVE TROUBLE In trying to keep your Bangs and Curls in position? If so, send 50 cts. to A. B. AUSTIN. Manufacturer of Tollet Specialities, 67 N. sin St., Transa HAUTE, 1852, for a bottle of COLUMBIAN CURLING CREAM, which will turn your trouble into joy.

DO YOU READ ADVERTISEMENTS?

TRATE WEAT WE WART TO FIND 0071

To the first 20 who mention Thus Lannior Home Journal and send for full particulars of our $100 lots on easy terms, in GRIFFITH, the coming Great Manufacturing Bubarb of Chicago, we will send a freetyl for $50, good on any lots brought of us. To the next it, we will send a free admission licket to the World's Fair. Try it!

JAY DWIGGINS & CO., 400 Chamber of Commerce, Chicago.

COCOA-BUTTER | Harrison & Printing of the HAIR

EYEBROW PENCIL 250. Gara & Co. P.O. San 1585, Borden.

WE TEACH HOW, You make $75.00 to $150.00 8. A. RUSS CO., South Bend, Ind.

10 POPULAR ONE-CENT SONGS 5C NOVELTY AGENCY, Frenchtown, N. J.

LADIES' RUCHINGS.

6 yes, of best Slik Cord Ruching (any color) in sent but sent, postpaid, for 25 ets. or 3 yes. for 20 ets. Samples of all the latest styles of fluching for 3 two-cord stamps. NATIONAL RUPPLE CO. Fair Hven, Conn.

WHAT Under New and Aust Colorshin think, etc., of ASHINGTON and Scattle, Soud stamps to Echelman, Mewellyn & Co., Seattle, Washington

MRS. B. C. HATCH, Sot W. 14th St., N.Y., Perchases Dry Goods, Fors, Jewelry, etc. Accompanies ladies shopping. Send stame for circular. (Reference.)

WALL PAPER Attractive styles. Refresse. 1900 samples to Son, aroll. ALDIAMENT & CO., 1306 Market St. Phills. Pt.

MAGIC LANTERNS WANTED AN LIGHTAND. LADIES | Send ten cents for package Waste Sewing J. H. BENNETT. 20 Brondway Extension, Roston.

NEW YORK SHOPPING For ladies, without charge, West Twenty-first St. Write for descriptive circular.

NEW PROCESS DOC BISCUIT is entirely different from all others. Deer not came discretors. Bugs est it is prefer-ence to other brands, and it costs no more. It centains pound for pound twice the nutri-sive qualities of any other brand. Seed for free book on management of dogs in health and discase. Bettell prin-tice, see it. (Feelight extent.) Samples sent by mail for be-BIRD FOOD CO., No. 400 N. Third St., Philadelphia, Pa.

LADIES, DON'T BE PERFECTION DRESS STAY

BUT USE the "PERFECTION" DECIS STAY, with a suds of the steel, corrected not be not observed to the ends of the steel, corrected not be not though. Gustin Perceks, nearest, will not trust. "Perfection" stamped on the back of each Stay. Ask your dealers for them. Write for samples, Manufactured by THE DETROIT STAY CO., Detroit, Mich. New York Office and Subserven, 823 Broadway.

provents sick ness, wind col-ic, indignation; in soil cleans-ing, any draw-ing and cheep. Enforced and used by I will relevate no other it for you. Descrip-MANIFOLD CO., 291 Church Street, New York, Munufpelurer.

BSELF-THREADING NEEDLES-Every Lady Wants Them. will not pull out, or out in the eye;
with not pull out, or lot in the eye;
with dark or by a bried person in the SOCIAL VISITOR, Box 3139, Boston, Mass MUSIC 20c to SI ) 10c Send 10c for trial Order, Places at ) 10c Send 10c for trial Order, Windows Music Co., 215 Walnach Av. Chicago.

30 NEW 2c.

TO ALL CORRESPONDENTS: Any question from our renders of help or interest to women, will be cheer fully answered in this Department.

First please beer in mind: Write your questions plainly and briefly. Don't use unnecessary words; editors are busy persons.

The right to answer or reject any question is reserved by the Editor.

Asserves cannot be promised for any special issue. They will be given as quickly after receipt as possible.

All correspondence should be accompanied by full name and address, not for publication, but for reference.

ALICK—It is in good taste to let a gentleman ask per-mission to call upon you.

N.-P. P. C. means pour prendre conge, that is to say in French, take farewell.

MINNIE R.—It is certainly very impolite for a man to smoke in a lady's presence.

B.—Some very posity coats that will give you hints as to the styles are shown in this number of the Jour-NAL.

M. R.—I do not think fruit stains can be removed from a white wood gown unless by a professional cleaner.

A SUBSCRIBER-The pine pillows to which you refer can be gotten at most of the decorative art stores in the large cities.

A. S. W.—A storm-coat is seldent worn except when there is a storm, or one on its way and announcing its coming by dark clouds.

A. G.—Tan-colored gloves may be worn with any except a gray suit. The tailor-made gown is always in good style for street wear.

THA,—The burnished silver is given the preference over the oxidized; and really, it must be confused that in looks it is much prefiler.

CONSTANT RHADER—It will be extremely impolite not to thank a gestleman who has been corrected enough to take you out driving.

VERA—White is not a color. The hair can be curied on Kid rollers and the Iron is out then necessary. Broad-brimmed hats are in fashion.

PANNIE L. H.—If your bed-spread is a handsome one, I should advise your submitting it to a professional cleaner to remove the grouse-spots from it.

INNOCENCE ARROAD—There is nothing that is absolutely wrong in a gentleman taking a lady's arm, but it suggests a familiarity that is not in good case.

Masse M.—It is not necessary that a maid-of-honor at a weating should be a child. In the evening at a for-mal weating the groom and ushers wear dress clothes. J. M. C.—There would be no impropriety whatever in asking a widow who is an old friend and whose histhand has been dead eighteen months to allow you to call upon her.

M. N.—Both flowers and feathers will be used upon the hate this season, so that the mingling of your crimson roses, with your black plumes, will be in good taste.

I. A. S.—Make your brown flaunch dress with a close-fitting skirt that has no trimming upon it, a coat bacque and high full sieves; finish the throat with a rolling collar.

A. B. C.—If a friend sends regards or love to you through another friend, it will be contracts. for you to say, "thank you," to whoever has been kind enough to give you the message.

A. B. C.—A daughter wears a crape rell and bound for her parents for two years, and a widow can, if she wishes, wear crape all her life. This is entirely a mat-ter of personal feeling.

L. B.—The gray wool will look very well trimmed with dark blue velvet. I would suggest a border around the lower edge, a collar with deep revers and cuffs and pocket laps to correspond.

Mns. A.—Make the little man's costone of gray flan-net with a short kilt skirt, knee breeches to match, cost buttoned down the front of the same material, and a plain white lines collar and cuffs.

SUBSCRIBER-You can only get a natural row color in your checks by keeping yourself in a thoroughly healthy state. Health and row checks as naturally gu together as happiness and smiles.

Max, Word, West—A prospective bride marks her table and bed lines with the initials that are here before her marriage; all supery gotion after her marriage should, however, bear the initials of the wife.

Wino—It is proper to have the number of your house and the street on which you live engraved on your vis-ting card. A full-dress salt is not worn until after six o'clock, and certainly not to an afternoon test.

Annus—A piece of dull brocade will make a pretty book-cover; it can have the liming of some dull sills, and then the ribbon the of a soft gros-grain ribbon that matches some of the brocade shades in true.

Innonance—A very pretty coal to get for the winter would be one of black serge fitted closely to the figure and extending almost to the kness. If cages are made of rich materials, they are then worn on dress occasions.

I. D. L. AND OTHERS—I must repeat again that we do not publish patterns, the garment shown in the il-instrations usually being the latest style shown by the dressmakers, and which have not reached pattern mak-

R. L. M.—Botted muslin curtains, with full frills of muslin to match, and ited back with white ribbons, are used for winter as well as for summer wear, the only demand being they shall be immaculate as the pro-verbial filly.

A. C. C.—In applying the sweet oil for the develop-ment of any part of the body, simply put a few drops in the palse of your band and when that is absorbed use a little more. Too much oil is sometimes as bad as not recently.

B. H. S.—Try using a good soap on your teeth every day, certainly once and if possible three times. Once a week use powdered charcost, cleaning them theroughly. A series of Russian baths would tend to soften and whiten your skin.

GENEVA, OHIO-Unless you are the hostess it is not necessary for you to rise or shake hands when a gentle-man is introduced to you. It is in the best tasic to help one's self only to what one can eat, and then an untity plate will not be left. A READER-Although I do advise and there are a od many velveteens, still I cannot recommend what is known as extens velvet. A mort more desirable would be one of dark blue seegs or cloth, trimmed black bear or black passementerse. School-Gibb.—I would advise for general upon a school a dark-blue rashiners, or seys. It would be found to keep elean longer than black, will not collect as many of the particles that seem to fly about a school-room, and is a little younger looking.

M. H. V.-A very handsome wrap for the whiter weather will be onced black came?'s bair, that of beavy quality being preferred : for a triuming, collar, coffs and most of the Hodon Bay salie for, which you say you already have, will be in good taste.

MOLLIK-Don't you think it just possible that you pay too much attention to the spois on your checks? Let your bushly physician decide what is best für you and then sirk to wintever in advises, für one cannot get well of any skils disease in a short thos.

F. J. A.—I cannot recommend any special system of rutting by charts. I can only say, that from other people's experience, the best way to learn dreamaking is to go in a dressmaker's shop, and commencing at the Sot of the ladder learn your way up.

Mns. J. G. L.—When a lady goes to a batel alone, the clerk comes to ber in the reception room, takes her name and registers for her. The only way to introduce one's self is to simply say, "1 am Mrs. Brown," and then go on and state what your business is.

E. M. N.—After a wedding at 1-o'ctock I would suggest your collation being served from the sideboard, letting the gentlemen walt upon the ladies. This will be found much loss trouble than a regular six-down supper, es-pectally when the wedding is to be a quiet one.

E. N. E. C.—The long fur-lined circulars are still in vague by people who live where it is cold enough to make one necessary. I have seen some extremely pretty ones this sesson made of good heavy camel's hair and lined with lock or whole squirrel skins.

Many M.—You cannot possibly make a mistake in trimining the black gows with black for, whether it is intended for street or house wear. The use of for as a decoration is so general that it is noted not only on the street and house, but also on the evening, costumes.

B. H.—As your black eatin skirt is in good condition, why not make a little black brocaded Jacket something like a mailner, and use it for house wear. You can trim this jacket very elaborately with interposite face and ribbins, so you seem to have achieved a very gorgeous tellet.

J. T.—If your astruction jacket is so much wern I would suggest your getting enough material to make a jacket of black camel's hale, trimming it with the for the control of the fir, also pecket laps and deep cuffs; this ought to be a very stylish wrap.

A. L. C. AND OTERRIS—We do not mention names in this column, but the souvenir boxes may be gotten at any of the French confectioners in New York city. I do not mean simply those who sell French candies, those who make a specialty of importing French trifes and noveities.

Woncester.—A square of dotted lace, finished with a frill of thread lace, will be pretty to wear around your neck, especially as you can arrange a little V-shape, opening so that part of the neck will show. Do not let your patent-leather shoes get too near any kind of heat, else they will certainly crack.

8. P. Q.—By having a special day engraved on your visiting cards it will be understood that that is your nathoner day, and your friends will call at that thire. Visiting bours differ in different cities. In New York they are from four tools: in many of the smaller towns from three to five, or even earlier.

8. D.—Have your mavy-blue serge trimmed with a facing of black astructum about the lower edge, and have your coat basque disibled in the same way, with a rulling collar of fur and deep rolling cuffs. A maiff made of the gover material and trimmed with fur and black ribbons would be in good taste.

M. T. B.—The white ribbon fillets for the hair to which I have referred may consist of either three or one hand as is most becoming. When one hand is worn, it should be tied in a little loop on the left side of the lead. I think either white satin or white gros grain would look more effective-these white velvet.

Inquirerree. It is certainly not in good taste for a young man to take a young woman's arm, but the taking of arms has in many instances gone entirely out of vorus, especially in the day time, when a man does not offer his arm to any except a very old lady or one who is crippted. After dark a gentleman may offer his arm to a lady.

F. K.—As your efforts at cleaning the black gown seem simply to have made E look worse, I would sag-gest, if S is good material, that you have it dyed. This is really the only perfect way of taking out spots that have been dabbled over by an annuleur. Strange as it may seem, black is one of the most difficult of all

Sea St.—If you wish to call on a young lady who is visiting at the house of people who are strangers to you, write her a note and ask her permission to make this call, expressing a wish at the same time to become acquainted with her hosters. A small white card with the name engraved upon it in the simplest manner is in good taste for a gentleman.

C. Z.—I would not advise your getting an elaborate milliary cape for general wear; instead, choose a long, well-fitting cost of serge in some becoming shade and let it fit you so thoroughty that no trimming will be necessary. There is a great simplicity just now in regards to neckwear, a simple brooch being always considered proper for the street.

V. V.—All shades of helintrupe and lavender are best worn by a person with dark hair and a rosy skin. The heliotrope shades make a blonde look pale and rather dragged out. The woman who is dark haired and with a rosy, desir complexion is fortunate in being able to mear almost any color except. Nile green, which is the exclu-sive property of the perfect blonde.

Marcox L.—White and gold chinn and glass are most in fashion on dinner tables; the glass is usually fine cut, and searches like diamonds when the candies are lift. By-the-by, it is pretilect to have candiestacks of glass, also; but if one passwers silver ones they will be in good taxle. All white napery is best liked, and the elaborate millinery used upon a table is now counted in extremely bed form.

Millionion—A smart traveling costume to be worn as a wedding gown would be one of guiden-brown sarge trimmed with one of the light brown, long-haired fars. The far need not be on the skirt, but only on the lacket basque, where it should constitute collar and cuffs and outline the edges. A links bounet decurated with mink tails could be worn with this, and the gloves should be of brown, undressed ktd.

R. I. S.-A new mode for arranging the bang is to crimp it, draw it back from the forefield, and permit one small curt just in the cruter to rest on the while sur-face. Though this is a little suggestive of the fations. "little girl who had a little curt," it is still a style very becoming to memor who have round faces and dark hair. Another mode much fancied shows a full being parted slightly at the side, and with a roll not unlike a lop-knot very close to the center.

Mass S. E. S.—The best way to entertain people is to be entertained yourself; to like what they like and to let them know it. As for your visitors, introduce your man friends to the ladles who are present and trust to them to make those pleasant. I do not think as Ension ritrous to the indice who are present and trust to them in make things pleasant. I do not think as En-glishman requires any different style of esterialment from any other mas; in fact, I think he is very enably essectationed by American women because they are powerfully brighter than those he is used to meeting at home.

MADD E.—In washing the hair it is elsest not to me too swoch water. It is the hair that should be given a hath, but it does not need to be delaged or else is drying there would be much trouble, and the color would be im-plement. The armall boost full of but water and a tooth bright. Scrub the scalp well with this, having dissolved in the water a sexual import kitchen soap. Do the hair into the basis and wring it out very quickly, so that the water has not time to soak. I would not advise washing the bair more than twice a month; for if it is well brashed and carefully attended in it will not re-quire it.

Integrate — As your rich slik is to be worn for receptions and formal calls. I would suggest inving the night train that is flavored, and a decoration of gold and let passementerie extending across the front and sides at les bottom. Have a bodier made in coat flashion, the side portions flaring away to show an elaborate waiterout of gold and let; flools the election with a full frill of black lace that has a passementerie coff above each, flave a high coller of the passementerie and a the of the lace. With this wear a small jet and grid bonnet, having carrow ties of black votest ribbon. Black undreased kid, or else very pale yellow ones, can be worn solitality with this dress.

Children

Enjoy It.

SCOTT'S

of pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda is almost as palatable as milk.

Children enjoy it rather than otherwise. A MARVELOUS FLESH PRO-DUCER it is indeed, and the little lads and lassies who take cold easily, may be fortified against a cough that might prove serious, by taking Scott's Emulaion after their meals during the winter season.

Bescare of substitutions and imitations.

WE WANT YOU

to act as our agent. We will treat you well and pay liberally for your services. The business is light, genteel and easy to handle. No special ability required. Either sex, young or old, with or without experience can make money easily, rapidly and honorably working for us. You may begin at home and if you wish, work only during your spare moments and evenings. OUR WORKERS ARE BETTER PAID THAN ALL OTHERS; can their money with greater case, and we supply them with articles that people want and will have. Full particulars sent free. Write to-day and address

GEORGE STINSON & CO., Box 1656, Portland, Maine.

40 Colors

Diamond Dyes

Will color anything. Diamond Dye Fas Blacks (for wool, for cotton, for silk and feathers) are easy to use, will not fade, and never crock. 10c. each. Sold everywhere, or mailed on receipt of price. Book free.

Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

ENGIL ALL STATIONERS BELL IT.

EVERYBODY PRAISES IT.

PERFECT PERCE POINTER CO PORTLANGME

CENTS (silvers pays for your address in the Thomands of firms want addresses of persons to whom they can mail papers. magazines, pictures, are refer, de., PREE as samples, and our patrons receive bushels of mail. The interest care in the control of the control whom they can mail papers, magazines, ctures, cards, &c., FHEE as samples, and our trone revelve bushesle of mail. Try in you ill be WELL PLEASED with the small investment. Address T. D. CAMPBELL, B.651, Serieson, India trade easily learned; costs stille to start. I will far cutfits and give work in part payment. Circular F. LOWEY, 252 Bergen St., Brooklyn, N.Y. AGENTS make 100 FER CENT, profit, on my Cornets, Barn-pies, Furnishes, Curiers and novelties. Sam-

SPEAKERS - DIALOGUES - GAMES ATHLETICS LEC CATALOGUE FREE. THEE WITT FURLISHING MERC-33 ROSE STINY

GOLD-SILVER-NICKEL PLATING.

ADY AGENTS clear 25 to $10 a day with our LARGE SPECIALTIES. Over 100 different and the clear. I believe the control of the clear better th

WORK Permanent Employment WOMEN After Cornets, Classes, Wolfers, Cornets, Classes, Wolfers, Ann. A Phot Mich.

Digitized by Google

"Books are the windows through which the soul looks out. A home without books is like a room without windows."—Henry Ward

Any one volume sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 3 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 2 Subscribers and 25 cents additional. Price, $1.00 each, including cost of postage and packing.

A Series including the Standard Works of the world's literature. (Such titles as we offer elsewhere in other editions we omit.) The text is in every case reliable and unabridged. Indexes, biographies, sketches and explanatory notes are given when likely to prove of value and Interest. An excellent opportunity for securing a rich and uniform Library of the very highest character, and at a price within the reach of Well bound in fine English cloth with gilt top and title. Printed in large type on good paper from new plates. Each book contains the Author's portrait.

A Thousand Miles up the Nile Amelia B. Edwards

The Holy Roman Empire James Bryce

The Last of the Barons Sir Edward Bulwer-Lytton, Bart.

Life of Christ F. W. Farrar, D. D., F. R. S.

Dante's Divine Comedy Translated by Rev. H. F. Cary

Westward Ho! Charles Kingsley

Moonstone Wilkie Collins

Descent of Man

Charles Durwin Consuelo

George Sand First Principles

Herbert Spencer Corinne

Madame de Stäel

It abounds with stirring incidents presented in the author's vigorous style. The description of social life in the West as depicted will seem hardly real to those who know the country now; but the writer, growing up from early boyhood familiar with the strange wild life around him, wrote from personal experience. Every reader will follow with interest the journeying of the "Circuit Rider," an beroic example of muscular Christfanity, and of a class of men whose constitutions

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 3 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each ; or, for 2 Subscribers and 25 cents additional.

This remarkably interesting book which for so long maintained its place as a prime favorite with all the boys, was for a considerable time out of print. The one we offer is a new edition issued to meet the large demand.

It contains 208 pages and twenty-one entirely new full-page illustrations. Size 656 x 836 inches.

Price, $1.00, postpaid.

Price $1.00, postpatel.

postpaid.

Bacon's Essays Francis Bacon Other Worlds Than Ours Richard A. Proctor

Fifteen Decisive Battles

E. S. Creasy

Goethe's Fanst Anna Swanwick

Discourses of Epictetus Translated by George Long

The Crown of Wild Olives, and Sesame and Lilies.

John Ruskin Past and Present Thomas Carlyle

History of Civilization in Europe

Origin of Species Charles Darwin

Hypatia

Charles Kingsley

Undine and Other Tales De la Motte Fouqué

Uarda

PERSEVERANCE ISLAND

Or The Robinson Crusoe of the 19th Century

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of & Yearly Subscribers

$1.00 each; or, for 2 Subscribers and 50 cents additional.

Price, $1.15, postpaid.

and all his shipmates lost.

instructed, in its chapters.

graphically told in these pages colors and gold. 272 pages.

Price, $1.15, postpaid.

THE CIRCUIT RIDER

BY EDWARD EGGLESTON

Given as Premium for a Club of 4 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00

eagh; or, for t Subscribers and 50 cents additional. Postage and Packing, 15 cents extra. Pric. $1.25, postpaid.

This story originally appeared as a serial in The Christian Union.

conquered starvation and exposure—and who survived swamps.

alligators, Indians and highway robbers in an honest effort to do good. Bound in Cloth-332 pages-over 30 illustrations. Price, $1.25,

WINNING HIS WAY

BY CHARLES CARLETON COFFIN

The history of the life and adventures of a Yankee "Crusoe," cast away alone on a desolate island in the Pacific,

Our old friend "Robinson Crusoe," was a bungler, in comparison with this modern specimen, and the young reader will be not only entertained, but

How he prepared fresh water, how he made gunpowder, lucifer matches, edged tools, built houses and bouts, is Profusely illustrated, bound in Cloth

George Ebers

Confessions of an English Oplum-Enter Thomas de Quincey

On the Heights

Berthold Auerbach

Meditations of Marcus Aurelius Translated by George Long

Emerson's Essays R. W. Emerson

The Data of Ethics

Herbert Spencer Essays of Elia

Charles Lamb

Vanity Fair W. M. Thackerny

History of Mexico Prescott, Vol. I

History of Mexico

History of Mexico Vol. III

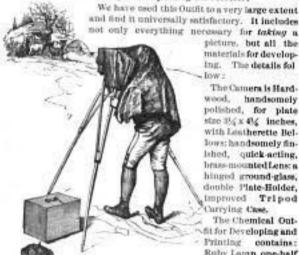

Mosses from an Old Mans Nathaniel Hawthorne

Hyperion

Henry W. Longfellow

PHOTOGRAPHIC OUTFIT No 1

Given as a Premium for a Club of 15 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 11 Subscribers and $1.00 additional; or, for 7 Subscribers and $2.00 additional. Price, $5.00. Sent only by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver.

The details fol Iow : The Camera is Hardwood, handsomely polished, for plate state 31/4 x 41/4 inches, with Leatherette Bellows; handsomely finished, quick-acting, brass-mounted Lens; a hinged ground-glass, double Plate-Holder, improved Tripod lurrying thee,

The Chemical Outfit for Developing and Frinting contains: Ruby Lamp, one-balf dozen Dry Plates, 2

Japanned Iron Trays, 2 Bottles Developer, 1 Box Hyposulphite Soda, 12 sheets silvered Albumen Paper, Printing Frame, I bottle Toning Solution, I dozen Bevel-edge Card Mounts. Send us 4 cents in postage stamps, and we will mail you a photo taken with one of these Cameras. Price, $5.00. Sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver.

OUTFIT No. 2

Given as a Premium for a Club of 7 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 Must be sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver.

In this Outfit, No. 2, we offer something that will do good work with less professional skill and fewer chances of failure than any other outfit at four times the price. It includes a Camera with a fine Lens and a Finder: Folding Tripod: Carrying Satchel, with Shoulder Strap: Package Plates; materials for making a ruby lamp, and all the necessary chemicals for developing and printing. We send with each a 32-page Instruction Book, the best of its kind published.

We can especially recommend this Outfit as most desirable for an amateur. It is light, strong, compact, easy of comprehension, and readily manipulated.

The best low-priced Outfit offered. Do not confound the two Cameras we offer with worthless "Pin-hole" Cameras.

The effectiveness of an outfit really depends upon the lens. We guamatee the work done with either of ours will prove their excellence. We have seen pictures taken with our Camera No. 2 cm larged to 10 x 12 inches. The result was equal to the best work of a fifty-dollar Dahlmeyer lens.

Send us four cents in postage stamps for a Sample Photograph taken with this Camera and Lens.

Price, $2.25. Sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver.

ANTIQUE OAK BOOK-CASE, No. 2

Given as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 3 Subscribers and 50 cents additional. Price, $1.50. Must be sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver.

Here is a description of the Book-case we have selected for you. Oak, antique finish, with curving and scroll work. Strongly made, however, as well as ornamental. Very ingenious construction. Shipped "knocked-down" (this means light Express charges) with plain printed instructions for "setting it up" in five minutes, with every joint as rigid as if "dove-tailed" and gloed.

Price, $1.50. Express charges to be paid by the receiver.

Book Case, No. 10

Given as a Premium for a Club of 15 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 7 Subscribers and $2.00 additional. Price, $5.30. Sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver.

This is also Oak, antique finish. It stands 4 feet 6 inches from the floor and is 2 feet 6 inches wide. Five shelves (various heights). With a suitable curtain hung on the rod at the top, it is very handsome and attractive. Shipped in the same manner as Case No. 2.

AS A SPECIAL INDUCEMENT

To any one sending us a single Cush Order for books amounting to FOUR DOLLARS, for One Dollar extra we will ship the No. 2 Case. To any one sending us a single Cosh Order for books amounting. to TWELVE DOLLARS, for Three Dollars extra we will ship the

All Book Cases are shipped in compact bundles, but must be sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver.

HISTORICAL PANORAMA

Given as a Premium for a Club of 3 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 2 Subscribers and 25 cents additional. and Packing, 25 cents extra. Price, $1.15, postpaid.

It is a large and handsome chromolithographic rama, with thirty-two colored scenes, of very attractive appearance. One of the few toy Panoramas which amount to anything more than a toy. It gives a very attractive and in-structive object lesson in history, and the pictures shown are of genuine historical value. A carefully written lecture, which we send, em bodies the principal events of American history, and enables the owner to act as exhibiter and showman to an audience of juvenile friends. A goodly supply of tickets, to aid in getting up the "show," a descriptive poster and suggestions as to appropriate incidental music, etc., accompany each one. Of all our premiums for the young folks this Panorama, next to our Magic Lanterns, presents the best opportunity of securing a supply of pocket-money during the winter.

Price, 90 cents. Postage and Packing, 25 cents extra.

BREECH-LOADING SPRING GUN

Given as a Premium for a Club of 3 Yearly Subscribers, and 10 cents additional. Price, $1.10. Forwarding charges, 70 cents extra, whether secured as a Premium or purchased.

Chesp ammunition, no report, no explosion. This gun is as safe to its owner as it is possible for a gun to be. Steel barrels, sighted front and back. Maple cross-bar botted to a poplar stock. The springs are made of the best English oil-tempered steel.

The ammunition is placed in the barrel from the breech, so there is no Hability of bruised fingers or the loss of an eye consequent upon a prema ture discharge. kill any small game.

Price, $1.50, forward Digitized by Google

ALL PREMIUM GOODS FOR SALE AT THE PRICES QUOTED "GOODS

ORDER ALL RINGS BY NUMBER

All Rings mailed at your risk unless Fire Cents extra be sent to Insure them.

ORDER ONLY BY SIZE

In ordering rings, order the size desired. To ascertain this, cut a strip of stiff paper of a size to exactly encircle your finger. Lay this strip out flat on this graduated scale. Send us the number of the black strip corresponding in length with the piece of paper.

We have had a great many rings returned to us with requests that they be exchanged, and always for smaller sizes. This should not be necessary. The scale we provide is accurate.

Bent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of W Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for & Subscribers and $1.00 additional. Price, $1.85, postpoid.

Four Turquois and five Pearls. The best selling high-priced ring we have over used. It appears to be a universal favorite.

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of $ ent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 rach; or, for $ Subscribers and 50 cents additional. Price, $1.50, postpaid. The newest and latest bangle " Friendship " Ring. A design in twisted link. The bangles are a tlny padlock and key.

Price, $1.50, including cost of postage and packing.

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each ; or, for 3 Subscribers and to cents additional. Price, $1.50, postpaid.

This "Wish-hone" Ring is one of the new designs in "Friendship" Rings, and is said to be No. 2151. the most popular, this season, of any. The three stones are Ruby, Sapphire and an imitation Diamond—the prettiest triple combination in stones.

Price, $1.50, including cost of postage and packing.

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearty Subscribers at $1.00 each : or, for Subscribers and 50 cents additional. Price, $1.75, postposid.

u

No. 000%

No. 356%

A Trefoil setting of a Moonstone, Turquois and Ruby (doublet): an attractive combination. The Ring is of twisted Gold wire.

Price, $1.75, including cost of postage and packing.

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 1 Yearty Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 2 Subseribers and 50 cents additional. Price, $1.25. postpaid.

2150 This dainty little ring, is of twisted Gold wire, surmounted by a Pansy in hard Enamel, hand-painted.

Price, $1.25, including cost of postage and packing.

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of & Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; ar. for 4 Subscribers and 50 cents additional. Price, $1.75, postpaid.

A Ruby and Sapphire (doublet) set in the heads. Bright Polished Silver. We can also furnish this design in Oxidized Silver. In ordering be particular to specify which you wish. Price, $1.75, including cost of postage and packing Sent, puspoid, as a Premium for a Club of 3 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Price, 80 cents, postpaid.

Snake Ring. Bright Polished Bliver, with

Emerald Eyes. We can also furnish this design in Oxidized No. 6284 Silver. In ordering be particular to specify which you wish.

Seal, postpaid, as a Premium for a Clab of t Yearly Subscribers and 10 cents additional.

Price, 80 cents, including cost of postage and packing.

Anothernew Gold " Friendship " Ring. Milled on the edge to represent a ring made from a five-dollar No. 445 gold-piece. The bangle is a heart—this season's popular ornament. Three Forget-me-nois, hard Enamel and hand-painted, with Gold

Price, 75 cents, including cost of postage and packing.

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 2 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Price, 45 cents, postpaid.

The "Lovers' Knot." One of the most popular of the many designs in rings. A Double Ring of twisted and plain Silver wire.

We can furnish this design either in bright Silver or Oxidized Silver. In ordering be particular to specify which

Price, 45 cents, including cost of postage and packing.

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of & Yearly Bubscribers at $1.00 each; or, for Subscribers and 50 cents additional. This is the only plain Gold Ring in our collec-

Price, $1.50, including cost of postage and packing.

A NOVEL IDEA

Seat, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Price, 80 cents, postpaid.

This is the new Gold Extension-Ring for girls. It is of Gold, and the setting is two Supphires and a small flower in French

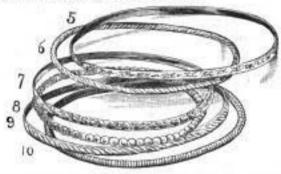

Enamel. By an arrangement in the Ring, it can be adjusted to fit any ordinary stred finger. In ordering let us know what size ring

Price, 80 cents, including cost of postage and packing.

A NEW ASSORTMENT OF BANGLE BRACELETS

Any pair of Bracelets sent, postpaid, as a Fremium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 cach. Postage and packing, 10 cents extra. Price, 50 cents each, postpaid.

New designs. New goods. All handsome, attractive and desirable. These, unlike our last year's assortment, are not Oxidized. They are bright and of the color of colu silver. First quality of plate. Price, 50 cents each, postpaid. Order by number.

NEW SNAKE BRACELET

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 2 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Price, 55 cents, postpaid.

Bost quality silver-plate. New this senson. The chasing is good, and the imitation of a viper excellent.

GOLD-PLATED LACE PINS

Given as a Premium for a Club of 4 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 such; or, for 2 Bubscribers and 50 cents additional. Postage and packing, 10 cents extra. Price, $1.15, postpaid. No. 1620

The bars have the color of 22 kamt gold, and the knots are light colored like 18 karat

Very pretty and attractive. Price, $1.15, including cost of postage and packing.

Neut, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 3 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Price, 75 cents, postpaid.

No. 2638 This is also a "Misses" Pin." A chased, twisted bar: Roman finish; set with a Pearl.

Price, 75 cents, including cost of postage and packing.

Either number (2505 or 2637) given as a Premium for a Club of 3 Yearty Subscribers at $1.00 each. Postage and packing, 10 cents extra. Price, 90 cents each, postpuid. No. 2505

These are intended for young ladies. No-2505 is a very attractive design in Roman Gold ; set with a Ruby doublet.

No. 2657 is also Roman finish. The design is that of interwoven links. No stone.

Price of either Pin, 90 cents. postpaid.

Given as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 8 Subscribers and 26 cents additional. Postage and packing, 10 cents extra. Price, 90 cents, postpaid.

No. 2403 is an elegant chased Etruscan knot with a Pearl setting.

We can especially recommend this as a handsome piece of jewelry, sure to please. Price, 90 cents, postpaid.

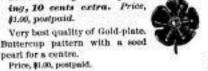

GOLD-PLATED EAR-DROPS Given as a Premium for a Club of 3 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Postage and packing, 10 cents extra. Price, 50 cents, postperio.

These Ear-Rings are handsome, neat and attractive. We can recommend them as being sure to please. Rhine-stone settings.

Given as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Postage and packing, 10 cents extra. Price, $1.00, postpaid. Very best quality of Gold-plate.

pearl for a centre.

Price, $1.00, postpaid.

Given as a Premium for a Club of 2 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Postage and packing, 10 cents extra. Price, 65 cents, postpaid.

Very delicate and pretty; hollow globes, Etruscan pattern. Very best quality of gold-plate.

In ordering mention No. 2894.

SOLID SILVER BANGLE BRACELETS

Any pair of Bracelets given as a Premium for a Club of # Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Postage and packing, 10 cents extra. Price, 40 cents each, postpaid.

These Bracelets are Pure Silver, and the daintiest jewelry imaginable. Bright, new, fresh goods, sure to please all who Price, 40 cents each, postpaid. Order by number.

BRACELET, No. 2873

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 12 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each ; or, for 8 Subscribers and $1.00 additional ; or, for 4 Subscribers and $2.00 additional. Price, $3.35, postpaid.

The best quality of gold-plate; for all practical purposes will venr us long and look as well MSCOLID GOLD. In appearance it is fully equal to a thirty-five dollar Bracelet. Every Padlock guaranteed to be perfect.

Price. $3.35, including cost of postage and packing.

"FRIENDSHIP" RINGS

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 2 Three Months' Subscribers at 25 cents each. Price, 25 cents, postpuid.

One of the "fads" in connection with rings requires a young lady to request of gentlemen friends a subscription of a cent a-piece. With funds so obtained a ten-cent silver-piece is formed into a ring with a bangle, on which are engraved initials or a date. We think our plan of sending Subscribers is to be preferred. We have the Hings all ready made up, and they are thicker than most of those made of coin. Order only by size.

Price, 25 cents each, including cost of postage and packing.

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Price, 70 cents, postpaid.

"King's Daughters" GOLD Bangle Ring. This Ring is made to our order and, so far as we know, cannot be secured elsewhere.

It is an exact imitation of a ring made from a five-dollar gold-piece. It is extra heavy.

Sent, portpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 2 Three Months' Bubscribers at 25 cents each. Price, 40 cents, postpaid.

Price, 70 cents, including cost of postage and packing.

"King's Daughters" Silver Bangle Ring. This is, in design, the same as our Ring No. 5864-but differs in material. This is thicker than most of the Rings made of

Price, 40 cents, including cost of postage and packing.

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of & Yearly Bubscribers at $1.00 each ; or, for & Subscribers and 50 cents additional ; or, for $ Bubscribers and $1.00 additional. Price, $1.55, porpaid.

This is the handsomest pin of this kind in our collection. It is Roman finish. The design is very graceful, and is sure to make this pin very popular. Set with a small Pearl. Price, $1.55, postpaid.

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each ; or, for 3 Subscribers and 50 cents additionat. Price, $1.25, postpaid.

This crescent pin contains 43 Garnets, each stone mounted in a separate claw-setting, as in the finest and most expensive jewelry. Worn at night, this pin is extraordinarily brilliant.

Price. $1.25, postpaid. cents extra to insure all jewelry.

No. 1424

5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 cach.

Postage and packing, 10 cents extra. Price, 30 cents, postpaid. No. 2514 is a handsome design of twisted links, in Roman gold finish, This pin we can recommend as being rich and handsome. We can, if desired, furnish this design in Oxidized Silver-plats.

. Given as a Premium for a Club of

If you desire this design in Oxidized Silver-plate, order No. 251454 Price, 90 cents, postpaid.

at $1.00 each. Postage and packing, 10 cents extra. Price, 65 cents, postpaid. The pattern is an Oak-leaf; Roman finished; pierced by a titiven as a Premium for a Club of 2 Yearly Subscribers pin which holds the setting-e small Rhine-stone. Price, 65 cents, postpaid. All orders for jewelry should be accompanied by an extra

Insurance Fee of five cents, to provide agratist has in the mails 0000

OR SALE

SILVER-PLATED CHILD'S SET

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 6 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 5 Bubscribers and 25 cents additional; or, for 4 Subscribers and 50 cents additional. Price, $1.50, postpaid.

This Set for children we can guarantee will please every obtains it. It is Triple-plated, and includes Knife, Fork, Spoon, Mug and Napkin Ring. All the pieces are chased, and the Mug is Satin-finished and Engraved. The case (7)4×354 and 354 inches deep) is of Silk-plush, lined. As a birthday or holiday gift it would prove a delight to any child. If you wish to purchase a set compare ours, in price and appearance, with those offered in retail stores. Price, $1.50, including cost of postage and packing.

PEPPER and SALT-SPRINKLERS, No. 183

One pair sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for # Subscribers and 25 cents additional. Price, $1.00. postpaid.

These little Chicks are entire ly new and very pretty. They are Triple Silver-We do not break the pair, but send them together, packed in a handsome box, for a Club of 3 Yearly Subscribers, as above, or postpaid, on receipt of $1.00.

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 3 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 2 Subscribers and 25 cents additional. Price, 85 cents, postpaid.

This Napkin Ring is Quadruple Silver-plate. We fornish it as an exact match to the Pepper and Balt Sprinklers above. The quality is first-class, and the Ring and Sprinklers make a most attractive table set.

Price, of the Napkin Ring, postpaid, 85 cents.

We will send a pair of the Sprinklers and a Napkin Ring, postpaid, on receipt of $1.60. This low price applies only on the entire et when all three pieces are ordered together.

VER-PLATED SPRINKLERS, No. 565 Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 3 Yearly Subscribers

at $1.00 each; or, for I Subscribers and IS cents additional. Price, 50 cents, postpaid.

These Sprinklers are very handsome as well as desirable. Silver-plated on white metal, and chased, they make very pretty table ornaments. We send them out packed in a satin-läned ense. In ordering specify "No. 565" as we have several varieties of these goods

Price, per pair, 80 cents, including cost of postage and packing.

SILVER-PLATED MUG

Bent postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 2 Subscribers and 25 cents additional. Price, $1.00, postpaid.

to please every child. The Mug we offer is well and strongly made, The plating is good, and is upon a base of white metal, not upon brass, which means that it will wear well and for a long time. Gold-lined. The Mug is an improvement on the one we have been using; it is handhand-chased and

Something sure

Price, $1.00. Ask your leweler his price for a similar one.

SILVER-PLATED TEA-SET

We have selected for this season's use what is, beyond question, the finest Silver-Plated Tea-Set ever offered as a Premium.

It is, in every respect, of the first quality. The plating is on a base of white metal, and each piece is stamped

Quadruple Plate

The goods are manufactured to our order, and cannot be secured in the stores.

The design is very elegant, being satin-finish, bright-cut and hand-chased. We call especial attention to the fact that the ornamentation on the various articles will be found on both sides of the piece. (Remember this when pricing or ordering silver-ware.)

The prices are higher than most silver-plated-ware offered in Mail-Order Catalogues-yet those who purchase ours will find it the cheapest (that is, the best value for the money) to be secured. Each piece packed in a locked-corner wooden box.

By special arrangements with the Express Companies, we are enabled to prepay the Expressage at lower rates than we could send the goods "charges collect." Those having no Express Office handy, may order by Mail, postpaid, at the same rates.

COFFEE-POT No. 6

Given as a Premium for a Club of 17 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 10 Subscribers and $2.75 additional. Price, $2.75. Boxing and Express, prepaid, 60 cents extra, whether Premium or purchase. (By Mail, postpaid, at same rate.)

TEA-POT No. 5

(Same shape and design as Coffee-Pot; in size slightly smaller.) Given as a Premium for a Club of 16 Yearly Subscribers at $1.90 each; or, for 10 Subscribers and $1.50 additional. Boxing and Express, prepaid, 42 cents extra, whether Premium or purchase. (By Mail, postpaid, at same rale.)

SUGAR-BOWL, No. 7

Given as a Premium for a Club of 12 Yearty Bubscribers at $1.00 each ; or. for 8 Subscrib ers and $1.00 additional. Price, $5.50. Boxing and Express, prepaid, 40 cents extra, whether Premium or pur-Mail, postpaid, at same rate.)

SPOON-HOLDER No. 8 Gold-Lined

Given as a Premium for a Club of 11 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 7 Subscribers and $1.00 additional. Price, $3.25. Boxing and Express, prepaid, 25 cents extra, whether Premium or purchase. (By Mail, postpaid, at same rate.)

CREAM-PITCHER No. 9

Given as a Premium for a Club of 11 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each ; or, for Subscribers and $1.00 additional. Price, $3.26. Boxing and Express, prepaid, 25 cents extra, whether Pre-

BUTTER-DISH No. 194

Given as a Preminm for a Club of 9 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each: or, for 5 Sabscribera mud $1.00 addi-6 tional. Price, $2.75. Boxing and Express, prepaid, 46

at same rate.)

cents extra, whether Premium or purchase. (By Mail, postpaid, of some rate.)

THE BEST MAKE OF SILVER-PLATE

THE BRAND: "1847.-Rogers Bros.-A 1."

THE QUALITY: The highest priced of all the various "Rogers Wares." We have used it for five years—we have never received a complaint.

THE PATTERN: "The Portland"--the latest and the most desirable pattern used in plated-ware. Designed to closely imitate Sterling Silver-ware. It is unsurpassed for richness and elegance. It is handsomer, and in general appearance far superior to any of the old patterns.

We will send it out as Fremiums and for Cash as follows:

"Portland" Tea-Spoons

One-half dozen given as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 5 Subscribers and 50 cents additional. Price, $1.50 per half-dozen. Postage and packing, 10 cents extra for each half-dozen, whether sent as a Premium or purchased.

"Portland" Table-Spoons

Set of four given as a Premium for a Club of 7 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for $ Bubscribers and $1.00 additional. $2.00 for four. Postage and packing, 10 cents extra for four spoons, whether sent as a Premium or purchased.

"Portland" Forks

Bet of six given as a Premium for a Club of 11 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each ; or, for ? Subscribers and $1.00 additional. Price, $3.75 for riz. Postage and packing, 15 cents extra, whether sent as a Premium or purchased.

Portland" Butter-Knife or Sugar-Shell

Either sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 2 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Price, 70 cents each, postpaid.

Engraving

We will engrave initials at the rate of 5 cents per letter.

ROGERS BROS.' SILVER-PLATED KNIVES

Set of six given as a Premium for a Club of 9 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each ; or, for 5 Subscribers and $1.00 additional. Price, $2.75. Postage and packing for six knives, 25 cents, whether Premium or purchase.

SILVER-PLATED WARE

No housekeeper can afford to be without a set of Silver-Plated Tableware, if only for "company" use. Read our offers as they follow. This "Jewel" ware is not the very best quality of quadruple plate; however, it is not the cheap, miserable trush which is so often offered" Free! !" The goods are of steel, plated first with nickel and then with silver, and a procticul test has shown us they will wear well for a long time and look remarkably well.

We begin to believe that all are not willing to pay for the best goods, even though offered at the lowest possible price, and we now offer, in conjunction with our regular line, plated Tableware which everyone, even the most economical, can afford.

Much of the plated-ware offered for sale is made of brass. While goods of this character will look better and smoother when first received, the base metal underneath soon shows through the very thin coating of silver with which they are washed, and in a short time the ware is wholly unpresentable and unfit for use, for no one wants to eat with bross forks and

One Dozen "Jewel" Tea-Spoons

Bent, postpaid, as a Premium for only two Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Price, 75 cents per dozen, postpaid.

A Set of Four "Jewel" Table-Spoons Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for only two Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Price, for set of four, 50 cents, postpaid.

A Set of Four "Jewel" Dinner Forks Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for only two Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Price, for set of four, to cents, postpaid.

CAKE BASKET No. 691

Given as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 4 Subscribers and $1.00 additional. Price, $2.25. Boxing and Express, prepaid, 50 cents extra, whether Premium or purchase. (By Mail, postpaid, at same rate.) New pattern : latest design. Triple-plate, well and strongly made. Satin-finish, hand-chased and bright-cut. A very destrable basket.

PICKLE JAR No. 20

Given as a Premium for a Cheb of 4 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each ; or, for # Subscribers and 50 cents additional. Price, $1.15. Boxing and Express, prepaid, 50 cents extra, whether Premium or purchase. (Ry Mail, postpaid, at

This Pickle Jar is superior in manufacture and design to the one we used last season. The jar is of clear glass.

It is carefully packed, as is all of our hollow plated-ware, in strong, wooden lockedcorner boxes, which permits of the goods being safely sent to any part of the Price, $1.65, by Express (or mail) prepared

MO ALL FREMIUM GOODS FOR SALE AT THE PRICES OUIOTED →

These boys are trying to decide this question to their mutual satisfaction, and are using two of the most popular of all the Premiums we have ever offered the boys. In the larger of the boats the graceful form of the well-known Side-Wheel Steamer has been adopted, and great pains have been taken to retain the proper proportions of all the parts, and at the same time to construct a Boat which will not only work properly, but will present a fine appearance when steaming in a tank of water or on a still pond. Measures from stem to stern, 12 inches; 334 inches beam; 5 inches high; runs one-half bour at each firing.

In order to always secure the proper working of steam cylinder, crank, shaft and paddile wheels, they have all been secured to the top of the bodler, and the boiler is hinged at one end to the Boat, so that it can readily be swung upward to give ready access to the lamp for trimming, lighting, etc., etc. The boiler can be readily filled with water through a filler in the pilot-house. The rudder is adjusted as usual. Unusual pains have been taken with the details, such as windows, molding, eagle on pilot-house, etc., etc., while she is finished with coppered bottom and bright-colored upper works, like our handsome excursion steamers.

Every Steamer is thoroughly tested and fully warranted.

Full directions for running the Steamer will be found in each box, with price-list of duplicate parts.

We will give the Side-Wheel Steamboat as a Premium for a Club of? Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 5 Subscribers and 10 cents additional; or, for 3 Subscribers. and $1.00 additional.

Price, $2.00. Send 20 cents extra to prepay postage and packing, whether you secure it as a Premium or a purchase; or, we will send it by Express, the receiver to pay the charges.

The other Boat is a Screw Propeller II inches long, and is a perfect model of a small Steam Launch. It has sharp bows and is a fast sailer. The boiler is brass and is perfectly safe. The metal hull is hand-somely painted, and the works and deck are covered with an ornamental canvas awning.

This Serve-Boot we send, postpoid, as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 5 Subscribers and 50 cents additional. Price, $1.00, postpoid.

Provided with these boats, two boys can have no end of fun. All sorts of races and trials of speed can be arranged for Saturday afternoons. They can be used as "Mail Steamers." Notes can be sent across the pond and the boat turned around on the other side for a return trip with the answer. The possibilities for sport, which will suggest themselves to any live boy, are unlimited.

OUR NEW "FAVORITE" ENGINE

Scut as a Premium for a Club of 2 Yearly Subscribers at 41.00 cach. 15 cents extra must be sent to prepay postage and packing. Price, 50 cents. Postage and packing, 15 cents extra.

The "Favorite" Engine measures 6 inches in height.

It is a model Steam Engine, complete and perfect, and all its parts are firmly connected, so that it can be readily moved from one place to another while in operation.

The essential parts are as perfect, and as carefully made, as in our larger and more expensive Engines.

The "Favorite" has sufficient power to run small toys.

small toys.

Richly finished in red and gold colors.

Each Engine is thoroughly tested before being sent out.

ng sent out.

Price, 65 cents, including cost of packing and posinge.

UPRIGHT ENGINE, No. 4

Given as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 2 Sub-cach; or, for 2 Subscribers and 75 cents additional. Price. $1.75. Postage and packing, 45 cents extra, whether secured as a Premium or purchased. This Engine is larger, stronger and very much more elaborate than our Upright, No.1.

It stands over 11 inches high.

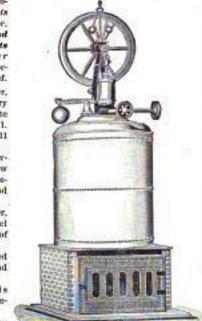

It has a rotating Governor—an entirely new feature. The Balancewheel is large and heavy.

It has a double Boiler, giving economy in fuel and preventing loss of heat by radiation.

It is richly finished in bronze, red and gold. Each Engine is thoroughly tested before it is sent out. Price, $1.75. Postage and packing, 45

UPRIGHT ENGINE, No. 1

Given as a Premium for a Club of 1 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for t Subscribers and so cents additional. Price, $1.00.

Postage and packing, 30 cents extra, whether secured as a Premium or purchased.

A real, complete working machine. You can blow the whistle, or start and stop the Engine by opening and closing the throttle-valve, as in a large engine. It is both amusing and instructive. It is safe and easy to operate. It will run small toys and develop ingenuity. Every Engine is tested before it is sent out.

SAFETY-VALVE—The Engine has a perfect working Safety-valve, which makes it impossible for the boiler to explode.

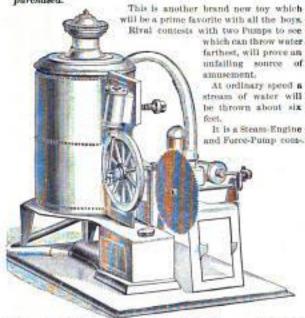

STEAM-WHISTLE—By referring to the cut, you will notice the location of the Steamwhistle. You will also see the valve by which the whistle is operated.

THE THEOTILE-VALVE—One important feature of this Engine is its Throttlevalve. No other amateur engine has this feature.

Price, $1.00. Postage and packing, 30 cents extra.

STEAM FORCE-PUMP

Given as a Premium for a Club of 2 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 cach and ten cents additional. Price, $1.00. Postage and packing, 30 cents extra, whether secured as a Premium or purchased.

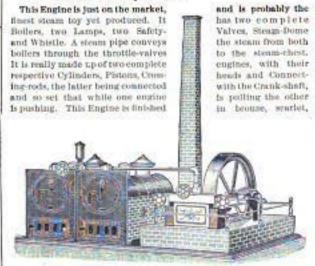

bined. Suction-Hose, Leading-Hose and Nozzle are provided with such.

Price, $1.30, including cost of postage and packing.

DOUBLE MILL-ENGINE

Given as a Premium for a Club of 10 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 6 Subscribers and $1.00 additional. Price, $1.00. Sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver, whether secured as a Premium or purchased.

gilt and black. Each one is thoroughly tested before being sent out. Price, $3.00. Sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver.

BEAM ENGINE

Given as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 4 Subscribers and 25 cents additional; or, for 3 Subscribers and 55 cents additional. Postage and packing, 30 cents extra. Price, $2.00, postpaid.

This has all the essential features of a Cornish Pumping Engine.

The boiler is mounted in imitation of the usual brick setting, including from stays and working furnace door for management of fires.

The top of boiler is provided with manhole, gullows-frame with walking-beam, and filler with safety-raive. Instead of an oscillating cylinder, there has been arranged, as a special feature, a new device for the introduction of steam into a stationary, vertical cylinder, consisting of rocking-valve with valve rod, worked by an accentric on the main shart, the inlet of steam to the steam-chest being controlled by a screw throttle-valve.

Each Engine is thoroughly tested before being sent out. Price, $1.75. Postage and packing, 30 cents extra.

STEAM LOCOMOTIVE AND TRAIN

Locomotive, Tender, Track, and one Passenger Car given as a Premium for a Club of 19 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each ; or, for 6 Subscribers and $1.00 additional ; or, for 5 Subscribers and $1.25 additional.

Price, $1.00. Postage and Packing, 65 cents extra, whether secured as a Premium or purchased. If we can send it by prepaid Express at a lower price we shall do m, and return the balance.

Length of locomotive, 8½ inches; height, 4½ inches. Length of tender, 4 inches; height, 3 inches, Length of car, 10 inches; height, 4 inches. Length of complete train, 24 inches. Gauge of track, 23-15 inches. Runs on a track made of steel rails and wooden sleepers. Runs half an hour at each firing, Puffs the exhaust sleam like a large locomotive. Huns eight time a around track in one minute. No danger from explosion; safety.

valve perfectly adjusted. A most fuscinating and amusing steam toy. It will delight the old as well as the young. Richly finished in steel, bronze and polished brass. Perfect in design and workmanship. Every our fully tested by steam and guaranteed. Complete tmin with track securely packed in a wooden locked-corner box. Our cut here is an accurate representation of the locomotive

The locomotive is complete in all its parts, and has all the essential features of a large locomotive, as well as an ornamental wheel goard, headlight, etc. It will run on a straight or curved track equally well.

Our artist shows two cars to carry out his idea of a train; our offer includes one passenger car only and the tender. We can, however, furnish extra cars for 60 cents each, postpaid. The track packed with each locomotive is circular, and eleven feet around, but we can furnish any number of extra elevens and rails, either straight or curved, so that any length of track may be constructed. Price, 64 cents per foot, postpaid. The track can be placed on the dining room table, on the floor, or on a regular railroad embassionent built in the yard. We can also furnish truck frames with wheels and axies fitted to track, so that flat, dump or box-cars can be made either from pasteboard or wood, and easily fitted at home. Price, 30 cents each, postpaid. Price of locomotive, tender, track and one car, $3.00. Price of the contract of the co

These sets of

MAGIC LANTERN EXHIBITIONS

We sent out last year three times as many Magic Lanterns as we had previously used in any one year. This season we shall use a great many more. The reason is, we have found two Lanterns which surpass any other low-priced ones we have over seen. The first one we call

Magic Lantern No.1

Given as a Premium for a Club of 2 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for & Subscribers and 25 cents additional. Price, $1.00. Sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver, whether purchased or secured in a Premium. This new Lantern of ours has a high illuminating power and is built upon an entirely new plan, strictly in accordance with Optical Laws. It is very convenient to operate, and has as a special feature a SCREW FOCAL ADJUSTMENT, so that by the use of the thumb and forefinger of one hand the pictures can be sharply defined with ease and precision. No danger of tipping the Lamp over. Has metal Chimney and powerful Lamp.

Slides

We furnish with each Lantern six (6) slides; but we also have a large variety of special slides. as follows: We can furnish first: Views of a miscellaneous character, 4 views on each slide, for 40 cents per dozen. Postage and packing, 20 cents extra per dezen. Noorder for less than one dozen received. Second: We farnish special slides in sets as follows: Little Red Riding Hood, Puss in Boots, Robinson Crusoe, Famous Men. Baces of the Earth, Geology. These are in sets of twelve (12) slides each, 4 pictures on each slide. Price, 50 cents per dozen. Postage and packing, 20 cents extra per dozen. No order for and packing, 10 cents extra per half dozen. Fourth: "The Chromatrope," in wooden frame; with a beautiful colored disk with its interesting kaleidoscopic changes, which is always the last slide in "THE SHOW." Price, 35 cents each, postpaid. Our glass slides are sent out in partitioned

All the boys know what these are, and no boy is half a showman who does not include in his Entertalument some of these funny pictures.

Price, 35 cents per half dozen slides. Postage less than one dozen received.

cases of our own special design, and packed in fine sawdust. We rarely have a breakage. In ordering Slides, be careful to select just what you need. No Stides can be exchanged. Don't forget this!

Tickets of Admisssion and a Show-Bill are packed with each Lantern, A DESCRIPTIVE LECTURE is sent with each set of the special alides (Red Riding Hood, etc.); none go with those of a miscellaneous character.

Boys! Here is a chance for lots of fun during the long winter evenings, and an opportunity to make considerable pocket money. One boy may commit the Lecture to memory and assume the character of "showman" while another attends to the Lantern.

Magic Lantern No. 2

This is a thoroughly good Magic Lantern, by far superior to any re have over seen at the price.

It has a high-power Burner and Fount, French Polished Condensing Lens and Metal Reflector.

The Slide-rest is adjustable, so that any width of slide can be used. This can be found on so other Lenters. The Back and Pinion focusing adjustment has hitherto been found on the highest-priced In place of the bungling and uncertain Stereopticons only. method of getting the right focus by sliding the Tube (which always sticks) in and out by hand, with the thumb and forefinger of the right hand the proper adjustment is easily and precisely beningdo.

engine.

OUR FISHING OUTFIT FOR THE BOYS

The hammer is raised by the action of the co-

gine, which winds the rope on the dram, and at the top the gripper jown

are opened automati-

eally and the hammer falls, striking a blow sufficient to drive small plies six inches long. The shipper is then used, the gripper de-

This Lantern is this season's production, and will undoubtedly prove a very great success, as it is certain to give entire satisfaction.

Admission Tickets and a Show-bill and 6 Slides sent with each Lantern.

Price, $2.00. Sont by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver.

ELECTRIC MOTOR Bent postpaid as a Premium for a Club of 6 Yearly Subscribers at $1.60 each; ar, for 5 Subscribers and 75 cents additional. Price, $1.50, postparid.

The greatest novelty in mechanical toys. A source of infinite amusement and of the greatest educational value to a youth, especially when taken in conjunction with the treatise on Dynamic Electricity which we send with each.

It is a perfect working miniature dynamo, complete with its hatteries, field-magnets, armstures, commutators, brushes and driving shaft. "Two teaspoonfuls of water" is all that is necessary to start is for a five-hours run at a speed of 1200 revolutions per minute. New battery-pads at a nominal cost. No danger, shocks, fire or acids. One of the leading scientists of this century pronounced it the "Wonder of the Age." Price, $1.50, including cost of postage and packing.

and an assortment of Artificial Troot Fites. We put these Outfits up here in our own workrooms, and will recommend and goor-antee them in every particular. The Rod is made of the material used in manufacturing the enormously expensive rods used by

Poles by mail will measure only eleven or twoive feet long

Por $1.10 (or, 4 Yearly Subscribers) we will send the Outfit by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver, with longer and heavier

A similar Outfit cannot be purchased expert and scientific fly-casters-Burnt Calcutta Bamboo.

for the same money at any retail store in the country poles. Packages over four feet long cannot be malled.

Given as a Prevalum for a Club of & Yearly Bubscribers at $1.00 each;

or, for 2 Subscribers and 30 cents additional. Price, $1.10. Postage and packing, 30 cents extra, whether secured as a Premium or purchased. (See remarks below re-

This Outfit for trout and has fishing garding ordering it by Express.)

is one of which any boy might be justly proud. The Rod is of genuine Calcutta Bamboo, 1256 feet long, in three joints, with double Brass Ferrules.

The balance of the Cuttle consists of 1

Brazz Balance Reel, with screw handle and raised pillars. Braided liste-thread

Line, 25 yards long: 1/2 dozen longshank Carlisie Hooks, for Trout, and 56 dozen Bass Blooks on double-twisted gut; one varuished Quili-top Float,

Reel is a perfect beauty. Price, $1.40, postpaid.

STEAM PILE-DRIVER

Sent postpaid as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 3 Bubserthers and 50 cents additional. Proce, $1.00. Postage and packing, 30 cents extra.

A perfect working model of the machine used around canals, docks, railroad bridges, etc. Itstands the winch in and out of genr without stopping the twelve loobes

scends and catches the hammer again and the blow is repeated as often as desired. It is a very interesting and instructive toy. Price, $1.50, including cost of postage and packing.

THE POLYOPTICON

Given as a Premium for a Club of 15 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 10 Subscribers and $1.25 additional; or, for 6 Subscribers and $1.25 additional. Price, $1.25. Sent only by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver.

This is a wonderful invention, whereby views from Newspapers, Magazines and Book Illustrations, Portraits, Comic Cuts, Photographs, Chromo Cards, IN ALL THEIR COLORS, Flowers, etc., can be thrown on a screen in the parlor, enlarged many times

Over 200 pictures are given with each Polyopticon. Price, $4.25. Sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver

SANS SOUCI" HAMMOCK No. 2

Given as a Previous for a Club of 4 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each ; or, for & Rubscribers and 50 cents additional. Price, $1.15. Sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver, whether purchased or secured as a Premium.

This is our new Bantmock, and we find it to be preferable to the one we formerly used. The Weave is new and better. The Stripes, running lengthwise, not only add strength to the bed of the Hammock, but, being tinged with Colored Yarn, give the Hammock a very attractive appearance. The end cords are strong and attached to the bed by a peculiar method, which gives additional strength. It is larger-extreme length, 11 feet; bed mesonres 76 x 28 inches. It is much superfor to, and more comfortable than, the old Mexican Hammock; it is very clastic, and conforms to every motion of the body, and will not pull buttons from the clothing.

Price, $1.15. Sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver.

SANS SOUCI" HAMMOCK No. 4

We have a larger size than the above. Same Hammock in all respects but size. Extreme length, 13 feet. Bed measures 96 x 48 inches. This we send as a Premium for a Club of 9 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 5 Subscribers and $1.00 additional.

Price, $1.70. Sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver. whether purchased or secured as a Premium.

THE HAMMOCK-CHAIR

Given as a Premium for a Club of I Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 euch. Postage and packing, 20 cents extra. Prior, 70 cents, postpatel.

This Hammock-Chair combines the features of a Ham-mock and of a Swing. As we send it out, it is complete and in perfect readiness for hanging up. Ropes, books and slips are sent with it. It can be packed in a very small and compact bundle, and is just the thing in which to spend a hot summer's afternoon on a cool porch, or under a shady tree.

Price, 50 cents. Postage and packing, 20 cents extra.

A UNIQUE TOY

A pair sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 2 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 ench. Price, 35 cents each, postpaid.

The "Winsed Bubble-Blower" e brand new Toy. When the small boy gets out his mother's washbasin and his father's clay pipe, and starts into business with a can of somp and a gill of water, there is sure to be fun on foot. But when the same small boy, with one of these new toys, succeeds in blowing a large bubble with one, or even two, smaller ones inside; balloon bubbles, whole chains of them and lots of new and strange things hitherto unheard of his delight is unmeasured. Just the thing for Bubble Parties. Fun and enjoyment for old as well as young. A sheet of full and explicit instructions sent with each.

Price, 23 cents each, postpaid.

THREE-DRAW, 12-LINE ACHROMATIC TELESCOPE

Given as a Premium for a Club of 7 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each ; or, for 5 Subscribers and $1.00 additional. Price, $2.50. Postage and packing, 15 cents extra, whether purchased or secured as a Premium

Length, when extended, 16 inches. Length, when closed, 6

The lenses in this Telescope are Achromatic, and objects seen through them are very clearly defined. The extension tabes are of Polished Bross, and the body is covered with French Morocco. Packed in a nest cloth-covered case. We warrant every one we send out, and guarantee it will give the utmost satisfaction. A handy companion for a stay at the sea-shore, or a trip to the mountains. Price, $2.65, postpaid.

Digitized by Google

THE YOUNG ARTIST'S SKETCHING-BOX

Given as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 3 Bubscribers and 50 cents additional. Postage and

This Outfit consists of : Polished Wooden Box with Brass Handle, containing Wood Palette, Tin Palettecup, 8 selected Artists' Oil-Colors in tubes, I bottle Pale Drying-oil, 2 Flat Bristle Brushes, 2 Round Fitch-Hair Bruthes, 1 Brass Crayon-Holder, 2 pieces Oil Sketching-Paper, I piece each of Impression and Tracing-Paper and 12-inch Folding Rule. We also send a collection of Colored Studies mounted on card-board. This box is put up for our special use, and the materials are such as we can recommend. The Colors are those we keep in stock, which are first-class.

Price, $1.65, postpald.

OIL-COLORS IN TUBES One dozen lubes sent, postpaid, as a Premium

for a Club of 4 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 8 Subscribers and 50 cents addi-

Chrome Yellow Chrome Orange Medium Chrome Brilliant Yellow Deep Chrome

10 cents per tube, postpaid.

Light Naples Yellow Medium Naples Yellow Deep Naples Yellow Gamboge Chrome Green, No. 1 Chrome Green, No. 2 Olive Lake Emerald Green Zinnober Green, Light Zinnober Green, Medium Zinnober Green, Dark Vandyke Brown Septa. Manye Neutral Tint Cremnitz White Flake White

Zing White · Ivory Black Cork Black Blue Black Lamp Black

Yellow Lake Yellow Othre Price, $1.00 per dozen, postpaid; in quantities less than one dozen,

FOUR-FOLD JAPANESE SCREENS

Given as a Premium for a club of 19 Yearly Subscribers, at $1.00 each; or, for 11 Subscribers and $2.00 additional. Price, $5.00. Bent by Preight, charges to be paid by the receiver.

Lack of space precents our showing a cut of these elegant screens which we guarantee to be of superior quality. They are 5 feet long, the feet high. Gilt builtion embroidery in relief on a ground of fine black cloth, with a gilt and white border. The reverse is in gilt and colors. The frames are black lacquer, with beass corners

We import them from Japan, and feel sure they will please all who secure them.

Price, $5.00 each. Sent by Freight, receiver to pay the charges.

WONDERFUL KALEIDOSCOPE

Given as a Premium for a Club of 7 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 5 Subscribers and $1.00 additional. Price, $1.25. Sent by Express charges to be paid by the receiver, whether purchased or secured as a Presufacm.

Every one recognizes in the Kalcidoscope an inexhaustible source of entertainment. The one we offer is specially convenient and desimble as a parlor ornament. The cells contain a varied collection of brilliantly-colored solid and finid objects, presenting, by a revolution of the brass ob ject cell, an ever-changing number of elaborate designs.

The regular retail price of this particular Kaleidoscope is $3.00. We offer it for $2.25. Sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver.

OUR NEW OUTFIT FOR OIL PAINTING

Given as a Premium for a Club of 12 Yearly Subscribers at $1.60 each; or, for 8 Subscribers and $1.00 additional; or, for 8 Subscribers and $1.75 additional. Price, $5.50. Must be sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver, whether secured as a Premium or purchased.

This Outfit includes a most complete assortment of materials for Oil Painting, all of which we can recommend as being first-class in quality. The box is of Japanned Tin, size 6x11 inches and 1% inches deep. The details of the Outfit are-12 tubes of Winsor & Newton's finely prepared Oil-Colors, Mahogany Palette, Palette-Knife, Bottles of Rectified Spirits-of-Turpentine and Pale Drying-Oil, Tracing and Transfer-Papers, 4 Artists' Sable and Bristle Brushes Badger Blender, Japanned Tin Palette Cup, I Academy Board and 4 Colored Studies.

The regular retail price of this Guidt in all art supply stores is $4.00. We can supply it for $1.50.

Sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver.

DECORATIVE ART COLOR BOX

Moist Water-Colors

Bent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 2 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Price, to cents, postpaid.

To any one desiring a reliable set of Water-Colors we can offer this box of first quality French Moist Water-Colors, of which we here give a representation. The box is of Tin, japanned black on the outside and white on the inside. The tid of the box is arranged in six mixing-trays, and, when open, affords ample room for mix-ing the paints. A ring in the bottom of the box itself, permits of the box being held in the hand and conveniently used as a palette. There are twelve colors in the assortment, each inclosed in a tin tray. Three good brushes, of different sizes, complete the set. With each box we send a sheet of instructions regarding the using of colors, and the mixing and blending of tints. Boxes of this character are usually retailed at 50 cents each.

Our price, 40 cents, including cost of postage and packing.

PALETTE CRAYON BOX

Given as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Bubscribers at $1.00 each; or, for $ Subscribers and 50 cents additional. Price, $1.25. Postage and packing, 15 cents extra, whether secured as a Premium or purchased.

This Box contains Conté Square Black Crayons, White Crayons, 1 bottle Velour Sauce Crayon, Paper Stomps, Leather Stomps, White and Gray Tortillion Stomps and Brass Porte-Crayon.

The lid of the Box is covered inside with Chamois Leather for stomping, and the Thumb-hole is so arranged that the Box may be held on the hand as comfortably and conveniently as the ordinary

A complete Crayon Outfit for students, schools of art, etc., which will be appreciated by those interested in crayon work,

Price, $1.40, including cost of postage and packing.

NICKEL-PLATED DRAWING INSTRUMENTS

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 2 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each, and 15 cents additional. Price 15 cents, postpaid.

This Set of Instruments is manufactured in Europe to our order, and put up specially for our use. We guarantee it to be very superior in every respect. They are of Brass, Nickel-plated. The Dividers are fitted with removable steel needle-points. The Pens are of a new patented variety. Adjustable Lend-holder. Both Peu and Pencil parts are jointed. The Set is packed in a velvet-lined box, of a special pattern, which is closed with a rod pass ing sideways through the box. The box closed is only 1/4 o an inch in thickness and 2% inches wide, and is made to permit of its being conveniently carried in the pocket. We offer it as the best low-priced set of Instruments in the country. By reason of the greatly increased foreign im-portation duty the cost this year, to us, is much higher; our selling price, however, will not be changed, Price, 85 cents, postpaid.

FOUNTAIN PEN

Given as a Premium for a Club of ? Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 5 Subscribers and 10 cents additional; or, for 5 Subscribers and $1.00 additional. Price, $1.75, postpaid,

The Pen we offer, we have tested by practica use, and believe it to be as successful a working Fountain Pen as any offered. It is simple, durable, handsome and easily adapted to a writer's wants.

The holder is of Vulcanized Rubber, or an ornamental chased design, and is fitted with a fine quality of gold shading-pen of regular pattern, which, with proper care ought to last a life-time.

The Pen fits in the centre of the holder and the feed is on the top of the Pen. It is without complication, having no springs, valves or delicate parts to get out of order. We unconditionally guarantee every Pen, and will refund full purchase money in every case where at does not give satisfaction. Full and simple directions, and a filler, accompany each Pen. The retail price at which this Pen is sold in stammery stores is $2.50. Our price, $1.75, postpaid.

KENSINGTON PAINTING OUTFIT

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 3 Yearly Bubscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 2 Bubscribers and 25 cents additional. Price, $1.00, postpaid.

ors, and a Brush; 4 Kensington Painting-Pens; a Felt Banner, stamped and all ready for painting. also send an Illustrated Manual of Instructions

Price of Gutfit, $1.00, postpaid. Price of extra tubes of Kensington Oil-Colors, ten cents, each.

LUSTRA PAINTING OUTFIT

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 4 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each ; or, for 2 Subscriber and 59 cents additional. Price, $1.00. Postage and packing, 15 cents extra.

Medium: 3 China Mixing-cups and an assortment of Camel's-hair Brushes.

We also send an Illustrated Manual of Instructions.

Price, $L15, postpaid. Extra bottles of Lustra-Colors, and Flitters in all Colors (for Iridescent and Brocade Painting) 15 cents each, postpaid.

LADIES' HOME JOURNAL CARPET SWEEPER

MANUFACTURED BY THE BISSELL CARPET SWEEPER CO., GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Given as a Premium for a Club of ? Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 5 Subscribers and 50 cents additional; or, for 5 Subscribers and $1.00 additional. Price, $2.50. Sent by Express. charges to be paid by the receiver, whether secured as a Premium,

This Sweeper is a handsome one, being hand-decorated, and finished in Cherry or natural Walnut, making it an ornamental article

It contains the following features, comprising all that has yet been invented to add to a sweeper's utility or convenience:

The celebrated broom movement, which makes the Sweeper self-adjusting to any carpet, and to light and heavy sweeping. On an Ingrain carpet, where all the dirt lies on top. it makes no attempt to dig into the carpet: when it touches a Brussels or a Moquette the pliable bristles force their way between the threads. taking out every particle of dirt without raising dust. Four Rubbertired Wheels, of a size sufficient to impart a constant, steady motion to the brush, and to prevent all rattle and noise. The Rubber Furniture Protector. A Pure Bristle Brush, set in such a manner that it is impossible for threads to wind up on the bearings and stop A New and Convenient Spring Dump, operating both pans at a time with the greatest case, and preventing the covering of One's self with dust in emptying.

The price is $2.50. Sent by Express, charges to be paid by the re-In order to save money for those of our subscribers who order these Sweepers, we carry a stock here in Philadelphia, and another at the factory in Michigan, and we ship from the point nearest the town from which we receive the order.

STEAMLESS AND ODORLESS COOKER

With Iron Base

each : or, for & Subscribers and 15 cents additional; or, for 3 Subscribers and $1,00 additional. Price. $2.75. Must be sent by Express or Preight, the receiver to pay the charges.

With this Steam-Cooker neither steam nor odor escapes into the house-both pass into the stove, and so up the chimney. It can be very conveniently handled, and will do the work of several from kettles. It is easy to clean. We consider it one of the most practical and useful household inventions we have ever seen, as it can be used as a common Boiling-Kettle and Steam-Cooker at the same time.

We have given this Cooker a practical cooking test, and can confidently recommend it. Twenty quarts capacity. Price, including one tin extension, $2.75, by Express or Freight, charges to be paid by the receiver.

FRUIT, WINE AND JELLY-PRESS

Given as a Premium for a Club of 16 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each : or, for 8 Subscribers and $1.00 additional. Price, $2.25. Bent only by Freight, charges to be paid by the receiver.

For seeding and ex-tracting juice from all fruits and berries.

With this Press can be extracted the juices from strawberries, respherries, cranberries, buckleberries, gooseberries, elderberries, blackberries, cherries, currants, peaches, plums, tomatoes, pincapples, pears, quinces, grapes, apples,

The seeds and skins are discharged perfectly dry. Nothing is Wines, iellies, fruit-butters and sirups can be made from anything that has juice.

Can be used as a perfectly satisfactory Lard Press.

Price, $2.25. These Presses must go by Freight; the charges are to be paid by the receiver.

NUT-PICKS AND NUT-CRACKER IN A PLUSH CASE

Given as a Premium for a Club of t Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 2 Subscribers and 50 cents additional. Postage and packing, 20 cents extra. Price, $1.55, postpaid.

This is a new and very handsome Nut Set, including Cracker and 6 Picks. They are of steel, nickel-plated and embossed as shown in the cut. The case is of Silk Plush, lined with Satin.

Price, $1.35, including cost of postage and packing.

WRITING-TABLET

Given as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 2 Subscribers and 25 cents additional. Price, 90 cents. Sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver, whether secured as a Premium or purchased.

This Writing-Tablet is our own importation. It is of a generous size and very convenient. Well made and covered with silk-finish cloth. The cover is hinged at the side, as shown in the cut. It has the usual compartments for holding envelopes, paper and letters, and the writing surface is fitted with a blotting-pad. At the top is an inkstand and three small compartments for pens, stamps, etc., with an ornamental Penholder in a sheath at the side.

In appearance the Tablet is most attractive. The ornamentation covering the entire top of cover and pen-boxes is hand-paintednot stenciled or stamped.

Price, packed in a wooden case, 90 cents. Sent only by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver.

CHATELAINE BAG

Given as a Premium for a Club of 2 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Postage and packing, 10 cents extra. Price, 70 cents, postpaid.

Chatelaine Baga appear to be as popular with the ladies as ever, and no wonder; they are among the most convenient of all articles ever adopted for ladies' use, and few who have once worn one would care to set forth on a shopping tour without it. The one we offer is well made of Leather, in imitation of "Cone Calf." The trimmings are Nickel-plated, oxidize finish.

By means of the hook at the top the bag can be worn at the waist, or, by detaching it, carried as an ordinary hand-lag.

Price, 70 cents, including cost of postage and packing.

ROYALOOZE COIN-PURSE

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 2 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Price, 55 cents, postpaid.

We have selected this Purse from a large variety, as being the most desimble and the best value. The material is "Royal Goze Calf," the finest quality made. Spring lid in Oxidized Silver-plate; chain and ring to match; can be worn as a chatelaine, or carried, by the finger-ring, in the hand. This kind of a Coin-Purse is not only very convenient—it is quite fushionable, and will be carried a great deal during the coming Sells in stores for 75 cents. Our price, including postage, 55 cents.

GOLD THIMBLE AND CASE

Sent, postpoid, as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 2 Subscribers and 25 cents additional. Price, 90 cents, postpaid.

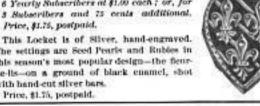

The Thimble we offer is of 10 karat gold. It is formed of two layers of SOLID GOLD and between them a lining, or stiffening. The gold is much thicker where the wear comes. This form of thimble is very much more durable than the best of those made of solid gold, and is very much cheaper. We furnish a handsome morocoo case, lined with velvet. In ordering, state the size of thimble desired.

Price, 90 cents, postpaid, for Thimble and case: price of Thimble alone, 55 cents, postpaid. He care

ENAMELED LOCKET No. 3137

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 6 Yearty Subscribers at $1.00 each ; or, for 3 Subscribers and 75 cents additional, Price, $1.75, postpaid.

The settings are Seed Pearls and Rubbes in this season's most popular design-the fleurde-lts-on a ground of black enamel, shot with hand-out silver bars.

ENGRAVED LOCKET No. 2408

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 7 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 4 Subscribers and 75 cents additional. Price, $2.05, postperid.

We guarantee this Locket to be of the very best quality of gold-plate. The design is hand-

A very pretty locket, suitable for wear either at the neck, or, as a charm on a watchchain.

Price, $2.00, postpald.

A NOVEL WALL-POCKET

Given as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.50 each; or, for 2 Subscribers and 50 cents additional. Price, $1.25. Must be sent by Espress, charges to be paid by the receiver, whether purchased or secured as a Premium,

New goodsnew idea. This combines all the utility of a capacious Wall-Pocket, with the beauty of a fine line Engraving in a massive Carved Frame. When folded flat against the wall there is nothing to indicate the Wall-Pocket. The pictures are very fine, and the subjects pleasing. They are under glass. The Frames are of Polished Oak-4 inches deep. The picture itself, inside the frame, measures 12% x 9% inches. The outside Frame measures 1854 x 1514 inches. Price, $1.25. Sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver.

PLUSH-CASED CLOCK

Given as a Premium for a Club of 7 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 5 Subscribers and 50 cents additional; or, for 3 Subscribers and $1.00 additional. Price, $2.00. Must be sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver, whether purchased or secured as a Premium.

New goods, made especially to our order. The Case (10 x 814 inches) is beveled, and covered with Silk Plush. The ornamental metal work we can recommend as being an unusually good imitation of Frosted Silver. This Clock is sure to be a great favorite. Price, $2.00. By Express, charges to be paid by the receiver.

DRESSING-TABLE CLOCK

Given as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 5 Subscribers and 50 cents additional. Send 10 cents extra for postage. Price, postpaid, $1.50.

This dainty little Time-piece is specially adapted for a place in a lady's boudoir. The case is nickel, front and back, and the sides glass. Clocks of this character are seldom manufactured to sell at anything 4 like a reasonable price, and this is a decided innovation. Fine steel-cut pinion movement, and the manufacturer who makes it for us warrants it to us as a good Time-keeper. Price, $1.50, postpaid.

SILVER BRUSH AND COMB SET

Given as a Premium for a Club of 8 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 6 Subscribers and 50 cents additional; or, for 4 Subscribers and $1.00 outditional. Price, $2.10. Sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver, whether secured as a Premium or purchased.

This is a very desirable Set. The backs of all the pieces are Silver-plated, and the embossed designs are very handsome. The Bristles in the Brush are of good quality; the Comb is Celluloid, the Mirror Bevel plate. The whole is packed in a neat box. This Set is usually retailed at $3.00; our price is $2.40. Sent by Express, charges (which will be light) to be paid by the receiver.

HAND-MIRROR

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of & Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Price, 65 cents, postparid. Size, 10 x 4 inches.

The glass is of a good quality of bevel plate. The frames are of various woods-Walnut, Oak and Cherry and are beautifully finished and polished. As these Mirrors are somewhat liable to damage in the mails, to prevent breakage we pack each one between boards, and in such a manner that we never have any complaint about their being received otherwise than in perfect condition.

Price, 65 cents, including postage and packing.

A RARE CHANCE FOR MUSICIANS AND MUSIC LOVERS

Everybody likes good music as well as good books, but while books can now be everywhere secured at a very moderate cost, good music is seldom offered at anything like reasonable prices. Realizing this, a year ago we entered into an arrangement which has apparently met with the unqualified approbation of those of our subscribers who are musically inclined, if we are to judge by the great number of ing them to order of the publisher, from a catalogue of thousands (also furnished)— orders we have received for the Musical Subscription described below.

Firstly: Any one who will send us a Club of 3 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each, will be entered, to receive by mail, each month for one year, a copy of a Musical Library. Each number will contain 14 pages of music.

This music will not be old, time-worn, out/of-date numbers; it will be new, fresh and popular. A choice can be made and either Vocal or Instrumental music selected-(not both).

Secondly: The one sending the Club will also receive a certificate empower-

ANY PIECE OF MUSIC FOR NINE CENTS!

Think of the Overtures to Tannhauser ($1.50), William Tell ($1.50), and Sonnambula ($1.00) for nine cents each! Ordinary miscellaneous Sheet Music, not in the special entalogue, can be ordered at healf the regular price; and Music-Albums, Books on Music, etc., can be secured at a discount on the regular rates.

Our subscribers will be prompt to recognize in the above, not an advertisement of uncertain character, but one of our own Premium Offers, which may be accepted with confidence.

A Club of 3 Yearly Subscribers to THE LADGES' HOME JOURNAL SECURES AS A Premium the privileges above set forth. cannot be secured, send us $1.00 and we will enter your name as a Subscriber to the Musical Library, and as one entitled to the discounts on

Be particularly careful to state whether you wish your monthly music to be Vocal or Instrumental.

MUSIC-BINDER

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 3 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Price, to cents. Postage and packing, 35

This Music-Binder differs from all others now in the market by reason of the entirely new method employed in the binding. It has many advan-tages. The music opens perfectly dat on the piano. Music can conveniently be taken from any part of the file and replaced without disturbing any other portion of its contents. Thus preserved, music cannot be lost, torn or solled, and each piece can readily be found when wanted. With each Binder we send strips of Gummed Paper, to repair old and torn music when necessary.

Price, 85 cents, postpaid (packed in boards).

THE WORLD'S EDUCATOR

Given as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 2 Subscribers and 25 cents additional. Price, $1.00. Postage and packing, 30 cents extra, whether secured as a Premium or purchased.

Size of Box, 15 inches long, 7 inches wide.

We know of nothing in the way of a game, from which the same amount of instruction can be derived, or which will impart it so pleasantly. It gives information on all known subjects, and asks and answers the most difficult questions. It furnishes amusement and instruction for all classes and to all ages.

Price, $1.00. Postage and packing, 30 cents extra.

BUILDING BLOCKS

THAT ARE NOT ONLY TOYS FOR CHILDREN, BUT A FUND OF AMUSEMENT AND INSTRUCTION FOR GROWN PERSONS.

Given as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 2 Subscribers and 25 cents additional. Price, 75 cents. Postage and packing, 30 chased or secured as a Premium.

With each Set we send a Manual of Instructious, and Plans for Fourteen Buildings

One set will build-palace with central gateway, school-house, penitentiary, triumphal gateway, art-gullery, museum, seminary; university, with tower for observatory; cathedral, with west towers; hospital, with carriage ways; town-hall, club-house, railway-station. Each of these, when erected, forms a complete exterior, in miniature, of the building indicated by its title, architecturally correct, and a perfect model of a house. The Blocks lock into each other. stand stendily, and do not upset. The set consists of 24 pieces, each piece being a section of a rectangular building, and while plans and instructions are given for only fourteen buildings, an almost infinite number may be constructed.

The toy is fuscinating for an intelligent child, and one which affords an inexhaustible fund of amusement, and is highly instructive. We have secured the entire stock of these Blocks from the manufacturer, and as no more will be made when our present supply is exhausted we cannot duplicate them.

Price, 25 cents; and 30 cents additional for postage and packing.

LEATHER MUSIC-WRAPPER

at $1.00 each; or, for $ Subscribers and 50 cents additional.

Full size; one piece of flexible Morocco, cloth-lined, with handle, strap and buckle. Retails in stores for $1.25. Our price, $1.00, including postage and packing.

LEATHER MUSIC-ROLL

Bent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 3 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for # Subscribers and 25 cents additional.

Well and stoutly made of the strongest board, covered with Morocco; with strap; full size. Such a Roll as sells in the music

Our price, 80 cents, including postage and packing.

FOOT POWER SCROLL-SAW

Given as a Premium for a Club of 12 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 8 Subscribers and $1.00 additional; or, for 5 Sub scribers and $1.75 additional. Price, $3.50. Must be sent by Express or Freight, charges to be paid by the receiver.

The entire frame-work is of iron, inpanned black and striped with red. The Arbors, etc., are of steel, carefully gauged and fitted to their bearings. The Arms and Pitman are of the best selected Ash. The bearings to the arms are carefully sized to bring them in perfect line. Jointed Stretcher-Rod. The clamps have hinged jaws, to overcome the raking overthrow which is found to be an objection common to most small jig-saws. The blades, when set in a clamp of this description, are not nearly so liable to Each machine has an Automatic Dust-Blower and a Rotary Drill.

The Tilting Table is arranged for inlaying work, and is a very desimble

Each machine is securecy boxed, and we send the necessary tools for setting up and running the same.

be broken.

Price, $3.50. Sent by Freight or Express, the receiver to pay the

COLLAR-BOX CUFF-BOX AND GLOVE-BOX

Given as a Premium for a Club of 2 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Postage and packing, 10 cents extra. Prics, 65 cents, postpaid.

This Set, which is manufactured for our use, is not only ornamental. It includes a Colinches wide; the Collar and Cuff-Boxes are of proportionate sizes embossed in an artistic imita-

The price at which we sell the three pieces is very low-45 cents, postpaid. We cannot break the Set.

HANDY TOOLS FOR USE IN THE HOUSEHOLD

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 4 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 2 Subscribers and 50 cents additional. Price, $1.00, postpaid.

A most convenient and useful article for wives and daughters, as well as for men and boys.

These Tool-handles are made of Rosewood, with Lignumvita Cap, highly polished and of beautiful appearance. The ferrule and jaws are heavily Nickel-Plated.

There are numerous other sets of tools made in imitation of this one, but they are of inferior quality. The Tools we use are made for service, and we will guarantee them to give the greatest satisfaction.

The Steel jaws will hold perfectly, not only the Tools contained in the hollow handle, but all other things from a needle to a mill file. No other Tool-Handle in the market will do this. It answers the purpose of a small Hand-Vise.

The Tools are made from Steel of the highest grade, tempered by men of great experience, honed to a fine cutting edge, and are highly finished. The Jaws in the handle shut over the shoulders of the tools so as to make it impossible to pull them out when in use. The handle measures 614 inches in length. The saw Blade (which can not be shown full-sized in the cui) is 7 inches in length.

Price of Handle and 10 Tools, $1.00, postpaid.

EMBOSSED LEATHER CARD-CASE

Bent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 2 Yearly Subscribers at $2.00 each. Price, 65 cents, postpaid.

Well made, good quality Leather. Two compart-ments for visiting cards and two smaller spaces for postage stamps, etc. The entire book, inside and out, is finely embossed in artistic designs. It is suitable for either a lady or gentleman.

Ordered at the same time with the Copper

Card-Plate and Fifty Cards (see offer below) the price of the Card Case is its cents, postpaid.

Price of Card-Case when ordered alone, 65 cents, postpaid.

ENGRAVED COPPER CARD-PLATE AND FIFTY PRINTED CARDS

Given as a Premium for a Club of & Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Price, $1.25. Postage and packing, 10 cents extra, whether secured as a Premium or purchased.

There is but one correct Visiting Card-that printed from a Copper Plate, and every lady should have her own plate.

The plates we turnesn are the best. The workmanship cannot be surpassed. The Cards are of the finest "Wedding Bristol." The styles of lettering are many. We will select the letter, or, on re-ceipt of your order, mail you a sample sheet of styles for your own selection. We then mail you the Engraved Plate and Fifty Printed Cards. In sending copy write the mane and the address VERY PLAINLY (if you wish an address, it will be extra).

Price of Plate, with one engraved line, and Fifty printed Cards, $1.25. Postage and packing, 10 cents extra.

This price, and Premium offer, is for our line only. Additional lines on plate, 40 cents extra, each. Additional Fifty cards, 50 cents. Price of Plate, Pifty Cards and Embossed-Leather Card-Case, if ordered at the same time, $1.55, postpaid.

FOLDING DOLL'S BED-POLISHED BRASS

Given as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 2 Subscribers and 25 cents additional. Price, 80 cents. Bent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver, whether secured as a Premium or purchased.

A never-failing delight for all the year round. It will last a child the lifetime of many dolls. Made to fold into a flat package.

Made of best Brass Wire, securely riveted by a patent process. Size, 11 x 18 Inches.

The Express charges on the Bedstead are light, as it does not make a bulky package-25 cents to 35 cents will pay the Express charges to any reasonable distance.

We have this same Bedstead in Tinned Wire, instead of Brasa, which we will give as a Premium for a Club of 2 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Price, 50 cents. Must be sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver, whether secured as a Fremium or purchased. This Bedstead is the same in all respects and measurement as the other, differing only in the material. The above offers are for the Bedsteads alone. We can furnish a Mattress and a pair of Pillows for 50 cents additional

BRITANNIA TEA-SET

Given as a Premium for a Club of 2 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Price, 50 cents. Postage and packing, 20 cents extra, whether secured as a Premium or purchased.

Very pretty in design; brightly polished and very hard to break; teapot is 35¢ inches high-other pieces in proportion.

> very useful and desirable, but lar-box, Cuff-box and Glove-box. The latter is 12 inches long, 3% All the pieces are handsomely

ALL PREMIUM GOODS FOR SALE AT THE PRICES QUOTED -

A package of ALL-COCK'S CORN SHIRLDS or a sample of ALL-COCK'S BUNION SHIRLDS will be sent, prepaid, on receipt of Ten Lents.

They are easily applied, give immediate relief, afford absolute comfort, and are the best, surest, cleanest and cheapest remedy for corns and bunions ever produced.

BUNION produced.

The Core Shieldcare made large and small. In ordering, state size wassed.

SHIELDS. 276 Gard Street, New York.

THE A. A. CHARTS For Making

KENNEDY'S

Medical

Discovery.

PRICE, $1.50. SOLD EVERYWHERE.

30 CIS. WILL BUT A WOMAN

A Beautiful Pearl Necklace. Bo article of adartment as enhances the brusty of the water of Phala, and the Pearl Necklace is used of the most richig beauty of articles of adartment as enhanced the brusty articles of adartment in the mothet. It comprises a large matcher of PEARL Hooks, graduated by size. The mothetine levia at back of the s, issaying grandfully over the hanny of wears, or, if produce the worth close to the test. Every body should have of their beautiful architects to add to her lost of ornatement, provides applied to find the control of the season of the season of the season of the season of the control of the c

THE WALL PAPER MERCHANT

Send 10c to pay postage on samples, and his guide HOW TO PAPER will be sent Free-03-65 W. Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

MOND Unique ANTI-WHINKLE removes ASOAP Control of the Control of the FREE FAST BLACK AND ALL PAST BLA

BOON TO THE DEAF!

before purchasing. | GRAS. M. N. KILLER, 614 South 20th St., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Skeleton Bang and Ideal Wave, Natural curied, feather light, lifelike, beautiful, from $1.00 up.

WAVY HAIR SWITCHES, All long, convent Hair, from $5.00 up. $10.00 elsewhers.

COCOANUT BALM. The only Complexion Beautifier endorsed by emittent physicians. Makes the skin as fair and soft as a child's, Price, S.1.00 per toy. All Tellet Preparations of the Celebrated PARFUMBRIE MONTE CHRISTO. HAIR DYES ALL SHADES, A SPECIALTY, send for free pamphilst. How to be Beautifed."

54 West Fourteenth St., New York.

A FREE TICKET TO THE WORLD'S FAIR,

"To go or not to go," that is the question. Well, we will go! But now? Buy a Magic Pocket Bank and you will "get there" without Septing it. Locks and registers deposited Opens Stoff when $5 in dimes have been deposited. Fits Vest Pocket! Postpaid to any address on receipt of $5e. Money refunded if not estisfactory. Agents wanted. Write for circulars of Magic Novelties. Memory This Poper.

MAGIC INTRODUCTION CO., 227 Broadway, New York.

ns A DELICATE AND LASTING ODGE.

Ale by all Drug and Fancy Goods Dealers or if to procure this wenderful some sond 25cc ps and receive a cake by return mail.

JAS. S. KIRK & CO., Chicago.

MUSIC.

FOUND $5,000. $13,389.

MAGIC

DELICATE IN FLAVOR. CLEAR AS CRYSTAL.

SWEET AS HONEY. WHOLESOME FOR CHILDREN. WE USE IT AT HOME.

sample will be mailed on application

B. S. JANNEY, Jr., & CO., Philadelphia, Penna.

LADY Agents to sell new and beautiful goods.
Address Mrs. N. B. Lyptus, Chicago, 10

OLD COINS Warded. High prices coin: $5.76 for certain 1853 quarteres: $5.06 for the table cost, etc. Send stamp for list. W. E. SkilnNER. Coin Bruker, ES Washington Street, Hosboo, Mass.

Sample FREE on receipt of 2 cent star

MAGIC LANTERNS and stereous means of offers teaching the colleges, Schools, and Standard Schools, Out and Charlest Annuals. Our as principle of the colleges, Schools, and Standard Schools, Out as principled of the colleges, Schools, and Standard Ass, Standard Standard Ass, Standard Standard Ass, Standard Standard Ass, Standard Standar AND STERLE ASSET THE STATE OF THE PARTY OF T

Published every Wednesday at 92 to 96 Bible House, New York City, at $1.50 a Year. Louis Klopsch, Publisher.

CHRISTMAS PRESENT FROM DR. TALMAGE.

At this Season of the Year the Great Question "What Paper Shall we Take?" confronts every Intelligent Family, and among them Your Own. If we were called upon to Decide for you we would Unhesitatingly say, "Take THE CHRISTIAN HERALD," and for the Following Reasons:

1. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, is Edited by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., in his own Peculiar and Incomparable Style, and it is Published Every Week. 2. It is Bright, Crisp, Pure, Wholesome, and FULL of PICTURES, with A PIECE OF MUSIC IN EVERY ISSUE. 3. There is not a Dull Line in it. 4. It has a very Much Larger Circulation Than any Other Religious Family Newspaper. 5. You Can Safely Put it into the Hands of Every Member of Your Family, and Every One will be Delighted with it.

MUST

for Yourself, and We Want You to Decide for the Best, and that, of course, means THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Hence we Offer You the Following Marvelous Inducement to give it a Trial. It is Really More than we can Afford to do, did We not Feel Sure that, Once Introduced, You will be Glad to have THE CHRISTIAN HERALD stay.

If you will send us FIFTY--50--CENTS, we will send you THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, every Week, for Three Months and, in Addition,

DR. TALMAGE WILL SEND YOU A CHRISTMAS

Consisting of A BEAUTIFUL SECTION OF GENUINE OLIVE WOOD from the MOUNT OF OLIVES, and Polished to Perfection by Native Workmen in JERUSALEM.

These Beautiful Sections are Nearly one inch Thick and About 12 Square Inches Surface Measurement. In Refined Oriental Homes they are Used as Mantel Ornaments. Each Section is Complete and Entirely Surrounded by the Fragrant Olive Bark.

A MORE BEAUTIFUL AND APPROPRIATE HOLIDAY PRESENT cannot be Conceived than a Section of Olive Wood from Sacred Mount Olivet, where the Master Taught His Disciples the Lord's Prayer, and at the Foot of which lies the Garden of Gethsemane, Blossoming as it did in the Days of Him, the Anniversary of Whose Birth all Christendom Celebrates this Month. Mention the Ladies' Home Journal when You

ADDRESS. 92, 93, 94, 95, 96 Bible House, New York City

Should the Supply of Olive Wood, which is Limited, be Exhausted when Your Subscription is Received we will-Immediately Refund Money. We Prepay att Charges-oogle

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR

Questions and Answers

PHILADELPHIA, JANUARY, 1892

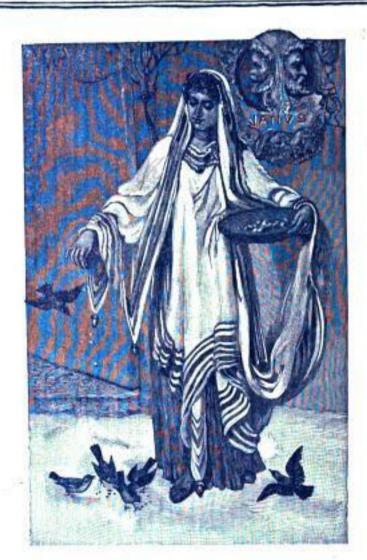

TEN CENTS A COPY

For January, 1892

Vol. IX No. 2

For January, 18	92		Vo	l, I	X,	No.	2
250		_					PA	OE.
For New Year's Day-(Poem)					20	Clinton	n Scollard	1
Unknown Wives of Well-Know	wn M	len-	8 "			398/11/29
XIII-Mrs. John Wanamaker	Title Prof	main	2	- A1	ice G	iraham	McCollin	1
Byolution—(Poem)		-3					n B. Tabb	1
Clever Daughters of Clever Me	n_					636
III—Miss Ethel Ingalls—was row	altr	2		80	100	Jea	n Mallory	1
Social Life in New York-II	-		1		Mrs	A 12 A 14 A 16	Harrison	2
The Staircase of Fairlawn Mar	nor	Part	m	23			ie Dickens	3
Dispersed by Alfred Fredericks and	B. D. D	inch .		2,000		100		. 33
Mr. Beecher as I Knew Him-		1				- The Contract Contra	d Beecher	5
Wine on George W						ford B.	4 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10
Fashionable Madame F			hlura	- 20			e Whitney Depew
CHRot F S			mgre	M	ary	B. Chil	in
Tables Emot P. S			hn W					6
Wine at Women's Lunches					Mrs.	Burton	n Harrison	6
A Group of Sofa Cushions						Maude	Haywood	7
litastrated by the Author						Cil	i. Theater	8
For a Friend's Birthday-(Poet		700		•		Cel	ia Thaxter	. 0
Women's Chances as Bread-V	Vinn	ers-	2. 7			Mande	Haywood	8
XI—Women as Illustrators -	3	3			W16	DA 1000	ler Wilcox
Duty's Path—(Poem) -		3		0		V 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10	H. Dodge	2.00
Sunny Spots for Working Girl							almer Cox
The Brownies in January -		3	533				anine took the Sea Charles Dickens James Anthony Fo	roude or of	Edm	idwin nund lon	Yates			ewman Hal berdeen kenzie	10
From a New Inkstand .			-	-			J. Burdette
The King's Daughters -		4				Margar	et Bottomi	12
Under My Study Lamp -				R	ev. T.	De Wi	itt Talmage	13
Side Talks with Girls -			(4.1)	-	*	Rut	h Ashmore	14
Side Talks with Boys -				-	+		ster Coates
The Author and the Publisher						- 1	. S. Fergus	16
A Girls' Literary Club -	000	1200	200			- L	eigh North	1 16
Literary Queries					+	100	The Edito	r 15
Art for Art Workers	-	-			-	Maud	e Haywood	1 17
Mothers' Corner		200		Eli	sabet	h Robi	nson Scovi	1 18
Artistic Needlework		-	0.5	-		Mar	ry F. Knapy	p. 19
Hints on Home Dressmaking	254	-3				Emma	M. Hoope	r 20
Some All-Black Costumes	1							21
The Small Belongings of Dre	188	70				Isabe	d A. Mallo	n 22
Pretty Frocks for Little People								23
Just Among Ourselves -	3.5	-			9		unt Patiens
Everything About the House							Maria Park
All About Flowers					El		Rexford 26
Helps in the Laundry -			-			- 1	Anna Sawy	er 28
Holiday Novelties in Jewelry	100	22	3	+	. 6		Alice Mars
The Mother Goose Carnival		200	0.75		M		n D. Thay
The New Form of Education				+	-		Mary Eltin	g 31

THE OPENING YEAR

BY MADELINE S. BRIDGES

YOUR hand, New Year, since we must comrades be Through the strange circles of the seasons four!
Plodding in lonely paths 'mid drifting snow
When days are dark, and whirling tempests roar.
Will your strong guiding arm be 'round me pressed?
And when the ice-bars melt, and warm blue streams
Laugh in the sun, and leap toward the sea.
Will you, then, share my happy spring-time dreams—
The waking songs that birds and poets know?
And when red roses burn on bended sprays,
And lovers roam through shadowy woodland ways,
Will you keep kindly pace? and last when brown,
Lie the sweet fields, and faded leaves come down.
And we are tired, both, and fain to rest—
Will you be friends with me, still true and near?
Then take my hand and heart, dear comrade year.

(VRTIS · PUBLISHING · (OMPANY · PHILADELPHIA

4c. A DAY PER ROOM HEAT YOUR HOUSE Either with STEAM or HOT WATER, as preferred.

If you are building a New Home, or want to make the old one Comfortable, it will pay you FURMAN BOILER and System of Heating, to investigate OUR FURMAN BOILER 100 page lighteration Manual on House Heating and Venditation sent free. Address. HERENDEEN MFG. CO., IO CLARK STREET, GENEVA, N. Y

AND THE BUSY WOMAN'S.

Miss Frances Willard,-"The brightest outlook window in Christendom for busy people who wast to see what is edug on in the west."

Providence Telegram..." A great boon to the busy, the lary and the economical."

The Congregation allist... This monthly has no peer in originality of design, scope and accuracy of vision, thoroughness in execution and activity to transfers its wester into closure of Reviews, of New York, has come to the rescue of busy people. We know of one kick vatiread effected who for a month has worked until 11 o clock at night, and yet has kept well informed of current world events. He reads this Magazine. It gives him a running commentary on important events, besides a digest of the best articles in contemporary magazines."

SUBSORIBE NOW! On Jan. first the yearly

SUBSCRIBE NOW! On Jan. first the yearly price will be advanced from $2.00 to $2.50. Trial Subscription, Seven Months for $1. CLUB BATES UPON APPLICATION.

Desirable Agents manted in every Community Sent ton Costs THE REVIEW OF REVIEWS, for Sample Copy.

15 Autor Pige., New York

LEAVES A DELICATE AND LASTING ODOR. For sale by all Drug and Fancy Goods Dealers or if unable to procure this wonderful some send 25c in stamps and receive a cake by return mall.

JAS. S. KIRK & CO., Chicago. SPECIAL-Shandon Bells Walts (the popular Society Walts) sent PREE to anyone sending us three wrappers of Shandon Bells Soen.

★FREE! ROLLER ORGAN.★

Plays 300 Times If you wantone, cut this notice out and send to us at once.

AND STEREOPTICONS

PAY WELL. MCALLISTER, Mig Optician, 49 Nasana Street, New York.

An elegant dressing exquisitely perfumed, re-spurnies from the scalp, prevents baldness and of causes the hair to grow Thick, Soft and Ben libble for conservations of the same of the hair, or TRICOPHEROUS HAIR SKIN. ESTABLISHED 1801.

AGLE PRINTING OUTFIT 15: & pad and tweeners; put up to went ben with fan out for use. EacLE SUPPLY CO., New Haven,

A GENTS make 160 PER CENT, profit, on my Corseta Belts, Brushen, Carlers and novelties. Sam-ples, PREE, Write now. Br. Bridgman, 253 Broadway, X. Y.

A Sticking Novelty. Send Mr. for a Pat. Muclings entirely new; Stevens Novelty Co., 1025 Arch St., Philis.

AGENTS clear #5 to #10 a day with our LABES SPECIALTIES, Over 200 different articles, Endispensation, Dissertant Cara-logue Free, G.L.ERWIN & Co., Chirage, III.

LADY Agents to sell new and beautiful goods.
Address Mrs. N. R. Levelle, Chicago, Ill.

500 SCRAP CATTLE OF CARREST SPEEDS FREE NEW CARDS Seed to Company the LANGEST READY STORY OF

30 NEW ..... 2c.

HAIR CURLING JELLY—DR. AM-mett's French Jelly keeps hair in curl three days. Sample by mail, 10c, MIDDLETON DRUG OO., NYcity

YOUR NAME on

CARDS STORY OF THE BEST OF THE PARTY OF THE USE Dr. X. Stone's BRONCHIAL WAFERS, the great Throat & Ling Scenedy. He per hox. Drugglists. Sample He. Stone Medicine Co., Chicago, Lil.

CARDS WAR THE VIEW WITH THE PLAYS Dislogues, Speakers, for School, Chub and Parior, Cutalogue, free, T. S. DENISON, Publisher, Chicago.

WRINKLES | With Almost Not Cover, you see per-

CARDS

BOON TO THE DEAF!

Telque ANTI-WRINKLE removes SOAP MMEPINAULT

PRINTING OUTFIT 15° ODB: LETE, 4 aphabets replay type, type bather, bottle in-bathis Dir. Lik Fiel and Twenner. For my in man but with incoming for men. Statistics parameter, Veryla Str. Bat-Unes Nacker, Card Printer, on. State names in Indian particulation and majorate propagal like IT of Edg. Quality, particulation and majorate incoming IT of Edg. Quality, E. H. INGERSONI. 6, 8 800. 65 cortinant Str. S. Y. Chty.

THE SOUND DISCS are parased to being the sense of the being the sense of the sense

SEND A POSTAL FOR FREE SAMPLE of HAKKA CREAM. A harmless and sure or for Head Code and Catarrh. Over 1900 minusters of dame it. Address, A. P. Bust & Co., Beston, Mass

COMRADES and Let Intent proportion comes.

COMRADES and Market, for 17 cla.

COMPANDED AND ADDRESS AND

FAIR MINER'S ALMOND MEAL FACES Pimples, Wrinkles, Shiny Skin. Perfectly harmiess. 25 cents by mail. H. A. MINER, Malden, Mass. Vinolia Contains No Sugar, or Soda-But Extra Cream.

CLEANSING WITHOUT SHRIVELLING THE SKIN, HAIR AND NAILS.

OT COLORED, RENDERED TRANSPARENT, OR IN ANY WAY "DOCTORED UP."

HYDROLYSIS.

PROPOSITIONS.

If one part of any soap in the market, spaque or otherwise, he dissolved in four parts of holling water, an dance of free alkali will always be present, and all statements to the contrary are not correct.

SCIENTIFIC PROOF (SHOWING ALKALI).

1. This agricous solution of some will turn red litmus paper blue. (Not itums paper can be obtained of any Druggist.)

2. A little Phenol Phthalein solution will turn it crimson. (We will supply a bottle of this free.)

HOME TESTS—TASTE, TOUCH, SMELL.

Tests. - If the tongue be applied to a piece of ordinary toilet soap, the alkali present will "bite." Thuck.—When the skin is washed with ordinary soups, the alkall, either already free or set free in hydrolysis, or both, dries it.

Small.—(a) Scape containing strong, powerful scents are usually made with bad fats, the powerful perfumes being used to cover the rancifying fats.

(b) A freshly cut slice of ordinary transparent soap smells of methylated spirit.

(a) The same bornt over a lighted match gives off an odor of "burnt sugar,"

A SCIENTIFIC ADVANCE.

The extra cream in "Vincila" Scap is the only possible antidote tending to guard the integument during hydrolysis, and to prevent any injurious action on delicate skins.

MAKE NO MISTAKE.

The materials employed to superfat "Vinolia" Soap are entirely different and distinct from the mineral oils and suportfable and unsaponifiable animal fats incorporated with the superfatted imitations of "Vinolia" Soap that have been foisied on the American market since the introduction of this popular article abroad.

Our preparations can be obtained of all the leading Drug Houses in the United States.

BLONDEAU ET CIE., Corner WATTS and GREENWICH STREETS, NEW YORK, and RYLAND ROAD, LONDON, N. W.

"THE FASHIONABLE CORSET SUBSTITUTE."

EOUIPOISE

Made on true hygienic prin-cipic; modeled on lines which give a graceful figure; perfect support from shoulders, dis-tributing clothing-strain and weight; three garments in one, corset, waist, and cover; best of materials.

Write for a copy of our finely fliustrated pamphlet on

SENSIBLE DRESSING.

FREE TO EVERYBODY. GEORGE L'ROST & CO., 31 BEDFORD ST., BOSTON.

LADIES OF FASHION

L. SHAW'S Skeleton Bang and Ideal Wave,

WAVY HAIR SWITCHES,

All long, convent Hair, from $5.00 up. $10.00 elsewhere. COCOANUT BALM.

The only Complexion Beautifler endorsed by eminent physicians. Makes the skin as fair and soft as a child's. Prices, 8, 100 per box. All Tollet Preparations of the Contented PARFUMERIE MONTE CHRISTO. HAIR DYES ALL SHADES, A SPECIALTY. Send for free pampidet "How to be Heartful."

54 West Fourteenth St., New York.

WOODBURY'S FACIAL SOAP

JOHN H. WOODSURY Dermatelegical Institute, 125 West 422 Street, New York City, Constitutes for, at office or by belief. Open 8 A. M. to 8 P. M.

Agents Make $5 a Day distributing samples and selling our Medicinal Toloap to families. Sample free. Crofts & Reed, Chica

CANVASSER() Make Hig Money
On goods.
A geomine harvest for agents. Sil to 810 per day easily made. Goods sell themselves. County rights given. One outfit free. Enclose stamp for full particular. THE SELECT. rights given. One outfit free. Enriose stamp for full particulars. THE BEMPLE Co., Mt. VERNON, O.

CARDS No Year Supplies of Side Nicken, Side Strings, Bondaya & New Ear agest Cards, Tolska Strans, Harries, Sec. J. Albeite, J. Fack, Rainell, J. Fack Appelatores Units, all lat So. Stryen Sant Str., Endin, Olive.

WE TEACH HOW, You make $13.00 to $150.00 8. A. RUSS CO., Bouth Bend, Ind.

MAGIC LANTERNS WANTED AN LIBERT SEPHILE. PL

In Diamond Dye Fast Black, faded or rusty dresses, costs, feathers, etc., look as black as

By using Diamond Dyes, you can be as well-dressed as the best, with little expense. They come in all colors, are easy to use, and will give you a new dress for a few dimes.

Diamond Dyes give rich, bright, unfading, never-crocking colors. Take no substitute.

Send stamp for free books on home dyelog and art work, and forty samples of colored cloth.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & Co., Burlington, VI.

FREE TO LADIES, strated Book on Farry Work, Kelt. Illustrated Book on Farry Work, Kuit, ting & Crocketing, 150 embreddery stinders patterns for working the alphabet and design for making tidine & questions, also beautiful Jacose tray and, given to trial subscribers to 1805%, a family story paper for young and o with fishions & finery work illustrated. See Bloom of we willised Tita Hone Smorth and give you think the hone of the see that the leave, 161a Milk St. Boston, Mass. The Hesse, 161a Milk St. Boston, Mass. The House, 161a Milk Do.

In our BUARANTEED Directory that new whiting daily to Mice and Public and over the world;
also for generated labels in 2 coed on each; also Lems benefit's 16 page HERALD ELIMIE, (regular relies alone NC.) all perspeal to you only Mic.
GUMMED ADDRESS CO., No. 18,853 Phila, Pa.

AGENTS

THE HEALTH CALENDAR is a floresteeper a Citeben Help, with fills of Fare her each day and reliable information generally 500,000 and 1 ties entired better their ever limited be. Sells to every boxasteeper with the relation of the sells to every boxasteeper of the extended when it would be the extended when it would be the extended when it would be the extended of the extended when it would be the extended of the extended when it would be the extended of the

Digitized by Google

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

PHILADELPHIA, JANUARY, 1892

Yearly Subscription, One Dollar Single Copies, Ten Cents

FOR NEW YEAR'S DAY

Vol. IX, No. 2

BY CLINTON SCOLLARD

CRIEND, if thou dost bethink thee now To lip some earnest pledge or vow, Search well thy heart, nor idly let The burden on thy soul be set. Loud not thy faith until it strain
And break, and all be worse than vain;
Measure thy power, and for the rest
Beserch thy God to bless the test.

*XIII.-MRS, JOHN WANAMAKER

BY ALICE GRAHAM McCOLLIN

John Wanamaker, the wife of the Postmaster-General, is one of the most interesting women, from her character and abilities, that have been described in this series, as she is one of the least known. She has most successfully avoided accurate description duration of a robble caresses and it is successfully a robote accurate description during her husband's public career, and it is, therefore, with peculiar pleasure that the Journal is able to present to its readers a sketch which it is hoped will show something of her character and attainments in her domestic and social life,

MRS. JOHN WANAMAKER

Mary Erringer Brown—this is Mrs. Wanamaker's full maiden name—was born in Philadelphia, on November 23, 1839, and educated very thoroughly and completely at a private seminary in that city. Shortly after leaving school she became engaged to her brother's intimate friend, John Wanamaker, to whom she was married two years later.

She has had six children, four of whom are living: Rodman, Thomas, Minnie and Lillie,
The two sons are married, the younger, Rodman, being the father of the two grandchildren of the family, the younger of whom is known as John Wanamaker, Jr. The daughters are still unmarried, only one of them, Miss Minnie Wanamaker, baving as yet made her début into society.

made her début into society.

Three years ago, desiring to give her daughters the benefit of European instruction in their French and musical studies, Mrs. Wannmaker went abroad where she remained until summoned home by her husband's entrance into official life. This absence in Europe dis-turbed quite seriously much of her work in Philadelphia. For more than thirty years, during both winter and summer, she had been Sunday-school, and the separation from this work was very painful. She had also to relinquish, temporarily, her extensive work among the class known as "working girls," a class for which she has the warmest interest and sympathy. She assists such girls with her advice and personal care as well as by money; and appreciating fully the difficulties and unhappiness which they must encounter. tries to add a little brightness to their lives.

*In this series of pen-portraits of "Unknown Wives of Well-Known Men," commenced in the last January Jouenals, the federating, each accompanied with periods, have been printed:

Mas. Thimas A. Edisin Mas. P. T. Barnun Mas. P. T. Barnun Mas. T. He West Talmade Mas. Chauncry M. Deswy Lady Macdonald Mas. Edel Chandler Harris Lady Tennyson Mas. Will Carleton Mas. Will Carleton Mas. William McKinley Mas. Marcynell. The Princess Hemanus Apeil May June July

* And of these back numbers can be had at 10 cents, each by writing to the Journals.

Of Mrs. Wanamaker's social ambitions there is absolutely nothing to write. She is a woman

Of Mrs. Wanamaker's social ambitions there is absolutely nothing to write. She is a woman to whom worldly homors have come unsought and undesired. "Perhaps there never was a woman," said a friend once, in speaking of her, "to whom ordinary ambitions and desires were more foreign, and ostentation or display of less importance." Even for her children she has had no worldly ambitions. Let them but grow into good men and women, and she cares for nothing else. It is well known how, in spite of this indifference to social position and honors, both position and honor have come to Mrs. Wanamaker, but it may not be so generally known how successfully and thoroughly she fills her station.

Mrs. Wanamaker's consideration for her servants is unusual in a woman of such numerous occupations and multifarious interests. We can not illustrate it better than by a little incident which occurred at the time of the building of their country home, "Lindenhurst." When it was nearing completion Mrs. Wanamaker went with the architect to inspect the house. Everything delighted, but one thing puzzled her, and that was why the kitchen windows were built up to within a few feet of the top. Upon inquiry the architect explained that his idea had been to secure light for the room and to prevent at the same time any view from without of the kitchen and its contents. "That was very clever," said Mrs. Wanamaker, "but I want my servants to be able, when their work is done, to sit at the window and look out at the beautiful country, and so pleuse change them."

And they were altered accordingly.

Her abilities as a hostess must be unquestioned, after they have been passed upon as they were by ex-Governor Cartin, in the following incident. During their first winter or official position in Washington, the ex-Governor received an invitation to dine with the Wanamakers at one of the first of their state dinners, the one given in honor of Vice-President and Mrs. Morton. It must be reernor received an invitation to dine with the Wanamakers at one of the first of their state dinners, the one given in honor of Vice-President and Mrs. Morton. It must be remembered that Mrs. Wanamaker was unaccustomed to official hospitality, with its innumerable little pitfalls for the unused and unwary, and that ex-Governor Curtin is one of the most critical, as most appreciative, of guests and hos viviate. The invitation was secrepted; and in spenking of the dinner afterward, Mr. Curtin said that in all his years of experience of official banquets in London, Paris, St. Petersburg and Washington, be had never attended so perfectly planned and executed a dinner.

had never attended so perfectly planned and executed a dinner.

Mrs. Wanamaker is her own housekeeper, and when it is remembered that her duties include the management of four houses, some appreciation of the systematization which accomplishes such management may be experienced. One of these homes is in Philadelphia, where the family spend the early winter, the months of November and December. The rest of the winter season is given to Washington, where they have a second beautiful home. The summer is divided between "Lindenhurst," a magnificent bouse and estate about The summer is divided between "Linden-hurst," a magnificent bouse and estate about fifteen miles from Philadelphis, and "Lilen-myn Cottage," a smaller country bouse at Cope May Point, which gets its rather peculiar, but entirely original name from the diminu-tives of the daughters of the house—Lillie and Minnie. The house in Washington contains a fine art gallery, which must be taken as an evidence of its mistress's devotion to fine paint-ings and statuary. ings and statuary.

For dramatic representations she cares little, but music, in the form of either concert or opera, finds her always a delighted and at-tentive listener. She is a most enthusiastic Wagnerite, explaining her love for this school of music by her inheritance of German blood from her mother.

To her mother she was a thoroughly devoted daughter. Since her death, as a memorial, Mrs. Wanamaker has built and endowed an amer to the Presbylerian Hospital in Phila-delphia, to which she constantly sends flowers and reading matter for the sick. It is strik-ingly characteristic of her modesty that there is not a word in the inscription or deflication of the building which shows forth her name.

In appearance she is most pleasing. Her face, though not strictly beautiful, is a most charming and delightful one, and her excharming and designant one, and her expression while usually grave and prescensied, is constantly broken by smiles which brighten her grav eyes and display a charming mouth of beautiful teeth. She is of medium height, and weight perhaps one hundred and furly pounds. Her figure is plamp and pretty, and her gowns, which are usually gray. black, or dark purple in color, always fit perfectly. Her hair is brown, and by its utter absence of gray tries still further with her appearance to conceal the fact of her grand-motherhood. She wears it twisted high on her head, and in a light curly wave over her brow She is most generous and kind to her friends of whom she has a great number, and is fond of taking them with her on trips and journeys of great and small length. They are never given an opportunity to spend any money on these occasions, but also, they are never allowed to see or feel the cost of their entertainment. It see or jeer the vest of their entertainment. It is perhaps characteristic of her, that her generosities, like her duties, are accomplished quietly, unestentatiously, far from the sight of men, but that they are all performed, both duties and charities, her happy busy. He, and the number of people who call her blessed, are evidence. EVOLUTION

BY JOHN B. TABB

OUT of the dusk a shadow, Out of the cloud a silence, Then, a lark; Out of the heart a rapture, Then, a pain; Out of the dead, cold ashes, Life again.

III,—MISS ETHEL INGALLS

BY JEAN MALLORY

ONORABLE John James Ingalis is too well known to the American public to require an introduction; nor is the fame of the learned statesman and orator confined to his own country.
The daughter of so brilliant a man must becessarily be of interest to all, but not alone for her father's attainments is the name or Miss Ethel Ingalls so deservedly prominent, since she has won for herself claim to fame,

MISS INGALLS (in profile)

Miss Ingalls is the third of eleven children, seven of whom are living, and is the eldest of four girls. She is a true Kansas girl, having been born in Atchison, Kansas, on the very bluffs of the "muddy Missouri," and she is as proud of her native state as it is of her. In the picturesque old homestead, which was destroyed by fire in 1888, she began her life under the direction of the wisest of mothers.

At the age of six Miss Ingalls was sent to the Convent of St. Scholastica, conducted by the Benedictine nuns in Atchison, where she received instruction in needle-work. The plump, golden-haired child, with sweet brown eyes and lovely head earnestly bent over the work directed by the calm-faced nun must, indeed, have formed a beautiful picture. Her faithful guardian in her journeys to and from school was an old colored man who had been in the employ of the family for many years, and who died some time ago at the homestead. Entering afterward as a day popil—though at times she boarded during the family's absence in Weshinsten, Miss Ingalls as times abe boarded during the family's absence of the scholastical control of the family is absence. times she boarded during the family's absence in Washington-Miss Inguils remained at St. Scholastica's until ber fourteenth year, leading the happiest of lives, and carrying away with her many fond memories.

After lenving St. Scholastica's, Miss Ingalls went to the Visitation Convent in St. Louis, which is her mother's "Alma Mater," and where she spent two profitable and happy years, making many warm friends. On account of its proximity to Washington, where the family remained during the winter, she was next sent to the Visitation Convent at Georgetown, and here her education was completed, graduating in 1887, at the age of eighteen, with great honor. She was the salutatorian of her class, and delivered upon the occasion an original poem showing undoubted talent. Her life at Georgetown formed one of the happiest periods of her life. Nuns and pupils were alike her friends.

The following winter she made her debut in Washington with well-deserved éclat, for a fairer rosebud than the "beautiful Miss In-galls" none could wish to see. Of her Washington career so much has been written in the past that but little is left for me. She avoided, from principle, large public bulls, but graced

* In this series have been published Miss Hacher Shieles N.
Miss "Winnie" Davis

These numbers can be had at ten cents each.

many select and private dances and dinners, while afternoon teas were not considered quite successful unless Miss Ingalls "assisted."

It was during this winter that her public literary career really began, with those clever, sparkling letters to the newspapers, though she had been writing since the age of twelve, at which time a duinty little poem on her sister Muriel's birthday gave evidence of remarkable talent in a child of twelve years. Not the least of her productions is her "Journal," which she has kept since her tenth year, though the only volumes remaining are those of the last four years, the others being destroyed in the fire of the Ingalls bemested.

No photograph can do Miss Ingalls justice, for it is to her exquisite coloring that much of her beauty is due. She is "tall, well proportioned and erect, with fine figure, and small, beautifully shaped hands and feet. But perhaps her chief beauty is her glorious poldenbrown hair, which curls naturally and waves around her forchead in shining ringlets. It is worm quaintly parted and drawn low into a soft knot. Her eyes of a warm dark brown and full of kindliness and intelligence, forning delightful contrast to her hair and fair complexion.

She dresses very simply, but always becomcomplexion.

She dresses very simply, but always becomingly. Pink is her favorite color, and its becomingness is greatly enhanced when worn becomingness is greatly enhanced when worn with moonstones—her favorite gem.

Miss Ingalls inherits from her mother an amiable disposition, which, indeed, is a family trait, with just a dash of the sarcasm for a hich her father is noted. Affectionate, very impulsive, romantic, extreme in her likes and distikes, she is a bundle of contradictions which makes a harmonious and lovable whole. Like her father, she is somewhat superstitious, and will begin nothing of importance on Friday. Like him, too, she chooses rather one or two very close friends than a number less dear. She is extremely fond of dogs and horses, an enthusiastic admirrer of nature, and delights in flowers. Though not herself a finished musician, she is very fond of music, Her warmest friends are usually among older men and women. She is loved much or not at all.

Though a success in society, social pleasures are by no means necessary to Miss Ingalls's happiness. Indeed, pursuits of a deeper nature, reading and writing are much more to ber taste, though she enjoys dancing and mingling with people whom she is fond of studying.

mingling with people whom she is lond of studying.

Since the family's return from Washington, Miss Ingalls leads a peaceful, happy life in her father's beautiful home, Oakridge, just at the edge of town, either driving over the beautiful country surrounding it, strolling about the grounds, or pursuing her favorite occupations in her own room. in her own room.

This room is furnished in blue and oak, and

This room is furnished in blue and oak, and everywhere are bits of rare china and silver, the gifts of friends, pictures, photographs of friends, many of dogs and borses. Upon her desk the picture of a large Dane occupies the place of honor, while on her table are found Shelley's Poems, profusely noted, the Ruhái-yát of Omar Khayyám, nearly all of which she knows by heart, and a Bible, the companion of her mother's girlhood.

Miss lagalls out driving with a huge black cat, bearing the classic name of "Jim Crow." for a companion, is a familiar ligure along the streets of Atchison. "Jim Crow" is one of several cats about Oakridge, but is his mistress's favorite on account of his intelligence, great beauty, and strange nature.

Miss lagalls has a large correspondence, and receives many curious and anusing letters. Some of these are evidently from people who have heard but little of her and write for her opinion on woman suffrage, and kindred subjects, plainly believing her to be older than 22. Ethel Ingalls is, however, not a short-haired "reformer," but

"A perfect woman, nobly planned."

"A perfect woman, nobly planned."

Digitized by Google

By Mrs. Burton Harrison

IN TWO PAPERS-CONCLUDING PAPER (Continued from the December Ladies' Home Journal)

HAVE been saked if the true society of New York consists of those offairs one constantly reads of in the daily pa-pers. To this I answer, first of all, that when the fluent masses the fluent masses of our social order finally congeal into a stationary block, and not till then, will the observer be able to decide what is the true society of New York.

THERE is certainly, to my knowledge, no allied band of high-stepping aristocrats of ancient Knickerbocker stock holding themselves aloof from later comers, shunning overture from the contemporaneous entertainers, whose fame is in every reporter's mouth, and keeping religiously to the localities and customs affected by their revered ancestors. If isolated families of such temper there be, If isolated families of such temper there be, they stand about as much chance of flourishing and spreading as a lone tree in the track of a swollen river. Households of the old régims are yet happily to be found, who, feeling themselves unable to keep up in purse with the rush of our later-day galety, do not choose to receive that which they may not return; who hold themselves above drinking of the traffied turn; who hold themselves above drinking of the champagne-cup and enting of the truffled dish of the rich new-comers in society, while ex-changing satirical comment on the givers of the feast; who, satisfied with the quiet of their evenings around the lamp, or in the music-room at home, make no effort whatever masse-room at nome, make no effort whatever to be included in regnant galeties. Others, not so philosophical, go forth to "see how that kind of people do this kind of thing," and find themselves generally willing to repeat the experiment. Waifs and strays from the Fau-bourg St. Germain of old New York have been seen coldly and with a control of the control. seen, coldly, and with a certain resentment, appearing on the outskirts of the dashing gatherings of some recent sovereign, conscious gatherings of some recent sovereign, conscious of threadbare spots here and there ill-concealed by their wisps of antique lace; and, insufficiently panoptied by their colonial miniatures, they wear an expression at once deprecating and severe. It is the children of these sorely-taxed conservatives who have lived down parental prejudice. A gentleman of race and traditional dignity, a picturesque figure in the modern hurly-burly, was seen last season wearily, but with high courage, supporting the doorway at a ball given by a whitom humble employé of his house, awaiting the pleasure of a fair young grand-daughter to leave the cotillon. When rallied by a friend, he answered: "Oh, well! we'll speak only of my indulgence in this folly, at my age. But there was no one to come with Mand, and she tells me she must be 'in the swim!"

O<sup>N</sup> these premises, I assume that the line between old and new in New York is imperceptible, and is rapidly becoming effaced. English people, who have never done wonder-ing at our class distinctions, say: "In one breath you Americans defend your ideal democracy, and abuse our stupidity for fancysensoracy, and associate on equal terms over ing that you all associate on equal terms over there. What we think is, so long as you all work, or have worked, for your living, what's the odds, you know!" Hence the common spectacle, in London society, of a young per-son who has left her nebulous surroundings in the western continent, has happened to catch the eye and fix the fancy of some traveling high and mightiness at a continental water-ing-place, has been ticketed as the new American beauty, arriving speedily in the inner cir-cle of that portion of the British aristocracy which is safe to welcome, with like fervor, a black bishop or a champion lady-whistler. And what London has endorsed, New York will never put aside. We, in our turn, and despite our bewildered protest that really she was never heard of here, accept little Miss Nobody at second-hand. She and her family, upon re-touching their native shores, shine with a new lustre in our sight. The cavillers who decry English influence upon our man-ners ought really to be grateful to them for tesching us to practice the democracy we preach. No woman in New York, who has had occasion in the decades since the war to make an annual inspection of her visiting list, can fail to be struck with the widening of the borders theroof to include names that have little root in the immediate past of this community. East, west, south in our own country have sent representatives, and there is now a plentiful sprinkling of foreign style and title in the ranks that poor Lady Barber-ina found so monotonous. In preportion with this increase is that of the area to be covered in the attempt to make visits once or twice a year. Times have moved forward quickly since the late Sexton Brown, of Grace Church, declared that he could not undertake to de-liver invitations above Fiftieth street. In this expansion of social limits, therefore, no repu-table aspirant need despair of finding that table aspirant need despair of finding that room near the top which is said to be always unfilled in America. It is neither old family nor great wealth that claims pre-eminence. More than one shining example of either qualification is seen to be distinctly on the outer edge of things social and fashionable here. Like London, although perhaps in a more timid way, modern New York is crying out to be perpetually dazzled and entertained. The two unpardonables in her list are an old fory and a bore. fogy and a bore.

ALCOHOL: E

T is claimed for the gentleman whose name A has been so often cited in connection with his famous epithet, "New York's Four Hundred," that it were distinction to leave it his famous epithot, "New York's Four Hundred," that it were distinction to leave it for once unsaid, that he has since enlarged his limit set for the number of people in good society, by explaining that he meant only to count in the ball-going element of the fashionable world generally to be reckoned upon in providing space and supper for certain private or semi-public gatherings. This was balm to the wounded spirits of the many who never set fout across the threshold of Sherry's or Delmonico's, or the Madison Square Garden, places of revelry on these occasions. While not exactly in the state of mind cruelly described by Mr. William Black's "Octavius Quirk"—"that unceasing self-consciousness that makes the American young man spend five-sixths of his waking time in asking himself if he is a gentleman"—the public of New York felt itself entitled to the soothing of such authoritative utterance. We are also told that lists made up at the time when McAllister's four hundred first put Tennyson's six hundred out of vogue, and industriously circulated by the press, caused of heart-burnings not a few. Whence came these fatal registers no one paused to ask. To be, or not to be inscribed on them was the only thing of importance. Only the exquisite elasticity of New York in the matter of sensations has, in fact, enabled many worthy citizens to live down the emotions of that hour. And the really entertaining spectacle of the result of all this tempest in the tea-pot à la mode, was to belood the swelling wrath of some of those overlooked in the tea-pot a la mode, was to behold the swelling wrath of some of those overlooked against the presumption of some included. The affair was, in truth, a triumph for the clever journalists who worked it up.

BUT the term "Four Hundred" remains, for want of a better one, as the appellative of the select body whose names are most often seen in print as participants in the active gaieties of New York, Year by vear, as absence, ill-fortune, ill-health and death decree it, the list varies perceptibly, new names appear and are exploited vigorously, names heard of for the first time, perhaps, by the gay world, during the previous season at one of the great watering places that are as social ladders to ambitions feet; names questioned, derided it may be, but in a little while necepted without further challenge. It is absurd to suppose that further challenge. It is absurd to suppose that a vast and cosmopolitan society like that of New York to-day, could crystallize its "best" into a number so small, so little known to into a number so small, so little known to fame save through saltatory agility and the ex-penditure of unlimited dollars in dinner giving and in gew-gaws for the cotillon. Take, in illustration, the assemblage of people recently seen here under one roof—the Madison Square Garden—during the week of the Horse Show. Around the amphitheatre devoted to the horses, circled or sat in their boxes a brilliant multitude, including most of the "smart" set; in the Assembly-Room near by, at the same moment, a gathering of cultirated ladies and gentlemen listened to the wit and wisdom of the Gebate on "Journalism and the Right of Privacy," before the Nine-teenth Century Club; and in the Garden Theatre a goodly audience of well-dressed and intelligent people lent ear to the tuneful chirp-ings of "La Cigale." Certainly no one would venture to assert the right of the larger number of these guests on pleasure bent to the best that American society can give. I am sure they do not, nor do I think the readers of this magazine need attach much importance to the apparent exclusiveness of the term "Four Hundred," which may be considered a mot du greef of the society writers in the personal columns we all affect to condemn, and read religiously. The ladies and gentlemen so often quoted in print are certainly apt to be beard of as each other's guests in the exchange of Vani-ty Fair. But this does not argue that their doors are never opened for a wider hospitality, bring-ing in the varied elements indispensable to give life to a general assemblage. On the gala-nights of some of the up-town palaces, art. literature and journalism are seen abreast of the gay current which has drawn also into its abreast of flow representatives of bench and bar and medicine, too distinguished in professional achievement to be familiar to scenes like these.

OF the brilliancy of New York society to-day, there is no question. "An Ameri-can ball" given in London at the height of the senson is attended by many great people arowedly with the design of seeing the deco-rations and enjoying the supper; and here, in our own houses, with our own luxurious sur-roundings, the thing is even better done than amid hired appendages abroad. But brilliancy carries in its train facility, and there is no doubt that we are open to the reproach, so often doubt that we are open to the reproach, so often beard, of yielding too ready an admission to our drawing-rooms and balls to foreigners ill-equipped with the necessary credentials. It has been not unheard of, recently, for a jury of matrons, leaders of society, to sit in con-clave asking one another who first started upon his gay career in New York's inner circles a man who had been received and entertained by each of them, and about whom caution had come from a friend in England. A few years ago a young officer of an ancient Scottish family presented himself with his pretty little wife at an American summer resort famed for its exclusiveness. He had been in-troduced by letter to one of the best-known families in the place, and by them was pre-sented to other friends. In a short time this couple, young, attractive, and conveying that aroma of English high life said to be so agreearona of English high life said to be so agree-able to American taste, were invited every-where, the young matron requested, even, to chaperone a party of girls upon some driving-party much desired. At this juncture the family to whom they had been first accredited heard from their friend who had furnished the letter of introduction the startling news that he had made no require of a Merthat he had made no mention of a Mrs. as she, it was well known, had remained be-hind in England. Investigation developed the further fact that the so-called wife was in truth the wife of a brother officer with whom the young scion of aristocracy had eloped to America, not scrupling to impose her upon the too credulous hospitality of the people whose dinners circumstances made it a consideration for them to ent. The pair were bravely and with true dignity confronted by their first hostess with this charge, made no attempt to deny it, and vanished into the ob-scurity that best befitted them. Longer ago there was the case of the dashing and gallant Frenchman, the "Count" de T.— who imposed on New York society more cleverly; bid a se-lect company of thirty guests to a banquet where singing birds hung in cages among gar-lands of roses on the table; and disappearing after a meteor-like course across the social firm-ament, was next beard of in Austria on trial for the marder of his new-made wife, an Eng-lish woman of wealth whom he had pushed lish woman of wealth whom he had pushed over a precipiee in the Tyrol in order to inherit her belongings. T— was convicted, condemned to solitary confinement for life, and died miserably in prison, where no doubt he solaced many dreary hours by the memory of his successes in the American metropolis.

Fortunately for us, and for the residents of other towns who accept such varyant charms.

other towns who accept such vagrant charm-ers on the strength of their recognition in New York, the many international alliances and connections of a dignified and legitimate sort now existing between America and other countries make it easier to investigate the claims of new-comers. It belicoves us, however, to look well to the source whence intro-ductions come, and to throw off the stigma of the charge sometimes heard abroad "Oh! you will take amphody in America."

I AM asked to say a word upon the mooted question as to whether the New York woman, through whom seem to filter the fashions of the continent, goes to extremes in the matter of dress in public places. Whatever we may think, it is a painful fact that other nations charge us with so doing. A foreigner just arrived said to one of the boxholders of the Horse Showa few days before the opening: "I am told that I shall see there all the magnificent full-dress tollettes and jewels in New York." This gentleman hastened to disillusion the inquirer as to the full-dress and jewels, but gallantly added that there was no question as to the display of the prettiest women in the world. The toilettes to be seen at the Metropolitan Opera House, three evenings of the week, are indeed resplendent, but no more so than those on exhibition in the boxes at Covent Garden during the London season, nor are the jewels more reading. I observed at the latter theater day. the London season, nor are the jewels more profuse. I observed at the latter theatre, during the performance of "Romeo and Juliet," by Mme, Melba and Jean de Reszké, last June, a lady of rank wearing a buge diamond crescent six or eight inches high above her brow, the low bodice of whose satin gown was covered with wels, while her throat and neck were almost hidden from sight by ropes of seed pearls, chains of diamonds and pendants of supphires, ru-bies and emeralds. She was literally over-burdened by the weight of getus, and this was no uncommon spectacle. It is as New York is emerging from the lingering influences of Puritanism and provincialism in her fashions, that who have berself order to the charge from that she lays herself open to the charge from her remoter countrymen of extravagance and impropriety in ornament. In all great capitals the world it has been, since time out of mind, considered appropriate that women should appear on gala occasions, and by artificial light, in gowns with low-cut bodices, wearing such ornaments as they may possess. Queen Victoria, the most rigid of moralists, will not allow presentations to to her—and that in the garish light of day—of women wearing the ordinary high-cut gown. To assume it, her subjects and strangers desiring to be presented at court, are obliged to secure the certificate of a physician that their health will not permit the exposure of their necks. In an English or Scotch coun-try-house, the hostess, no matter what her age. who has gone all day in her simple tailor made frock of tweed will come down to an eight o'clock dinner with bare shoulders, wearing, generally, some discarded ball-gown of the reason past. The universality of the fashion of the decolleté gown in older countries has gradually spread to ours, but I do not think the abuse of it should be laid at the door of New York as a national reproach. Exaggeration of this, as of any mode, is sure to be offensive and disgusting in the eyes of people of good taste. The offenders should be judged individually, and condemned accordingly, though the woman who so transgresses is generally pachydermatous to censure. And if we are inclined to be extravagant in ornament and stuff, let us be consoled with the reflection that it is all of its kind harmonious. American women are admitted everywhere to have admirable skill in setting forth their charms by dress. To see New York society on a grand occasion realizes Taine's phraseit is an "unique sensation, that of splendor and brilliancy carried to the highest pitch—all the abuse of it should be laid at the door of it is an "unique sensation, that of spiendor and brilliancy carried to the highest pitch—all the flowers of civilization and nature in a single bouquet and in a single perfume.

THE other half of the social federation—that important half without which social enterprise were like meat without salt—deserves more than the brief touch I can bestow upon it in finishing this paper. The men of society in New York to-day are divided into the rich, who having fought their right with Fortune and conquered her, either settle down to be supporters of the clubs and theatres, or are born anew into the invenile vivacity that to be supporters of the clubs and theatres, or are born anew into the juvenile vivacity that finds its level at the elbow of a debutante. One marvels to see specimens of this variety, fat, purple-faced, stertorous, entering the lists of youthful beauty beside active young fellows who share the smiles bestowed on them. But they are known, their presence leads fashion to its beneficiary, and all else is lost to sight. Then come the mem of affairs, who baving married young, and still working bard, are content to be seen in the wake of their gay and pleasure-loving wives. The professional men, burdened with thought, venture more rarely into crowded gatherings, and while there, look as if they wish themselves well out of it. The idlers, the professedly luxurithere, look as if they wish themselves well out of it. The idlers, the professedly luxurious and indulgent class, are comparatively few. They go among their own set, and take care not to let themselves be oppressed by the necessity for rendering civility in any shape. The young men entering into life, for the most part occupied during the day, are like the Night-blooming Careus in their appearances before the public. The real hope of the dancing and ball-going world is in the youngsters upon the threshold of responsibility, late supporters of the dancing class, who patronize their mother's friends, women of mature age with whom, on the whole, they prefer to be seen, rather than with the maidens of their own age. What New York would be, without these volunteers, is a problem to be solved.

THE real risk is that some day the would-be biographer of the fashionable world of Gotham may find the metropolis depopulated of its gilded contingent. It begins to look as if there were no time of the year to be counted on for seeing them "en bloc." People of the wealthier classes, choosing wisely to linger among the illuminated haunts of Nature until the after-class of autumn has faded return to among the illuminated haunts of Nature until the after-glow of autumn has faded, return to town to go out of it again for Christmas.
Early in January begins the southward movement; February and March are intolerable in town for those who can afford to migrate. And then, with the first break of Spring in the air are heard discussions of a journey to Alaska and the Yellowstone, to be followed up by the annual glimpse of London, Paris, Vienna, the German and Swiss baths, Norway, Russia and the East. If all of the summer is not given to travel, the rest is spent in luxurious country homes, to be forsaken in due season for a house hired at Bar Harbor, Lenox or Tuxedo.
And, so the pendulum swings on and ever.
The stately dwellings of Fifth avenue, with their storied furnishings, are left for the greater portion of the year under an eclipse of brown holland and green shades. But patience!
Stranger things have happened than that New York may one day again become the fashion.
Just now she is out of vogue. the after-glow of autumn has faded, return to

Baby Boy

Was Covered with Salt Rheum.

Perfectly Cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 26, 1891. "When my baby boy was two years old he was covered from head to feet with salt rheum. It began to come out on him when he was two weeks old, and continued or increased in spite of all that could be done.

We were Discouraged

The doctors said it would disappear when he was seven years old. I happened to be taking Hood's Sarsaparilla myself and thought I would give it to the child. At that time he did not have a hair on his head, and it was covered with a crust. The poor child's sufferings were awful. In two weeks after giving him the scabs began to fall off, and in 6 weeks he was entirely cured of the sores. He is now the healthiest child we have." Frank I. Rickson.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

DRINK A Cure That Cures

"What Must I Do to Get Well, and How Can I Keep Bo?" a valuable work on the "BALISBURY PLAN" of treating chronic diseases, by Mrs. Stuart, mailed for $1.00. W. A. KELLOGO, Pub., 1023 6th Avenue, New York.

Digitized by Google

O MOTHERS THAT BOY OF YOURS!
You pay us $340. We im in a good situation. Can you ask more? No other shool can do as much for young men as PALMS NATIONAL BUSINESS COLLEGE,
Frue for circulars.
Philadelphia, Pa.

*The first of a series of articles on social life in six of the forement American oftice, each city being sketched by one of the leaders of society there. The next paper, closely following this concluding article by Mrs. Burson Harrison, will be Christian Sectal. Lars, by Mrs. Regissal DeKoven; after which articles by writers of equal note will follow on social life in other American centres.

Mrs. Harrison's first article on "Social Life in New York," appeared in the Christians (December) Joca-Sal.

PART II

Y members of the Godfrey family had come and come and gone, but Fairlawn Manor had been little used by any of them, and no children's children's voices had, as yet, echoed through the house, though many, many years had passed since poor Dame Anna's death.

And although the place was perfectly kept and the gardens were as beautiful as ever, a sad gloom hung over all.

And I—Madge Farquhar, who am to tell this modern little history of Fairlawn Manor—have felt this gloom as I have strolled about the lovely but deserted grounds. As yet, I have never been into the house. I cannot say that I actually believe that it is haunted, but still—

The estate had but just fallen into the pos-session of the next heir, Captain Rupert God-frey, now serving as a soldier in India, and a r is on its way taking him the news of his inheritance.

He, I, my brother (Sir Ronald) and a family named Hamilton—who had been neighbors, but who now were all dispersed, and the home passed into strange hands—had been children passed into strange hands—had been children together and dear friends.

Five years previous to the time I write of Rupert Godfrey had married beautiful Kitty Hamilton, robbing me of my dearest girl friend. I had hoped, as she, too, had hoped, to have become her sister, for I and her brother George had loved each other dearly. I know he loved me, but a bad, false friend (?) came between us and sometimes.

I am happy as my good, dear Ronald's housekeeper; we are fast friends and constant companions. I have much to be thankful for. Two and a half years ago Kitty wrote to tell me that a son had been born to them, and little and that when she had a little godson to me, and that when she had to part with little Rupert—they were fortu-nate in being at a very healthy station—she would ask his godmother to take cure of him at Towers Court. It was so like my beautiful Kitty to promise me this trust. She knew how it would please me, and how dearly I should love her boy. But now, we are hoping soon—O! it takes so long when one is dying for news !--to hear that our dear ones are on their way home.

And at last the letter came.

"Prepare yourselves for bad news, my dear-est friends," wrote Kitty. "I have lost my husband. When your letter reached us I had but just closed his dear eyes. I cannot write much about it yet. He caught a chill after a long, hot day's march; fever came on, then inflammation of the lungs, and he was taken from us after a fortnight's illness. He was conscious to the last, and was able to give me minute instructions as to the bringing up of our boy. 'Make a mon of him, Kitty. Let him learn all manly sports. Talk to him of his father when you cas, dear love. He has his father when you can, dear love. He has his mother's noble, generous, unselfish nature. I feel sure of this, and I know all will be well with him. I have appointed Rouald Farquiar co-guardian with you, and you will find papers addressed to him. Take them to him, Kity. He will save you from many responsibilities, and he will be a godsend to you should our Rupert ever inherit Fairlawn. he seemed quite happy and contented—you both know how true and lovable a man he was—and died in my arms quite peacefully.

And now I have our son, my one Rupert, to live for, and I am bringing him to England by the next mail. We sail in the ship Indiana. You, Ronald, will see to all arrangements at Fairlawn Manor, and you will, I know, help me to make my boy's home-coming a bright and happy one. He is even now passionately fond of animals, and has no fear of them whatever. I hope you will find him an ensy charge, for he is, indeed, a noble little fellow." And this was the letter we were longing for. "Ah! Ronald, how sad!"

My brother, who was weeping bitterly at these tidings, looked up with wet eyes: "Yes, Madge, sad enough. But we shall see how bravely Kitty will bear her sorrow. I doubt bravely Klity will bear her sorrow. I doubt not but that the "noble little fellow" takes after both his parents."

So now we had to be busy preparing the house, engaging servants, and up to the eyes in all the bustle of cleaning, airing, etc., etc. Romald had left it to me to make choice of the rooms I thought best suited for Kitty and her boy, and so, for the first time, I entered the old house. I was much struck with the entrance hall, with its line and also very cheer-ful appearance. What a place for little Rupert to romp and play about in! Then I turned to the right. The first room would do contains for Kirk's sixting. capitally for Kitty's sitting-room if, when alone, she room if, when alone, she should find the hall too large. Over this room I made the nursery looking on to the park, so that the child could see the deer as they grazed opposite the pretty bay-window. At the back, with folding-doors between, was the night nursery, looking on to the beautiful old garden. Here Ronald but just installed a family of pencocks for a family of peacocks for the child's edification, and very handsome and conse-quential they looked as they strutted about on the trim grass walks.

Kitty's two rooms had this same aspect, as had also the one I chose for myself; for Honald was to spare me to Kitty as much as he could.

After choosing the rooms, Aster choosing the rooms, we set to work to make them as pretty and as dainty as possible, and for many weeks I had no time to explore the rest of the house, which now I was longing to do. longing to do.

But a short time before the travelers were expected there came a lull. There really was nothing more to be done, so I made up my mind to explore the house thoroughly. After looking again into every room in the right wing, all of which I now knew by heart, opened a baize door, which I found gave on o a second staircase. It opened with a curions spring, and shut with a bang as I passed through. About half-way down I felt some one distinctly push me, but I couldn't see for a second or two, as a sort of mist came into a second or two, as a sort of sust came nor my eyes, and when I looked up to apologize for getting in the way, I was—well. I was startled to find that I was the only occupant of the staircase. I passed on though, I looked into the rooms in this wing, but was thankful when I found myself in the hall once more, where I waited for Ronald, who soon joined me.

"Halloa, Madge, anything wrong? Why, your face is as white as a sheet! Have you seen a ghost?"

"No. I haven't wrong Donald Donald Donald seen a ghost?"

"No: I haven't seen one, Ronald. But come here. I want you to go up the staircase at the bottom of yonder wing, and I will let you out at the baize door at the top. But don't begin to ascend until you hear me open the door."
So I ran up and called to him and watched him as he came slowly up the stairs. It was not my fancy, then, for he moved on one side, and routing up his hand to his eyes said."

and putting up his hand to his eyes, said:
"Why did you push me, Madge? What's the joke?" And then I told him.

He looked very grave and owned that, of course, he had heard rumors about a ghost, and that now he remembered that a certain and that now he remembered that a certain staircase had always been called after our ill-fated ancestress "The Dame Anna," but he could not explain why. We searched among the books in the library—which in olden days had been called "the withdrawing room"— and there we found an old, shabby little book, and there we found an old, shabby little book, giving us the sad story.

Curiously enough, there was no such book at Towers Court, nor had either of us ever heard the true story before.

After reading the sad history we went into the picture gallery to see her portrait, one of the most exquisite I had ever seen. The beautiful eyes looked into yours with such a heavenly expression, and yet with something sadin them, too; but they literally held you spell-bound. It was an effort to get your own eyes away, so to speak. There were many grand portraits in the gallery, but you turned constantly and instinctively to look again and again at those wonderful eyes which were so lifelike in their steady gaze.

"What about Kitty?"

"I have been thinking as to that question,

"I have been thinking as to that question, and I feel sure the best thing will be to let her and I see sure the best thing will be to let her find it—whatever it may be—out for herself. She is as brave and as sensible as she can be. The maids are never about "Dame Anna's Staircase" excepting for cleaning purposes, But I would suggest that two, who can be thoroughly trusted, should be told off for this duty."

duty."

And so it was,
Three more days, and they would be here!
Ronald made one more inspection with me of the grounds, gardens and stables. (He was master of hounds now, and the kennels had become his property.) Then a visit to the nursery, where we found Molly busily unpacking and arranging upon a shelf, which went all round the room, a huge packet of toys, which he had sent to London for.

Molly was to be nurse and to take the place

Molly was to be nurse and to take the place of the ayab, who was only to see the boy safely home and was to return to India. She was pretty, bright and clever and knew Kitty well, having been my young maid for many years.

Besides the toys, a pretty cage with a bull-floch in it was hanging in the window.

"Rock yourself from side to side, Madge, and in a minute it will pipe to you."

And sure enough, the dear little thing struck up "Home, Sweet Home," in such a sweet, pure, soft, fairy-like voice, that the tears his pocket, poked in his mouth and brought out a carrot.

"O! Ronald, it's all like a lovely fairy-tale, with you for the good fairy. How happy the boy will be!"

When my brother had left me—he was off to Southampton this morning to wait for the ship's arrival—I returned to the nursery to have a talk with Molly and to find a vent for the intense excitement and nervousness which possessed me.

"I wonder, Miss Madge, if the little boy will take to me?"

"And I wonder, Molly, whether he will take to me."

And so on, into the realms of wonderland for a real, long gossip.

As Kitty had asked that her "boy's home-coming might be a bright and happy one," every man, woman and child had made up his, or hers, or its, mind that it should be so. But there was, naturally, great sorrow in the neighborhood at the death of Rupert Godfrey, who had been greatly beloved and well known to all the neople, rich and noor, during his who had been greatly beloved and well known to all the people, rich and poor, during his many visits to us, and deep sympathy was felt for Kitty in her young widowhood.

The railway station—for, of course, now there was a station—was about three miles from Fairlawn Manor. The station-master, an old friend, had decorated it most tastefully. The road all the way to the park gates was ornamented with triumphal arches, and lined with the carriages of the neighboring gentry. The gentlemen of The Hunt, numbering about thirty, minus the master, who was escorting the travelers, turned out in full bunting array, each wearing a black band on the sleeve, to form a guard of bonor.

As Kitty and little Rupert passed from the station to the open carriage all heads were station to the open carriage all heads were uncovered. She sweetly, and with much grace and dignity, but with cheeks and lips quite white, acknowledged these respectful salutations, the boy took off his sailor's cap, and off they started.

Silest though the greatings were which and off they started.

Silent though the greetings were which were given them as they drove along, she felt how kind they were, and was deeply touched.

At the park gates all the men employed on the estate, with flowers in their coats and hats, were waiting to take out the horses and to drag the carriage up the drive.

This delighted the child, who clapped his hands, saying, "O! Mammy, how dood of 'um, and how funny!"

The women and children were grounded above.

and how lunny:

The women and children were grouped about the entrance. Many of them had strewn flowers in Kitty's path five years ago as she walked out of the church with her gallant, bandsome husband. She, no doubt, thought of that time, and when the carriage stopped came quickly in, and I clasped her in my arms.

Suddenly there came such thundering cheers and cries of "Long live the young squire," that I ran to the window. There was Ronald, with the child on his shoulder, and the little fellow waving his cap, The Hunt forming a circle round them, with their horses' heads toward them, saluting with their hunting crops. It was indeed "a bright and happy homecoming!"
At last—for he had been round with Ronald, shaking hands with all the people-I had my

The little fellow was sitting on the floor, sharing his bread and milk with the two dogs, Wolf and Girlie.

started to my eyes. I had never heard a "bully" pipe before, and the first hearing is thrilling to a degree.

Again in the hall, I found two fine dogs-"Wolf" a splendid mastiff, with long ea and large brown, soft, loving eyes, and "Girlie, a little terrier with a curly coat like the softest astrachan.

And at the door was the prettiest pony cart. I ever saw, drawn by the smariest, dearest.

pony,
"Allow me to introduce you to the young squire's trap and to bis steed, 'Dobbin.'s"

As Bonald mentioned his name, Dobbin gave a little neigh and rubbed his nose against godson's arms about my neck. His bright blue eyes were sparkling, his fair hair was tossed about, his cheeks were flushed, his pretty mouth with its rosy lips was partly open, and I thought I had never seen, would ver see, so beautiful and so munly a little fellow. He looked hard at me, then kissed me again, saying: "I 'ove 'oo, dodma," and running to Kitty and patting her cheeks with his plump, sweet little hands, cried: "But I 'ove 'oo bet, dear, dear mammy."

I saw that he was, what a friend of ours would call a very ferrent child and excitable, too. And I think Kitty thought that he had gone through enough excitement for one day.

"Now, my darling, we will ask godina to take us upstairs, and we will have some tex and a little rest."

Me aint tired, mammy, not one tiny, tiny bit.

And to see his delight at the sight of Bully, his rapture when it began to pipe, didn't look like fatigue.

He listened until the last soft note had died away, when he threw himself into his mother's arms and burst into tears. My son, my little man !

"Me aint toe werry tired, mammy, but Bully is toe werry tweet."

After tea his ayah put him to bed, and he was soon fast asleep. Kitty sat beside the cot for a long, long time. I crept quietly away on tiptoe, leaving her alone with her one treasure

When she came down to dinner she was gentle and smiling, and I thought how true her bushand's words were, when he said that she had "a noble, generous and unselfish nature." She looked very beautiful with her wealth of lovely hair most becomingly ar-ranged, and her simple mourning dress fither to perfection and showing off her graceful, elegant figure.

Ronald looked at her with open, chivalrous admiration as she took his arm.

In the evening she told us about her married life, and all the incidents connected with it. She was very quiet and much culmer than either of her listeners. "And now we all three have my boy to think about. But, mind we musn't spoil him between us."

Before separating for the night we went up to the nursery and found him fast asleep. After kissing the sweet little face, we left Kitty kneeling by the cot. I did not go into her worn that which. I felt she would wanter her room that night. I felt she would rather be alone.

Next morning, very early, I heard the pattering of little feet along the corridor. Molly opened my door, and in ran Rupert, "Dood mornin', dodma, now me doln' to mammy," and with a hasty kiss he was off again. Then from Kitty's room came sounds of laughter, scamperings and great merriment.

Looking into the nursery before going down to breakfast, I found the little fellow sitting on the floor sharing his break and milk with Wolf and Girlie, giving them many hugs and kisses in between. "Oh! loot what uncle 'Onald has div to me!"

And Ronald told us, when he went up with the dogs, he found the child rocking himself from side to side, as he had seen me do, and Bully piping to him.

Kitty had brought with her from India, or rather he had insisted upon coming with "the mistress and the young capting," her hus-band's soldier-servant, Dan Collins. He was devoted to the child, and was a handy, capital man to have about the place. When Ronald proposed that he should take the boy to the stables he said: "And Tollins, too? and Molly?" "Well, not Molly, I think, only we three men." He quite under-stood the joke, saying that "Uncle Onald is a funny tap." When they were gone Kitty proposed that we should make the tour of the house together. She was enchanted with all

"We can get back to your wing again up this staircase, Kitty." I stood aside to let her pass; and watched her with a beating heart. Ah! yes; the quick turn, the dim eyes. It was surely there, even to Kitty! "Come down agair," I said, and she came, with the same result. Her cheeks had blanched a shade. "What is it, Madge?" I took her into the library and gave her Dame Anna's history to read, and then into the gal-lery to see the portrait. She gazed at it long and earnestly. "Poor unhappy, beautiful greature. But she never could have done anybody any harm, Madge, nor can she now.
What a fate!" So Kitty decided to leave things as they were, "If I were to shut up the staircase it would be too terrible and far more ghostly; and the boy need never come And so it was settled and by a this way." sort of tacit understanding we kept entirely to our own wing. Indeed, there was no occasion whatever to make use of the other, as we had

After a week or two Ronald returned bome, spending, though, at least half his time at the manor, or riding about the estate with the

as many rooms as we could want,

We women settled down into a quiet, peaceful life with the boy. He breakfasted with us in the Hall, went the rounds of the stables, with sugar and carrots for the horses, and an extra portion of these dainties for his Benjamin, in the shape of Dobbin; round the kitchen and flower gardens, and then back to the stables for a ride, Dobbin at this time earrying a ponnier until the child was old enough for the saddle. Collins was always his attendant and companion, and led the pony. Sometimes Molly would go "for a teat" at Rupert's request. He took a slight cold about now, and was kept in for a few days. On the second day, as we sat at breakfast, a rather second day, as we sat at breakfast, a rather-queer-sounding knock came to the door. Up-on my opening it in walked Master Dobbin! He went straight to the child's chair and rabbed his nose against his head, "0! Oo dood Dobbin! Mammy, he's turn for his soilar and turrots," and he trotted off to get them, singing and clopping his hands. "And now, my son, he must go back again. Ring the bell for Coslins."
"O! No. Mammy. Dobbin follows me like Wolf and Dirlie does, Tollins knows. Turn aton." And followed by the pony and the two demaths little independent fellow marched two dogs the little independent fellow marched alone to the stables.

Thus Dobbin's visits became a matutinal

Institution.

Although of such a loving and docile disposition, the child, now and again, had sudden outbursts of passion. For instance:

He had gone one morning with Collins to see some of the villagers, and was to be ab-sent for an hour or two, when long before the time we saw the cart returning. Out impost Rupert, with his checks affame. He pushed passed us, walking very fast—he walked exacty like his father—and Kitty followed him. He rushed upstairs to her sitting-room, took down his father's hunting crop from the wall, unfurled the lash and was rushing down again when Kitty stopped him.

"What is the matter, my boy?"

"Mother (He could speak quite plainly now.) I am going to give Joe Smith a real sound good thrashing."

"But, why?"

And then he burst out with passionate tears and sobs that Joe Smith had knocked down his brother, poor crippled little Charlie, and had burt him, "And I shall thrash him."

It was a long time before Kitty could calm him out when they could calm him, and when they came down together the boy's bosom was still heaving, and long-drawn sobs were shaking him.

"Rupert is going to drive me in his cart, Madge, to see after little Charlie Smith, who has been hurt. We shall soon be back."

Then I understood something of what had happened, the boy having a perfect horror of anything like injustice. Even in his temper anything like injustice. Even in he was a fine and noble little man,

He was seven years old now, and, as yet, Kitty had been his teacher in everything. On his sixth birthday she gave him his first riding lesson. It was a pretty sight to see them start, the stablemen and gardeners looking on in admiration, Collins following as groom. Kitty was an accomplished horsewoman, and when she took the leading rein and the boy had mounted and they rode quietly off, you could not have found, in all the world, a more beautiful mother and son.

This next winter was a very hard one, with much frost and severe snowstorms, and we had all to keep a great deal indoors, and these days were rather irksome to the out-of-doors-loving

The picture gallery was then his favorite re sort, and he was constantly there with Wolf and Girlie, and would tell them long stories about the pictures, about "the beautiful white

One day he strolled about the house, and we lost sight of him for some time. We were sit-ting in the room off the hall, when he reappeared.

"Why, my durling, where have you been?
You're cold and trembling. Come to the fire.
And what is the matter with you, Wolf, and with you, too, Girlie," for the dogs were trembling, too.

"Mother, I'm not cold, but I'm—Well,
I'm too big to be frightened, sin't I, mother?
But coming no a new stalrense something

But, coming up a new staircase something pushed against me and came into my eyes, and Wolf and Girlie growled, but there was nobody. O! mother!" and he buried his head in Kitty's lap and sobbed as if his heart would break, I shall never forget the look of horror and despair on Kitty's face, and my heart sank within me. She said afterward: "Madge, does Dume Anna want my one treas-Will nothing short of this give peace to the poor restless spirit?"

I tried to comfort her, and to reason with her, but the poison of fear and of great dread had come upon her, and, for a time, all reasoning was in vain.

By slow degrees, by little and little, one thing after another was given up.

"No riding must be allowed for the present, and if the young Squire goes in his cart I think that you, Madam, had best take the reins. Do not be alarmed; there is a want of power, the system must be strengthened, the ornin is too active, etc., etc.

That is all !

When Kitty came to realize that the beautiful, bright, happy boy was to be taken from her she nerved herself to bear the thought. She never left him. She was cheerful, al-ways cheerful, with him. She would sing and play to him, tell him long stories, and gave, as indeed she had ever given, her whole soul to this dear life.

And slowly, but surely, this life was obbing

One afternoon, as it was growing dusk, and the child was, as we thought micep, he raised his head. "Mother dear, I have seen her."

"Whom have you seen, sweetheart?"
"The beautiful white lady, mother. She as been here, by my bed. She told me has been here, by my bed. She told me kindly, Of so kindly, not to be afraid, but that an angel with long and lovely white wings would soon be here to take me up to heaven. But must I leave my own mother?

and tears run down the dear, pale cheeks.

Soon after this be asked to be carried down stales, that he might see Dobbin "once more; and Collins too, mother." So the pony was brought round, and came into the hall and took a piece of sugar and a carrot from the young master's hand for the last time, and be kissed the pony's nose and told bim how he loved him. Poor Collins was quite unmanned and weeping bitterly.

"Don't cry, dear old Collins. Take cure of my mother. Good-bye. Good-bye to you all. You have all been very good to me." For all the servants had asked to be allowed to see the young master, and had gathered round him. So, noblet tears and sols he was carried back to his nursery in Ronald's tender arms, for he, d come, Kitty following, the only one in the house whose eves were dry and tearless He was very louth to part with Bonald, and told him, with his arms about his neck, to "Take care of mother."

No need to tell his that, my darling boy! And now, we three, were left alone with him.

Take one in your arms, neother during, and hold me very, very tight. And then be went to sleep, fired out, and slept for many hours.

At the dawn of the next day—the very early dawn, which brings with it, I always think, something so errie and mysterious—be started up in bed, and ereing out "O! the angel is so beautiful, mother, and I must go," stretched out his arms and fell back on Kitty's bosom. And the angel had come indeed.

Kitty made a sign, and we left her alone, Alas! for dear Kitty! Quite alone! When we returned, she had done all that white rose, and about the pillow, making a fitting frame for the fair head, were beautiful hot-house flowers of many tender colors. This being the Thursday before Easter Day he was to be buried on the Saturday morning.

was necessary. The child was dressed in his white sailor suit, and in his marble hands, which were crossed on his breast, was a pure

It was a glorious spring, and the meadows and woods were carpeted with primroses. When I told Kitty about these flowers she kissed the sweet, dead face, saying: "How he would have loved to see them!"
But still her eyes were dry. She had not shed a tear.

Before the child began to droop it had been arranged that a photographer should come down from London to take a portrait of him on Dobbin, but it had to be given up. So now Ronald had tele-graphed for him to come, and Kitty had thanked him for his "goodness and thoughtfulness."

thoughtfulness."
Poor Bully had not uttered a sound, but sat moping on his perch.

The portrait was to be taken in the day-nursery, and when Kitty had carried the child in and laid him on the couch and had arranged the flowers about him, Bully, recognizing his little master and companion, burst into such a song of joy that at last, thank God, tears came to the relief of the poor mother in a storm of pent-up sorrow, and she wept long and

On Saturday morning, at eight o'clock, the sad little procession started for the church.

And yet, to all appearance, it might have been a gala day. His little cart, in which the coffin lay, was decked with flowers and the coffin hidden by them. Dabbies harmess leaded as if made of Dobbin's harness looked as if made of primroses only. The faithful Collins led the pony. On one side of the cost wall-primroses only. The faithful Collins led the pony. On one side of the cart walked Wolf, carrying the little hunting crop in his mouth; on the other side walked Girlie, with the little riding gauntlets. Kitty, dressed all in white, followed the cart, and Ronald and I walked at a distance.

and I walked at a distance.

All the villagers were in the churchyard, and many neighbors, notwithstanding the early hour, were there to show their love, respect and sorrow. The child had been so dearly loved. Everyone was weeping, and the mothers and children who had known the the nothers and chisaren who may known the boy well and had seen him nearly every day, were sobbing aloud. Again Kitty was the quiet-est and most composed of all. Neither Wolf nor Girlle would give up their treasures at the grave, but brought them back to the manor and deposited them-not in the nursery, dear sensible beasts !- but at the door of Kitty's room.

And she! Well, after giving some remembrance of the boy to every man, woman and child belonging to the village and serving on the estate, sank into a profound, and for her, most unnatural, melancholy. Nothing seemed to arouse her. She had been up the fatal stair-case once again, and told me, with a heart-rending sigh: "Just the same, Madge. Not exercised even yet."

One evening, many months after the boy's death, she came to me with a bright smile. "There is some one below, Madge, who would like to see you. Kiss me first, dear."

It was George. Well! Well! It was almost too great a happiness at first.

Kitty insisted that our marriage should take place as soon as possible, and as our happiness and made her happy, we had no reason to

But what will you do, Kitty? You will but what win you no, kitty? You win not stay here alone?"

"Indeed I shall. And I have an idea in my head, Madge, and I feel sure that Ronald nucl Molly and Collins will help me to carry it out." When we parted from her she was more like the Kitty of old time.

"Come back to me, brother and sister, on Christmas eve, but not before," and she stood at the door waving to us until the dip in the drive shut her from our view.

It was a splendld Christmas eve, with a clear, full moon and myriads of stars shining like jewels in the crisp, frosty air, and the old house looked lovely and very homelike in the moonlight as we caught sight of it from the park gntes.

park gates.

Ronald was at the door with Wolf and Girlie, Collins and Molly, to receive us, but—no Kitty! Facing as as we entered, was a life-size bas-relief, in white marble, of an angel holding a child by the hand, and the child—yes, and how worderfully like him—was our own dear lost boy! This beautiful work was a present from Ronald, and had been fixed there this very day.

But where was Kitty all this time?
Roundd beckened us to follow him, and made for the left of the hall. When he opened the door such sounds of merrimout burst npon our ears as to be almost deafening.

And on the stair sat Kitty all in white ngnin, surrounded by a number of happy, laughing-children.

At the sight of us, she jumped up, put her arms around me, crying, with bright drops in her sweet eyes; "Exorcised at last, Mindge, O! thank God!" In Dame Anna's old room was a splendid Christmas tree.

Thus, in the place where so terrible a trag-edy had been played through ungovernable passions, the workings of a true and noble spirit had smutified the hitherto accursed spot, and with a child's spirit had blessed it.

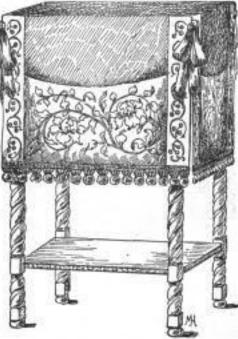

And this was Kitty's plan, this Home for

In every room was a picture of her boy, beautifully decorated with holly and flowers. "I have done it all for his dear side. And his sweet spirit has helped his mother. God bless him." And from many little lips we bless him." And from many little lips we leard the word "Amen." And Ronald, my good, true, faithful Rou-ald. Is there no hope for him?

I think there is hope,

A COVER FOR A WORK-TABLE

VERY useful cover for a small worktable is made with pockets, in order to hold the work that may be in progress when laid aside temporarily. While the choice of materials is of course extensive, bolton sheet-ing is suggested as one of the most suitable, and as this is manufactured of double width the cover may be cut out without any join or seam. The design may be treated in various seam. The design may be treated in various ways. It looks well heavily outlined with rope-silk and partially filled in with long and short stitch. The border is very simple and effective. The berry forms are worked solidly. The coloring must depend, of course, upon the tone of the room in which it is to be placed. It looks particularly well carried out entirely in soft shades of yellow, brown and red upon a gran-green material. a gray-green material.

A VERY PRETTY WALL-POCKET

THE illustration berewith hardly gives a I just idea of the extreme dointiness of this wall-pocket. It is made as follows: Cover a piece of cardboard, pointed at the top, and twen-ty inches long by five and a half inches wide, with white linen. Make each pocket about five inches long, and em-broider upon them little conventional flowers in very delicate colored silk, making a feather-stitch edging to match. Gather these with a heading as shown in the drawing, and insert a piece of clustic to keep them in place This is intended for the bed-mom, and a toilet tidy can be made to go with it in the same style, horn-shaped, covered with the embroidered linen and lined with siik of the color used for the flowers and featherstitching. Pale pink, blue or yellow areall equally pretty for this purpose,

The same idea might be carried out in a much larger size if de-sized, still keeping to the proportions shown in the drawing. Satin ribbon is used for the bow, and a small boop should be made at the back of it, by which the pocket may be stap-pended. White linen, variously decorated, is very popular for all kinds of ornamental pur-poses in the boudoir or bedroom. It is used for the manufacture of letter-holders, engagement calendars or photograph frames with HOME STUDY, Young and middle agest thorough and printed heart given thorough and practical heart return by Matt, at their own Hootes, he Bookkington, Beslense Forms, Pennandary, Commercial Arithmeter, Fester Willing, Rusiness Law, Shorthmet, 60: Adapted to all ages and beth sease, students from every Stafe. Detanted to object to all ages and beth sease, roles and astafaction generatives. Their bassess seast free. Write in RELANT & STRATONN, 428 Rais St., Backet, S. 7.

LOTS $120 to $450 in GRIFFITH Manufacturing Solution online great that 4 milrouds and 2011 pipe lines. Best lots going fiss. Sound $5 to secure one. Balance $4 to $10 monthly. Map and plots free. $45 to $66155 a.00, 152 Week's $1. Chings.

POCKETBOOK Worth to cents, and made of initiation shad; also Edegant Store Catalogue, sond on receipt of 20 cents postage in LAPHAM'S, PALMER HOUSE SHOE STORE, Chicago, III.

TACOMA PORT Served Uniter, Ba SHAYTELY for Blood late, Parts
TACOMA much bent before Served Bases Bases for the 100 Google

Lifters Tanama Investment Digital 200 by Google

Mr. Beecher As I Knew Him

By Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher

IN SIX PAPERS

FOURTH PAPER

LL through his preparatory studies Mr. Beecher was the opponent of intemperance, and in his western pastor-ates he fought it continu-ally. He never lost a chance to put his foot boldly down show where he stood. The abolition cause was, also, becoming a prominent subject of discussion, even before his entering on public life, and was very pronounced during his law seminary course. Those who favored it were unpopular, and most persons were bitterly opposed to the subject being brought into public meetings.

FIRST INDICATIONS OF THE FUTURE

IN Indianapolis Mr. Beecher especially en-tered boldly into the abolition movement at a time when all the courage a man pos-sessed was needed. Its supporters truly took their lives in their hands in every effort made for the cause. Mr. Heecher's people were often vexed that he would persist in speaking so holdly on the subject; some threatened to leave the church, and now and then some did leave, and threatened to take their letters. Then, after staying away a few Sabbaths they returned, and remained contented and astir in returned, and remained contented church work until some fresh and more indignant attack on slavery would lead to the same results. But nothing checked Mr. Beecher's earnest denunciation of this great evil. It burned more fiercely with every new development of the wrong and cruelty connected with it, and as he was situated these acts were constantly brought be-fore him. In Lawrenceburgh, with only the Little Miami river separating us from the Kentucky shore, the cries of the slave under the lash were often heard; and in In lian apolis these fortunate enough to escape sought refuge and sympathy, and were helped to reach the North.

AMID FLOWERS AND FRUITS

CHIEFLY because he saw that some change was neces-sary, he consented to edit "The Farmer and Gardener," knowing that in that work he must turn his mind into an entirely different channel, for the time being. The books he consulted for this work, which he had access to in the town library, were as a feast to him, and a great help in enabling him to edit the journal. After an hour of such rest, and then a run hour of such rest, and then a run up to the garden with me, he could return to his pastoral work with renewed vigor. Some of the best sermons I ever hear! him preach there, were made fresh and full of richness, born of this kind of rest and refreshment. Even till the last, the pleasure, rest and comfort
Mr. Beecher secured by studying such books and the catalogues of trees, fruits and flowers, never changed. He often said "A seedman's list or catalogue are far more fascinating to me than any story or romance I ever rend."
Aside from the pleasure through

Aside from the pleasure through such relaxation, he gained a very thorough knowledge of the best modes of agriculture and horticulture. He could not be idle, and in all he undertook aimed for the best and highest. It is still on record that in one of the horticultural exhibitions in Indianapolis Henry Ward Beecher took three prizes for the best vegetables.

Years after we left the West, when talking left the West, ears after we with, or giving advice to young ministers, Mr. Beecher would say: "This mode of using or making leisure

"This mode of using or making leisure hours in the garden when overworked by my regular church labors, not only answered the purpose of soothing and quieting excited nerves, but brought me into such relations to the material world that—I speak with moder-ation—when I say all the estates of the richest dake in England could not have given me the pleasure I have felt when riding through the unoccupied prairies, bright with wild flowers, or by the waysides rich with the coloring that Nature, unassisted, so bountifully bestowed."

Since Mr. Beecher left us, one of his old Western parishioners writes:
"Mr. Beecher loved to work and toil, especially in his garden. He always had the especially in his garden. He always find the earliest vegetables in the market, and his garden was the best in the city. He loved to work among his flowers, and could readily call each one by its name. I think be loved his flowers and took more pleasure in them, then, than in anything else, excepting his family. He was certainly more devoted to his family than any man I ever saw. It was no uncommon thing for him to take his fruits and vegetables to the market himself before daylight and sometimes his little five-year-old daughter went with him."

*.* The first of Mrs. Beecher's articles on "Mr. Beecher As I Knew Him" was printed in the October Joranas, Back numbers can still be had for Ten Cents each.

BEGINNING HIS GREAT CAREER

THE first literary work of Mr. Beecher's which attracted any attention was his "Lectures to Young Men." Living in the capital of a new State, he saw, with increasing pain, how every form of vice, every species of temptation, was making headway consuaring the young and undermining their morals. The more those evils increased and boldly made their work manifest, the more keenly did he feel the danger. New cases of wrong-doing were constantly coming to his knowledge. When called "down town," or knowledge. When called "down town," or to the post-office, he seldem returned home without seeing or hearing of some outrage, or some case of dishonesty. Among the young, to whom Mr. Beecher had been especially to whom Mr. Beecher had been especially drawn, bright with the promise of grand and useful lives, many were allured from the paths of truth and honor, brenking their parents' hearts, destroying their bomes and at last dying dishonored and hopeless. Seeing young men thus led astray he felt there must be some way to help them, some one who could show them how full of danger, how near to certain rain, were those paths which looked to them desirable and full of pleasure.

Hoping he might, with God's help, be permitted to aid them and convince them of their danger, be gave his prayers and most earnest effort to this work, the "Lectures to Young the house, and then begged two young men who were boarding with us to go with him; but they were afraid. I doubt if he thought of the fears that had been expressed after the sermon. He certainly did not allude to what passed when he returned; but one of our people came in soon after and told me. As usual, the veranda of the hotel was filled with "loungers." He passed by, went to the post-"loungers." He passed by, went to the post-office, and returning, this person stepped down and stood before him with a pistol. "Mr. Beecher, were you alluding to me in your remarks yesterday morning?"

I was,

"Take it back, or I'll shoot you!"

Mr. Beecher looked him sternly in the face

Mr. Beecher looked him sternly in the face for a moment, and said:

"Shoot away!" and walked on.

The man followed him some rods with the pistol aimed at him; and then, as if ashamed to face the people on the hotel steps, turned down another street and walked away. Mr. Beecher often met and passed him after that, but no other ward ever passed him after that, but no other word ever passed between them.

SORROWS WHICH TAUGHT HIM SYMPATHY

YET with all the wrongs and cruelties con-tinually brought to his notice, keeping him always ready to do battle for the op-pressed, it did not sour Mr. Beecher's spirits, or change the sweetness of his home-life. His unvarying gentleness and kindness to the young made him a general favorite with them, and all in trouble or sorrow well knew where to go for advice or sympathy. Before he had ever experienced loss or affliction he shrank from such calls because he felt inadequate to bring them such comfort as they needed.

bring them such comfort as they needed,

But early in our second year in Indianapolis our first little boy died at his birth, and loving children as he did he felt the loss deeply, but said, "God saw I must myself pass under the rod before I learned the secret of comforting others."

Two years after this loss, returning from Jacksonville, when within a few miles of

OVERTURES TO LEAVE THE WEST

I SHALL merit reproof if I linger so long in the west. But as Mr. Breecher once said, in recalling our life there, "there is no end of things gone by; they rise at every point, and one walks encompassed with memories which accompany him through the living streets like invisible spirits." And so just as the pen seeks to travel to the east, something comes up worth the telling.

However, for more than a year, one letter followed another with urgent invitations to Mr. Beecher from churches at the east; but Mr. Beecher from churches at the east; but he unhesitatingly declined these overtures for him to leave the west. Finally, an invitation was sent him from the American Home Missionary Society to come east and address them at the May anniversaries, 1847. I had been very alarmingly ill, and when this request came to him I was still so feeble as to give friends and physicians much anxiety. The physician emphatically urged Mr. Beecher to accept this invitation, and to take me with him. Just before my illness we had sold the little cottage, and from that, with money from my father's estate, had built a small house, not quite fluished, but which would be all ready for us on our return from the east. for us on our return from the east.

ready for us on our return from the east.

We went east to the anniversary meetings, and then began a most earnest effort for Mr. Beecher to remain, Park Street Church, in Boston, and Plymouth Church, in Brooklyn, each desiring to secure him. His reply was invariably, "My wife is, I think, greatly improved in health by this rest; we shall return to our church in Indianapolis in a few weeks. If Mrs. Beecher continues to improve we shall remain west. But if she is again broken down by these western fevers my duty is plain. I shall leave. Her health is the only thing that can induce me to relinquish my work at the west."

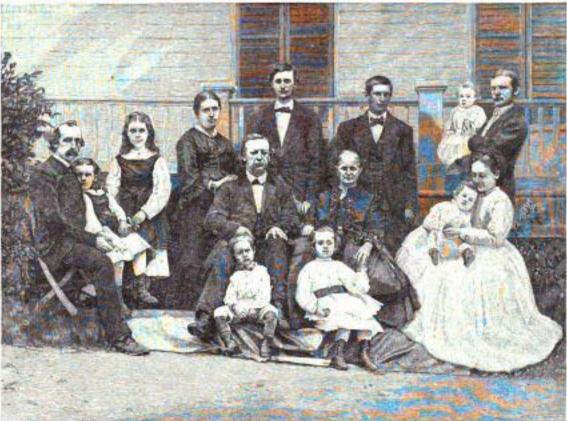

No church was yet formed in Brooklyn, and work at the west."

No church was yet formed in Brooklyn, and when they still unged his coming be told them "it was like asking a young man to promise to be the husband of an unborn girl. There is no church here to be my bride."

We returned to Indianapolis in June. The house which was to be surely finished before our return surely finished before our return was far from being completed, yet we had no alternative but to move into it as it was. No doubt living in a house so unfinished had some effect on my bealth; but aside from that, the summer had proved one of the most unhealthy we ever passed through, and in six weeks after our return Mr. Beecher, myself and three children were very sick. Under such circumstances Mr. Beecher acknowledged that it would be unwise to risk remaining longer, and wise to risk remaining longer, and with great reluctance sent in his resignation to the church be so dearly loved.

(now Mrs. Berang REV. SAMURI. SCOTTLAR (with Axxis Scorman).

HATTIE SCOVILLE MRS. SCOVILLE W. C. BERGHER Ми. Венения

Нинвент Венсики Мик. Вкиснен with Karn Sanctum (Mrs. Harper)

COL. HENRY B. BERCHER MRS. HENRY BEHTTER

Mr. BEECHER AND HIS FAMILY (From a portrait taken in 1871)

Men." Before giving them he had been in-stant "in season and out of season," in plead-ing with the young, or in fearlessly rebuking those who were tempting them to destruction. Of course, threats and abuse assailed him on every side for these bold reproofs; but noth-ing had any effect in retarding his earnest bukes to their tempters.

HIS FEARLESSNESS IN UTTERANCE

RECALL one occasion, when a case of most atrocious wickedness had transpired, and had occasioned much excitement, that the next Sabixuli Mr. Beecher fearlessly al-luded to it, and in the most severe terms. The offender was notoriously wicked, and the prople feared him. His church was greatly ex-cited at their pastor's rebuke, and after service gathered about him exceedingly alarmed.

"Why, Mr. Beecher, you risk your life by speaking of ______ in those terms! By speaking of to-morrow be will have been told of what you have said, and we fear will make trouble, even if he does not resort to violence. It was not wise for you to have expressed your opinion

"I do not fear him. It was wise for me to do my duty as I see it. It would have been useless for me to have said what I did had I not hoped and intended that he should have

Monday morning, as usual, Mr. Beerher went to the post-office, and to do so must pass the large hotel, around which there was al-ways many idle people loiterir; and where, if this man intended mischlef, I e would probably be. Knowing Mr. Beecher's habit of going to the office in the morning, I was very much troubled, but said nothing until be left home, we met some of our people, who stopped and abruptly told Mr. Beecher his brother George had killed himself! Henry did not speak, but drove rapidly on. I just glamed at his face. It was like marble, and I can never forget the agony I saw there. When we reached home we learned that his brother died to find that "killed himself" did not mean suicide seemed to take away half the sorrow. In March of 1846 our two eldest children were taken very seriously ill. Just as they began to mend, little Georgie, our third son —not, as has been stated by mistake, our first-born son—sickened, and died in a few days. was the first great sorrow-a sorrow that hardly lost its acuteness in the years that have since passed. The people meant always to be kind; but it was a young city, and each one had their own cares, and they did not know how to help in times of trouble. Our darling —more like his father than any other child— —more like his father than any other child-died in March, and what was unusual, there had been a heavy snow-storm. "On that wild bleak day,"—to quote from Mr. Beecher's account, years after,—"webore our noble boy through the storm to the graveyard. I got out of the carriage, and wading through the snow took the little coffin in my arms, walked knee-deep to the grave, and looking in I saw the winter to the very bottom of it, and laid his heavy fall bady in his cold, white grave. The benutiful body in his cold, white grave. The snow-flakes followed and covered it, and then the earth hid it from the winter. If I should live a thousand years I could not help shiver-ing every time I thought of it. It seemed as if I had not only lost my child, but had buried him in eternal snow. It was very hard for full, or imagination to break through the physical aspect of things and find a brighter

ACCEPTS PLYMOUTH'S CALL

ACCEPTS PLYMOUTH'S CALL

PLYMOUTH CHURCH was formally organized on June 13th, 1847, and on the following day a unanimous call to Mr. Beecher had been passed and sent to us. Upon his determination to resign from the Indianapolis church, he considered Plymouth's call. On August 19th he concluded to accept it, and so notified the waiting people in the East. Truthfully, we both believed that in a few years we should return to the West and our first home.

But although Mr. Beecher had accepted the call, how were we to find the means to leave? We were greatly in arrears financially. Mr. Beecher's small solary was behind, and he had been forced to borrow to meet the necessities of his family. Our furniture would not bring much; the house was mortgaged and not easily sold.

But as soon as the call was accepted the friends at Plymouth Church, with that kindness and liberality that for forty years has never failed, raised the money to take us East, and my brother after a while disposed of the house, and then settled all claims there.

My brother took myself and three children East, while Mr. Beecher remained to dispose of PLYMOUTH CHURCH Was

My brother took myself and three children East, while Mr. Beecher remained to dispose of all furniture and pack books, etc., and eight weeks after be started East on the first car

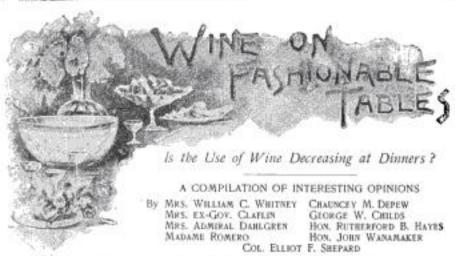

And now he was to enter upon a life entirely different from any he had ever known. He had proved himself equal to carry forward his work at the West, a faithful preacher and missionary in a pioneer State, and had carned a reputation for hard, faithful work. But now he was to labor in a refined, cultured and highly-critical city, almost a part of the m

Even among those most earnest in calling him there was some fours that be might, in these critical times, be a little too outspoken-at least critical times, be a little too outspoken—at least for his own good. Ah! how little they knew him! As if his own good would have a feather's weight to hold him back from any duty! Outside of Plymouth Church there were any number of prophesies. The new church would not hold together for many months, some said. Others knew that Mr. Beecher would not fulfil the expectations built upon him. who were a trille more sarcastic gave him six months to preach over the barrel of his father's old sermons, and thus tongues wagged, and under such auspices did Henry Ward Beecher come to the city which was destined to prove the arena of his subsequent career!

Engrou's Commerces—In the last (December) Issue the portrait of Mr. Bescher and child was designated as being the great preacher and his test child. This is in-currect; the child was William, the stath child.

tuned in the next (Final Marsh 1997) Google

With "Wine at Women's Lunches," by Mrs. Burton Harrison

O those who are accustomed to dine at public or fashionable dinners, it has been for some time apparent that the use of wine is steadily decreasing. Perhaps in no way could temperance interests be more directly advanced than that the wine-bottle should disappear from those tables where for many years it has beld undisputed sway. Fashion has advanced more than one reform; perhaps it may yet be an disportant factor in the furtherance of universal temperature.

With a view of learning more definitely the extent to which wine is becoming a relegated fluid at large dinners, the editor of the Lance' Home Journal recently caused careful inquiry to be made of those who either largely entertain, or who are frequent guests at social and public dinners. To each was submitted the question: "Do you find that the use of wine is decreasing at large dinners, public and private?"

WHY WINE DRINKING IS LESSENING

T is an undoubted fact that the serving of It is an undoubted fact that the serving of many and heavy wines at large dinners is gradually becoming a thing of the past. Of course, I do not mean that wines are no longer served, for they are and will continue to be, so long as civilized men consider them a feature of dinners. But I do mean that of the varieties of wine there are fewer, of the quantities less, and of the qualities lighter, than was the custom ten years are.

was the custom ten years ago.

To illustrate the two former facts, let me say that were I preparing for a large dinner for men—which isalways from the nature of things more heavily wined than an ordinary "mixed" dinner—I should not think it in the least degree necessary to order anything like the same amount or assortment of wines that would have been imperative a few years ago. And in extenuation of the statement that the and in extension of the satement that the qualities of the wines served are becoming lighter, the simple fact that at the average English dinner table port wine has been al-most entirely superseded by claret, may be cited. It is also becoming a very ordinary thing at English dinners to meet prominent thing at English dinners to meet prominent men who do not drink wines of any kind, and in our own country this is also becoming more and more a fact.

Of course, a dinner must have fluids: the best of solids require some liquids with which to relish them, and a dinner would be but wasted energy and material without them. But I think it is no longer imperative to serve wines or at least we can serve with them But I think it is no longer imperative to serve wines, or at least we can serve with them some other beverage which will be of equal pleasure to the constantly increasing set of people who find that wining and dizing together is rather too heavy a combination for their comfort. What shall this other beverage be? The question is one easily answered. Mineral water is a good choice, and many people rise from dinner tables where these waters are served now-a-days to call their hosts blessed. Mineral waters when drunk with a heavy dinner are not productive of headaches and kindred discomforts upon the following day as is champagne, for instance, headaches and kindred discomforts upon the following day as is champagne, for instance, and they furnish a really satisfactory, and so far as I know the only available substitute for alcoholic beverages. The dinner will taste the better for their use. The practice of serving mineral waters is becoming quite general, as much attention being devoted now to the selection of suitable waters, and to securing a sufficient supply of them for dinners, as is often devoted to the wine list.

Personally, I welcome the change. Although I have given a great many dinners, and have been a guest at many more, I never drink wine. I have also all my life made it a point of duty never to offer wine to young people, and to use such influence as I may have with them to secure their abstinence from liquors of all kinds. Stimulants rarely do good, and are often provocative of much do good, and are often provocative of much harm. Everyone, I know, does not feel in this matter as I do, and, of course, every man is entitled to his own opinions. But, as I said, personally I am glad of a change which lessens wine drinking and provides enjoyable substi-tutes in the various mineral waters; the best of all I consider Apollinaris.

GEORGE W. CHILDS.

THE SUPPLY EXCEEDS THE DEMAND

I AM not confident that there is a marked decline in the practice of providing wine at banquets, public or private. But, if my observation is correct, the number of those who drink to intoxication, even in the least degree, is less than it was a few years ago. RUTHERFORD B. HAYES.

MADAME ROMERO BELIEVES OTHERWISE

So far as the use of wine at large dinners in Washington is concerned, my observation does not extend far enough to make a correct statement; but, so far as I have seen, wines are used as much now at a formal dinner as before, although, perhaps, there is not so great a variety as in former years. I must observe, too, that I have never seen wine drunk to ex-LULA ROMERO. cess at a dinner party.

MRS. EX-SECRETARY WHITNEY'S VIEWS

PHAT the fashion in wines and wine drinking at table is surely changing, I think no one at all addicted to dining, either in the capacity of guest or host, at large din-ners will deny. The causes for this change are numerous, perhaps the most potent of them being the dread of invalidism which attacks men even more generally, and with more remedial effect, than women. Perfect physical condition is an ideal much striven more remedial effect, than women. Perfect physical condition is an ideal much striven for, and one and perhaps the principal way of attainment thereto is by temperance in the use and selection of wines. Men appreciate that fact in this generation as never before, and are helped toward it in many ways—by fashion, by the spirit of the age which frowns upon self-indulgence, and by athletic training.

Between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one the average gentleman's son is at college, and at work usually in some department of college athletics. His training there forbids an excessive use of either wine or tobacco, and so during these years a habit of abstemiousness is inculcated, and almost never outgrown. Older men learn the advisability of such habits, perhaps after over-indulgence, and in sight of threatened disense, both of which act as decided curbs to a careless intemperance.

A change in the fashion of serving wines has come about, and a greater temperance in their use has arisen with it, although the custom 'itself is as firmly intrenched as ever. A mixture of claret and water, and champagne are the two beverages most usually served to guests now. How many of us can remember mixture of claret and water, and champagne are the two beverages most usually served to guests now. How many of us can remember of how recent a date is this change, and appreciate it accordingly. Light wines are the order of the day, the heavy ports and Madeiras of our grandfathers being relegated into obscurity.

The amount of wine consumed at dinners, too, is much decreased. Most men, knowing their capabilities, seldom exceed them, and but rarely drink to reach them.

As to women, they are always light drinkers.

As to women, they are always light drinkers. Men study the effect of wine drinking on their direction next morning, and are as a con-sequence the better in health, mind and hap-piness. Better, too, than those of their ancestors, who, to prove their manhood, would drink until nature advanced its own refusal.

Happily all this has changed, and mothers can, in this age, watch the growth and development of their sons with the serene converopment of their sons with the seriese con-sciousness that the common temperation to ex-cess in drink is nullified in a great measure by the fashion of temperance and the hygienic tendencies of modern society.

FLORA PAYNE WHITNEY.

MRS. ADMIRAL DAHLGREN'S OPINION

THE decided tendency to a decrease of the _ use of wine at formal dinners arises in great part, it seems to me, from the changes that have been gradually taking place in the construction of these dinners.

The serving of a dinner holds to view, as in a faithful mirror, a reflex of the ultimate civilization of the age, and the finer estheticism of the present day dispenses with the pro-longed prodigality of the Lucullian banquet. Our dinners are perhaps no less costly than Our dinners are perhaps no less costly than during the most sumptuous periods of Roman decadence; but it is now better understood that excesses are to be avoided. Formerly, where the prandial courses were endless, inas-much as the gastronomic art requires that each dish shall have its appropriate wine in order to stimulate appetite and aid digestion, it may readily be understood that intemper-ages in eating and in drighting went together.

it may readily be understood that intemperance in eating and in drinking went together.

The real evil that existed, and in so far as it still continues, lies in the splendid gluttony of eating rather than in the sanitary use of wine that accompanies such indulgence. A score of years ago not less than sixteen courses made the regulation dinner, while at present half that receives more configurations. half that number, most carefully selected as to relative adaptation and rarity, is deemed to be better form, and now constitutes the best served dinner. One may see at once that when eight courses are dropped you dispense with half as many varieties of wine. It is really cheering and looks like the millennial dawn of a higher life.

MADELENE VINTON DARLURES.

MR. DEPEW'S VALUABLE TESTIMONY

The use of wine at dinner has been decreas-The use of wine at dinner has been decreasing for several years. In the novels and autobiographics of fifty and one hundred years ago, "one bottle," "two bottle" and "three bottle" men formed a feature of the description of the society of the period. They did not take light wines either, but solid sherries, ports and Madeiras. We learn that it was common at those entertainments for a number of the guests to be hopelessly intoxicated. The fact that the diner-out was apt to get in

The fact that the diner-out was apt to get in this condition did not impair his popularity or his standing among his friends. One may dine now every night in the year and never meet with a tipsy person. It is because we drink very much lighter wines, and less of them.

Within the last ten years a great change has come over dinners in the number and variety of wines served. This is especially the case in the United States and in England. Formerly there was a procession of wines, one with each course. Anyone who went through such a dinner, after astonishing his digestion with white wines and sherry, with claret, champagne, Burgundy, Madeira, brandy and liqueurs, became an early subject for Carisbad waters and a premature grave.

waters and a premature grave.

I have noticed in London in the last two sensons that at the English dinner they now claret and champagne, according to the preferences of the guests for one or the other, through the whole meal. We have not come through the whole meal. We have not come exactly to that yet, but at a New York dimoer, while you still find several varieties of wine, champagne is the one which is served mainly through the entire evening. The amount of wine which is consumed per head is constantly diminishing at all dimners, and the number of men who abstain altogether is decidedly on the increase. The sparkling mineral water is largely performing the functions formerly on the increase. The sparkling mineral water is largely performing the functions formerly filled by the stronger beverages.

An infrequent diner-out is much more apt to indulge unduly in both food and drink than a veteran. When one's social obligations compel him to appear in evening dress at his own house or some one's eise every night, he finds that to have a clear head and sound stomach for the business of the next day he must practice self-denial and temperance. We are all creatures of habit, and self-denial can become as much of a habit as over-indulgence. As the cares of business become more exacting, and the pace in life more rapid, we pay greater attention to the loss of health. We find not only longevity but comfort in avoiding those things which impair or unduly excite our organism. Thus, while our temptations increase we become more temperate.

As matters are now progressing in the social world, the next greenenion will be found dier.

As matters are now progressing in the social world, the next generation will be found diet-ing under medical directions. They will be enjoying better health, doing a larger amount of work and enduring a greater social strain in a festive way, and having a better time than their fathers did.

CHAUNCKY M. DEPEW.

OTHER REASONS FOR THE DECREASE

BELIEVE that one cause of the unques-I tioned diminution of the use of wine at the table is that the most frequent and most acceptable toast,—" Woman"—has so unanimously, through the Women's Christian Temperance Union, declared herself in favor of cold water. And it seems unreasonable to drink her health in red wine when she herself prefers the sparkling crystal.

Another reason for this decrease is the stringency in the money market. While financial panies will generally drive one or two people to drink themselves into drunkard's graves, yet their usual effect is to reduce the consumption of luxuries; and the use of wines, except in the cases of the nged and sick, is not a necessity of life.

Neither should wines be considered luxurious when all the headaches, redness of the eyes and disintegration of the vital organs which they produce are considered. tioned diminution of the use of wine at which they produce are considered.

I am seriously inclined to think that neither as many kinds of wine, nor in the aggregate as large a quantity of wine, are used socially in the city of New York, at least at this time, in proportion to the population, as five years ago. ELLIOT F. SHEPARD.

MRS. EX-GOVERNOR CLAFLIN, OF BOSTON

N<sup>O</sup> question has enlisted the attention of thoughtful people throughout the length and breadth of our country as has the temperance question. Every one who thinks at all seriously is interested in a matter which touches so many human interests and affects the life and happiness of so large a number.

During the last twenty years a marked change has taken place in public opinion concerning the use of wines and liquors, but this change has come about almost entirely in the great middle class—that is, in the industrious, well to do class who do the expect thinking well-to-do class who do the earnest thinking, and the best work of the world, and not among the fashionable and wealthy class, nor yet in the laboring classes. At the top and bottom of society there has been little change. Wine is used just as freely in fashionable clubs and at the dinner tables of the worlthy, as it and at the dinner tables of the wealthy as it ever was, and the hard-working day laborer seeks just as eagerly after his day's work is done the whiskey bottle and the dram shop. The clubs formed for the discussion of the burning questions of the day by earnest men who have the interests of the country at heart, have almost wholly discarded liquers from their club tables. It is difficult to form an opinion as to the relative amount of wines sed now and twenty years ago, for the reason that with the advancing civilization and pop-ulation, society is broken up into sets and cliques, so that one can hardly write society with a capital S. There are as many societies with a capital S. as there are different interests, and the barriers between this set and that are quite as impregnable now as they were in other days.

MARY B. CLAPLIN.

THE ADVANCE TOWARD MODERATION

FROM personal experience I am unable to FROM personal experience I am unable to give any information, but I am told that the use of wines and liquors for social purposes is not increasing in proportion to the increase in population. At large dinner parties many guests do not use liquors, while at receptions lemonade has replaced punch in many households. I am led to believe that much of this moderation is due to temperance agitation and to the abundance and increased use of mineral waters. use of mineral waters.

JOHN WANAMAKER.

WINE AT WOMEN'S LUNCHEONS

By Mis. Burton Harrison

THOUT undertaking to bandle the moral aspect of the point under discussion, I shall limit myself to a question of good taste in the matter of serving a variety of wines at the luncheons for women which now play so prominent a part in the entertainment of our friends throughout the country.

Look for evening a fibr farge parties to which, at half-after one o'clock in the afternoon, are convened ladies in visiting costume. bonneted and veiled, to be shut in a darkened dining-room, where gas and candles supplant the wholesome light of day. There, during two mortal bours, the guests are fed with deli-cacies of which each one seems to the taxed direction to be yet never in the very last they cacies of which each one seems to the taxed digestion to be—yet never is—the very last they will venture to accept. Cucumbers, caviare, truffles, fole graz, almonds, mayonnaise dressing are but a portion of the addenda of the feast. To relieve the thirst thus engendered the banqueter has recourse to what? Beside her plate stands exactly the same array of glasses—glasses of English cut, of Venice or of gilded Carlsbad ware, lending glitter or color to the board—glasses for sherry, for Rhine wine, for claret, for champagne, all that would be demanded for the service of the most formal dinner.

Beside this scintillating group of glassware

most formal dinner.

Beside this scintillating group of glassware is to be found a tumbler or goblet of water filled to the brim—there are so few houses where the servants are instructed on this point—with fragmentary ice! What woman having ordinary regard for the elements of bygiene presumes at such a crisis to insult her already disturbed digestion with a douche of iced water? Ten to one she does not care for wine, never thinks of touching it at home; as a matter of course lets the sherry, the Chablis, the Borgundy go by untouched; but unfor wine, never thinks of touching it at home; as a matter of course lets the sherry, the Chabis, the Borgandy go by untouched; but unless it occurs to her to quietly demand a glass of water without ice, and, if need he, to tinge its clear substance with a dash of claret, she is compelled to drink champagne.

Latterly, as a natural solution of this recurrent difficulty, Clysmic, Apollinaris, and the Hygela waters are continually served.

Champagne, curiously enough, continues to hold its own. "How very extraordinary that you Americans should set champagne before your guests at mid-day," said a traveling Englishman, from whom, naturally, he having received the best hospitalities of the best American society along his line of march, frank comment was to be expected. "With us, you know, except at races and picnics, it is a wine that is like an evening coat—never seen out until after dark." However little we may relish the condescending manner of this and kindred national rebukes, there is no disputing that the right is on their side. The whole matter of serving champagne in season and out is overdone in America. But especially does it seem inappropriate for an assemblage of ladies, who, if they were in their own homes, would not go beyond a glass of claret, and who, for the most part, are content with of ladies, who, if they were in their own homes, would not go beyond a glass of claret, and who, for the most part, are content with the bottled waters of their favorite Spring.

Tea drinking at luncheon, once so popular, has been elbowed out of place by the universal cup of tea at five o'clock. Women, unlike their predecessors of the Brick Lane Association, who could partake of the cheering beverage till detected in the act of "swelling wisibly before the werry eye," have now found out that the philosophy of drinking tea consists in limiting one's self to one cup per diem. Chocolate as an accompaniment to food is found to be too henvy. Water, the beverage of Eden, and during so many years since respectively in vogue with a large portion of the civilized creation, has recently been pronounced fattening when absorbed with meals. What, in the eyes of many of our sisterhood, could be more condemnatory of any drink?

In convention with this question may be condemnatory of any drink?

In connection with this question may be cited the experience of a young American girl on her first visit to an English castle, who, at luncheon, feeling thirsty, looked about her for something she could drink. Her host, next to whom she had the honor to be placed, demanded her need, and was informed that she would be glad of a glass of water. With a puzzled face he referred the matter to his wife, the servants being absent from the diningroom, "Water?" said the surprised lady. "wont she have beer or claret?" The American girl, rather depressed at this public notice yet stoutly persisted in her demand. A bell connection with this question may yet stoutly persisted in her demand. A bell was rung, the majestic butler entered, and or hearing what was required paused for a moment to collect his scattered faculties, bowed and retired. Some time later a footman, carry-ing upon a silver tray a small glass of a fluid that looked as if it had been dipped from the castle most, appeared at the lady's elbow. After this she made prompt resolve to renounce her national beverage until again on her native heath.

What then poor dear women are to drink at luncheon must, it appears, be decided by cli-mate, custom, bealth and individual bias. As it is becoming clear that on these occasions little wine is actually used, perhaps hostesses will someday wake up to the wisdom of suppressing the show of glasses which lends, to the ladies luncheon its chief reproach from outsiders.

A GROUP OF SOFA-CUSHIONS

By Maude Haywood

HIS is decidedly an era of sofa-cushions. Their popularity seems ever increasing, their decorative possibilities are great, and the comfort of them is undeniable. Where they might formerly be counted by twos and threes, they can at the present time be reckoned by the dozen and the score. It is apparently almost imposshile to have too many of them in order to be "in the fashion." They may be seen in every conceivable shape, size and style—good, bad and indifferent. No limit except that of personal taste is put to the choice of fabrics and to the manner of decoration. Sometimes it is to be feared that the aim is apt to be for the multiplication of their number at the sacrifice of individual merit, whereas the excuse for possessing so many cushions and pillows should be that each in its way is a work of art.

A PRETTY DECORATIVE DESIGN (Illus, No. 1)

Suitability should also be studied in selecting materials, remembering that they should be adapted for use, and that a cushion that is merely ornamental and too beautiful or delinate to be employed for its legitimate object, is as a matter of fact rather a meaningless affair, and therefore from the truest standpoint affair, and therefore from the truest standpoint has no right to existence, having no real value as an example of decorative art, the highest aim of which is to add beauty to that which is useful, and not to destroy its utility. In studying the history of art it will be invariably seen that meuningless decoration is a sure sign of the decadence of a national art. Some women, in the matter of their over-elaborate or dainty cushions, strive to steer a middle course, by manufacturing for them pretty covers of cotton goods or of wash silk, which are removed only on state occasions—when, to be consistent, they really ought to be labeled; "Please do not handle!"

A DESIGN FOR TAPESTRY PAINTING (Illus. No. 2)

The best was indicated by in record to make

The best way, indisputably, is never to make a sofa-pillow that is not meant to be leaned against, and, on the same principle, not to use decorate them with oil painting, the only kind of painting allowable being with indelible dyes in imitation of woven tapestry. The cushions may be trimmed in various ways. The latest and most fashionable method, seen on the newly imported cushions, is to put a very full frill all around them, measuring at least six inches in depth. Whether this is pretty in the abstract is an open question, but that it is the very newest style is undoubted. Puffings are also inserted in the seams, large ribbon bows are often tacked on to one corner of the pilare often tacked on to one corner of the pillows, which, unless they have the frill, are very frequently finished off quite plainly. Soft thick slik fringes are, however, employed with good effect as an edging.

PRETTY FOR A MUSIC ROOM (Illus, No. 3)

Where the house-wife does not possess the requisite skill in embroidery, or where her ambition is for many cushions without much expenditure of time, it is a good plan to purchase pretty art sliks with which to cover the pillows.

The foundations made of down can be bought in all sizes, at any large dry woods.

bought in all sizes, at any large dry goods store for very reasonable prices. The pat-terns may be outlined with rope-silk and their beauty much enhanced, but in many cases this is not necessary. Al-most any material may be used for soft cushions according to what sofa-cushions according to what room they are intended for; plush, veivet, silk, satin and cotton goods in their various qualities are each in their turn suit-able. Mail cloth is much liked, especially for darned work, and makes a handsome background.

A PRETTY DECORATIVE DESIGN

all kinds of decorative work at the present time, various arrangements of thosting ribbons, together with garlands of flowers or leaves, are specially favorite subjects. The first two illustrations show examples of this style and may be carried out to several different representations. in several different ways, although whatever method is chosen it seems essential that the coloring and general treatment should be kept rather delicate. Illustration No. 1 may kept rather delicate. Illustration No. 1 may be charmingly executed for a blue couch by choosing a soft gray or drab-colored ground, and making the gar-lands in shades of gray-green, and the ribbons in the design, as well as the bow on the corner, of blue. If well chosen the use of well chosen, the use of these related tones will be found delightfully harmonious. The leaves should be emleaves should be em-broidered, the ribbons may also be worked in the same way, or may be applied, or else tinted and outlined according to individ-ual preference. Upon a cream or pale gray-ish blue ground, the leaves being in natural colors, the ribbons might be in gradated tones of the yellows and reds seen in au-turn folinge, making the tints either very ligi the tints either very fight and delicate or ex-tremely rich in color,

AN EFFECTIVE ROUND CUSHION (Ilius, No. 5)

PARTICULARLY SUITED TO EMBROIDERY

FOR TAPESTRY PAINTING

THIS cushion (Illustration No. 2) is suitable for tapestry painting as well as for em-broidery. In either case the slik tapestry can-vas of an ecru shade will prove a pretty ground. The blossoms will look best made of a pinkish color, and the ribbons of the favora pinkish color, and the ribbons of the favor-ite Gobelins blue; the leaves should be treated simply, but varied in tint, some being yellow-ish, others of a gray or bluish-green. The stems can be made effective by introducing browns of a sienna tone. Where a chenper material is desired, the tapestry lines may be employed, and this will prove a most satisfac-tury ground for either material or needle work. tory ground for either painting or needle-work.

PRETTY FOR A MUSIC BOOM

THE cushion represented in Illustration
No. 3 is suitable for use in a music room, or the musical corner of an apartment. It is designed specially for treatment with the tapestry dyes, by means of which a good effect can be gained with little labe gained with little in-bor, whereas to em-broider such a subject would prove a longer and more difficult task than the majority would care to undertake. carry this out in delicate coloring, which nine people out of ten would probably prefer, make the flowers pink, or pink and yellow, the ribbon paleblue, the lyrea light mahogany, and the other instruments of a golden yellow; gradate and vary the leaves in Nearly all these subjects in tapestry require much the same treatment as to color, certain shades of pink, blue, yellow, green and mauve of nather subdued tones being used over and over again, arranged in a slightly different manner, but giving always that peculiar tapes-try effect which stamps them as imitations of the woven pieces. Where the surroundings would render a deep rich scheme of color more suitable, this design will be found readily adaptable for the purpose. Deep sumbre reds, yellows and browns, gray-greens and purple-blues, with rich wine-colored shades, should then be the scale of tones chosen. Any desired color, if sufficiently light to allow of the design being painted over it, may be obtained by laying a flat wash upon the material, and allowing it to become thoroughly dry before drawing in the subject.

SUITABLE FOR TINTING AND EMBROIDERY

THE octagonal cushion (Illustration No. 4) THE octagonal cushion (Illustration No. 4) may be carried out effectively by means of a combination of painting and needle-work.
This is, at least, one of the quickest methods, and therefore, naturally, with workers of our day, a favorite one. The large forms should be tinted in, and the outlines made with stem stitch in rope-silk. If preferred, the flowers and leaves may be applied in the requisite colors, with a couched line, the stamens and tendrif forms being, however, in the stem stitch.

FOR TINTING AND EMBROIDERY (Illus. No. 4)

Suitable coloring would be of rich, subdued tones—not necessarily dark, however—in sim-ple shades of red, blue, yellow and green.

AN EFFECTIVE ROUND CUSHION

A SOMEWHAT similar treatment is suitable also for the round cushion (Illustration No. 5). In this case the outlines are of cord, and the small leaves should be worked in satin stitch. Very little tinting is necessary, but what there is, about a supplies the should emphasize the color scheme of the whole. Another pret-ty way of carrying out this design would be to fill in the forms with a couching of heavy silk, instead of tinting them. If pre-ferred, the whole de-sign might be very effectively executed in effectively executed in outline only, with the exception of the small leaves, which look best worked in the satin stitch. The puff-ing, which forms the finish, is of thin silk, such as India or China silk, and may other silk, and may either match or form a har-

the material used for the cushion itself. Very small pillows, either round or oblong in Very small pillows, either round or oblong in shape, are quite popular, and where they are used in numbers, it is a relief to the eye to see variety in form and size. The very prettiest and most dainty are frequently entirely home-made, in which cases the stuffing of down should be put into a strong casing and securely sewn up first. Care should be taken in making them up that the covers fit nicely. There is no reason why amateur needle-work should not be as good as professional, the chief quality required being that of next fingers and careful required being that of next fingers and careful execution. Beally good work must not only be well finished, but should bear no marks of the handling it has undergone during the pro-

LLUSTRATION No. 6 may be carried out in A any of the above methods already de-scribed, but would look particularly well em-

> It is often very effectre to make the whole in gradated tones of yellow and brown upon a cream or buff ground, or in blue upon a white, light

ions or pillows are not employed merely to lean against, but also to sit upon, or as footstools, thrown down in two and threes upon a divan or upon the floor. When intended for such use, they should be made of heavier, stronger materials, in order to be suitable for the rougher wear they experience. For a girl's own room, a pile of comfortable cushions before a cheerful fire in a good, old-fashioned open fireplace, will, especially toward twilight, be in them-selves an invitation to a cosy half-hour's chat with a dearest friend, or to a wellearned rest in welcome solitude, when the flickering firelight tells strange stories and assumes weird shapes, the brain, meanwhile, weaving queer fancies, and all that is com-monplace banished for the time. While on a summer afternoon, deep window sents with the addition of plenty of cushions form the most luxurious lounge imaginable.

A QUAINT DRAGON DESIGN

I LLUSTRATION No. 7 shows a very quaint and original design for a custion, which will amply repay the careful work it demands. The material is of mail cloth on which the background may be darned or left plain. The dragons are worked solidly in gold thread to-gether with silk in various shades of red, green and yellow, arranged in most places so that the threads of gold and silk lie one against the other in alternation, the silk in this way giving the requisite level coloring.

that the threads of gold and silk lie one against the other in alternation, the silk in this way giving the requisite local coloring. A little silver thread may be introduced in parts with excellent effect. The scales are embroidered in silk, each one being outlined with gold thread. The Japanese background lines are of cord, and a beavier cord in dull gold seems the most appropriate finish for the edge. In working this design the expression and drawing of the dragons should be followed very carefully, for if the spirit of the whole is lost, it ceases to have any meaning or character, and what should be quaintly grotesque becomes merely ugly. An appropriate backing to this cushion might be of a decorative armagement of the scales, shown on the dragons' bodies, worked upon silk. A very handsome and effective material for the pillow is of plush, in a soft artistic shade, and for some purposes it would be preferable to mail cloth. For use on a yaclit, a pretty and suitable design may be made of dolphins, or some queer sea creatures, with waving lines in the background as a conventional suggestion of water. If the needle-woman is also an artist, and equal to the undertaking, a mermaid or water-baby needle-woman is also an artist, and equal to the undertaking, a mermaid or water-baby subject can be chosen, in which cases the firsh should be painted, preferably in tapestry dyes, tapestry canvas being used as material.

A QUAINT DRAGON DESIGN (Illus. No. 7)

THE COMFORTABLE DOUBLE CUSHION

HIS double cushion (Illustration No. 8) is the shape used for steamer-chairs, and in suitable materials proves an acceptable parting gift to a Europe-bound friend. An outline design in heavy white outline upon blue denim is both pretty and effective. This style of pillow will be found also very comfortable for use upon the pinyar when prove would preisse upon the pinze, when many would pre-fer to choose a handsomer material and to put more elaborate needle-work upon it, especially in cases where, as is so frequently seen, piazzas are furnished so much like dwelling rooms, where lunches, teas or other social entertain-ments are given. In the illustration the design is outlined with cord, and the background darned. These darned backgrounds are very popular, and with a little practice do not take opular, and with a little practice do not take so very long to execute, especially upon mail cloth, where the texture of the material enables the lines to be kept perfectly even without any treatle where

The lines to be kept perfectly even without any trouble whatever.

Those who wish to work out the designs given on this page for themselves, should notice how that in making the large drawings of the requisite size for their cushions, in nearly every case a section only nerd be drawn and the rest traced from that. In No. for instance, one-eighth of the lower part repeated makes the whole design, and, with a slight alteration, is adapted also for a quarter of the upper portion of the pillow. It is necessary, however, in enlarging designs in this way, to be extremely accurate, and it is usually best to get the whole design made out on paper first before transferring it. The most usual method adopted is to perforate the de-sign, and to transfer it by means of pouncing, going over the outline with pen or fine chalk.

THE COMPORTABLE DOUBLE CUSHION (Illus. No. 8

cess of its manufacture. PARTICULARLY SUITED TO EMBROIDERY

broidered, partially filling in the design with long and short stitch. It is finished off with the fashionable deep frill. The material sug-gested is heavy silk or Roman satin. The col-or scheme is entirely a matter of individual taste and requirements. one color, for in-stance, working the design in shades or blue or gray material. Now-n-days cush-

(Illus. No. 6)

FOR A FRIEND'S BIRTHDAY

BY CELIA THAXTER

WOULD I could bring you some beautiful Something to gladden you, something to charm,

A blessing to brighten, to cheer, to uplift, A shield to protect you from shadow of harm!

Had I the power I'd gather for you All the world's treasures of good and of fair, All things to comfort you—friends that are true, Joys that are purest, and pleasures most rare.

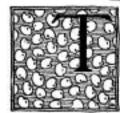

These at your feet on your birthday I'd lay, Fill its swift moments with quiet delight, Make it divine from its earliest ray, From the gleam of its morn to the dusk of its night.

Empty my hands, but my heart holds for you All the good wishes of heaven and earth, Fragrant as roses at dawn in the dew— With these let me crown the glad day of your birth!

XI.—WOMEN AS ILLUSTRATORS

BY MAUDE HAYWOOD

HE first point to be em-phasized to any one who contemplates taking up illustrating taking up illustrating for the press as a means of livelihood, is the absolute necessity of possessing a good knowledge of drawing as a requisite and indispensable there is nothing which justifies the choice of this as a profession. Moreover, without the previous acquirement of at least the first principles of art, it is both useless and foolish to expect to achieve success. It is best and kindest ciples of art, it is both uscless and foolish to expect to achieve success. It is best and kindest to be entirely frank and decisive in this statement from the beginning. This series of papers is not being written in order to raise false and delusive hopes of a visionary career in the various callings treated of, but to give honest advice, based on practical experience, which shall help those possessing the necessary ability to turn their knowledge to profitable account, and which shall, at the same time, if possible, save those not having the needful qualities from an attempt that can only result in heart-sickening failure and disappointment. appointment.

A certain facility of execution with the pen, and the exercise of that care in the finish of a drawing, however slight and sketchy it may be, which is a distinguishing mark of profesbe, which is a distinguishing mark of profes-sional workmanship, is likewise necessary; and also, finally, that which can only be gained by each individual, gradually, often through failures at first, namely, a practical knowledge of how the drawings will come out under various conditions, and of the tech-ical datally, which must be duly recorded in knowledge of how the analysis an constructed various conditions, and of the technical details, which must be duly regarded, in order to ensure satisfactory reproductions. For instance, it is obvious that illustrations for a high class of magazine, which will be printed on good paper, in the best manner possible, must require a different method of treatment from those destined for a newspaper hastily turned out by the thousand, on very absorbent paper, with common printer's ink. For the latter, the lines must be simple, fine, clear, unbroken, vigorous and sufficiently far apart not to blur together in the printing. The shading should be very slight. A glance at the city dailies will show at once what is meant, bearing in mind that the originals are always drawn considerably larger, in order that they may be reduced in the reproduction, and therefore that the lines are made by the artist much farther apart than they appear when published.

when published.

The improvements in the photo-engraving process, and the comparative cheapness of re-producing drawings by this method, in late years, have greatly increased the demand for pen draughtsmen, and there is always an opening for any one, women equally with men, who can turn out really good work. Perhaps more even might be said for the chances of those whose drawings are of undoubted merit. Editors frequently complain of the difficulty of petting the work satisfactorily accomplished, and profess themselves willing, so to speak, to pay any price to a really competent artist, while they are obliged to reject by the score the utterly unsuitable drawings submitted to them, because a practical eye can see at a glance that it would be impossible to reproduce them with any good result, apart from the consideration of their artistic value. While the woman who seeks to illustrate should have the artistic values of her work in mind, she must not forget the market for which that piece of work is intended.

"This series of papers" Women's Chances as Breadwinners," was commenced with
"How to BECOME A TRAINED NUBSE" January
"WOMEN AS STENOSRAPHERS" February
"WOMEN AS DERSMAKERS" April
"BEEK RESTROS FOR WOMEN ADDIT
"WOMEN AS DECEMBER OF THE SERIES APPRIL
"WOMEN AS DECEMBER OF THE SERIES APPRIL
"WOMEN AS TYPESECTERS" JUNE
"THE GITAL WIND WANTS TO TRACKS" September
"WOMEN AS INTERIOUS DECORATORS" October
"WOMEN IN ART" December
"WOMEN IN ART" December
The back newspers can be obtained at ten cents each.

Now, a few words of advice as to finding market for the work in the beginning. W market for the work in the beginning. We will imagine that the reader is possessed of the first two requisites mentioned above, namely, a knowledge of art in general, and of pen-drawing in particular, but that at present the third—practical experience—is entirely lacking. This, therefore, it is the primary object to obtain at any cost; and in the beginning ject to obtain at any cost; and in the beginning the amount of actual pecuniary return should be a very secondary consideration, success being reckoned according to the experience gained rather than by the dollars earned. Later, this period—a period of apprenticeship—will be amply made up for by the prices which really good work always commands. It is worth while to be patient, provided it can be felt that something is learned from every is worth while to be patient, provided it can be felt that something is learned from every drawing made. Moreover, where a worker is really capable and energetic, using to the utmost every opportunity for gaining experience and making progress, it will soon be found that one thing leads to another, once a start has been made in actual practical work. A good method of obtaining steady employment is from photo-engraving companies, which have a very varied class of work pass through their hands. Apart from the reproduction of sona fide pen-drawings, they are often called upon to imitate more expensive processes. For instance, many illustrations are made to resemble wood cuts so closely as to be almost indistinguishable from them. For examples of this, study the advertisement pages of the of this, study the advertisement pages of the principal monthly magazines. The drawings have to be made by copying the line shading peculiar to wood engraving; and although in many cases this requires little more than me-chanical skill, there are so few, comparatively, who can do them successfully, that the work is very well paid, and any one competent to undertake it would find no lack of employ-

With regard to obtaining a permanent posiwith regard to obtaining a permanent posi-tion with a magazine or newspaper, it must naturally be greatly a matter of chance, how-ever capable the artist, whether such a posi-tion be vacant. Those not living in any of the large cities will often have a better opportion be vacant. Those not living in any of the large cities will often have a better opportunity of getting an opening with a local publication, because there would be less competition to encounter. This might possibly be only a stepping stone to something better, meanwhile proving the occasion for testing the powers and developing the capabilities of one thoroughly in carnest. In submitting work to an editor, try to look at things from his point of view. Do not send him drawings that anyone of common sense must judge unsuitable or unworthy, and expect to have them accepted. In dealings with him be business-like, clear and to the point. Be, above all, reliable and prompt. On these points a woman should be especially careful, in order to vindicate the possession of business qualities by her sex. And it is a fact that—man or woman—anyone taking up illustration work, to be successful must be very practical as well as artistic. A good deal of patience may also be needed, and the realization that the fact of a drawing being rejected does not necessarily imply that it lacks merit; there may be many other reasons why it is not available just where it was offered. At first it may seem very discouraging to have work declined, but perseverance, always provided it is backed by enpability, is bound finally to gain the wished-for opening, and then success wholly depends upon the use made of one's opportunities.

Probably the question naturally arising in the minds of many, on reading this article, will Probably the question naturally arising in the minds of many, on reading this article, will be: "How much could I earn at this work?" Such a question is very difficult to answer with any degree of definiteness, obviously so much must depend on the ability of the much must depend on the ability of the artist, the rapidity with which drawings can be accomplished, the class of work undertaken, and much, also, on the "push" and perseverance of the individual. The writer recently asked a draughtsman of experience as to the average prices paid by the photoengraving companies, eliciting the reply: "Anything from fifty cents to a hundred dollars;" and nothing less vague could be extracted from him. But he vouchsafed the information that thoroughly competent pendraughtsmaen are in actual demand, and can make their work very remunerative, even without entering into the highest branches of their art; but that those who are not able to accomplish what they attempt, and who are careless, deficient or incapable, cannot hope to achieve success. Salaries vary as greatly, achieve success. Salaries vary as greatly, ranging from perhaps fifteen or twenty dollars a week upwards; the higher branches of il-lustration, which however require great artistic ability, and a special gift, commanding good incomes. Those who can do such work, however, will need no advice as how to obtain employment, neither have they made their names or their fortune at one step. They have mostly fought their way up by sheer hard work, and from modest beginnings. There is no royal road to success, although nature has endowed some with greater natural talents, and so made their progress easier and more rapid. But in any case, don't expect to gain your ambition in a week, a month, or even a

Don't become discouraged, impatient or out of heart if the drawings do not come out at first just as you expected. Nothing worth knowing was ever learned except through

Don't expect mistakes to miraculously disappear in the reproduction. This is a common declusion with beginners. Reducing the draw-ings refines them somewhat, but never corings refines them somewhat, but never cor-rects a wrong line.

Don't copy. This is the biggest don't of all. Whatever the work, let it be original.

Draw directly from nature as much as possi-ble, and never get into the way of cribbing other people's ideas; it is fatal to the develop-ment of individuality. Presiness and novelty of expression have their market as well as their artistic value, and are an indispensable quality in order to rise above the common level—and this is the legitimate aim of even the humblest beginner.

DUTY'S PATH

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

OUT from the harbor of youth's bay There leads the path of pleasure; With eager steps we walk that way To brim joy's largest measure. But when with morn's departing beam Goes youth's last precious minute, We sigh "'twas but a fevered dream-There's nothing in it."

Then on our vision dawns afar The goal of glory, gleaming Like some great radiant solar star, And sets us longing, dreaming, Forgetting all things left behind, We strain each nerve to win it But when 'tis ours-alas! we find There's nothing in it.

We turn our sad, reluctant gaze Upon the path of duty; Its barren, uninviting ways Are void of bloom and beauty. Yet in that road, though dark and cold, It seems as we begin it, As we press on—lo 1 we behold There's Heaven in it.

SUNNY SPOTS FOR WORKING GIRLS

By GRACE H. Dodon

PRESIDENT, THE WORKING GIRLS' CLUBS OF AMERICA

AST evening a number of busy girls were having a social time in a place that might well be called a "sunny-spot." We were all workers, and had had a hard day's service in various places, for some of us had been tenching. teaching, some taking stenographic notes, or looms in great factories; others were weary with trying to please behind counters, or tired after home cares, or perplexed in trying to solve problems affecting large movements.

The "sunny-spot" meant to us bright rooms, with books, pictures, comfortable chairs, piano, etc., for these rooms were the bendenators of our Society, paid for by our headquarters of our Society, paid for by our mouthly dues, and arranged for, and used by the members. Here we have classes, music, laughter, books and companionship, as well as thorough co-operative sympathy.

But, to go back to last night. We were talk-But, to go back to last night. We were talking about various matters when, finally, some girl asked, "Have we any sunny-spots in our lives?" Quick came the replies, "We have, indeed, sunny-spots." One said, "My bright spot is this Club room, where we get new ideas, join in pleasant and instructive talk, and feel that we are worth something." "Did you everthink," said a quiet girl sitting in the corner, "what satisfaction it gives to perform duty faithfully, and to have true friends to advise and sympathize?" "Yes," said the friend beside her, "and think, also, how delightful it is to find your best efforts appeciated by your employer?" "Yes," said the friend heside her, "and think, also, how delightful it is to find your best efforts appeciated by your employer?" "Yes," said the friend heside ber, "and think, also, how delightful it is to find your best efforts appeciated by your employer?" "Yes," said the friend heside ber, "and think, also, how delightful it is to find your best efforts appeciated by your employer?" "Yes," said the friend heside ber, "and think, also, how delightful it is to find your best efforts appeciated by our employer?" "Yes," said the friend heside ber, "and think, also, how delightful it is to find your best efforts appeciated by our employer?" "Yes," which have been defined think, also, how delightful it is to find your best efforts appeciated by our employer?" "Yes," which have been defined think, also, how delightful it is to find your best efforts appeciated by our employer. "Yes," when he was a part of think, also, how delightful it is to find your best efforts appeciated by our employer. "Yes," which have the proper when he was a proper when he was

When the excitement had somewhat sub-sided, and discussion was again resumed, some one asked, "Is it possible to make the work-room asunny-spot?" "Yes," was the answer given by many lips, "when we can win the good-will and esteem of our fellow-workers, and have sympathetic friends among them, and where the superintendent speaks a kind word, and seems to look upon us as some-thing more than mere soulless and brainless automatons." automatons.

automatons."

The talk drifted on, and the necessity of good health to keep one bright was discussed. Next followed remarks on the delight that comes from unselfishly deing kind actions; the advantage of good, cheap rending, and how books and papers give many happy hours. Long before we were through with our talk the clock struck for 9.30, and this was a signal for conships to take our chairs and having a signal for pushing back our chairs and having a little music before we dispersed.

There are many such bright, charming rooms in New York city, as well as many more in Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and smaller cities. They all mean cheery, rallying places for groups of working girls, varying from fifty to six hundred in number, all animated with interest, enthusiasm and pleasure over their own special rooms. Clubs or societies are the names given to these various groups, and the very name of some suggests pleasant thoughts: thus, the Kindly Club, the Endeavor Society, the Progressive Society, the Mutual Benefit, the Steadfast Club and the Enterprise. These mean, in action as well as in name, kindliness, endeavors toward steadfast progress, with the key-notes of as well as in name, kindmess, choesvors ward steadfast progress, with the key-notes of enterprise, co-operation, education and love. The classes are appreciated, the books found valuable, the provident schemes utilized, the lectures well attended; but, above all, the sympathetic companionship and the organized oppartients companions in and the organized op-portunities to do for others, make these gather-ing places bright to us all.

Let us glance at one club-room that is es-pecially sanny, in contrast to the darkness outside. Under the New York side of the Brooklyn bridge there are streets dimly lighted at night, but filled with people. -Pass-ing through the growd one comes to a door ing through the crowd one comes to a door which leads into a hallway, and going through this enters a rear yard fall of children, and festooned with clothes-lines with their white burdens. About the middle of the yard wooden steps lead to the second-story of one of the houses. Ascending these by the light of the houses. Ascending these by the light of a bull's-eye lantern, we come upon a little balcony, and find a door, which, upon opening, reveals a cheery sight. A small ante-room, used as kitchen and class-room, with its bright paper, shining tins, muslin window curtains, etc.; beyond this, a long, narrow room with open fire at one end, table, lamp, bruss chandelier giving brilliant light, and wall paper with pink and blue tints. These are all attractive; but not as much so as the bright, happy faces of the busy workers, who come each evening of the busy workers, who come each evening with the freedom of ownership and possession.

with the freedom of ownership and possession. Sometimes all the clubs combine, and a thousand or more need for a social recasion. Three concerts held in the large hall of Cooper Union in New York city brought the enjoyment of clarming spirited music to two thousand girls; and the anniversary meeting for business, when eighteen hundred came together, was another bright spot.

On a certain night of the week, at several club rooms, twenty or more young men come in as privileged members of a literary circle, to discuss, with as many young women, matters of interest; and the interchange of thought inspires many to more carnest living.

A sunny industrial center has grown from

A sunny industrial center has grown from the clubs, viz., The Children's Dressmaking Company. The president of the company is Miss Virginia Potter, and there is no pleas-anter work-room in New York than the brightly-lighted fourth-story room which the company occupies. The girls found here are mostly club members, and all are skilled workers on bubies clothes and spend the day in making the daintiest of things.

Summer brings sunny-spots of days and weeks to hundreds of working-girls. Vacations are delightful to all tired people; but who can estimate their charm when from eight to ten hours per day for the rest of the year is spent by noisy factory looms, behind counters, at cashiers' desks, or in any unceasing round of monotonous work! How we revel in the freedom of the country, the late breakfast hour, the trees, flowers, sen or mountains, and the sunshine over all. A little hamlet on the north shore of Long Island is a favorite resort for those workers who are members of the Working Girls' Societies, for here they have two houses, known as Holiday House and Holiday Harbor, which are owned by the societies. A bright, happy life goes on here, filled from day to day with country plensures, known only to those who roam field and wood in search of nature's trensures, or sit on the pebbly shore by the "sounding sea." A plensant feature of the day is the walk through shady paths to the beach, where bothing is entered into with zest, and good swimmers produced by persevering daily practice. Picnic parties on wooden slopes, and moonlight rides through country roads, are occasions of fan and enjoyment; but the grand feature is the weekly "barn frolic," when the big harn wears a festive appearance and is filled with a delighted audience from the surrounding villages, while the girls take part in "private theoricals," acting the part of the stage-manager as well.

The Working Girls' Vacation Society furnishes other happy holiday places. No one can hear of Liberty. Green's Farms, Farmington or Winsted, without being impressed with the charms of these localities for outings, and realizing something of what cheerful weeks working-girls must spend in these centers.

The Harper Cuttage at Long Branch, and similar summers houseling hours and senders and similar summers houseling hours and sen Summer brings sunny-spots of days and weeks to hundreds of working girls. Vacations working-girls must spend in these centers.

The Harper Cottage at Long Branch, and

The Harper Cottage at Long Branch, and similar summer boarding-houses elsewhere, are much enjoyed, as well as the excursions to Glen Island. Central Park and the beaches. Busy working girls!—there are bright, sunny spots everywhere for us, some small, some large, many so hidden that only a few know of them; and others conspicuous.

Each one of us can findbrightness, or, what is better, create it. Few plants grow and desirable constitutions of the constitution of Each one of us can find brightness, or, what is better, create it. Few plants grow and develop without sunshine, so we cannot become bright, earnest women without letting the sunshine fall upon us. Let us try to live out of self, bringing sunshine to others, even if we have not much ourselves; and, by being sunshine-bearers, brightness will be reflected back into our own hearts. A hand clasp, a smile, a sympathizing word, or a flower, has made many of us happy for a day, and surely smile, a sympathizing word, or a flower, has made many of us happy for a day, and surely we can all give forth such rays as these. For the larger beams let us ally ourselves with some girls' organization, find out about the work done in it, then join it or form a society among our acquaintances. Do not let any of us feel that because we are workers—wage earners—we need do nothing but drudge from day to day. We should rouse ourselves and look around, feeling sure if we have health we can make much of our own lives and bring can make much of our own lives and bring brightness and happiness to others,

Colds and Coughs

croup, sore throat, bronchitis, asthma, and hoarseness cured by

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

the safest and most effective emergency medicine. It should be in every

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co.

Lowell, Mass. Digitized by Google

THE BROWNIES THROUGH THE YEAR

A SERIES OF 12 ADVENTURES OF THE FUNNIEST LITTLE MEN IN THE WORLD

By Palmer Cox

NUMBER FOUR

IN JANUARY January laid the snow On mountain high and valley low And gliding sleigh and jingling bell Told folks improved their chances well, The Brownies planned, with language bold, A ride across the country cold. Said one: "No cutter, frail and light, Will answer our demands to-night; We must have something large and strong To carry all the band along, And stand the rack of going fast On sideling roads, where drifts are cast." Another cried: "I know a place Where something lies, will suit the case; 'Tis like a life-boat, long and wide, In which the sailors brave the tide: 'Twill hold us all, I well believe Full half the band can seats receive, While those who are a seat denied Can in some other manner ride. It has the plumes, all blue and red, To stream so gaily overhead. There's nothing lacking there, I know, That we require to make a show. A third remarked: "To match it grand A splendid team is near at hand;

They will not take a second lash Before the rigging goes to smash, But treated properly, will glide As fast as you will care to ride It matters not how hills may rise. Or how the snow before them lies;
Once on the road you may depend They'll strive to find the other end.
When going fast the lines I'll hold,
More teams than one I have controlled

While comrades trembled in their places With bristling hair and pallid faces." Another spoke: "Excuse my smile, No disrespect is meant the while, But, sir, to state the matter plain, You're hardly fit to hold a rein; You may have strength, and courage, too, And in your way may wonders do,

But "tis not all in pull and haul,
Some judgment there must be, withal,
And that's a quality or crown
With which you are not weighted down."
Then brief

Then brief In settling who For half a To wield that Said one: "I'll 'Twill wake an But others said:

discussions started there the whip should bear; dozen filed a claim implement of shame. make it snap so loud echo in the cloud;" You're far too bold; No hasty hand the whip should hold, That in each trivial action may See cause to bring it into play." Those who have seen the Brownie ba In other scenes, by sea or land, Know how the cunning rogues agree

Upon a scheme, as well as me; While those who have not studied o'er, Their wondrous doings, heretofore, Will learn, if they pursue the rhyme, How much the Brownies value time. In twenty minutes by the clock, That in a steeple on the block Both day and night its visage showed The happy band was on the road. That floats, a puffing tug-boat's charge Upon the river or the bay, When labor takes a holiday,

Would hardly show such faces bright As from the sleigh peeped out that night. For several miles, with nothing wrong, Behind the team they slid along, The night was bright, the road was clear, And nothing came to interfere.

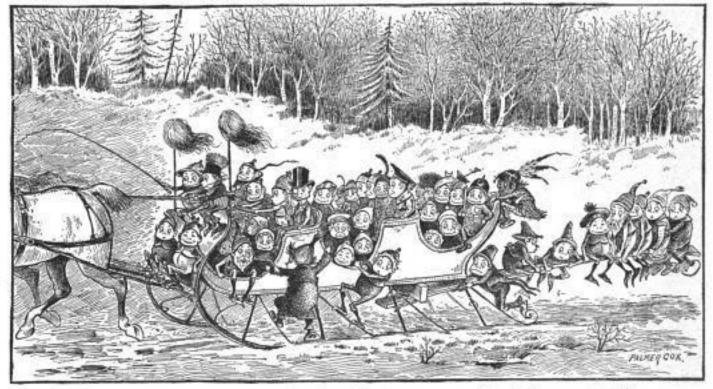

Until they settled their debate, But an impartial spirit showed, And didn't take to either road, in the snow, When to a sideling place they drew Where danger more apparent grew. Then followed soon a sudden pitch,

And sleigh and load went in the ditch. Now every one began to find A chance to exercise his mind, For speedy action wins the prize

Some, rather than be counted out, At such a time, had crawled about Until they found a friendly brace Or rail that offered them a place; While disregarding pride and ease Some rode on rattling whipple-trees, And kept their seat through jolts and jogs, And sudden turns round stumps and logs, Content to be, as it would seem, At least the nearest to the team;

But carried out the neutral plan And straight ahead between them ran. Now some pulled left, and more pulled right, While those who could not manage quite To reach the lines from where they stood, Gave free advice to those who could. But counsel was not worth a pin, For some fell out, and some fell in, And all that showed above the seat At sundry places were the feet,

At such a time, you may surmise.

Some grabbed the team without delay,
And some began to right the sleigh,

While others dug to bring to light Companions who had gone from sight. Thus was distress much quicker found

More rigged a board they chanced to find, Which, like a rudder, reached behind, And formed a seat and teeter gay Unknown to makers of the sleigh. They circled round the country wide, And then commenced the homeward ride. But as they near the city drew, The road divided into two; Some thought the right-hand one the best, The left seemed better to the rest; And each one pulled, to reason blind, According to his turn of mind. Too many cooks around the pot Will spoil the broth, and doubt it not; Too many hands to reins applied Will surely spoil the finest ride.

While those who took the outward fall Had all the field in which to sprawl, And seemed to strive to do their share In covering all the ground was there.

But those who had the team to drive And to their duty were alive,

Than are these lines I now compound. But as they had no time to spare To talk about the mishap there, They turned the team the proper way, And gained the road that nearest lay, And though the shaking up was bad, They thought the pleasant ride they had Did more than balance the unset Which at the forking road they met. Each horse again had found its stall, Was watered, fed, rubbed down, and all Before the lagging winter day Began to drive the night away, Then through the fields and the road Some rapid time the Brownies showed, While bright and brighter spread the glare Of morning as they scampered there, Till needed shelter came in view And secret haunts, that well they knew.

Then Brownies found a place to hide, And chat about their splendid ride.

Digitized by Google

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

An Hustrated Family Journal with the Largest Circulation of any Magazine in the World.

Published Monthly by

THE CURTIS PUBLISHING COMPANY At 433-435 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa. With Press-Rooms at 401-415 Appletree Street

Edited by

EDWARD W. BOK

In association with

MRS. LYMAN ABBOTT ("Aunt Patience") MISS RUTH ASHRORE MARGARET BOTTOME ROBERT J. BURDETTE KATE UPSON CLARK FOSTER COATES MAUDE HAYWOOD EMMA M. HOOPER MRS. LOUISA KNAPP MARY F. KNAPP ISABEL A. MALLON MARIA PARLOA EBEN E. REXFORD ELISABETH ROBINSON SCOVIL REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D. KATE TANNATT WOODS

Advisory and Contributing Editors. With representatives at London and Paris.

Rates

Subscription One dollar per year, paycopies ten cents.

Advertising Rates

Five dollars per Agate line each insertion before (this) editorial page; three dollars per Agate line on succeed-ing pages and all covers. Reading Notices, six dollars per Nonpareil line. These rates are not.

BRANCH OFFICES:

New York: Potter Building, 38 Park Row Boston: 7 Temple Place, Cor. Tremont St. Chicago: Chickering Hall Building San Francisco: Chronicle Building

LONDON OFFICE 53 Imperial Buildings, Ludgate Circus, E. C. English Subscription Prices: Per issue, 6 pence; per year, 6 shillings, post-free.

Philadelphia, January, 1892

THE DAWN OF A HAPPY YEAR

200D cheer, bright prospects and happy homes will never be so abundant as through the year upon the threshold of which we now sland together. A prosperous nation means a happy people, and bever have we, as a country, en-tered upon a year under brighter skies. The abundance in our wheat-fields will carry happiness into our bomes. The distance from the land of the farmer to the most fashionable city partor is not very great in America. In commerce, every in-terest is a spoke of the great national wheel. The line from the smallest shop-keeper, through the larger retailer, the wholesale mer-chant and the banking-house, to the National Treasury is a very direct one. It is a truthchant and the banking-house, to the National Treasury is a very direct one. It is a truthful saying that the small corner grocery reflects the financial condition of a country. A untional panic is first felt in the butcher-shop. And so it is in our individual lives. Every one of our actions finds its reflection in the life of some one cless. No matter how humble may be our surroundings, we have an influence on some other life. Individual good cheor means general happiness. If we are bright we brighten our neighbor; the neighbors an emissary to the community, and the community, in turn, to the great world-at-large.

munity, in turn, to the great world-at-large.
Thus in the year before us we have it pretty runch in our own hands. National advantages are ours; we need only supply the individual elements. The past is valuable only for the lessons it can teach; the present for its opportunities; the future for its possibilities. Whatever the past year may have meant to you make it dead history. But let the New Year be a living issue. With a big, fresh appears deimings with the class water of for-Year be a living issue. With a big, fresh sponge, dripping with the clear water of for-giveness, wipe clean the slate of your heart. Enter the year with a kind thought for every one. You need not kiss the hand that smote you, but grasp it in cordial good feeling, and let the electricity of your own resolves find its connecting current—which very often exists where we think it not. An ill-natured thought where we think it not. An in-naturea throught often makes us unhappier than the person to whom it is directed. A happy mind is an elixir, and as are the spirits of the wife in the home, so will be those of the husband, who in turn will carry them into the outer world. Domestic happiness often colors commercial prosperity. The hearthstone is the corner of the countingroom. An unhappy wife makes a blue mer-chant. As we men five at home, so we work in the outer world.

Therefore, to the thousands, yea, I may say Therefore, to the industries, yea, a may say the million and more of women to whom I speak with these words, let me say: Make the new year a happy one in your home; be bright of disposition, carry your cares easy: let your heart be as sunshine, and your life will give warmth to all around you. And thus will was and yours he happy in circletoen hunwill you and yours be happy in eighteen hun-dred and ninety-two !

THE EDITOR.

S in the last issue of the JOURNAL a number of England's famous women sent messages of Christmas cheer to our renders, so, for this number, some of the great men of England have written their hearty New Year's greetings, Thus, while the women closed the book of the old year, the men open the leaves of the new, and with what grace and courtesy they perform their pleasant task our readers are best able to judge for themselves.

CANON FARRAR'S TRIBUTE TO WOMAN

IF it be true that "the corner-stone of the Commonwealth is the hearthstone," how important is the work of every woman, even in that sphere of family life which many are tempted to despise as too narrow for their energies. Every woman should, indeed, aim at doing good in wider regions of life, and should endeavor by the irresistible force of sweet and silent influence, if in no other way, to raise the silent influence, if in no other way, to raise the whole tone of national thought and conduct. But even if a woman, whether married or unmarried, be "never heard of half a mile from home," the purity and loftiness of her ideal, the devoted unselfishness of her life, may tell with immense and continuous power upon every member of her family. The bright invisible air produces effects more supendous when no whisper of a breeze is heard than all the fury of the passing hurricane; and the influence, conscious and unconscious, of thousands of women entirely unknown to fame, may go to the ennoblement of the moral being of generations yet unborn. Men are, and above all their mothers, tend to make them, by influence which begins with the cradle and ends only with the grave.

Frederick W. Farrars.

THE DEAN OF WESTMINSTER ABBEY

A S the pupil in early youth, as the close friend for forty years of my illustrious predecessor in the guardianship of a building as dear to the citizens of the United States as to the children of our common Mother Countries. try. I bope that the women of America will accept the good wishes for the coming year of one who knows how vast is their influence in shaping the ideal, in forming the character, and in moulding the history of the still youthful nation which shares the birthright of all the memories connected with the Abertal the memories connected with the Abbey of Westminster.

None who enjoy the friendship of Arthur Stanley can forget how the closing years of one so dear to them were brightened by the kindness and hospitality which he received in his visit to the United States in 1878 from so many of those to whom, at your suggestion, I venture to send this brief but hearty New Year's greeting.

6. 6. Bandley.

MR. RIDER HAGGARD'S CORDIAL WISHES

In sending a New Year's greeting to the women of America, I must say that I do so very heartily. There are some who hold the sea in small repute, possibly because their own experience of it has not been happy. Others there be who extol it in terms so vast that the listener, if a mere man, departs wonthat the instance, it a more man, departs won-dering why beings thus superior do not hasten to their rightful place, and more espec-ially to relieve his incapable shoulders of a share of the world's labor. A third old-fashioned party remains, and this writer be-longs to it, which thinks that Providence and Nature have mapped out the functions and sphere of women with sufficient accuracy, and that no efforts of either sex will suffice to re-move those eternal boundary stones. Therefore it is to the women who are content to be women that I send my warmest wishes—to those true women whose hope and happiness lies in their homes, and whose desire it is to rule, not at the polls, the markets, or in Con-gress, but in the hearts of men and children. May they be such as our mothers were: I can wish them no better. May they find love in their homes and infants at their knees and, above everything, may they find religion to help them in their sorrows and to console them when all else fails. And, lastly, may they remember that theirs is the greatest of responsibilities, for they are the potters who mould the clay of character, and as they shape the child so he shall be. And to those to whom such bousehold burdens and rewards are denied, and who must struggle with men to win their daily bread, I give my New Year wish that the weight of work may be lifted from them by some more fitted to bear it, or failing this, that they may find strength for the un-equal fight, patience to persevere, and skill to gain the victory. H. Riden Haggard. gain the victory.

AN ENGLISH AUTHOR'S TRIBUTE

MERICAN women seem to me to be more A. exceed of purpose than those of European countries. I have been told that this opinion arises from my having met only the best American womankind. Be that as it may, such is my impression, and I am glad to record it upon this occasion of sending a New Year line to the record is not the record in the control of sending a New Year line to the record is not the record in the control of sending a New Year line to the record in the control of sending a New Year line to the record in the control of sending a New Year line to the record in the control of sending a New Year line to the record in the control of sending a New Year line to the record in the control of sending a New Year line to the record in the control of sending a New Year line to the record in the control of sending a New Year line to the record in the control of the contr Year line to the women of your country, Thomas Handy.

A HANDFUL OF PLEASANT WISHES

MAY your lovers become your husbands. May you never be troubled by yearnings after the unattainable, nor feel called to a mission you are unable to fulfill; but may you find fragrance in the flowers that grow beside your pathway, and may your duties be your delights.

May the laughing sweetness of your springtime, and the strong sonshine of your sum-merhood, make ripe agreat harvest of love for you to gather in the autumn of your lives, and, thus, may you have a Happy Year! JEROME K. JEROME.

FROM ENGLAND'S WITTIEST WRITER

MY heartiest New Year's greetings to the fair daughters of Jonathan. What I wish them for the year 1892 is embodied in my answer to a beautiful American lady who one day exclaimed in my presence: "How I do wish I were a man!"

"Madame," I replied, "You are ever so much better as you are."

Do remain what you are, dear American ladies; there is very little room for improvement.

MAX O'RELL.

GREETING FROM CHARLES DICKENS'S SON

WARM and heartfelt New Year's greet-A. ing to the women of America from the son of one who, though dead, still lives, a loved and cherished friend, in thousands of American homes.

God's blessing on the daughters and mothers of that great people who, hand in hand with Great Britain and Australia, must surely dominate the world!

CHARLES DICKESS.

SIR EDWIN ARNOLD'S WISH

WISH I were better able to fulfill your wishes by writing a message to the women of America.

What would I say about them as a class? It is very difficult, but since I must answer briefly, I would reply in the Persian word, Afrix; i. e., "Allah make more like them!" EDWIN ARNOLD.

SIR MORELL MACKENZIE'S GREETING

CYNICS are fond of declaring that the old-fashioned Christmas as described and perhaps a little idealized by Charles Dickens, was, with all its boisterous good fellowship, at bottom nothing better than gluttony and intemperance artfully disguised as Christmas virtues. We are told that the whole thing is a relic of burbarism which is slowly but surely dying out among cultured people. I should be sorry if I thought this was true, for the cup of life does not, for most of us, so brim over be sorry if I thought this was true, for the capof life does not, for most of us, so brim over with gladness that we can afford to lose one drop of innocent pleasure. Happiness is the most powerful of sil tonics for the soul not less than for the body, and I hold him a hater of his kind who would shut out even a single ray of joyful light from the dark places
"where men sip and hear each other grown."
Into the higher symbolism of Christmas I do not seek to penetrate here, but apart from its more sacred associations it seems to me to be above all other suniversaries in our calendar the festival of wholesome human mirth, human kindliness and compassion for suffering. kindliness and compassion for suffering, human forgiveness and reconciliation. It is, or should be, a senson of new birth—of re-kindling the dying embers of the finer feelings of our nature, of love for kindred and country, of charity and sympathy for all men, and even for our "poor relations" of the ani-mal world. "Good-will to men "should not, mal world. "Good-will to men "should not, of course, he reserved as a moral watchword for Christmas or the New Year Day alone; it should be our rule of conduct in our daily lives, but silently and without too much open profession. The holiday season is, however, the season for giving expression to the sentiment in every way in our power; for, as it were, renewing our outh of allegiance to the sovereignty of humanity, the appropriate time for our recognition of all the duties to our brother men which it lays upon us. In this spirit I send all the readers of Tuz Lantus' Home Journal, and the members of every home, however humble, in the great American Com-monwealth, the heartlest of New Year's greet-ings. Morrel Mackenzie.

MR. FROUDE'S GRACEFUL WORDS

WHAT am I that you ask me to send a message to the ladies of America? Have I not found them everywhere witty, beautiful and delightful? And what more can I ask since I have not to pay their dress-maker's bills, except to wish for them a year of happiness and content during 1892?

JAMES ASTRONY FROUDS

MR. YATES IS CERTAINLY GALLANT

I AM GLAD of the privilege to send the kindest of regards and the heartlest of good wishes on New Year's Day to the women of America from whom I received hospitality and kindness immeasurable, and who seemed to me to be in their own country even more delightful than they are here, where they are decreed irresistible. EDMUND YATES

WOMEN AS THE WORLD'S MINISTERS

DLEASE express my hearty sympathy with The noble women in America who, in public as well as in private, are advocating the cause of temperatice, purity and religion, and I hope that in the new year their fondest hopes may reach fruition.

I think it is generally to be regretted that the mighty influence of woman's ministry should so long have been lost to the Church should so long have been lost to the Church through prejudice. Eight hundred years be-fore Christ, the God, by Joel, said: "I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh, and my sons and my daughters shall prophesy;" women as well as men shall preach. On the day of Pentecost the apostles were gathered together "with the women;" "and there appeared unto them cloven tongues, like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them:" on the women. it sat upon each of them;" on the women, therefore; "and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance;" women, therefore, as well as apostles. And Peter said: "This is that which was spoken by the Prophet Joel, "I will pour our my Spirit and your sons and your daughters shall prophese." NEWMAN HALL.

THE LORD MAYOR OF LONDON

COMMEND to the women of America the A example set to every woman by the Queen of England.

THE LORD MAYOR OF LONDON.

FROM THE COUNTESS OF ABERDEEN

S a most fitting conclusion to the galaxy A s a most utting visited above, it gives the editor great pleasure to publish the following message of boliday cheer from Her Ladyship. the Countess of Aberdeen, which arrived too late for the Christmas Jounnal. One of the most charitable and lovely of English gentlewomen, Lady Aberdeen is, likewise, one of the most earnest friends of American women:

M OST gladly do I take advantage of the opportunity, kindly given me by your editor, of expressing my most hearty good wishes to the women of America for Christmas and the New Year.

How would an American editor of a hundred years ago have been reparted who asked a woman of Great Britain to send a holiday message to the women of America? What a happy change has come over the spirit of the scene since those times. Nowariays, we in England may claim to be allowed to rejoics with you that your forefathers refused to allow their freedom to be trampled on, that they proved themselves true sons and daughters of low their freedom to be trampled on, that they proved themselves true sons and daughters of the race from which they sprang in championing successfully the cause of liberty; and you in America show, on your part, that you are not unmindful of the blessing bestowed on the heritage of a great and inspiring past, in the possession of which you and we may together pride ourselves.

And can any thought make the old except

And can any thought make the old sweet Christmas message of "Pence on earth and good-will to men" come home to our hearts with a renewed life and vigor more than the good-will to men" come home to our hearts with a renewed life and vigor more than the thought of all that this renewal of the recognition of the tie of brotherhood which unities us, and which has come in recent years to us, the two great branches of the English-speaking race, may mean to the world?

Already we are learning to know one another in a way never dreamst of by our parents, and every year strengthens the bonds which are formed in the strongest way by the intermingting of the members of our great philanthropic and religious societies. You send as workers and speakers who give a fresh and stirring impulse to our work; and you welcome among you with a cordiality never to be forgotten our workers and leaders. We feel that much the same problems face us both in the old world and in the new; that we hight a common foe, that we serve a common Master, and that all our labors may be vastly forwarded if we make common cause and learn all that we can from another. What a grand new union is thus almost unconsciously being formed, and how magnificent may be its results! We pride ourselves on our constricts and on our race; and yet I think we scarcely yet have a glimmering of the grandeur of the vocation to which God has called us, the English-speaking people of the world. If we unite together in strennous and steadfast resolve that His will shall be done on earth, that His kingdom may come, who can withstand us? If ever a divine call was made namifest to any people in the world's history, surely it is to us. And is it not also clear that on us English-speaking women rests much of surely it is to us. And is it not also clear that on us English-speaking women rests much of the responsibility of whether we, as a race, obey that call? Are we using our influence as sisters, wives, and above all as mothers, to in-spire our children and those amongst whom we live, not only with an intense and patriotic pride and love for their own country, and desire to serve her, but also with that greater ambition which comes with the sense of beionging to a race to whom the great Father of all has entrusted in these later days, in large measure, the destinies of the world? All re-membrances of past wrongs and present causes for jealousies and strife must keep away if we for jealousies and strife must keep away if we live in the remembrance of the greatness of our mission, and the sacredness of our vocation. And if I am not trespassing on the liberty which your editor has accorded me, I would pass on to you this Christmas message which is ringing in my ears, of how we weren may help forward the redemption of the world by doing our atmost to bring up the rising generation with so passionate a desire for such a union of the heart of Englishspeaking nations all over the world as will speaking nations all over the world as will enable them to go forward without a hindrance to the accomplishment of God's grand purposes in and through them.

ISHURL APERDERN.

"Perhaps it may turn out a song, Perhaps turn out a sermon.

WHAT TO EXPECT FROM ME

O YOU know-but of onrse you do; nt your time of life people know everything—but do you believe, which is quite a different thing, that a sermon which has been de-livered before an audience of convicts in the penitentiary is the sermon to preach to the congregation of the most fashionable church in America? Well, it is. And the little talk your superintend-ent made to the boys in the reform school is the very thing for the Sunday-school in which you are a teacher, and I expect it would do your class of girls ever so much good. You see, I have made a study of this thing for more years than you have been going to church, and I went into it more profoundly than ever before assuming charge of a special depart-ment in an able and influential journal. The ment in an abse and influential journal. The result of observation has convinced me that the population of this world is made up largely of people. If that be the rankest heresy that ever broke up a church fair, I will maintain it, though I be cast out of the syna-gegue for it.

NOW, I have traveled a great deal, and travel, as every one knows, corrects one's judgment, enlarges one's views, and broadens one intellectually. People who travel always say that to people who stay at home; then they quote a remark about pugan Rome from the guide book, and look "broad," and stand quite still to let you admire their breadth, which is sometimes a breadth that would look better turned, and would be broader measured lengthwise. But I have been about a goodish bit—doesn't that sound English and traveled? Well, it is; it has been around the world and back several times before I got hold of it. I have traveled considerably, and ought to know, and really do know, a great deal; I am afraid to tell you how much, lest you should feel too keenly your own narrow limitations. I have been to Kickapoo Town and Harker's Corners; once I drove to Toulon, Stark County, and in all these countries I found scarcely a living human being except people. People! why they're common as grass. Peorla County used to be full of them when I was a boy. I've seen hundreds of them; I suppose that is one reason why they never awe me any more. Great people—that is, people who look wise hundreds of them; I suppose that is one reason why they never awe me any more. Great people—that is, people who look wise and talk base, and lift their eyebrows, and say "Ah!" except at other times, when they say "Ah?" with a circumfiex that fairly runs up and down your back; people who are afraid to walk very near the edge of the earth lest they should tip it over and slide off. I used to be afraid of these people, and take off my hat and say "Sir," and "Ma'am," to them. But soon I observed that they were the same kind of people I had always known. Just like the man who kept store in Mossville, and the woman who run the church fairs out on Orange Prairie, and the girl who taught school at Richwoods. at Richwoods.

I ONCE met a real "lord," He was the living image of Bud Jennison, who used to come to Peoria and hold auction sales of rare paintings by the old masters. I've seen him knock down a genuine Raphael, or a Paul Veronese, for two dollars and eighty cents, without the frame, that you couldn't buy in New York to-day for five dollars. He was bald, too, the lord was. I was bitterly disappointed with him, but as I grew older I became reconciled to him, because I knew that neither peer nor auctioneer could help being people. Then I was introduced to a French nobleman. He was an ambassador of some kind; I forget just what his title was, that is, I don't just just what his title was, that is, I don't just forget it, but I can't exactly spell it, In print, I can spell it easily enough in writing, where I can make all the letters alike, but it is different in print. Well, I told him he reminded me so much of a friend, Hi Olmstead, who run a fish-boat down at Copperas Creek. He is dead now—the ambassador. I thoughtlessly spoke French in conversing with him, and he tilled himself trainer to an destroy of the little of the second states. killed himself trying to understand me. It was my fault. I did not think that he badn't been here long enough to learn our French.

So observing more and more that people everywhere resembled people in other places, I fell into the habit of regarding all men and women as people. If I had my life to live over again, and if I have anything to say about it, I certainly won't, I think I would not go outside of Peorla County in my travels. They have about the same kind of people there you will find anywhere. A man who understands all the people in Peorla County can teach school anywhere. You understand, then, that when you come into this corner of the Journal, you are never to expect anything unusual. when you are never to expect anything unusual, or especially adapted to any special class of people. Very well, then; we are glad to see each other. You are welcome; sit close to the door; there are no cushions on those pews, but you can sneak out if you don't like the sermon. That's why they come so much higher.

WOMAN YESTERDAY AND TO-DAY

HERE was a time, not a century ago, when women were considered a race of beings altogether different from men; when no woman could sharpen a woman could sharpen a pencil, tie a parcel or sing bass; when about the only out-of-door game—it was called a "game" in bitter derision—in which young girls, between the ages of twelve and forty-two, were permitted to indulge, was a melancholy performance called "grace-boops." Boys were sometimes compelled to assist at this lodge of sorrow, but only in case of a dearth of girls, and in the presence of the old folk, who had grown tired of playing "Copenhagen."

hagen."

But now, woman can do anything she tries, even to singing bass in her own quartette of girls, so that weak man is a superfluity in the choir. She has harnessed her grace-hoops tandem, and made a bicycle of them; she rows, she fishes, she shoots, insometh that all men, and it may be that some grace-hoops tandem, and made a bicycle of them; she rowa, she fishes, she shoots, insomuch that all men, and it may be that some game, fear her shooting (joke); she weareth her brother's hat, and his outing cap; his shirt front, his four-in-hand tie, and many things that are her brother's. She is stronger than her mother, and can stand a great deal more rest; she is quite as happy, and far more independent. She hangs on to the strap in the street-car when her mother had a sent in the omnibus if every man rode outside in the rain. She gets jostled and pushed about in the crowd, when some bare-headed man, howing low, used to make way for her grand-mother. With weary patience she stands in line at the ticket-office; woe is she if she presume on the privilege of sex to step in ahead of a man; she gets hustled back to her place. Much she hath gained by freedom; somewhat, also, hath she lost. She cannot cat her cake and keep it. Still, if she didn't cat it, it would become fearfully stale, or some-body else would get it. And cake is only good to eat, anyhow. Scarcely would she exchange her independence for deference and helplessness. Her loss is more in form than fact. Men are more unselfishly chivalrous toward her than ever their fathers were; but this hurrying age of gallop and gulp has trampled upon the deliberate grace and studied elegance of a lazier day, when men bowed lower and did less; when men abandoned lonfing and went to work, they quit wearing lace at their wrists and rapiers at their side; they ceased to talk in blank verse, and conversed in plain prose; they cut off their long ringlets, and the curling-tongs were dethroned by the clippers. by the clippers.

HER LOSS AND HER GAIN In all these changes woman has had to yield something good for something better. "Woman's sphere," whatever that ever was has almost disappeared, and our sister can claim scarcely a place in the world's work and thought that is exclusively her own. She and thought that is exclusively her own. She has no monopoly in dressmaking and millinery; the animal who used to make Bome how every time he missed a shirt button is no longer dependent upon her for one item of his raiment. Oh, once in a while a man comes to town whose wife makes his pantaloous and cuts his hair; but he is usually sent to jail for it and warned not to do it again. In some countries he would be beheaded, but in this Christian land the law is merciful. The "Poetess" should be laid away with the "Female Seminary," which in the backwoods still lingers superfluous on the stage. "Out west?" Yes; out west. And down east. Did you think all the backwoods were out west? You will run into them in the suburbs You will run into them in the suburbs of Boston, a little way out of Washington, and around New York and Philadelphia. Also, right in town. We have, in the national councils, a board of "Lady Managers," although why there is no board of "Gentlemen Managers" does not appear. If this sort of thing should get fairly started, we may yet have a "Female Columbian Exposition," which may the gods forbid. In these days when the fields of thought and labor for men and women lie so close together, are so often identical, a poet is a poet, and an editor is an editor. It is perfectly natural that Edward W. Bok should be the editor of The Laders' Home Journal, while Mrs. George Archibald is editor of "The Young Men's Journal." Woman has entered the bar, but there are no female courts in which she may practice female female courts in which she may practice female law. She stands in the pulpit, but there is no female gospel for a preacheress to proclaim to female sinners. She dresses almost as sensibly as the men, although she makes more fuse about it. When the wisdom of Chantauqua about it. When the wisdom of Chantauquia finds a tunic which the men threw nway centuries ago, she hails it as a "discovery" in dress reform, and bids the world behold, admire and wonder. We are ready to behold, willing to admire, but there's nothing wonderful about it. Your grandfather wore one just like it at threshing time, and a very good miment it was to keep him from making a porcupine of himself with wheat beards.

SOME THINGS THAT HAVEN'T CHANGED

A Nold Woman one day found a Rode Girl sitting in her favorite Apple Tree, enjoying the delicate flavor of Stolen Fruit. "Rash Maid," exclaimed the Old Woman, "do you not know what happened to your Grandmother for eating Fruit without pernsission?" And then, in soft and persuasive language, somewhat dislocated by the instability of a misfit Upper Set, the Old Woman kindly requested the Young Scapegrace to come down and receive the worst Trouncing she ever danced under. But the Rude Girl, who was one of the Tulu tribe, and could whistle tunes like a Boy, replied that it was yet several hours to Train time, and, beside, she was not going that way. "Then," said the Old Woman, for it was she, "if Soft Words have no effect upon you, I must resort to Violence." So saying, she whistled in an asthmatic, sibilant manner for a Large and Ferocious Dog, which she said was kept unchained behind the barn. At this Dire Threat, however, the Rude Girl, who was well acquainted with the premises, and knew there was not an animal about the place except a toothless Cat, much older than the Woman, langhed in derisive accents, and started in on another Apple. "Oho," quoth the Old Woman. "You will not come down for threats? Then, your Bumps be upon your own Head." With this, she gathered her apron full of stones, and proceeded to bombard the Tree. The first stone went wide, and broke a window in the Schoolhouse over the way. The second described a reversed curve and smote the Cat, which was purring in the sunshine on the door-step. Taking deliberate sim at the Marauder, she fired a third stone, which met the School-Ma'am as she came running out to see what was the matter, and catching her under the trimmed side of her hat Grassed her. At this, the Old Woman shrieked and ran into the house, while the Rude Girl, overcome with Convulsive Laughter, fell backward from the limb, and dropping heavily to the ground, would have Broken her Back, had she not leaped so quickly to her feet to see if anybody was looking. Having assured herself that

ADJUSTABLE NEW YEAR RESOLVES

WILL get up and dress when the breakfast beil rings.

I will not complain when every-thing goes to suit me.

I will treat my wife as politely as though she was a perfect stranger.

I will strive to be more thoughtful for my own comfort, that others, seeing me happy, may also endeavor to be contented, and thus I will be a missionary for good.

I will not spend so much money this year on the useless frivolities of Easter bonnets, spring wraps, and other vanities that draw the thoughts of my wife and daughters from leaster things.

I will remember the poor if I have to make a memorandum to that effect every morning. The memory can be greatly strengthened by practice; it does not cost anything, and brings practice; it does not cost anything, and brings a pleasant glow to the approving conscience. I will endeavor to impress upon my family the duty of greeting, with cheerful voices and laughing faces, the father of a family when he returns home, wearied with the depressing cares and labors of a long business day.

I will go out by myself oftener, in order that my family may enjoy the tranquil and improving pleasure of a long, uninterrupted evening in the quiet sanctity of a happy home. It will be a great sacrifice, but I must think of them first.

I must be more unselfish, and take better

I must be more unselfish, and take better care of myself that I may long be spared to be the joy and light of the home which it has pleased an appreciative providence to bestow upon one in every way worthy of the blessing so wisely ordered.

so wisely ordered.

I will pay my pew rent this year, if I have to deny myself a new overcost, and my children have to go without shoes. I feel that we have not heretofore sufficiently denied ourselves in little luxuries for the sake of maintaining a good appearance at church. In my luscious mellow mood I am beginning to think differently about it.

I will be, in all things, an affectionate husband, a loving father, a good provider; and I will see and referred to the state of the sake of the s will rear up a family that will love and respect me, and render to me prompt and cheerful obedience, with perfect deference to my wishes and thoughtful regard for my comfort, or I will break their backs in the attempt.

THAT PECULIAR KIND OF SILENCE

A LFRED," said Mrs. Lovidovie, "you A do not love me as you did in years gone by; you no longer call me pet names; you have ceased to coin new terms of endear-ment for me; years ago all the newspapers in the world could not have kept you from my side for one evening. In those happy days you were....." you were-

"I was a young ass," grunted Mr. Lovi-dovie, from behind his paper.
"True! true! true!" sighed the neglected wife, "that's just what I was going to say." And a long time afterward she added, "You

And a long time afterward side added, "I on are older, now."

And Lovidovic read the same paragraph in the paper over and over, and tried hard to think of something to say, and couldn't just think of it right then, and so kept on think-ing, and thinking and thinking, and thinking, and wanted to peep over the paper and look at her, but was afraid she might be looking at him. And he couldn't think of anything to say back until some time the following day, and then something told him it was too late.

The

Daylight

Take off shade, take off chimney, apply the match, put on chimney, burn your fingers, put on shade, scorch it. No, no; nothing of the kind. Light your Daylight without removing shade or chimney and do it as quick as a wink. Send for our A B C book on Craighead & Kintz Co., 33 Barclay St., N. Y.

OUR NEW TRAIN.

We take pleasure in announcing that our line is now open for travel West

Via OMAHA and LINCOLN

and our Through Vestibuled Train is called

"THE BIG 5 LIMITED."

It leaves CHICAGO daily at 10.00 p. m.; arriving at DENVER 7.40 a. m., COLO-RADO SPRINGS 7.30 a.m. and PUEBLO 9.15.

Returning, this fast train is called

"The World's Fair Special,"

And leaves DENVER daily at 8.10 p. m.; arriving at CHICAGO at 7.45 a. m.

The New Bonte shortens our mileage to Denver very materially and the new trains are models for beauty and convenience, and leave and arrive at these great cities at hours practical for the tourist, and the right bour for the budness man.

Solid Vestibuled Trains are still run over our former lines via Kannas City and St. Joseph, and the elegant service heretofore given on these routes by "The Great Rock Island" will continue.

JNO. SEBASTIAN, Gen't Richet and Pose'r Age E. ST. JOHN, General Manager.

Paste This in Your Scrap Book.

A Simple Menu

FAMILY DINNER.

Chicken Soup (Cowdrey's)

Broiled Tenderloin of Beel "Cowdrey's Succotash"

Roast Quall with Watercress Celery Salad

"Cowdrey's Plum Pudding" Coffee

Have You a Camera? IF NOT, EXAMINE OURS.

E. & H. T. ANTHONY & CO. 591 BROADWAY, N. Y.

MAPETACTUREDS AND PROGRESS OF PHOTOGRAPHIC INSTRUMENTS AND SUPPLIES.

49 Years established in this line of busine Amateur Outfits in great variety, from 87.50 up. send for Hustrated Catalogue, or call and examine.

BOSTON LINEN, BOSTON BOND, and BUNKER HILL, perior in quelity, moderate in . If your delier feet and there will foregree of the series will foregree you suit foregree you surplies from

SAMUEL WARD CO., 40 & M Franklin St., Roston, Mass

PATENTS TRANSLIN R. SOUGH, Washington

The purpose of this Department is to bring the members of the Order of The King's Daughters and its President into closer relations by personal and familiar "Talks" and "Chats." All letters from the "Daughters" bearing upon this one and special purpose only, should be addressed to MRS. BOTTOME, care of The LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, and she will be glad to receive them. Please do not, however, send letters to MRS. BOTTOME concerning membership in the Order, or business communications of any nature. All such should be addressed direct to the headquarters of the order, 158 West Twenty-third street, New York city, and prompt attention will be given.

HAPPY New Year to all! And it will be that to all! who are determined to look up and not down! A Happy New Year! Some of you will be happy in a subdued way; happy because at last you find yourself "Slow rounding into calm." The years have been stormy with many of you, but the sea of life has become quieter, and there is a deeper meaning in "Thy will be done." Then some of you will find this year the most blessed of all, for you "will see your Pilot face to face when you have crossed the bar."

AS WE ENTER UPON THE NEW YEAR

Now, I want my circle to come very close to me. You are very near my heart. I have earnest words to say to you, young and old, rich and poor, sad and gay. I think, dear ones, we ought all to take a broader outlook at the commencement of this New Year, and at the commencement of this New Year, and see how much more we can do to lighten the loads so many have to bear. I wish the spirit that a dear little child of an intimate friend of mine showed this past summer in the White Mountains could come to us. She had seen a very little girl "favored" like herself, take a seat beside a poor little cripple and try to comfort her in her own little way. My little E—went back with her nurse to her mother and laid her head on her mother's shoulders, and her tears fell fast over her sweet face as she said: "Oh, mamma, I have never loved like that!" Dear child, the Spirit of the Cross, the emblem of which she wore, was entering into her little heart. As the mother told me, I seemed to see that child grown to be a woman, and when I thought of her as having the love that would care for the unfortunate and relieve them, I joyed in our Creed, tunate and relieve them, I joyed in our Creed, which simply means unselfishness.

RESOLUTIONS CARVED IN SILVER

Do you not think that at the commence-ment of this New Year, dear members of my circle, our real concern as a circle should be our love for humanity? I know in of my circle, our feat concern as a circle should be our love for humanity? I know in these five years of our life as a Sisterhood, it has dawned on us that we are really to do as our King did when He dwelt among us; that we are only to think of the Father's will; that we are to "go about doing good;" that we are to feed the hungry, visit the sick and tell them of the love wherewith they are loved. I am glad that so many have a little secret connected with the Cross they wear. I was so interested in a dear girt whose father and mother had left her, and she wore the Cross to remind her of the cross she had determined to take up, because, as she said, she did not want to feel there was no family altar left. Afterward, when traveling in a foreign land, her maid noticed her Cross and asked her what it meant. She replied: "I do not think I can tell you now." "How could I tell her," she said to me, "it meant unselfishness and thoughtfulness for others when I felt she must have seen the lack of them all in me." others when I felt she must have seen the lack of them all in me." Ah, as I looked into her face I knew her trying to be like Him had not been in vain.

WHAT SOME OF YOU HAVE DONE ND now, for fear I forget, I want to thank A ND now, for lear I torget, I want to think you for sending the means for those less fortunate than yourselves to get the little Silver Cross. How I wish it were possible for you to know the after-history of the Cross you have given. Maybe in the revelations of the future you will know. A friend of mine once said to me she thought the mansion was given we did by our model. sand to me she thought the mansion was given us but the furnishing we did by our good works, and every good deed was perhaps a new picture in the mansion we are going to enter by and by. If it is so, some people are go-ing to have beautifully furnished mansions, and some will be rather bare, but, after all, it is the friends who visit our houses here, or in the Beyond, that will make our homes the loveliest! One girl wrote me: "Is there just a little corner in your heart for me, I am so lonesome?" Dear child! she made me think of what George MacDonald said, "that God had a place for each one in Himself, because he never made two alike, and if we did not occupy the room no one else ever could." Do occupy the room no one else ever could." Do you not think it lovely that we have our own place in God? I do not think it strange, when one remembers God is like a mother. My mother had a place for each of us, and it al-ways seemed to me that the youngest had a peculiar place, and she left him her New Tes-tament when she died. So Christ said: "I know my sheep and am known of mine!" It is this feeling of personal relationship between God and the individual that makes our religion what it is. People do not hunger for formal theological systems; the food that nourishes the lonely heart is love; and love is a thing of relationships.

THE SUN BEHIND THE CLOUDS

THE SUN BEHIND THE CLOUDS

NOW, there is something very vital I want to speak with you about at this time. You seel your imperfectness, you have grown so slowly, you are so very far from being what you ought to be, that you are in danger of being discouraged, and I must try to see that you will be some day what you want to be? Do, do keep thinking: "Well, I shall not always be what I am now; some day I shall be beautiful!" Every one of my circle must think this, He will make me the woman He wants me to be; the woman I long to be, must think this, He will make me the woman He wants me to be; the woman I long to be. I do not say how or when, but some time, somehow. Now, promise me you will think this. I know how disappointed you have been, I know all about the hot tears, and maybe some of you have said, "I shall never hope again." Oh yes, you will, you will hope in the One that all the other friends meant. I am so sorry for some of you, life has been so hard. Yes, I know you have been crushed, but most everything has to be crushed to be made useful, I find. I cannot say I under-stand it, but I do believe in a God of love, who stand it, but I do believe in a God of love, who loves everybody, even me, even you. Strange that on this glad day I turn instinctively to the sorrowing, but I do. The glad ones do not need me as the sad ones do, and I have found out that there are many sad people who read THE LADIS' HOME JOURNAL, and I serve a Master who said "He bath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted," and who invited especially the weary to come unto Him. So I am following Him if I turn to those who need comfort most. comfort most.

THE DAWNING YEAR FROM THE SICK-BED

To the dear "Shut Ira," I would also give a special New Year's Greeting! I want to give you a helpful thought at this happy New Year's time, when you are saying "If I was not 'shut in'; If I could only go on errands of mercy." of mercy."
The thought is this. Christ could not do

The thought is this. Christ could not do when He was here on earth all He wanted to do, or felt He could have done under other circumstances. He had His limitations, but because He could not do all He wanted to do, He did not stop and do nothing. It is written "He could not do any mighty work because of their unbelief," but He laid His hands on a few sick folks. You see the lesson—do all you can. You are limited, that is true, but work close up to the limitations! Say: "If I cannot leave this rolling chair then I will do all I can in this chair, If I cannot leave my bed, I will do all I can in this bed." If you say, my hands are so drawn out of shape with the rheumatism I cannot do anything with them; well, you can smile. You can be patient with those who care for you. You can contribute something, and in your case it will undoubtedly be costly, and God will know how costly.

As I write I am thinking of a beautiful "Shut In" who, as she says, "Sits in the vineyard." And as I think of all she does as she sits in her rolling chair, or lies in her bed, all the good work she keeps going, all the literature she scatters, her work seems so yast.

sits in her rolling chair, or lies in her bed, all the good work she keeps going, all the literature she scatters, her work seems so vast.

But you say, "she has money, and if I had money I could do good, too!" Well, I admit the wonderful works that only money can accomplish, but it cannot do every thing. And many good works that will count in God's sight can be done with little or no money. All that is needed is for you to have the sweet words said again of you, as He said of another woman—"She hath done what she could."

So I wish you dear "Shut Ins" a Happy
New Year "In His Name."

New Year "In His Name."

MY MOTTO FOR THE NEW YEAR

LMOST my entire life I have taken a passage of Scripture to be, as it were, a to for the year. Little did I dream I should ever have so many to share my motto with as I have to-day, in this invisible circle that gathers round me now. The words I have chosen and which I give to you, embody the spirit of our order, and were uttered by our King—"I am among you as one that serveth," If this thought takes possession of you, if you strive to live it out, your very pres-ence will be a service. There are people whom just to have around is a benediction; but you just to have around is a benediction; but you may depend upon it those people are the unselfish people! Hold this motto close to you at this New Year. "I am among you as one that serveth." Christ said it, let us say it; Christ acted it, let us act it! There is a hard battle before some of us, and it is just here; shall I be selfish or unselfish; shall I prefer my comfort or another's? I am sure, dear daughters, a great many of your troubles will disappear as your selfishness disappears. We have many circles with the name: "Kindly Affectioned Circle:" let us have more circles called "In honor preferring one another," or circles living up to that spirit. circles living up to that spirit.

There are untold depths of joy in this spirit.

Whittier has it in his Autumn Song. (How I wish every member of my circle, especially those who are approaching the autumn time of life would learn it by heart!)

"What matters, mine or another's day, So the right word be said and life the sweeter made?" so the right word to said and life the sweeter made?"
Let us, however, make it as sweet as we can.
Let me repeat at the beginning of this New Year what I have said so often; Do not despise the day of small things. Do you know that the great organizations throughout our land for the removal of poor children from the heavy air of the city to the country grew out of an attempt of a single woman to save one dying baby? Suppose she had said, "I cannot save all, why should I strive to save one?"

BOYS AND GIRLS AS WORKERS

GREAT poet once wrote: "He prayeth best who loveth best, Both bird, and man, and beast."

There has been formed in Boston a band called the "American Band of Mercy," the pledge of which reads: "I will try to be kind to all harmless living creatures and try to protect them from cruel creatures and try to protect them from cruel usage."

Here is a work the boys and girls of our order could be interested in. The founder of this band, Mr. George T. Angel, of 19 Milk street, Boston, says: "Everybody, old or young, who wants to do a kind act to make the world happier or better, is invited to address him." Every boy or girl that possibly can should read "Black Beauty," and get a copy of the little paper published in the interest of dumb animals. Here is real work for any circle of little boys: to spread these piedges among their playmates and companpledges among their playmates and compan-

A LITTLE CHILD SHALL LEAD THEM

HAVE learned so many lessons from my I. own children and the children of my friends, that I think I will tell some of them to you as we meet month after month. There are so many little children in our Order, and I am hoping that they will lead those who love them most to the One who gave them the beautiful children.

beautiful children.

I looked one morning at a little girl as she went from her high chair to her father and asked him to stoop down. He did so, and she pinned the little bit of purple ribbon on his cost and said: "Now, papa, you are one of the King's Sons, aren't you happy?" I knew he was happy he had such a child, and a silent prayer went up that he might recognize his relationship to the Father. I noticed, when he left for business down town, he had the purple ribbon on which the child had put there.

O, what opportunities we have to plant the O, what opportunities we have to plant the nod seed of the kingdom in the hearts of the little children. I could fill this entire page in telling the beautiful things I have seen and heard from little children.

HOW TO WORK I. H. N.

ONSTANTLY there come to me letters, and ONSIANTLE there come to me letters, and people call on me to know if we cannot relieve this and that case of distress. I stepped into our office the other day and one of the clerks said to a lady "Here is Mrs. Bottome, she will give you the information you desire." The lady told me of a poor, old woman who needed assistance, and asked me if I would see that she was helped. I found that the lady was interested in the case, so I that the lady was interested in the case, so I asked her if there were any circles of the King's Daughters in her church. She said she thought not. Then I said, the way for you to do is to call a circle around you, who will take the case of the old woman as their work. If they have no money then they can will take the case of the old woman as their work. If they have no money then they can put their heads together to see how they can earn money, and young people are very in-genious; they will use their hands and make fancy articles, and have a sale, perhaps. The lady had never thought of that way of help-ing the poor, old woman, but she saw it all in less than five minutes, and thanked me, And I have no doubt the deer old would is being taken. have no doubt the dear old soul is being taken cure of. Form a circle for the need you see. I have to reiterate it that we have no money at the center, and all the circles have their at the center, and all the circles have their individual work, but if you will take our idea and work it out, you can do so much. And there are such splendid opportunities for do-ing. I am often at my wits' end to see how supply and demand can be brought together, and I could very soon go into the business of keeping an intelligence office.

WILL YOU UNITE WITH ME IN THIS?

Will You unite with ME in this?

I Want my circle, which is becoming very large, to unite with me this New Year in reading the 13th chapter of Corinthians every Sunday, and then we shall have it to live on through the week. And I want you to take in the thought that there is in God the love for you, only infinitely greater, that in this chapter we are exhorted to have for one another. You need to think there is a love for you that "beareth all things, endureth all things," and as you come more and more to things," and as you come more and more to realize His love, it will be easier for you to bear with others and hope for others. You will find a perfect outfit for your interior life and out-ward life for 1892 in this chapter. And it is fathomless; you can never outgrow it. From month to month, we can tell each other how much more it is becoming to us, and you can so simplify it that the little children in your families and circles can be made to understand it, for little children as well as big ones have to learn to bear and endure. Your loving sister In His Name,

Calendar for 1892 is

Useful:-Because it shows plainly the days and dates of each month and the moon's phases.

Instructive: Because it contains Schumann's celebrated Rules for Young Musicians.

Beautiful:-Because the six sheets of card, each 9x11 inches, are handsomely designed, lithographed in four colors, and bound together with silk cord.

Should you want to buy a new plane or exchange your square plane for an upright, sometime, we will send you the Calendar if you will mention where this advertisement was seen and enclose a two-cent stamp

THE JOHN CHURCH CO., Cinemanti, O.

SELF-PLAYING

SYMPHONY.

Imitates Flutes, Violine, Horns, etc. Anyons can operate it and obtain effects that no three artists could possibly do with their flagres. You can play most difficult mists with ease. Simply work the Pedels and stops, the instrument does all the rest. Can't tell you about it here. Our estalogue will explain. Send for it. Organs of every description.

WILCOX & WHITE ORGAN CO., Meriden, Conn. Represented by the old-established dealers everywhere

PALACE

Over 60,000 sold during the last 20 years.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

THE LORING & BLAKE ORGAN CO.,

WORCESTER, MASS.

High in quality. Beautiful designs and finish Reasonable prices and terms, both wholesale and re-iall. You will do wisely to find out about those good before buying others. Catalogues free. Address

GEO. P. BENT, MANUFACTURER, CHICAGO, U. S. A.

ESTABLISHED IN 1851.

29,000 SOLD

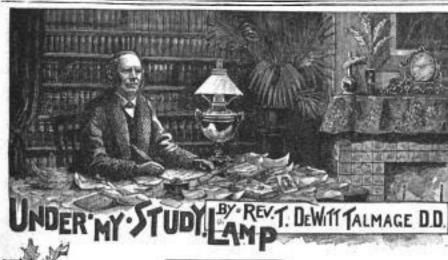

chicate as that of a Concert Grand Plano; the CAPO D'ASTRO BAR, which sustains that beautiful eing quality of tone, so wanting in most Upright Planosthe KOUSE PERSON PLDAL, which is an absolute proceeding quality of tone, so wanting into prisons and making havon with the felia. Seld on the most accommodating havon with the felia. Seld on the most accommodating havon with the felia. Seld on the most accommodating havon with the felia. Seld on the most accommodating havon with the felia. Seld on the most accommodating havon with the felia. Seld on the most accommodating terms. Delivered in your house FILES OF EXPENSE and salf-salf-factor guaranteed. Old instruments taken in vacchange. Catalogues and full information mailed free.

VOSE & SONS PIANO CO. 120 TREMONT STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

SYMPHONION

PLAYS 1000 TUNES. FRED. H. SANDER, Digney be by Google

HEN these words are read the holiday festivities of another year shall have passed by, congratula-tions have been given, the Christmas trees have been taken down, or have cast all their fruit, vacations over, the children returned to school. the friends that came to spend the holidays have gone in the rail-train, and the Christmas of the year 1891 shall, like unto the year itself, be a thing of the past. With the old behind us, we look at the child before us!

THE CHILD-1892.

THE CHILD—1892.

NONE of us can tell what the child will be. That it will have an eventful future is assured. It will be a year of mirth and a year of sadness, a year of prayer and supplication. It will langh, sing, weep, grow and die! The old year died in giving birth to the new, as the life of Jane Seymour, the English queen, departed when that of her son, Edward VI, dawned. The old year was a queen—the new is a king. The grave of the one and the cradle of the other are side by side. At such a time, on the threshold of another year, we review, we wonder and we contemplate; only a genius at stupidity does not At such a time, on the threshold of another year, we review, we wonder and we contemplate; only a genius at stupidity does not think at such a time. To many of us the year of 1892 will be a memorable one. The spring grass may be cleft by the spade to let us down to our resting-place; or while the summer grain is falling to the sickle we may be harvested for another world; or while the autumnal leaves are flying in the November gale we may fade and fall; or the driving sleet may cut the faces of the black-tasseled horses that pull us out in our last ride. It may be the year in which our body and soul part—the year in which for us time ends and eternity begins. All other years as nothing; the year in which you were born, the year in which your child died, the year in which your mother or father died—all of them of less importance than the last year of your life. Fifteen hundred and forty-six was a memorable year, because in it Benjamin West died; eighteen hundred and fifty-two was a marked year, because in it Wellington died; eighteen hundred and fifty-six was a marked year, because in it Hugh Miller died. But what are these years to us in comparison to the year of 1892, if it shall prove to be the year in which we shall die? we shall die?

MAXIMS FOR THE NEW YEAR

MAXIMS FOR THE NEW YEAR

I DO not point out this fact to you that you shall this year be mournful. Make it the best year of all your life—the brightest, the happlest and the best. Imbue your heart with the freshness of the morning, your soul with the sparkle of the dawn. Resolve by good deeds and thoughts to make this the most triumphant year of your life. As a series of short maxims to carry with you through this year, let me give you these:

Make every day begin and end with God. Be content with what you have.

Have a hearty, joyful family altar in your domestic circle.

domestic circle. Fill your home with as much good reading and bright music as your means will allow Think ill of none, but well of all.
If fortune favors you, think of others. Don't sham; be real. Keep busy and you will keep healthy. Respect all sacred things.

BELIEVE THESE THINGS WITH ME

Love God.

THAT Jesus is the day-spring from on high—the perpetual morning of every ransomed spirit. What if the darkness comes! Jesus is the light of the world and of heaven. What though this earthly house does crumble! Jesus hath prepared a house of many mansions; Jesus is the anchor that always holds; Jesus is the light that is never eclipsed; Jesus is the fountain that is never exhausted; Jesus is the evening star, hung un amid the closur of is the fountain that is never exhausted; Jesus is the evening star, hung up amid the gloom of the gathering night. No matter what troubles may befall you, what ills or dangers may come to you, in Christ you are safe. Oh, my reader, place yourself under the wings of the Almighty; however wandering, however weary, however troubled, come under the wings of the Almighty; however ragged, however wretched, there is room enough under the wings—under the broad wings of the Almighty for you! Oh, what a gospel! So glorious, so magnificent in its provisions! I love to write of it to you! It is my life to preach it! THE BEAUTY OF FROSTED HAIR

SOME very good women I know have a war OME very good women I know have a way of getting irritable when the silver penetrates into their hair, and perhaps some of those to whom I write have the same feeling. Whimsical fashion, I notice, changes its mind very often as to which is the best color for the hair. The Romans sprinkled theirs with silver and gold. Our nucestors powdered theirs white. Human custom decides this and decides that; but God declares that He likes frest color best when He says: "The hoary head is a crown of glory if it be in the way of righteousness." Indeed! is there anything more beautiful? Alas! for those who will not take the adornment, and who swear by all the dyes of the apothecary that they will not have it. Nevertheless, my dear woman, let me tell you that the greater part of humankind look you that the greater part of humankind look upon gray hairs as a crown of glory. It is beautiful in the church, it is beautiful in the home, it is beautiful at the wedding, it is beautiful at the burial.

WHAT FASHION DOES FOR ITS DEVOTEES WHEN a woman listens to what color fashion dictates shall be her hair, she gives ear to an element in our modern life that is making society more and more insincere every day. I sometimes stop to marvel what this element called "fashion" has done. Through its teachings its devotees are made so Through its teachings its devotees are made so insincere that you scarcely know when to believe them and when not. They ask you to "come and call," and you do not know whether or not they really want you or not. When they send their regards, you do not know whether it is an expression of their heart, or an external civility. One learns to take almost everything said by these people at a discount. Word is sent, "Not at home," when they are only too lazy to dress themselves. They say "the furnace has just gone out," when in truth they had no fire in it all winter. They apologize for the unusual barrenness of their table, when they never live any better. They decry their most luxurious entertainments to win a shower of approval. They better. They decry their most luxurious enter-tainments to win a shower of approval. They apologize for their appearance, as though it were unusual, when always at home they look just so. They would make you believe that some nice sketch on the wall was the work of a master painter. "It was an heirloom, and once hung on the walls of a castle; and a duke gave it to their grandfather." People who will lie about nothing else, will lie about a picture. On a small income this "Pashion" practically teaches us that we must make the world believe that we are stilluent, and our life world believe that we are affluent, and our life becomes a cheat, a counterfeit, and a sham.

TO THOSE IN SICKNESS

MANY in sickness write to me. They seem to feel that God is singling them out to bear the ails of the world. My friends, but few of us are entirely well. Not one out of ten is thoroughly sound in body, and this is no exaggerated statement. The vast majority of the mee are constant subjects of nilments. There is some one form of disease that each of us is peculiarly subject to. One has a weak side or back, the other is subject to headaches, or faintnesses, or lungs easily distressed. It would not take a very strong blow to shiver the golden bowl of life, or break the pitcher at the fountain. Many of you have kept on in life through sheer force of will. You think no one can understand your distresses. Perno one can understand your distresses. naps you look strong, and it is supposed that you are a hypochondriac. They say you are nervous—as if that were nothing! God have nervous—as if that were nothing! God have mercy upon any man or woman that is nervous! At times you sit alone in your room. Friends do not come. You feel an indescribable loneliness in your sufferings; but God knows; God feels; God compassionates. He counts the sleepless nights; He regards the acuteness of the prain; He estimates the hardness of the breathing. While you pour out the medicine from the bottle, and count the drops, God counts all your falling tears. As you look at the vials filled with nauseous draughts, and at the bottles of distasteful tonic that stand on the shelf, remember that there draughts, and at the bottles of distasteful tonic that stand on the shelf, remember that there is a larger bottle than these, which is filled with no mixture by earthly apothecaries, but it is God's bottle, in which He hath gathered all our tears. God keeps a tender remembrance of all our sicknesses. To every sick-bed in the universe would I say: Be of good cheer, dear sorrowing heart, this world is not only of pain. As you suffer now, so shall you rejoice hereafter. Do not allow yourself to grow disconsolate. As the night comes, so cometh the morning, and as the most violent grow disconsolate. As the right comes, so cometh the morning, and as the most violent rain-storm is followed by glorious sunshine, so shall all the sick-beds of this world be trans-formed into thrones of gold. We are here but for a little while, and we help to make that time pleasant just in proportion as we keep our spirits buoyed up.

HELP YOUR MINISTER TO PREACH

IT is astonishing how dull religious au-diences, as a rule, look! In lecturing halls L diences, as a rule, look! In lecturing halls you see people with eyes wide open, nudging each other, and nodding to the sentiments offered. In prayer-meetings the same people look dull; they cultivate the dull look; they have an idea that to be devotional they must look sleepy. A brother gets up to talk, and a father in Israel puts his head down on a cane, and a mother in Israel her head on the back of the seat in front of her and arother looks. and a mother in Israel her head on the back of the seat in front of her, and another looks up to the oriling and seems to be counting the cracks in it. Now, when your minister gets up to preach, look at him. There is inspira-tion in the human eye. Many a time I have, through pressure of other work, gone into the pulpit with little to say, but in the upturned faces of the people I have seen twenty ser-mons, and the only bother was to know which I should preach. I should preach.

WOMEN AND THE MODERN NOVEL

DEOPLE constantly write to me and ask:

"Do you believe in women reading novels?" My friends, it all depends upon the novel. Some novels are exhibitanting, but a greater percentage of them seem to me to belong the control of the standard of the seem to me to be a serious of the seem to me to be a serious of the seem to me to be a serious of the seem to me to be a serious of the seem to me to be a serious of the seem to me to be a serious of the serious more to the literary men and women of the past than of the present. Some of our modern novels are appalling in their influence. But as one young girl writes me: "The heroes are so advoitly knavish, and the persons so beso advoitly knavish, and the persons so be-witchingly untrue, and the turn of the story so exquisite, and all the characters so enrap-turing, I cannot quit them." My sister, you can find styles of literature just as charming that will elevate and purify, and ennoble, and Christianize while they please. The devil does not own all the honey. There is a wealth of good books coming forth from our publishing houses that leaves no excuse for the choice of that which is debauching to body, mind and soul. Go to some intelligent man or woman and sak for a list of books that will be strengthening to your mental and moral conand ask for a list of books that will be strengthening to your mental and moral condition. Life is so short and your time for improvement so abbreviated, that you cannot afford to fill up with husks, and cinders, and debris. In the interstices of business that young man is reading that which will prepare him to be a merchant prince, and that young woman is filling her mind with an intelligence that will yet either make her the chief attraction of a good man's home, or give her an independence of character that will qualify her to build her own home and maintain it in a hoppiness that requires no augment quality her to build her own home and main-tain it in a happiness that requires no augmen-tation from any of our rougher sex. That young man or young woman can, by the right literary and moral improvement of the spare ten minutes here or there in every day, rise head and shoulders in prosperity and character and influence above the loungers who read nothing or that which bedwarfs.

PURITY IN HAUNTS OF INIQUITY

PURITY IN HAUNTS OF INIQUITY

CAN you tell nee why a Christian woman going down among the haunts of iniquity on a Christian errand never meets with any indignity? I stood in the chapel of Helen Chalmers, in the most abandoned part of the city of Edinburgh, and I said to her as I looked around upon the fearful surroundings of the place: "Do you come here nights to hold a service?" "Oh, yes," she said. "Can it be possible that you never meet with an insult while performing this Christian errand?" "Never," she said, "never." That young woman who has her father by her side walking down the street, an armed police at each ing down the street, an armed police at each corner, is not so well defended as that Chriscorner, is not so well defended as that Christian woman who goes forth on gospel work into the haunts of iniquity carrying the Bibles and bread. God, with the arm of his wrath omnipotent, would tear to pieces any one who should offer her indignity. He would smite him with lightnings, and drown him with floods, and swallow him with earthquakes, and damn him with eternal indignation. Some one said: "I dislike very much to see that Christian woman teaching those had boys in the mission school. I am afraid to have her instruct them." "So," said another man. "I am afraid, too." Said the first: "I am afraid they will use vile language before they leave the place." "Ah," said the other man, "I am not afraid of that. What I am afraid of is that if any of those boys should use a nasty word in that presence the other boys would tear him to pieces and kill him on the spot." the spot."

with Talo

GENUINE OXFORD TEACHERS , Containing, 1430 Pages, and ring open, date included 7xf1 Inches, Free to all New Subscribers at $2.00.

It is Leather Bound, Glit Edge, Over-lapping Edges, and Contains ALL THE HELPS, including CONCORDANCE, 40,000 References, Subject Index 16,000 References, TWELVE COLORED MAPS, and Other Valuable Helps.

De Hitt Talmage SI, SZ, SS, D4, SS BIBLE BOUCK, MEW YORK OTTY.

IMPERIAL GRANUM is prized equally in the nursery and in the sick-room. It holds a high place among made-foods and deserves it.— "Marion Harland," The Home Maker, N. Y.

The fact is absolutely unquestioned that during the thirty years that IMPERIAL GRANUS has been manufactured as a food for children and invalids, it has saved thousands of lives not only of children but of infirm, aged and delicate persons who have required and sought nourishing and strengthening dict.—The Independent, New York, March 26, 1891.

IMPERIAL GRANUM is unexcelled as a dietetic Imperial Granum is unexcelled as a dietetic preparation, supplementing most effectively the treatment by physicians of weak and irrishele stomachs of young and old alike. It has been used by the writer's family for the past twenty-five years with the most excellent results. An instance of its restorative qualities came recently to the writer's knowledge in the case of a clerical friend who was greatly reduced by a severe attack of dysentery and unable to retain or assimilate any food but Imperial Granum, to which he ascribes his full and rapid recovery. It is a perfect food for infants and invalids, children and convalencents, adults and the aged.—The Churchman, New York, October 17th, 1891.

IMPERIAL GRANUM.—There is one dieteric

New York, October 1718, 1891.

IMPERIAL GRANUM.—There is one dietetic preparation that goes on in the even tenor of its way, always a popular food with the doctor when no other one can be, or will be, retained on the stomach. It is carefully prepared, never disappointing, always a valuable aid to the busy doctor. Easily assimilated, with the greatest possible amount of nourishment, combined with the minutest amount of labor in its digestion, IMPERIAL GRANUM stands to-day, without a rival, in the room of the sick or is digestion, INPERIAL GRANUM stands to-day, without a rival, in the room of the sick or convalescent. While good for children in all the varying periods of their existence, yet its strongesth old is in the sick room, where either adult or little one needs a soothing, sustaining diet with the least amount of physical effort for its digestion.—W. C. Wile, A.M., M.D. The New England Medical Monthly, Dec., '20.

SOLD BY DECOURTS. Shipping Depot, JOHN CARLE & SONS, - NEW YORK.

Waukenhose

The New Shape in stockings. Save discomfort and darning. Ingrowing nails, corns, bunions, hot and cold feet are often caused by crowding the toes into the pointed end of the old-style stocking. Waukenhose allow the toes their natural positions. The big toe having room enough stays inside. Would you like an illustrated price-list free?

Waukenhose Co., 76 Chauncey St., Boston.

To Derfer Shoe Co.—I received the shoes yesterday d must say that I am more than pleased with them wife says they are a perfect fit.

A COTTAGE FOR $1200. A new book, just out Nov. 1, 1891, 105 pages 8 x 9½ inches. Has 50 designs for houses costing from $650 to $10,000. The latest ideas in house building are illustrated here. Sent post paid for $1.00.

FRANK P. ALLEN, Architect, Houseman Block. Grand Rapids, Mich

OLD COINS

$13,388 Paid 10 Old Coirs. Save all get, coined before 103,and

WANTED

This Department is conducted and edited by RUTH ASHMORE, who cheerfully invites questions touching any topic upon which her young women readers may desire help or information.

Address all letters to RUIH ASHMORE, care of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, Philadelphia, Pa.

FRIENDS MADE IN A DAY

In passing along the wayside you girls are very apt to pick up a friend here, and an acquaintance there without much thought as to whether they are desirable ones to have or not. You are prone, especially you clever girls, to laugh at conventionalities and to say girls, to laugh at conventionalities and to say you will know who you please and when you please. This sounds very independent, and you think very full of knowledge, but it only shows just what an inexperienced girl you are. Friends cannot be made in an hour or a day, and the undying affection announced after that time is as likely to curl up and fade away like the Morning-Glories. There are a great many women in this world who are charming, interesting, who look beautiful and who make you have a pleasant time, but these are not interesting, who look beautiful and who make a pleasant time, but these are not always the women who should be your friends. It's a great temptation—this having a good time. I want it and so do you, my dear, but we must each be a little careful in the choice of our associates in the good time. Difficult? Not if you have a mother to give you a word of advice. But if you haven't, and if there is no one to warm you aminst the you a word of advice. But if you haven't, and if there is no one to warm you against the woman you ought not to know, I very much fear that your lesson will have to come from experience. Having had that, do not put yourself in a position to let it happen again. You possess an intangible something when you meet the wrong woman that tells you to beware of her, and this is what you ought to obey. Be polite and pleasant to everybody, but remember that a friend becomes one gradually, and surely that friendship cannot spring ually, and surely that friendship cannot spring up in a night; only weeds do that and all they deserve is to be cut down in the morn-

A RICH MAN'S THOUGHT FOR GIRLS

THE worth of five minutes, of ten minutes, of half an hour or over of an hour, is often underestimated, for so much can be done or learned in a very little time. Some time the plea is "I don't know how the time goes because I haven't got a watch," and this lack of a watch is something I want to tell you about. Mr. George W. Childs, who has, more than any other man in this country, interested himself in the education of women, the education in

in the education of women, the education in more senses than one, for he is having them taught how they may support themselves, gives a prize every year at Bryn Mawr College. When he thought of this a medal came natur-ally to his mind; then he remembered that except as souvenirs they were of very little use, being worn for awhile and then put away, per-haps occasionally exhibited. So with great wisdom, Mr. Childs decided that a little gold watch warranted to keep good time and sus-pended from a suitable chain would, after all, be the wisest thing to give, and so this is what the Childs' Prize at Bryn Mawr College is. It is the Childs' Prize at Bryn Mawr College is. It is worth working for, because telling you of your exertions in the past, it encourages you to make fresh ones for the future. And then, too, the quiet little tick-tick reminds you continually that time is flying away and that you mustn't let it get the best of you. The minute hand says, "Make the most of me;" the bour hand says, "How have you filled up the time since I last touched a figure?" Wouldn't it be a good thing if in more colleges the sensible watch, with its practical suggestions, took the place of the useless medals?

COMEBODY once said, "Show mea woman's bedroom and I will tell you what she is like." It is natural for every old to make it.

like." It is natural for every girl to want her own little nest to look as pretty as possible, and I wish I could encourage her in this. Let her learn to have around her the books that are really hers, the photographs of her special friends, the little bits of bric-a-brac which she has picked up here and there and which were given her at Christmas-tide or on her birthday.

Put all these where they will show at their best, and do not be afraid of furnishing even your bedroom with too many books or pic-tures. Remember though, that it is your bedroom and that you must leave sufficient space to move around, to dress and undress;

and that you must not lumber your dressing table with trifles of no moment, when you want the room for your brushes and the numerous boxes and bottles that hold your toilette belongings. An overcrowded bed-room is a borror and an inconvenience. Have one is a horror and an inconvenience. Have one or two big easy-chairs, with a view not only of the comfort of to-day, but of the time when it is possible you may be a bit of an invalid, and want a comfortable chair to enshrine you. These chairs need not be richly upholstered ones, but instead of rattan or wood made delightful with great big soft cushious, invaries, by-the-by, that, when bought, are rather expensive. However, the girl who is making her room look pretty can beg one or two pillows, not in use from the household store, and covering them with gay silk wrought.

store, and covering them with gay silk wrought over with embroidery silk and tinsel thread can have them to look as rich as those gotten at the smartest upholsterer's.

Now, my dear girls, think this over, and make your nest as pretty as a girl's bedroom should be. Spend a reasonable amount of time on its furnishing, and you will not regret it.

NOTHER year has come and we can wish each other all joy and hap-piness for the future, though wouldn't it be just as well to give a little thought to the ittle thought to the past? Go off, my dear girl, by yourself and decide whether the old year has taught you anything that will be of service in the new year. Make up your mind to bury all the petty, mean feelings, to forget all the injuries done you, and to forgive all the unkind words spoken or written. Make up your mind that you are going to try in the coming year to speak only golden words, for then you may be sure the echo will be only golden deeds. Make up your mind to be as cheerful and as hopeful as possible and not to allow yourself to get into the habit of thinking the worst rather than the best of everything.

A THOUGHT FOR THE NEW YEAR

I Fone closes one's ears to eril speaking, one is very apt to forget to ever say the eril word one's self. When trouble comes, know where to go, and if only you bury your head in your hands and think "God help me." be sure He will, not just perhaps in the way that you expect, but certainly help will come unto you. I wish that every one of you would write in the back of your Bible or Prayer Book what is written in the back of a little old Book of Prayer; the writing is faded, for it was written in 1878 by a young girl who is now dead. This is it: "Go to Him with your sins upon your head, and ask Him to take them away. Tell Him all that is in your heart, tell Him all your hope is in Him, that there is nothing else but His forgiveness that can do you any good. He will not doubt you. He will not misapprehend you. He is as in-Fone closes one's ears to evil speaking, one is can do you any good. He will not doubt you, He will not misapprehend you. He is as in-finitely true and just as He is kind. His favor is better than life itself. Once make that yours and you will not mind the rest. You will not mind coldness and suspicion and miscou-struction. It will hardly pain you that no one else knows your heart if He does. Ask Him for forgiveness and your share of happiness— ask Him for it on your kness, and He cannot. for forgiveness and your share of happiness—ask Him for it on your knees, and He cannot, will not, send you empty away. He has never failed them that seek Him yet. He will not begin with the last, the weakest of His flock."
Now, that tells what I mean, and to it I add
"God bless every one of you and give you all a Good and Happy New Year."

THE GIRL WITH A WISH

SHE is many in number, and she keeps on asking and asking the same thing. She says: "How can I make myself popular?" The girl who has the mere desire for popularity, who doesn't care whether she only creates a pleasant impression and is then forgotten, is a pieasant impression and is then register, its making a mistake. She really wishes something more than this, and in asking how she will be popular she means how shall I get friends, and how shall I keep them. The getting of friends is often a mere accident. You meet somebody who pleases you, visits are interchanged, a pleasant accuraintance is made, which ringers pleasant acquaintance is made, which ripens into a friendship.

into a friendship.

Now, to keep your friend. First of all, it is necessary that you should learn her peculiarities as she must learn yours, and that you respect them. Next, that you never permit yourself to speak of or listen to any disagreeable words about her. If you are in doubt as to some speech she has made, or some action of hers, go to her and ask her what she means. No friendship will last that has not candor for its corner-stone. Small deceits, petty lies, will make enemies of friends, and will cause more than just merely you two to be unhappy. than just merely you two to be unhappy. Sometimes, for reasons they best understand. sometames, for reasons they best understand, two friends separate to see nothing more of each other; then comes the trial. If you ever were a friend you will be able to keep quiet as to the weaknesses of your old friend, to remember that the confidence given when you were close together is to be respected more than ever now. No girl ever got a friend by telling of the affairs of those who have been her friends. I don't know that I have answered the cuestion of how to be remedlar but I have inst question of how to be popular, but I have just said a few words here and there about making and keeping a friend. And after all friendship, like love, is the one thing in this world that money can't buy.

ARE SOME OF THESE YOURS?

A RE those ugly ill-tempered words spoken as sharply really yours?

Are those rude habits of whispering, of using slang and of continual lack of quietness

Are those dreadful habits, of impertinence to your parents, of lack of consideration for others and of untidiness yours?

Are the rough ways, the screaming voice, the silly chatter and the offensive stares vonrs?

If they are, take my advice, carry them out to the great sea of oblivion and drop every one far down into its depths.

WHAT YOU WANT * * TO KNOW * * 3

[Under this heading I will cheerfully answer each month any question I can, sent me by my girl readers-RUTH ASHMORE.]

Dor-I cannot recommend any depilatory.

WARNER—I think all desserts made with a pie crust some under the heading of pastry.

D. V.—A pretty shade of golden-brown, with trim-mings of veivet and seru lace, will make a dainty house dress.

A Scanool Grat.—The only way to prevent black-heads coming is to take especially good care of your diet, to exercise regularly and to bathe with great care.

A READER—The engagement ring is worn on the third finger of the left hand; it is laid aside during the marriage extensory and assumed afterward as a guard to the wedding ring.

C. M. S.—It is uncless to attempt to make a flying at giving music lessons unless you are a fine planist. "A slight knowledge of music" is not sufficient to make you a competent teacher.

M. A. H.—Cocoa butter is frequently used in massage, as it is especially good for the skin, whitening and beni-ing it. In using beamon, throw just enough in the water to make it turn a milky hue.

S. J. - Put the cocoa butter on your eyebrows at night, letting it remain on until morning, and keep up this treatment until you see some sign of growth, which should be within a month's time.

Sweet Sexteen—For my own part, I do not approve of boys and girls going to school together; but as a great many people differ from me in this respect, I can only express it as my opinion.

Vivian—Ten and coffee are not supposed to promote the beauty of the complexion. If you are interested in the other questions asked, suppose you write to Mrs. Mallon herself for the information.

New Subscribes—If it is not late in the evening and your family are acquainted with and like the young man, there will be no impropriety in asking him to come in when he has been kind enough to escort you home.

ELLEN-A Russian bath is one of vapor, where from the extreme of hot vapor a cold scribbing is given one, and a therough spray and shower bath is taken. The Russian bath at once whiters and makes firm the PLORENCE K.—When a gratieman is presented to a hady she does not rise; she simply bows, unless, indeed, she is his hostess. It is not necessary for her to rise when she bids good-night to him. The hostess should

X. Y. X.—The twin sisters would have one card for formal visiting on which should be engraved, "The Misses Gordon;" while each should have another for informal calls on which should be engraved, "Miss Clare Gordon."

MARY IL AND CYMBER-I can give no information or opinion in regard to cousins marrying. This question has been asked me a great many times, and it is one that is impossible for a stranger either to discuss, or give judgment upon. A READER—A girt of sixteen wears her dresses well below her ankles. If her hair is not very long, or thick, it would be pretty to crimp it and tie it with a ribbon just at the nage of the neck, allowing it to come out in a fizzy brush.

Bres.—Ushers at a church wedding wear gloves even in the daytime; they should match those worn by the bridgeroun. When the bride is dressed in white it is proper for the bridgeroom, best man and ushers all to wear white kid gloves.

Energy H.—I doubt if you will get much good from either by reading two books at the same time. I do not think a young girl eaght to be up later than 10 o'clock at night, and 7.30 ought to be the latest time that she greets the moraling sun.

Ei.La N.—The best book of etiquette is that great one of the world. Observe what other people do, and limitate them; I mean, of course, people of good manners. You will learn more from gued society than from all the books that were ever printed.

Engree B. F.—Brush your hair with great regularity, for this, while it makes it shiny, brings out the olt. About once a week wash it well with bot water and borax. This treatment should take away the too great offiness of which you complain.

B. E. S.—The best way to whiten the skin is to use a good soap upon it, to take care as to your diet, not to live in too hot, or two cold rooms, and to exercise regularly. A regular treatment of the neck by massage will, it is said, tend to make it fuller. BERNE-I do not think it in good taste for a young lady to go to a restaurant alone with a man friend. Eleven o'clock is quite late enough for a visitor to stay, unless, indeed, there should be quite a party, and then a little later would not be objectionable.

M. I. E.—The announcement of a wedding is not an invitation to it, and certainly should not appear until at least the day after the ceremony. In walking with an older lady give her the inner side of the street, and let her enter a church or any public place first.

KATHLEEN-If the young man has promised his mother never to marry be certainly acted in a very improper way when he proposed marriage to you, and look the theory of kissing you. The proper treatment would be suggesting his going at once and never coming back again.

ALLIE—To develop the bast bathe it with hot water, and then rub it, spherically, with olive oil. Do not remove this, and in the early morning bathe it with cold water and dry it thoroughly with a soft towel. Do not be induced to use a heavy or rourse towel, as it is upi to roughen and make sensitive the flesh.

M. G.—The only acknowledgment necessary to the anouncement of the wedding, which is accompanied by a card glying the daise of two "at bottnes," is a personal call on one of the "at home" days. If you are not visiting because of mourning or illness, then send your visiting card by messenger during the hour of the first reception.

Wk Two—As you are not intimate friends of either the bride or bridegroom. It will be quite proper for you to go to the wedding, and it is not necessary for you to send a present. I masking what has been said, the ab-rupt "What" is not in good taste; but instead you can sak, "What did you say?" or "I did not quite under-stand you."

J. F. W. AND OTHERS—If what you write is worth publishing it will receive notice; and all that I can suggest to the many of you who claim to write well and yet do not know what to do, is to send your copy to a well-known publisher, inclosing stamps for its return. Do not be discouraged, but try another and another and still another publisher.

H. F. C.—It is not usual among people of medium circumstances to give anything to a clergyman officiation at a funeral; but where the family is waithy, and the clergyman, like most others, is poor, it would be in good taste, after a mostle or so, for the gentleman of the bouse to inclose him a check, thanking him at the same time for his kindness to them in their trouble.

Expansio.—Even at a quiet bonic westifus, where only the immediate family and a few friends are present. It would be in best tests if the invitations were sent our written in the first person, about three days before the ceremony. The people in the place should call on the bride. There is only one city in the United States where the stranger makes the first call, and that is in Washington.

BLUG-EYER Let —Thank you very much, for your kind words to me; they are fully appreciated. The choice of plano or violis bessors should be decided by your shillly on either instrument. Choose, by all means, the one on which you play best, and then work to achieve success at that. Try wearing a looser collar and hathing your neck with very hot seap-sude; this will tend to whiten it.

For Girls Musical Tastes

A FREE MUSICAL TRAINING WITHIN THE POWER OF EVERY GIRL.

F all offers ever made by THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, none have met with such quick response as those of a free musical training for every girl in America. At the time of the conception of these offers the one point most borne in mind was to place them within the reach of the humblest girl. For years we had heard the cry of the girl of musical tastes stifled by the lack of means wherewith to acquire her desires for a vocal or instrumental training, and we determined to make possible

MUSICAL TRAINING WITHOUT COST

OVER five hundred girls are now working for these offers. Every report coming to us tells of easy success. Girls who started only two months ago are already within a few of the small number of subscriptions necessary for success. "It has come to me almost without an effort," writes one girl, "and I can scarcely believe that the easy work of the last two weeks means twenty weeks of free vocal training for me." The great advantage in these JOURNAL offers is that there is no competitive element in them. Every girl stands the same chance. It is not a question of who secures the largest number of subscriptions-the girl in the smallest village has the same good chance as the girl in the thickly-populated city.

THE MUSICAL HOME WE SELECTED

THE large conservatory selected by the JOURNAL to which to send our girls, is probably the best and most liberally equipped in the country. It is the New England Conservatory of Music, in Boston. Girls from every State in the Union are within its walls. The most skilled teachers preside over it, while, in a domestic sense, it possesses all the advantages of a carefully regulated and refined home. Foreign musicians of prominence have recognized the standing of the Conservatory by personal visits and indorsement. During her last visit to this country, Adelina Patti honored the Conservatory by spending a morning in its different departments, and now recommends the institution over her own name.

WHY THE OFFERS ARE GENEROUS

THE JOURNAL is anxious that the largest possible number of girls shall take advantage of these offers for a free musical and vocal training, not because of any pecuniary profit to itself, for there is none. The simplest calculation will show, to any one who studies the offers, that we are not guided by any money consideration. On the other hand, each successful girl whom we send to the Conservatory means an actual financial outlay to the JOURNAL beyond the income. We have merely changed our methods of advertising. We have now extended these offers beyond the time originally set for their withdrawal, but they cannot be continued indefinitely, as any one can easily see. It is important, therefore, that girls enroll themselves on our books as desirous of trying for the offers. Any girl can learn all particulars by simply writing to the JOURNAL, and details will be forwarded to her. Remember that this is the best season of the year to secure subscriptions.

 $*_{k}$ * Write and we will gladly tell you all about the idea.

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL Philadelphia, Pa. Digitized by Google

MR. COATES cheerfully invites questions touching any topic upon which his young readers may desire help or information. Address all letters to FOSTER COATES, care of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, Philadelphia, Pa.

O more perplexing ques-tion presents itself to the lad ready to step the lad ready to step upon life's busy stage than the choosing of a trude or a profession. A good many boys, far too many, indeed, seem to prefer to go out into the world empty-handed. They distince trade because dislike a trade, because it means hours of toil and study, and one's hands become rough, and clothing soiled by manual labor. Some boys seem to regard manual labor as degrading. They argue that they were born to better things; they console themselves with the reflection that they will be lucky enough to get on without very great labor, and they hope and pray that they will get through life without any drudgery. Later they find they have made a mistake. When they should be making giant strides on the road to success, they find themselves distanced by competitors who are better availabled for the by competitors who are better qualified for the race. It is too late, however. They builded their lives wrong. The foundation stone was not set properly, and the whole structure proves a failure.

EVERY BOY SHOULD LEARN A TRADE

If I had my way I would insist that every boy should learn a trade. It was so in the olden times, and it should be so now. The man who has a trade is a thousand times better equipped than the man who has none. Let every boy select the trade that best suits his ability, and promises the highest honors and remuneration. When he has mastered his trade, if he dislikes it, or it is not profitable, he can begin to study a profession, or his trade, if he dislikes it, or it is not profitable, he can begin to study a profession, or enter upon a commercial life. If he should fail in both of these, he is still master of a good trade—something that no one can take from him, no matter what exigencies may arise. The man who is master of a good trade is as independent as a millionaire. He need never want; he can find profitable work in any corner of the world. I do not say one word against a professional career. But I do say emphatically that the man who has a trade and a profession as well, need have no sear of the future. The boy who wants to can master a trade between the years of sixteen and twenty, and if he dislikes it, he still teen and twenty, and if he dislikes it, he still has time to study medicine, the law, or any other of the learned professions. But if he waits until he is twenty, or over, he may not have an opportunity or feel inclined to learn either.

A MILLIONAIRE'S VIEW OF SUCCESS

IT was my intention to have given promi-nence in this article to the views of the the Charles Pratt, the founder of the Pratt Institute, of Brooklyn, one who grew up from a poor boy and became a rich man, whose later years were occupied in helping boys to fit themselves to become successful men. He had begun an article for THE LANES' Hong JOURNAL when he was beckoned over the dark river to his eternal reward. A few pages of river to his eternal reward. A few pages of the uncompleted article were found upon his desk the day after he died, as follows:

desk the day after he died, as follows:

"The education of a young man or young woman is, in a few words, embraced in the power of habit. Every young person needs to learn the power of attention, the value of industry, promptitude in beginning work, method, accuracy and dispatch in carrying it out, courage before difficulties, self-denial, self-control and temperance. These are the primary qualities, and the fundamental rules for success in life. And how these qualities can best be obtained is what we are seeking at Pratt Institute to illustrate,

"My general experience is that if a young

"My general experience is that if a young man desires to make a success of life, either in a professional way or in business, it will all depend upon the thoroughness with which he has learned the fundamental requirements of every successful man. These are outlined in the first thoughts expressed."

THE RIGHT THING FOR A BOY TO DO

IT is my general opinion," continued Mr.
Pratt in this article, "that the young man or young woman whose education and training have been such as to throw them in contact with material things; where the eye has been trained to see accurately through an ef-fort to learn to draw; where the senses have sen quickened to distinguish sounds; where the hand has been trained to careful, exact execution of work of any kind, whether planing a board or modeling a figure, are more likely to acquire the principles outlined above. The same principles, however, which less the young artist or artisan to be exact in the measurement of material things, or careful in the mechanic arts, can be developed through the study of language or mathematics, or the patient, careful, painstaking application to a knowledge of literature. The question which seems to me to be before our people is: "In what way can we develop these fundamental qualities with the greatest facility?" My thought is that this may be done through what is generally termed 'industrial art work,' that is, teaching the eye to see, the hand to execute, while the mind is brought into active sympathy with these efforts,

"It is not to discard as unimportant the literary part of a person's education, but it is to develop specifically the power to think and see correctly. With the foundation of character laid on these general lines, I think the future of a young man's life depends upon the use he makes of the opportunities open to him. The thing that lies nearest at hand is the thing for him to do, whether it is a trade or a profession, and his success will depend upon the fidelity with which he makes use of upon the fidelity with which he makes use of his opportunities."

The article ends abruptly here, as did the ood man's life, but his work is going on and doing incalculable good.

THE VALUE OF A TRADE

I REMEMBER years ago, when I was a very young man, meeting John Rosch, the great ship-builder, in his ship-yard at Chester, Pennsylvania. I remember, too, what he said then about the value of a trade

"Young man," he said, laying his great, broad hand on my shoulder, and looking at me carnestly with his keen, steel-blue Irish eyes, "next to a clear conscience, a trade is as good a thing as any young man can have in this country. You can carry it with you all your life long; you have to pay neither rent nor taxes upon it, and it will help you around a sharp corner when most other things will fail."

I have never forgotten that utterance from a man who started in life—after landing in New York from Ireland—as helper to a ma-chinist, who became the leading ship-builder of his time, and who, up to the hour that he was stricken with a fatal illness, could take the place of any of his workmen, whether it was a man driving rivets, or an expert putting together the most delicate parts of a steamship's machinery.

Something very like what John Roach said, I beard another great man, who is now-dead, say. This was Peter Cooper, a man of whom American boys cannot know too much, and whom they certainly cannot too much admire.

"If I had my way," said the venerable philanthropist, on the occasion to which I refer.

"I would give every boy a trade. Then I would have him stick to it, love it and be good to it. If he does, it will be good to him."

It was homsely language, but it was truthful, as boys will find if they will it so.

LATER INFLUENCES OF A TRADE

HAVE noticed one thing about some men who started in life from the carpenter's bench, from the forge or the mill, and who became great—they never entirely get away from the habits and influences of their early from the habits and influences of their early-life. They never lose the habits of diligence and of industry that they learned to acquire in the workshop. They may have drifted away from their original trade and become famous in some other pursuit, but they never get altogether away from their earlier environ-ments. Another thing that I have noticed is that these great men are more inclined to be proud of their skill as mechanics than of their successes in other lines. When I was in Europe last I saw Bismarck. I was somewhat surprised to hear he was more proud of his surprised to hear he was more proud of his skill as a brewer than of the fact that he had crushed France and unified the great German Empire. In this country there is practically no end to the number of men who found a trade the most valuable of all belps on the road to fame and fortune. I have the names of some of them before me as I write. I pass over the name of Andrew Johnson, who from a shoemaker's bench arose to be President of the United States. He lived and succeeded under conditions that do not exist now.

MECHANICS WHO HAVE SUCCEEDED

THERE is Thomas A. Edison, the greatest genius of our day. Learning telegraphy was the first thing that led him into that intimacy with electricity which has ended with him being its master; Andrew Carnegie was a telegrapher; Charles Pratt, whom I have mentioned above, and who did more to help pupper men to acquire trades than any man young men to acquire trades than any man whom I can mention, started in life as a ma-chinist; Judge Daniels, of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, was a shoenaker; William R. Grace, who was Mayor of New Whilam R. Grince, who was stayor of New York, and who is worth some twenty million dellars, was a butcher! the late George Jones, who, as editor of the New York "Times," was one of the most powerful men of his day, was a printer's "devil," in the same office with Horace Greeley when both were boys: with Horsce Greeley when both were boys; Jay Gould, the great finnecer, was first a tan-ner and then a surveyor: Dr. John R. Paxton, D. D., who preaches to the wealthiest congre-gation in the world, began life as a carpenter; Philip Armour, the Chicago millionaire, was a moulder; the late John Kelly, the famous politician, was a grate seller; John D. Rocke-feller, now worth one hundred and twenty-five million dollars, was a mechanic in Iron; Rev. Bobert Collyer, D. D., was a blacksmith;

John A. Mackay was a stone-mason before he became the owner of the Comstock Lode, and one of the richest men in the world; Jesse Seligman, the eminent banker and philanthropist, laid the foundation of his fortune by studying in the very poor night trade schools that existed when he was young; United States Senator Hill, of New York, was a printer; the late Henry W. Grady, the greatest orator the South has given us since the days of Calhoun, was also a printer. And so it goes. I could give scores of other names of men who were mechanics, or were skilled in trades and became great after serving faithtrades and became great after serving faithfully at their various tasks.

THE MAN WHO PUT DOWN THE WAR

THE MAN WHO PUT BOWN THE WAR

I NEARLY forgot one man. Abraham Lincoln once said that three forces put down the Rebellion. As he put it they were: "The Army of the United States, the Navy and Petroleum V. Nasby." The latter was the late David R. Locke, owner of the Toledo "Blade," and the greatest satirist of his day. He was the best specimen of the man who has learned a trade and can never shake off its influence.
Even in his later years, and when he was wealthy, he was more proud of the fact that he was a good printer than of his reputation as the favorite humorist of President Lincoln
I have seen him, when he had some subject in I have seen him, when he had some subject in have seen him, when he had some subject in his mind, go to a printer's case, and with com-posing stick in hand, set the type of the ar-ticle with his own hands, and he did his best work that way. Almost the last time I saw him he recalled the days when he was a boy in a country newspaper office. "I got my education there," he said. "Lying flat on the floor, with 'pied' matter all about me, I read the exchanges and such books as come read the exchanges and such books as came my way, and so the world opened up before nie. Those were very happy days."

Such is the fascination that a trade well learned has for a man, even after he has passed beyond all necessity for retaining it.

A TRADE EASILY LEARNED NOW

THERE is no reason now why every boy should not have a trade. Be he rich or poor, the opportunities are alike ample. Indeed, they are the same. Doors have been thrown wide open in the behalf of all who wish to make use of the opportunities offered. Nothing is more easy now than to acquire a trade. You do not need to bind yourself to a certain employer for a certain length of time. trade. You do not need to bind yourself to a certain employer for a certain length of time and give up all other employment. To-day the bright boy of fifteen can learn a trade, and at the same time continue his education in its ordinary courses, or if compelled to leave school at that age, as very many boys are, and become a bread-earner, he has the chance still to learn any trade toward which he is inclined. The schools in which trades are taught are now open day and night, and Jack noust, indeed, he a dull boy if he can learn nothing in them. must, indeed, be nothing in them.

THE INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS OF THE LAND

I HAVE been looking, of late, into the workings of some of our industrial schools in New York, at the Pratt Institute in Brooklyn, the Manual Training School, of Philadelphia, and the schools in Chicago, St. Louis and other large cities. They are Philadelphia, and the schools in Chicago, 81.

Louis and other large cities. They suggested one thought. The American boy of to-day is rich in advantages that his father knew nothing of. I often hear boys say that there are no such chances to succeed now as there were a generation ago; that there is too much competition, and that all the pursuits in which success is to be won are overcrowded. Now boys who talk that way back knowledge. Now, boys who talk that way lack knowledge, and in most cases self-confidence as well. and in most cases self-confidence as well.
They would not succeed under any circumstances. As a matter of fact, boys, the paths that lead to success are as many and as broad as they ever were. What is more, the boy or young man who now treads these paths finds willing hands to belp him on his way. Men, who when they were boys, had to work four-teen to sixteen hours out of twenty-four for a cittance, and rick up an education as best pittance, and pick up an education as best they could, have not forgotten their early struggles, and the result has been schools like the Pratt Institute that now exist in many cities, and that are certain to be followed by others. The present is the very time for you to go in and succeed.

HOW THE BOYS ARE TAUGHT

OW am I to profit by these schools? Can I choose the trade I wish to learn?" These are among the questions that are, naturally enough, put to me. I can only answer them briefly. In the first place, there are schools that are entirely free, but these are not numerous. This system is yet in its infancy. When the public schools gener-ally in city and country towns have manual training departments connected with them, the learning of a trade will become something within the reach of every boy. In Philadelphia there is an excellent "Manual Training School," which is part of the public system. A full course in it covers four years, but any learning the public and the public system. boy who has any wish to go ahead may learn enough in that time to fit him for any walk in life. In the way of manual training he is taught in drawing—free hand, mechanical. architectural, design; in wood-working-putare making, carving, joinery, turning; in metal-working—chipping, filting, fitting; in smithing—iron, tin, brazing, casting, molding, and beside, electrical and mechanical engineering in all their branches. But in addition, these pursuits in which the hands of a man are factors, the young man is taught science, mathematics, literature, history and economics.

What is going to become of the young men who go through a course like this and con-clude it with hand, and heart, and brain alike,

I will venture to answer that question for ou. In twenty years they will be the flower f our land. They will drive uneducated and unskilled labor from the field, and with their brains and their hands will exalt the name of their country.

A YEAR OF "THE JOURNAL"

We can now supply the year 1991 of THE LADGES' HOME JOURNAL, twelve numbers-January to December inclusive—in a handsome binding cover The price will be $1.50. Postage and packing, 45 cents extra.

Those who already have a binder may secure the twelve numbers of the Journal for $1.00. No extra charge will be made for these back numbers.

and we will pay the postage. A bound volume of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL furnishes an almost unlimited amount of most excellent reading matter. We do not know where as much could be elsewhere purchased for the same amount of money.

Our new self-binding cover makes a perfect volume with twelve numbers. Dark-green in color with Cloth back and corners; cover stamped in gilt. We have sent out a very large quantity of these binders, and find they give universal satisfaction. We use them altogether, here in our offices. A most desirable feature of our binder is that its peculiar construction permits of any portion of its contents being temporarily (or permanently) removed without the balance being disturbed.

Each one is mailed packed in boards. The Binder Hooks will be mailed separately. Price of the Binder alone, 50 cents. Postage and packing, 35 cents extra.

JOSIAH ALLEN'S WIFE'S" BOOKS

Anyone sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of ? Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each ; or, for $ Subscribers and $1.00 additional. Price, $1.60 each, postpaid.

Samantha at Saratoga

My Wayward Pardner Samantha at the Centennial My Opinions and Betsey Bobbett's

Miss Holley's books are delightful because of their pure fon, while under the fun there is a strong current of good, healthy common sense. Josiah Allen's Wife" has written a great deal for THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, and many of our subscribers will doubtless be glad to secure some of her writings in a permanent

Price, $1.00 each, including cost of postage.

BOOTS AND SADDLES; Or, Life in Dakota with General Custer

BY MRS. ELIZABETH B. CUSTER

Given for 5 Year-1y Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 3 Subscribers and so cents additional. Postage and packing, 15 Price $1.50, postpaid.

The adventures of this gallant envalry officer among the Indians in Dakota and Montana will never be forgotten. No Indian story could be half so exciting. You will read the book with unabated interest, from his first expedition to the fatal Little Big Horn encounter. The book pays a royalty to Mrs. Custer. 312 pages, hand-somely bound

Price, $1.35. Postage and packing, 15 cents

JED A Boy's Adventure in the Army of "'61-'65"

BY WARREN LEE GOSS

Given as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 2 Rubscribers and 50 cents additional. Postage and packing, 10 cents extra. Price, $1.50, postpaid.

Of all the many stories of the Civil War that have been published, we cannot think of one which, for stordy realism and intensity of interest, ean compare with "Jed."

It is a wholesome war story told by a soldier: a spirited, manly and useful book. There is inspiring patriotism but no marring bitterness. There is a serious tone and surpose running through this book which can be commended heartily alike for its facts and its high principles

Price, $1.00, Includ Dight Zeor by Google

A STORY

BATHLAP

THE AUTHOR AND THE PUBLISHER

By A. S. Fragus

ERY few writers are aware of what is likely to happen of what is likely to happen after the long-sought-for publisher has at last been found. If the manuscript is thought worthy of publication, and the publisher desires it, you will be so notified, and one of the three following propositions will most likely be made to you:

1. They will publish the work at your expense.

pense.

2. They will publish the work at their expense, and pay you a royalty on all copies

Or, they will buy the manuscript from you, paying you a certain sum down.

If the first proposition is made, you will have to pay the entire cost of publishing. The first step is to consider the nature of the work, and what style of book it would be most befitting to pattern after. It is wise for you to select, wherever possible, a book as near as can be had such as you would like yours to be, in paper, type, size, binding, and number of pages, leaving some margin in the cost for originality in design of cover. Having decided this point to your mutual satisfaction, the next point will be to have an estimate made.

A N estimate of the cost of publishing the work will be submitted to you. Publishing means issuing the work complete for delivery to the public. Do not confuse the word "printing" with this, as the use of these two terms are confusing, and has often led to much trouble and annoyance. When a publisher states "it will-cost so much to print the book," this does not necessarily include the binding, etc. Publishers are much to blame in this respect. The estimate sent you will vary in form according to the custom of the house. Many simply send an estimate in a lump sum, as $500 per thousand copies. Others will itemize the estimate as so much for composition per thousand ems, or so much per page, so much for paper, printing, folding, sewing and binding, covers, stamping, etc. The latter is the more satisfactory, as it enables you to see the various items that go to make up the cost. It invariably happens that the estimate is higher than would be the case were you to have the work done by some job printer. But, on the other hand, you are saved much annovance and care, for it follows that any reputable house that accepts your manuscript will issue it in a creditable and perfect manner, and will attend to all details; besides, you have the advantage of the publisher's imprint, or name, on your work. besides, you have the advantage of the pub-lisher's imprint, or name, on your work.

THE chances are a separate estimate will be I made for electrotyping; in other words, making a set of plates from which succeeding making a set of plates from which succeeding editions can be printed if desired. Whether to do this or not is a very difficult and important question. You will be called upon to decide this. You should seek the advice of your publisher on this point, as he is better able to judge, from the nature of your work, whether other editions are apt to be needed, though he, even, is very likely to err. For no one can tell—except in such cases where the nature of the book appeals to a very limited class of renders—how a book will sell. The great advantage of electrotyping is that you are ready at a moment's notice to print other editions if called for, and thus you are saved the cost of composition, that is, the compositors will not have to set up the work in type again. On the other hand, if the first edition is not sold, and consequently there is odition is not sold, and consequently there is no call for a second, you have a worthless set of plates on hand, from which you can derive no profit save selling them for old lead. This is one of the great risks of publishing.

NOTHER important item is the size of A the edition. Shall it be 500, 1000 or 5000? This you will also have to decide; again seek the advice of your publisher on this point. There is a considerable saving in issu-ing a large edition at once than issuing the same total at different periods, say 500 or 1000 at a time, the cost of press work and binding being a very important item. This is a very difficult problem to solve, and is another one of the great risks of publishing. If the book is a success, and you have a large edition on hand, you can supply the demand at once, and this is very important. It is a serious mishapif this is very important. It is a serious misinapit the book is selling and in demand, and it goes temporarily out of print until the new edition is published. Not only are sales lost, but the very success of the book is jeopardized, for the public is fickle in such matters, and if not to be had when asked for, is not apt to ask for it again. If it is not a success you have a large edition of worthless books on hand worth only so much waste paper. A sad end-ing to your speculation and success as an author, but, alas, a very common one.

HAVING decided these questions, an agree ment will be drawn up. You cannot be too careful in seeing that it is as complete as it is possible to make it. Don't leave anything to verbal understanding. Let it state the exact amount of money you are to pay and for what, and how much is to be paid you; and at what times you are to pay and to be paid. The size of the edition, the exact style of the book, similar, say, to the one se-lected, how many editor's copies are to be used, what additional expense you are to be liable to in pushing the sale of the work, and the ex-act date when the book is to be issued etc. act date when the book is to be issued, etc.

THIS done, the publishers will proceed with the work. Before beginning, however, you will have to pay them one-half the amount of the estimate, and before completion the balance must be paid. In addition to this, you will have to pay for all show-bills, circulars, and newspaper advertising, and you must supply, free of cost, from 100 to 150 copies for editorial purposes. Your publishers, on their part, will advertise in the trade papers, see that editorial copies are sent out, that the book is shown to the trade. They will distribute them to the trade throughout the country, with show-bills and circulars. They are not likely to charge you the cost of sending them, as they are ant to be sent with other goods. But if the goods are returned to them, being unsold, the cost of postage or expressage is apt to be charged to you. They will generally pay you one-half the retail price. For instance, if your work retails at $1.00, they will pay you fifty cents for each copy sold. An account will usually be rendered every three or six months, as may be agreed upon, and whatever is due you will be paid.

TF they accept your manuscript, and feel sat-

If they accept your manuscript, and feel satisfied that it is a good work, they will take the risk of publication themselves. In that event, you are at no risk whatever, nor are you liable for one dollar of expense. They will generally pay you a royalty of ten per cent on all copies sold. That is, supposing the retail price is $1.50, you will receive fifteen cents per copy on all that are sold, with the exception of such as are used for editorial purposes, or become damaged in handling and thus rendered useless. Such copies as you desire for your own use are generally supplied to you at one-third off, or $1.00 per copy, net.

THEY may offer to accept your manuscript and pay you a certain sum down, which if accepted deprives you of any further proceeds. They own the manuscript absolutely. This has two sides, of course. If the book turns out a failure, they lose and you win. If, on the other hand, it has a large sale, they reap the profits, and it is your turn to feel bad. This often happens. It is another one of the delightful risks of book publishing. The author should not depend entirely upon his publisher to push his book. He can do much himself in bringing the book to public notice, requesting friends to talk about it and ask for it; by sending copies to noted persons, in THEY may offer to accept your manuscript for it; by sending copies to noted persons, in short, the ingenuity of the author should be exercised to its utmost limits, but not exceed-ing the bounds of propriety and dignity.

A GIRLS' LITERARY CLUB

By LEIGH NORTH

CLUB for girls with the aim of mutual improvement and profit, may be organized in some such manner as this: The girls need not necessarily be of equal capacity or identical tastes. In fact, some diversity in these respects would be for the general advantage. But all who take part should be interested in reading and study, and have in some measure the desire and capacity to produce. The meetings may be held weekly or at longer intervals. The time occupied in reading, studying and discussing the various questions that will naturally arise. Once a month each member should hand in a story, sketch or poem (without signature), which should be read aloud, in turn, by the presiding officer, or an appointed reader. No name ing officer, or an appointed reader. No name being appended, the party should feel free to discuss the merits of each manuscript sub-mitted, criticise and suggest improvements, while at the conclusion a vote should be taken to which of those offered should be enas to which of those offered should be en-titled, in the general opinion, to the highest place. Each girl should endeavor, not so much to copy the style and manner of any particular friend, or admired writer, but to improve, prune and embellish her own nat-ural production. At stated intervals, some older and experienced literary friend should be invited to be present, and give the benefit of his or her opinion and criticism. One sub-ject might be agreed upon as the theme for all pens, or each individual could be left to her own inclinations, and the intermediate readings or study would, of course, bear upon the articles written. Patience, perseverance, and good-nature are most essential to the success of any such undertaking. Nothing would be accomplished were it pursued inter mittently, or taken up and presently dropped again. Nor unless all agreed to a free ex-pression of opinion, without offense, would the general criticism be of service. To this object, the absence of signatures would greatly conduce; though, doubtless, in time, some, if not all of the writers, would come to be recog-nized by their style. Faithfully carried out, such a plan forms a useful school for the young

LITERARY . QUERIES

Under this heading the EDITOR will en-deavor to answer any possible question con-cerning authorship and literary matters.

A TEXAN,-Mrs. S. C. Perkins is the author of

G. G. S.—"The Ladies' Floral Cabinet," I am informed is no longer published.

BOONEY.—See A. E. H., in this column. Your writing is very good, and the paper of suitable size.

H. B. — I see no objection to your using in a magorine article the substance of a lecture you propose deliver-ing.

O. O.—"Brake's Magazine" is published in New York City. I cannot give you the address of "The American Raptist Flag."

J. E. R.—If you will send me your post office address, I will give your letter to Mr. John Preston True, who will answer your questions direct.

D. S.—"Home As Found," is the sequel to "Home-ward Hound," by Cooper, and "Wise and Otherwise," is the sequel to "A King's Daughter," by Pansy.

SCHEER.—The author of "Mildred's Ambition," published in the JOURNAL several years ago, is Mary J. Holmes. Price, $1.50. The JOURNAL can supply it.

M. S. T.—Frances Campbell Sparhawk was born in Amesbury, Mass, 1853. She is the author of "A Lazy Man's Work," "Little Polly Biatchiey," and other books.

J. B. N.—It is a matter of mutual arrangement be-tween publisher and author as to who shall have a work illustrated. If the author has artistic abilities be may prefer to do it himself.

M. L.—You are quite correct. The author of "Plain Tales from the Hills." and many other short stories, is Rudyard Ripling, which is his real name. He was born in Bombay, India, in 1865.

Pax.—See J. B. N. You must prepare your manuscript perfect in every detail for the printer. Aim to have as few corrections as possible in the proof, as it is very expensive to make afferentious then.

J. 0.—The birthday book you have compiled is a good one, inasmuch as none have been made from that anihor as far as I am aware. Unfortunately, the demand for such books has largely fallen off. Send your manuscript complete to some publisher.

C. H. H.—Do not correspond with editors direct. They are too busy to pay attention to communications except on matters of direct interest to them. Simply address your manuscript to such periodical as you se-lect. It will find its proper place.

Fay, and P. C. N.—If your stories have appeared in point, it is highly improbable that any publisher would care for them, unless they be of such extraordinary merit as to be deemed worthy of reprinting. If you do send them, do not fall to state that they have already been printed.

I. R. W.—Louisa Mühlhack, now deceased, was the sors de plane of Clara M. Mundt. The American pub-lishers of her books are D. Appleton & Company, of New York, to whom you can write. [2] It is customary for an author to receive remaineration from a dramati-nation of his work by others.

A. T.—Miss Jane Porter was been in Great Britain, 1776, and died in 1830. She was the author of "Theddess of Warsaw," "The Scottish Chiefs," and several other works. (2) Regina Maria Roche, but in the same country in 1765 and died in 1845, was the author of "The Chieften of The Abbey," "Discarded Son," and others.

M. W.—You send me a printed slip from the editor of a magazine enclosed with your article returned to you. I cannot aid you as you request in judging from its polite terms, which part of it applies to your manuscript. No editor can take upon himself to criticise or advise Bend it to some other magazine as the circular suggests.

NAINA.—In addition to such magazines as "The Century," Harper's," "Seriboer's," etc., you will flad much brief and interesting reading in "The Review of Reviews," Current Literature, "Short-Stories," (2) "The Phonographic World," and Frank Harrison's "Short-head Magazine," are two good journals on the subject of phonography.

A. E. H. AND MANY OTHERS.—If you will consult the Literary Queries columns of the back numbers of the JOURNAL, you will find many directions to young writers, how manuscript should be prepared, how to send k and what to de generally. Read the articles that have appeared "In Literary Circles," and I think they will assist you.

May.—See A. E. H. in this column. The dedication of a book to any person by an author is generally a token of esteem and regard on the author's part. In the early part of this century it was more common than now, and publishing was more costly. The dedication was generally in return for financial support in publishing the work.

M. E. M.—It is impossible for any editor to say when or how soon be will be able to give an answer regard-ing a manuscript. You must remember that he is the re-ciplest of many favors in the way of manuscripts, and that it takes time to have them read and decided upon. They must take their term. It may be weeks, perhaps months, before they are reached.

J. M. V.—I hardly know how to advise you to spend the amount of money you sinte for a library. If you have no books at present, certain standard authors are essential, and should be purchased at once. If, on the other hand, you have a beginning, it might be better, as you propose, not to buy all at once, but by degrees such books as you may feel you will need.

To Conscission DENTS.—I must again call attention to the fact that I cannot answer questions sent to me re-questing authors of pocifical quotations. It is simply impossible, and no activation will be paid to them. See the breading of this column. I must also request that is every case you send me your full name and address. It will be confidential, and may be of advantage to you.

E. W.—Had you given me your address, I would gladly have written to you direct. Literary work at the beginning is uncertain, and it is very difficult to make a living at it, unless you have name and reputation. I should certainly advise you to make the effort if you feel you have the genulus for it. Brad! "Writing for the Dollar," in the October number of the Jorna-

L. E. O., BERREUBA.—I would suggest, as a suitable book for a box. "Tom Brown's School Days," and " Little Women," by Louisa M. Alesti, for a girl. The Journal, will supply you with such books as you desire, viz. charies Kimgsiey, Longfellow, Havergal, or any others, If you had given your full name and address I should have been pleased to have sent you such a list of books as you desire.

A. M. M.—Copyright does not protect an idea. You can use the same provided you treat it in an original manner. You must prove that you have done so, and not copied bodily. It is half form, however, to take the piot of another's story and make a poem of it, and publish it noder your name, thereby claiming it as yours. Deg't do it. Be original, and do not be guilty of periodning the work of others to your own credit.

R. I.—Liberary bureaus materially assist authors in placing their manuscript. Publishers who employ readers rely largely upon their judgment. There is very little fear of their suppressing a meritorious writer from fear of successful rivalry. I have not read. "Memorable Events" or "The Wilch of Jamessown," and therefore cannot advise year which is the most frustworthy. Cotton Mather wrote "Wooders of the Invisible World."

Millsono Baro.—I am indebted to one of our read-ers, who has kindly sent me the following valuable, and not generally known information regarding John Lodand: He was born at Millsed, Kent Co., Delaware, March 9, 1785. He studied medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, but getting into trouble with the fac-nity, he did not graduals. After a theiling and roman-ic episode cencerning a beautiful young woman of his native village, he began a Wersary career, and became windly known. He sestmed the sorn & planes of Mil-ford Bard at the beginning of his literary life. He died in 1898. His biography is now being prepared for the press.

GREAT MAGAZINES

Goldthwaite's Geographical Magazine,

> A Popular Illustrated Monthly, ($2.00 per Year)

he Century Magazine, BOTH FOR $4.50.

+>: THE ;=+

Cosmopolitan Magazine, - AND -

> GOLDTHWAITE'S BOTH FOR $3.00.

This offer good until February 28, 1892. ADDRESS:

THE GOLDTHWAITES,

132 Nassau Street, - NEW YORK.

A Winter's Reading.

You have heard vaguely, perhaps, of the Chautauqua Reading Circle, but do you know what its plans are? Do you never feel the need of reading good books systematically? Should you not like to take up a definite course and pursue it regularly during the coming winter? A solitary reader writes: "The course lifts me out of my old life." A little perseverance for an hour each day will accomplish much. American History, Government and Literature, the chief subjects for 1891-92, certainly appeal to all patriotic men and women. At least, write for full details of the plan to the Office of the C. L. S. C., Drawer 194, Buffalo, N. Y.

Grand Christmas Double Numbers

London Graphic, Yule Tide, Holly Leaves, Lady's Pictorial, Pictorial World.

with beautiful colored plates and engravings, PRICE, 56 CENTS EACH.

These beautiful Coristmas numbers are incomparably superior to any of their competitors for popular favor, NOW READY. ALL NEWSDEALERS, OR THE INTERNATIONAL NEWS CO., New York,

AN AMERICAN EDITION OF THE 15 Cents Monthly, $1.75 Yearly.

No. 1, NOW R HADY, contains the opening chapes of two

New Stories of Absorbing Interest; also several complete stories, together with much useful and entertaining miscellaneous matter of great value in every household, forming one of the MOST ATTRACTIVE AND LOWEST-PRICED family magazines ever published. Price, 15 cents.

All Newsdealers, or THE INTERNATIONAL NEWS CO., New York.

YOUNG LADIES' JOURNAL

Published Monthly. January Part New Roady.

Each part contains all the latest Paris Fashions, with Gigantic Fashion Supplement of many Figures, and Colored Fashion Plate of twenty-four Figures, besides numerous Stories, New Embrotdery Designs, Patterns, etc. Price, 30 cents a copy; or yearly $4.00, including the extra Christmas Number, postpaid. For sale by all newsdealers, or newsdexlers, or THE INTERNATIONAL NEWS CO., New York.

WANTED CANVASSERS for the handsomest and cheng-IMMEDIATELYthe World.

THE MONTHLY ILLUSTRATED AMERICAN. Price only ONE DOLLAR a year.

Commissions to canvassers from 20 to 50 per cent. For further particulars and sample copies write to THE ILLUSTRATED AMERICAN PUB. CO... Astor Place, New York City.

TOKOLOGY, a complete Ladies' Guide in health and disease. Women write that "Tokology is worth its weight in gold." "Should my house take fire it would be the first book saved." "No book sells like TOKOLOGY." Prepaid, $2.75. Sample pages free. Best terms to agents. ALICE B. STOCKHAN & Co., 277 Madison St., Chicago.

Action markers energethers for "SHEFP'S PROTOGRAPHS SHEPP'S of the WORLD;" produced at an estiMr. J. M. Marchall, Dester, Ind., charted Soft is 4 days; Rev.
Henry PHOTOGRAPHS Mais Rev.
RST in 6 heers; Miss H. H. Harris, Gardeld, Press, $14 in 26 minators. The greatest OF THE WORLD.
Soft on earth. Hear.
morth (Bustraid circulers and terms free. Books on greatest Protifying). Exactlysic costs only $1.00. Address, Globe Briss Publishing Co., 755 Christiani Storest, Fhiladelphia, Fa.

"SHORT STORIES." The new magnetine of Send Ten Cents in stamps for a specimen copy to-THE CURRENT LITERATURE PUBLISHING COMPANY, DO West 20d Street, New York.

THE HUMAN HAIR,

Why it Fails Off, Turns Grey, and the Bemedy. By Prof. HABLEY PARKER, F. R. A. S. A. T. Lesse & Co., 1911 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa

WANTED - Agents for "World's Columbian Expension Illustrated," Official organ of the Fair Sells at sight; large commission. Enclose stamps.

J. B. CASEBELL, 218 La Sulle Stamps, Chicago, Itt. Google

** MISS MAUDE HAYWOOD will be glad through this Department to answer any questions of an Art nature which her readers may send to her. She cannot, however, undertake to reply by mail; please, therefore, do not ask her to do so. Address all letters to MISS MAUDE HAYWOOD, care of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, Philadelphia, Pa.

PAINTING IN WATER COLOR

PIRST PAPER

A FEW PRELIMINARY SUGGESTIONS

ZATER COLOR as a medium bas charms all its own. It has unlimited capabilities in the hands of an experi-enced artist, and yet is particularly suited to the early efforts of the

the early efforts of the amateur. The indescribable delicacy, transparency and freshness obtainable by a skillful worker, and the apparent ease with which very rapid and effective sketches can by its means be produced, create the desire in so many to dabble in the art. I say apparent ease advisedly, for, as a matter of fact, a master's hund is required to create in a few broad washes or strokes of the brush a life-like impression of a passing phase of nature, gleam of stuckine, or a transient pose. Clever sketching, properly so called, for the term is often misapplied to more elaborate work which can justly lay no claim to the title, is hardly to be expected of beginners. Let them at first be content to make careful studies, and so gradually learn to master their materials that in time they will for themselves discover the surest and quickest method of expressing the effect they desire. It is a golden rule for those happily conscious of their own ignorance never to stint work, but astiently to work over a drawing until of their own ignorance never to stint work, but patiently to work over a drawing until have done the very utmost they can with it.

Now, as to materials. They need not be many, but must be of the best. As far as the colors are concerned a simple pulette is infinitely to be preferred, flot only as easier to manage but as producing the cleanest, truest and most forcible work. It is better to buy only just what is needed to begin with, and not the boxes ready filled by the manufacturers. A list of the most useful colors for a beginner is often asked for. With the following it is passible to paint in any and every kind of subject and style: Ivory black, indigo, Antwerp or Prusslan blue, cobalt, burnt umber, raw umber, burnt sienna, raw sienna, vanwerp or Frassian bine, cobait, burnt umber, raw umber, burnt sienna, raw sienna, van-dyke brown, yellow ochre, chrome yellow, Indian yellow, lemon yellow, orange cadmi-um, crimson lake, rose madder, brown mad-der, light red, vermilion, terre verte, emerald green and Chinese white, which is only to be used in cases of necessity. If the artist par-ticularly wishes to add to this list, some more of the chromes or cadmiums are often useful. ticularly wishes to add to this list, some more of the chromes or cadmiums are often useful, especially in pointing yellow flowers, but they are not indispensable, and, I repeat, the simpler the paletie the better. Brushes should be of sable, and carefully selected; three or four of varying sizes are plenty. One should be large, for broad washes, and none need be very fine, unless for painting small faces, for a large brush which comes to a condneed be very fine, unless for painting small faces, for a large brush which comes to a good point will do very small work, and it is well, with a view to boldness of execution, to always use as targe a brush as possible. A few hints as to the preservation of these treasures, which, if well chosen, they veritably are; for with inferior tools it is well-nigh impossible for even the best worker to produce good results. With care they will fast for years; in ignorant hands they may be ruined in a week. Do not leave them full of color, or lying wet, or in the water; do not endeavor to coax color with them from a dried-up pan; keep an old with them from a dried-up pan; keep an old brush for this purpose; do not, in putting them away, allow the hairs to become bent. The paper should be Whatman's hand-made, finer or coarser, according to the subject, and also to individual taste to a great extent. For work or sketching, the blocks containing layers of paper, from which the sheets can be removed as they are used, are very useful. If the paper is bought in sheets it must be stretched before painting upon it. This can be done either in one of the frame-boards can be done either in one of the frame-boards sold for the purpose, or by menus of glue or paste on an ordinary drawing-board. In either case the paper must be thoroughly wetted first, since in drying it contracts and so becomes stretched. The best paste is made in the ordinary way with flour, a small lump of glue about the size of a walnut to a pound jar of paste being added to strengthen it. Although stretching the paner is really a very though stretching the paper is really a very casy matter, it seems to present so many diffi-culties to the beginner that a few simple directions may be acceptable. Bend up about half an inch of the paper all around, and keeping this edge dry, proceed to thoroughly soak the rest of the paper with clean water, a clean sponge and clean lingers. Nothing is more disagreeable to work upon than solled paper. Then rub the paste onto the dry edge—being careful not to let any drop or smear on to the face of the paper—and with a clean rag press it into contact with the board. Allow it to lie flat, and to dry spontaneously, when every wrinkle should disappear, and the sheet present a surface inspiring in its smoothness and spollessness.

A FEW WORDS TO DESIGNERS

VERY great number of letters come from the readers of this department asking various questions as to the possibilities of a career for women hadesignets, as to the practical details of the training necesof the training necessary, and as to the best means of finding a market for the work of these who already consider themselves competent to undertake it.

In the first place, with regard to whether the designs made by American women are likely to find a ready sale, the answer is emphatically Fis—if they are of the right kind, and there is no reason why they should not be as good as those of any other nation. But the difficulty, as a general rule, lies here at the very outset, in the fact that very few seem to have the faintest ides of what the art of deto have the figurest idea of what the art of de-signing really is, and of the eternal truths and signing really is, and of the eternal truths and principles upon which it is founded. In the judgment of men competent to give an opinion, the characteristics of the daughters of this nation render them pre-eminently ca-pable of the highest artistic development. They are original and poetic, and, furthermore, are extremely quick of apprehension, capable when once an idea is presented to their minds of giving it practical expression. Therefore, the whole aim of art being to express the truths of nature, it will be seen that the very foundation of a designer's education must consist in learning to see those truths. Every truths of nature, it will be seen that the very foundation of a designer's education must consist in learning to see those truths. Every one who aspires to any career in art must grow to realize that the fundamental laws and principles which govern all things in heaven and earth are identical, and to recognize the same forms alike in the orbit described by a planet as in the vegetable or mineral kingdoms, in physics, in chemistry, in all nature and in all science, because they are, from greatest to least, stamped with the impress of the hand of the same Creator. Art that is not animated by these vital principles is dead, just as a religion where the truth is not worked out by faith in the life of each individual is dead, and as the body from which the spirit has fled is dead also. Those who so misapprehend the high nature of an art vocation as to imagine that copying or imitation—by taking other men's designs and analting them over in a slightly different form—has any legitimate right to be called designing, are doomed to a certain and a well-deserved failure. The fraud is recognizable at once, it is too painfully common; while, on the other hand, the work inspired directly by nature, translated by a human mind, and therefore original, inasmuch as it is the individual expression of an actual truth, however simple or even crude it may be, is equally certain of a quick appreciaactual truth, however simple or even crude it may be, is equally certain of a quick apprecia-tion. Herein is the whole point. The king-dom of art, like the kingdom of God, lies within each one; the vital spark which makes the art, whether it is painting, sculpture, music or poetry, a living thing, exists in the soul of the individual, and can neither be bought nor sold. sold.

sold.

To come to one or two practical questions. The great mistake made by so many is that money is, in fact, the one and only object of their desire. When a man wishes to shoot a bird on the wing, if he aims directly at it he will lose both the bird and his powder also. So in art. To aim beyond the money is the surest way of obtaining it. The best preparation for the profession of designing is undoubtedly a good general training in an art school of undenlable standing, preferably choosing one where the course is specially intended for those whose study of art is with a view to its practical application to decoration or manupractical application to decoration or manufacture; but the really important thing is to get a good general education of the mind, the eye and the hand. A roan or a woman who can draw well has a better chance, from a can draw well has a bester chance, from a merely funancial point of view, than anyone who, without the necessary fundamental train-ing, has merely acquired the knowledge of some technical details in order to produce drawings which may be practical, but do not rise above the dead level of worn-out and commonplace conventionality. Certain schools profess to teach in so many, or rather in so few, lessons, the whole art of designing for some particular branch to those without any previous knowledge of art. This is a sheer impossibility, and money invested in such a way is simply wasted. No one would expect to be able to compose music on the strength of a few weeks' study, and the case is analogous. Worse yet is the idea that the requisite education can be given by corres-pondence; for while in some kinds of work, a knowledge may perhaps be gained solely through written teaching, this mode of instruction is particularly unsuitable for the study of practical designing. In speaking thus strongly the object is, if possible, to deter those who can ill afford it from a mistaken outlay of their money, and from inevitable disap-pointment and failure.

HELP IN FYOUR OWN WORK

Under this heading I will be glad to answer every month questions relating to Art and MAUDE HAYWOOD.

To MANY CORRESPONDENTS-I must repost that there are certain questions that it is quite impossible for me to answer in this column, shhough it am always ghad to give all the help in my power in those who write to goe about their individual work or aims. At the same time. I cannot give the names and addresses of firms, nor recommend private teachers, nor say where oil paintings can be disposed of. Neither can I answer by mail. All whose letters contain these or similar queries will pieuse consider them replied to by this

Mas, I. J.—The sole "mainterism" necessary is the ability to tay the palent on very thinly and amouthly. You need only use frush spirits of turpestine is passe-ing on the linen and slik for the purpose you describe.

Rigon, -1 do not know of any five school for music like that of the Cosper Institute for Art. You should write to the office of This Lavaus' House Jones at for the particulars of their offices of free musical training.

New Representation A design of wild roses, at of degwood, would be subable for your white lines such lined with light those suito. These before single is drawing, and comparatively user to paint.

Y. L. H=(1) In palaring in oils on obsesse-cloth, mix the colors with fresh spirits of torpentine, to prevent them spreading. (2) Either oils or water-colors may be used upon silk ribbon, but the latter are preferable. Gum-antico, when employed with water-colors, is initially with water, but it is not needed at all when palaring on silk.

MARGARET—The information that you ask for is given in an article emittled, "Women in Hintmates," published in this assumer of the Jutanat. The drawings are made with hints lak, on Bristobboard, of course, you can do such work at your own home, as drawings are easily sent through the mails to any part of the country.

I. F.—In painting a tiger-filly, the color may be obtained by using light, methons and orange cadmium. Afterwards ginzing where necessary with ruse-madder. Lay the shadows in first with raw umber. The spots may be of raw umber and crimoso-take, using the same color fur the staneous, and accentuating the latter, if required, with brown madder.

M. D.—Seitinble flowers for painting on Nile-green sails, intended for a dress, would be either the large flowering elemants, in delicate masure that, or tea roses, if for evening war, it is advasable to look at concrobe-ing by artificial light, as the pointing advances, in order to be sure that you are getting life right effect, as all shades of violet and yellow are liable to appear mech changed when thus same.

Mrs. W. H. C. L.—For the local color and shadows of a glass goldet, we whole, yellow order, mw umber, cobalt and trory-black. The reflections thrown by stronoiding objects will particle of their lints. Glass should be painted suggestively, with but few touches, the not casy to represent really well—unless you know how, and when you do, like many other apparently difficult things. It becomes a wonderfully simple matter.

Sussemmer.—The following is a receipt for a copying tablet, which I can personally answer for. Steep two concess of glue in four onners of water nutli the latter is absorbed. Add eight concess of glycerine, four to six drope of carboils celd and a small imap of withing. But this toto a secrepun over the fire, and side well all is well mixed; then pour it out into a shallow in and leave it to cool. Before using it, pass a damp sponge over the surface.

R. H. B. AND D. S.—The address of the Cooper Institute is Eighth street and Fourth avenue. New York City. Write to the Hopertunedent of the Women's Art School. You may have to wait for some little time after making your application before a varance occurs. In your position you cannot do better than avail your self of the free course of study oftend there to breeze who are stiling to work, but who cannot affect to pay for their own art schamber.

W. C. S. D.—The best way to dispose of designs for wall papers is to entend them to the different manu-facturers, either sending them by mail enclosing stamps for their returns if unvalishin, or taking them person-ally. The latter is the better plan where it is possible, in order to bear inver to make the designs, get your in-struction from a successful practical designer. The techasical part is not hard to acquire; but as I have said before, anyone who undertakes this work right to be naturally original and creative. Designs that are seen imitations are extremely unsatiable.

I. E.—Soak the photograph in cold water until it flows off the card of florif. The painting yet speak of is widently crystoleom, and the receipt given for the poste to be used in mounting the photographs on glass for this work is as follows; Take several large table-spoonfuls of arrow root, and this gradually with a little cold water, then pour on some warm water until guilts input, and put it has an eagle-thred susceptance a dear fire; stir all the time while on the fire, and remove after it has been on one stirute; do not inflow to helf; pour the mixture thus, made into a small jar and keep it covered.

o. M. R.—I will try to answer your question more fully in an article at some future time. In sketching animals from nature aim chiefly to get the and action into the drawings. When makings study of an ani-mal having king or thick fie, he specially careful to realize the form beneath, and draw very assumitely the joints, and those portions of the body which are least hidden by the growth of the hair. As you will find that your models never keep the same pesition for long to-gether, practice studying their satisticles and attempting to respectace them from memory. Make many skytches of single timbs, It is a first that this beauch of art requires more than rivet is special self and na-ternal aptitude, but sowth may be done by patient, con-scientious work.

scientious work.

J. A. C.—(1) The colors to be used in marine moon-lights are not arbitrary. A world mixture for a night sky is twoy-black, vellow other and white, adding permanent blue or relatif, according to the color steared; with white, epimiesa and rew-moders around the moon listed. The san reflects the sky links; probably tensor yellow will be needed for the parliance of light caused by the moise shishing on the water. (1) Simple frames in antirols woods are article and inexpensive, (1) to not possible to give declaric advice without a fuller knowledge of the requirements of the case. (3) Hang the pirture on a line with the eye of a man of average bright. (4) Do not varieth a politing until some months after it is flatched, and then use mastle or copal. If you wish to varieth it at all.

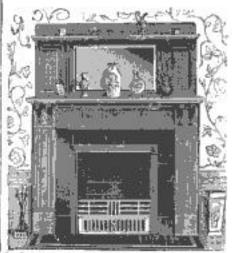

If you wish to various it at all.

Micronerrie—(1) The only way in which you can learn to min your colors is by practice and experience. If you are not able to have personal teaching, you would probably find a bandbook beloud a first. [13] The general rule in publishing flowers is to commonce by blocking in the shadows, drawing them very excelling with every stroke of the beach; afterwards put in the local tones in such a way that every teach has a meaning. Pay head to getting the drawing, the color, and the light and shade as much like the original so possible, and the inchinique will take care of liked. (2) we answer to "Many Cartespendents," (4) The series of handbooks published by Winser & Newton, and precentice at all art deuters, are very good. They include treatless on almost every branch of work.

18. D.—Voir operation as to whether designing is a almost every branch of work.

B. D.—Your question as to whether designing is a predishic profession, is a hard one to answer satisfactority. To a successful designer it is were predishing but competition is herene than it flowerly was, and many things go to make up sucress. Technical knowledge is, of contrast, requisite, and everyone, with patience, dan galp it; but adment is not sufficient. It is increased to be able to create and originate object; and though the infent may be ruitivated, it must be, to an extent, inhere. Much disappointment has resulted from winner taking however from teachers prefessing to teach designing, who, though preserving a knowledge of the principles of the art, have no experience in their application in a good school specially deviced to the study of art in its practical branches, such as the New York institute for Art Artisens.

THIS Hard Wood Mantel with beveled Mirror. 30 x 17 inches, Berlin black frame, Club House basket, ask screen, and seb past, fire-brick, clay and top the, glassel tiles said hearth, complete as shown, will to sent to any railroad station eart of Omaha, Neb., and Galveston, Tex., freight prepaid, for $61.50, cash with order.

When ordering, ask for Mannel P. L. and ence myle of fights ancel, either Black Webnut, Cherry (named at makegany setter) NAS (antique or material and width of chimney breast. THE HOST, MITCHELL PURKLYLIKE CO.,

THE RUELS MALESTAND OF WORLD WITCH AND ACCUMENTS. AND ACCUMENTS AND ACCU

HOW DAINTY! Edwards' Orange Spoon.

Would you like an Grange Set? Kulfe and Spoon STERLING SILVER INLAID spoons and forks will outwear triple-plate three those, at about the same money. If you cannot get them of your Jeweler, send to us for entalogue.

THE HOLMES & EDWARDS SILVER CO., Bridgeport, Conn.

THE ART AMATEUR.

SUPERB COL- FOR AND PICTURES, including Resear, Water-Lilies, Peaches and Grapes, Mocalight Martine, Landscapes, Dog. Cars Meeting, Strailows, Female Portunit shown in three progressive stages, [These progressive lessons in oils and scatter-colors are a special feature for 1892.] &c.

& 3 MOS. SUBSCRIPTION

& 3 MOS. SUBSUM:
beginning with any month.
In order to seems this most liberal offer [the ordinary price for all it localedes to $2.75] you must cut out this advertisement and send it direct to the publisher, MONTAGUE MARKS, 21 Takes Square, New York,
C5-Descripted Catalogue of over 100 studies, free. With sample

The Art Amnteur gives numerous working designs for Pyrography, with full instructions.

Priscilla Painting Book

ILLUSTRATED. A Collection of Charming Studies selected from The Modern Priscilla. including Flowers, Fruit and Landscapes, with plain Directions for Painting in Oil, and WATER GOLORS. PRICE SO CENTS.

Subscribe for THE MODERN PROVEDLA and keep posted on the local Passey Work. Instructions of Painting, Hone Decomption, etc.

SPECIAL PRICES to Yearly or Life, Phill Subscrib-emen Paiterns and Materials. Illustrated 14st Free.

Yearly Subscription 50c

Trial 4 Months, 10c. Special: To mayors sending us One New York To hardy subscriber and Se exira for lookage size or durid subscribers, will be exira for lookage size or durid subscribers, will Free PRISCILLA PUB. CO., LYNN, MASS.

ORPHEA MUSICAL BOX

Is the Latest invention in Swiss Musical Boxes.

They are the sweetest, most complete, durable, and perfect Musical Boxes made, and any number of ones can be obtained for them. Also a complete line of all other styles and slees from 30 cts. to 1870. The Largest Mock in America. The most appropriate wedding, anniversary, and holiday present. No Musical Box can be Guaranteed to wear well without Gautschly Safety Pure Change and Check, Pat, in Switzerland and in the U.S. Gen. Agents Concert Organs, Send stamp for Prices.

Old Music Boxes carefully Equations and Incorrect.

Old Music Boxes carefully Repaired and Improved. GAUTSCHI & SONS, 1030 CHESTNUT ST.

ADAPTED TO ALL KINDS OF

HAND AND MACHINE WORK

LACE AND EMBROIDERY, now of so much interest to the Ladies, especially considered.

SOLD BY ALL RESPECTABLE DEALERS IN THE COUNTRY.

ASK FOR BARBOUR'S.

WALL PAPER Attractive styles. Attracts. 1000 samples.
NO. ATOL. A.L. DIAMENT & CO., 1200 Market 21, Philos. De.
NO. ATOL. A.L. DIAMENT & CO., 1200 Market 21, Philos. Pa.

WIFE'S HOUSEHOLD ALLOWANCE

VERY woman likes to have money to spend as she pleases. Indeed, this desire is not pecu-liar to women, men share in it, but as it is universally conceded to be their prerogative, there is no necessity for emphasizing the fact in their behalf. To "do what I will with mine own" is an instinct implanted deep in human nature, and when natural impulses are thwarted or perverted mischief is sure to fol-

T the time a woman marries, her husband A T the time a woman marries, her husband theoretically takes her into partnership. She has as much right in the joint assets of the firm as he has. It is true that he carns the money, but it would be of little use to him in making and maintaining a home without the aid of his wife. By wise administration and prudent management she makes it go as far as possible, and greatly increases its purchasing capacity. We do not need Benjamin Franklin to remind us that a penny saved is a penny earned. She may justly be considered a direct contributor to the resources of the firm.

WHEN a man has the misfortune to lose WHEN a man has the misfortune to lose his wife, if there is no member of his household who can take her place he discovers that a housekeeper is a costly luxury. Beside the first expense, he finds that it makes a great difference in the out-go whether there is a person at the head of affairs devoted to his interests, or one who is serving merely for an expected return. One is faithfully striving to manage his property in the most economical namer, while he is fortunate if the other is not wilfully wasting it. The contrast will manner, while he is fortunate if the other is not wilfully wasting it. The contrast will force itself upon him when he makes up his balance sheet, if it has not impressed itself before in a thousand ways. If the services which a wife renders in the home have a pen-niary value, why should she not be entitled to a fair share of the funds of the firm, whose money she is saving, to be expended at her discretion?

A T first sight an allowance seems almost an insult to the woman who has a joint right with her husband to all his possessions.

When two persons are truly one they can have no separate interests or belongings. But when one holds the purse strings and the other has one holds the purse strings and the other has to ask for every penny she receives from it, she is placed in what is to most women an ex-tremely humiliating position. It is bad enough when there is perfect love and confi-dence to soften it; if, unhappily, these are ab-sent, it is a constant source of irritation that might be avoided.

THE husband, knowing the extent of his resources, or the probabilities of his income during the year, can decide what amount he can afford to spend upon his family, apportioning this as he does his insurance premiums, or any other legitimate business demand. If he places this sum unreservedly in the hands of his wife he will find that it is spent much more judiciously than if it were doled out as the necessity for each expenditure doled out as the necessity for each expenditure arose. A monthly allowance is usually the most satisfactory. The principle is the same, whether it costs fifty dollars, or five hundred; or five thousand to maintain the house.

WOMAN unaccustomed to the use of A WOMAN unaccustomed to the use of money will no doubt make mistakes at first, but she will soon learn by experience that if she exceeds her limit one month she must retreach the next to make up for it, and expenses will fall naturally into their proper propertion. If a woman is such an utterly incapable and irresponsible being that she can be used to be used to be underly incapable and irresponsible being that she can be used to be upon the state of the can be used to be used to be upon the state of the can be used to be used to be upon the state of the can be used to be used to be used to be used to be upon the state of the used to be upon the state of the used to be used to be upon the used to be used to be used to be used to be upon the not be trusted with money lest she should squander it, she is not fit to be at the head of any man's home.

It is always more satisfactory to pay in ready money; where this is impossible the monthly bills can at least be kept within fixed limits, and there should always be a margin of spending money. A sensible, energetic woman takes delight in making her allowance go as far as possible. Children und servants, dress, food, fuel and light all bave their proper share. If by skillful management she can contrive to save something it will not be expended selfishly. When she makes gifts she will feel that it is her own she is giving. Instead of separating her from her husband, the sense that she is working side by side with him for a common object will only make the boad firmer and unite them more closely.

ELEGABETE BORNSON SCOVE share. If by skillful management she can con-

ELINABETH ROBINSON SCOVIL

THE BEST BOOKS FOR CHILDREN

By HELEN JAY

HE secret of many a ruined life lies between the lids of a bad book read at the formative period. The home was protect-ed against malaria, but the germs of evil thought were allowed free cutrance. In other cases habits of reading were allowed free entrance. In other cases, habits of reading were not inculcated by placing near the restless little hands traps of information painted with illustration and story. There is such a thing as mental dyspepsia. A child fed upon candy develops an abnormal appetite for sweets, rejecting solid food. So the brain may be surfeited with sentimental love stories and unnatural adventure until it loses all taste for anything more substantial.

and unnatural adventure until it loses all faste for anything more substantial.

Children and animals for a brief time in the lives of the former, associate upon terms of perfect equality. The little girl would not be surprised at any time to have her kitten pour her woes into her sympathizing ear. She cares nothing for Jack the builder, but is devoted to "the cow with the crumpled born." Taking advantage of this fact, natural history can be taught in most delightful guise. Fable, fact and fancy can unite in sowing the seeds of habits of observation and love for all thiogs both great and small. Books like Uncle Remus's "Little Folks in Feathers and Furs." "Queer Pets at Marcy's," "What Darwin Saw," and Wood's "Homes Without Hands," are a few of a numerous class indicating the character of one division of the ideal library for the of one division of the ideal library for the child. To these may be added Kingsley's "Water Babies" and Buckley's "Fairy-land of Science.

of Science."

I would also enter a plea for "Mother Goose;" never let that dear old lady be banished from the shelves. Place her side by side with "Dollie Dimple" and the Rollo and Bessie books for the very little ones.

Every boy wants something to happen. He glories in adventure, and gloats over a narrow escape. Before he falls into the hands of "Dick the Scalper of the Plains," introduce him to the "Pathfinder" and all his kin. In order that he may have an intelligent idea of the him to the "Pathfinder" and all his kin. In order that he may have an intelligent idea of the Indians, for after those Indians in some fash-ion he will go, let him read Morehead's "Wanneta, the Sioux" and "Our Wild In-dians," by Col. Dodge. The works of School-craft, Francis Parkman and Catlin contain accurate accounts of the customs of the tenen craft, Francis Parkman and Catlin contain accurate accounts of the customs of the tepse lighted up by camp-fires and alive with hunting scenes. "A Century of Dishonor," and "Romona," by Helen Hunt Jackson, will make the average boy less eager to buy a scalping-knife and leave home in search of vengeauce, From Mrs. Custer's "Following the Guidon" and Captain King's "Campaigning with Crook," he will get the genuine ring and dash of battle without profanity, or inisleading statements of the delights of life free from family restraints.

from family restraints.

The pit-fall that lies in wait for the sister of the boy reader of equal age is sentiment. She is apt to become devoted to novels not of the best apt to become devoted to novem he in or size ex-type but those full of the love making of very commonplace people over whom the novelist throws a misleading glamor. She needs two things—occupation, and contact with whole-some characters. In a most successful edu-cational institution the teachers have found the some characters. In a most successful educational institution the teachers have found the following books helpful in interesting girls in needlework and in the details of home life:

"A Bendle of Letters to Blasy Girls," Grace Dodge: "Beauty in Dress," Miss Oakey:
"Onr Girls," Dio Lewis; "What Girls Can Do.", Phyllis Brown; "Manners and Social Usages," Sherwood, and "We Girls" and "Real Folks," by Mrs. Whitney, not forgeting "Gentle Bread-winners" and "Mollie Bishop's Family," by Catherine Owen.

The development of character is charmingly portrayed by Sophia May in her Quinnebaset series, consisting of "Our Helen," "The Doctor's Daughter," "Quinnebaset Girls," "The Asbury Twins" and "Janet." Miss Alcott's "Little Men," Little Women, "An Old-Fashioned Girl" and "Eight Cousins," teach such sweet lessons of family love and loyalty that we cannot afford to banish them for newer comers. "One Day's Weaving" and "John Jack," by Lynde Palmer, teach the importance of self-control and the blessing of work for others, "A New England Girlbood," by Lucy Larcon, is a mental and moral tonic. "The Titcomb Papers" of Dr. Holland, and "Girls and Women," by E. Chester, meet almost every question which puzzles the growting girl. With equal prolit a boy might read Mathew's "Getting On in the World," Thaver's "Tact, Push and Principle," Eggleston's "How to Educate Yourself" and "Thrift," "Self Help" and "Character," by Samusel Smiles, Washitugton's "Rules of Civility," may well be added. Washington's "Rules of Civility," may well be added. Everyone knows the child's love for a true story. To meet this want are works like brake's "Indian History for Young Folks," and his delightful "Legends of the New England Coast," Kingsley's "Heroes," Coffin's "Boys of '76," Fiske's "War of Independence," Mrs. Strickland's "Queens of England," "Historic Girls" and Abbott's smaller historic Perhaps there is no part of a child's education so overlooked as his political training. He should draw in Americanism with his first breath of literature. "Politics for Young America," by Nordboff, will help him accurately to define his their state. America," by Nordboff, will help him accurately to define his rights and duties as a citizen before he is trusted with the ballot, and Hale's "A Man without a Country" will clinch his patriotism, Edward Eggleston's "Hoosier Schoolmaster," Irving's "Sketch Book," Hawthorne's "Twice-Told Tales," "Old Town Folks," by Mrs. Stowe, and the "Grandissimes," by Cable, as types of American literature should be given preference.

Lamb's "Shakespeare for Children," Whitter's "Ballads," Longfellow's "Tales of a Wayside Inn" and "Hiawatha," satisfy a child's dramatic instinct and natural love of rhyme. Hawthorne's "Wonder Tales," and the "Childhood of the World," by Clodd, are books which sow seeds of wide culture and pure imagination.

Pure imagination.

A book may be said to fail in its mission if it does not tend to make the body stronger, the mind clearer and the soul purer. It must not be simply good, but good for something. "A Noble Lafe," "My Mother and 1," "John Halifax," "Ben Hur," "In His Name," "Ten Times One," and the "Boyhood of Christ," are builders of spiritual muscle.

Granted that the mother has these books, how shall she add to her store? First, by bearing in mind the general laws which we have indicated, and from time to time buying the best authorities on the subjects stated. Sec-indicated, and from time to time buying the best authorities on the subjects stated. Second, by nover trusting to the name either of an author or publisher to the extent of placing in her child's hand a book of whose contents she is ignorant. Third, by clinging to the standard works of tried authors, instead of being allured by "Christmas literary novelties." Fourth, by realizing that most of the books delighted in by children were written for older people. Fifth, by carefully choosing a good periodical which, bound at the close of each year, will in time multiply itself into each year, will in time multiply itself into a library

HOW I MANAGED A BABY

HOW I MANAGED A BABY

This is how i managed. I must tell you that I had been considerably impressed by the results of my sister-in-law's training of her one baby, and determined to be as successful with my reduct and obstreperous boy as she had been with her delicate little girl. The exact system she had followed I had not at the time the means of succertaining; but this is what I did: When my baby was three meaths' old I began. Every murning I laid him down, and for five whole minutes left him free to kick or cry, or generally amoso himself. During that time I neither looked at nor spoke to him-bard as it sometimes was to be firm. Gradually the five minutes grew to ton, and so on, till when he was ten meather old he would sit on the rug or stramble around unnoticed for an hour, not easy contented but happy, absorbed in play with his various simple boys. Meathers I was free be employ that hear to so in any way that seemed best in mr. Then would follow a belet game of runns, and by that thus to so in instead with the chamberwork and was result to carry bely out for his walk, after which he slept till dinner time. The awardantages of this system are obvious, and even had I been able to hire a dozen girl i and finished have deviated from it.

**CARROLLERY**

TREATING AN AFFLICTED CHILD

MY first baby, an eight-pound hoy, was born the eleventh day of December, and I can truthfully say "then my troubles began," and for the benefit of any poer mother who, like myself, has faithfully searched through all ber old Journals for help in a similar trouble. I want to give my experience.

From the beginning I had not sufficient milk, and the little fellow could not digest cow's milk or condensed milk or anything with a suspicion of milk in it; then came a weary trial of prepared foods, almost all of which tailed for milk, but which we yield with and wither a my time with a suspicion of milk in it; then came a weary trial of prepared foods, almost all of which tailed for milk, but which we ried with and when the head of any time of the milk of the milk, but which we ried with and the head of the milk of the sum of the milk of the sum of normatice and did not thrive. In the milet of it all we found be was repared. Buy after day, and night after night, for hours at a time, we would shand try to hold this rupture in place, with the poor little fellow screaming with pain, until he was five meatin old. Hoping we wently find a bool to agree with him, which would fatten him, thereby healing the rupture and saving bin the agency has we supposed) of wearing a tross, we were finally nitrised to give the halv cream (one past creams to three of uniter making it stronger as the baby could stand it), and in "put a tross on immediately." We first ried the cream, witch we found to agree with him perfectly, and then gut on the tross which, much to our surprise, nother woorded nor fretted him, and that week he began to gain. He is now eight menths old, weight eighteen pounds, has six testh, is well and strong and has entirely recovered from his rupture. In closing, let me way to all mothers having babies likewbe afflicted, pat on the trust of once, and try the cream, without making to go through the whole ratalogue of "Baby Foods."

A MOTHER'S INFLUENCE

A MOTHER'S INFLUENCE

A MOTHER'S influence over her children begins at a very early age, earlier than one would fillnk unless able to judge from experience.

A neat, tody mether will make a user child, and a pleasant, cheerful mother a picusant child, while the mother. A peat, tody mether will make a user child, and a pleasant, cheerful mother a picusant child, while the mother who babtimally wears a frown and allows berself to speak either in a sharp or feetful ione, will som find her little ones following the example she has unconsciously given them, and probably wonder why they are so disagreeable or fretful, instead of being pleasant and cheerful.

If my boy comes is from school in a freeful mood and I meet him in the same mood, what would be the result? I would not be in that way bein lim to overcome his freefulness, and wield an influence for goodover him. But if I meet him with a pleasant word, and finding there is no particular cause for his freefulness, pass if over for the lime being and interest him in something else, to take his thoughts from himself and his function wrongs, here suickly the mood changes and he is my own pleasant boy again. When he is himself, I can successfully tell him of the wrong he has done in aboving binasel to become so fretful.

But to always wisel a good influence, a mother must be ever on the worth that she does not, by her pown shortcomings, piace any obstacle in the pathway of the little ones infruenced to be core. And above all things else, always keep a promise made to them.

A CURE FOR BOW-LEGS

A CURE FOR BOW-LEGS

CAN any of the methers in "Mothers' Curser" tell always groupe out in his carriage until this summer when while away in the country. Of course he was running about out of doors all the time, and I noticed his lettle legs are getting quite "bandy." I think they call it, from the knoes down : they carre slightly to the ankle. His feet do not turn over nor do they burn in, and it may be they will get all right assies, but I do won this limbs to be straight and woll-shaped. He is a healthy, chubly little fellow of nearly two years. I shall be glad to hear of any plan I can halp it.
A Disvocracy or "Motricem' Consecu."

A singular mode of the modern for the property.

A simple mode of treatment for how-legs is A supper mode of treatment for sow-legs is to have a layer or two of thick leather mulled the entire length of the soles of the shors, on the soles edge. For knock-knees the teather must be applied on the inner edge, thus turning the feel out. Any shoemaker can put it on. The shors must be without heels. Dedinary apparatus for these deformation, nor Ordinary apparatus for these deformities, par-ticularly knock-knee, is too cumbersome for little children. They cannot wear it with PHYSICIAS.

January.

One of the most important resolutions that a mother can adopt at the beautiful resolutions that a mother can adopt at the beautiful resolution to the dealer mine the prepared food without knowing sit the ingredients of which such food is composed, and its adoptation to the perfect physical vacin methers, on application, to well such example, propagit, and give the composition of Northern food.

The laminion of Control of Tool. [3] Warren St., S. Y.

Nestle's Food

SENSIBLE WOMEN all want FERRIS GOOD SENSE CORSET WAISTS. THOUSANDS NOW IN USE. NOW IN USE, Bost for Health,
Economy and Beauty.
BUTTONS at front intread of CLASTS.
HING BUCKLE at hipfor Hose Supporter.
Tage fastened Buttons
—uson't pail of. Corbbige Ention-holesteon't urear out.
FIT ALL ALES-Infasts
IO Adults, Sold by ITANDER PETAILEDE LEADING RETAILERS

Marshall Field & Co. CHICAGO, Wholesale Westers Agests.
FERRIS BROS., 841 Brondway, N. Y.

MIZPAH" VALVE NIPPLES WILL NOT COLLAPSE.

Send for Circular,

Make sursing easy, and prevent much coile, because they admit air into the bottle as the milk is drawn out, and prevents a various being formed. Sam-nie free by mail upon request, with valuable information for cleaning and knepping nipples sweet and healthy. WALTER F. WARK, 70 S. Third St., Phills., Pa.

INFANTS' HEALTH WARDROBE. ice: Short clothes 26 pat, Me. directions, kind, amount material required. Mrs. F. E. Phillips, Keene, B. H.

BABY WARDROBE PATTERNS

[Safants' clethes. Also 25 of short clothes. Either set with full directions for making, amount and kind of material, by mail, scaled, si cents. Patterns absolutely reliable. HINTS TO EXPECTANT MOTHERS, a beach of a large of a la hock by a trained surse, free with each set of patterns. Mrs. J. BHIDE, P. O. Box 2003, New York.

B WARD A ROBE guired. New Y improved by patron of the control of t

INFANTS' and CHILDREN'S WARDROBES.
Chills No. 1, 9 pieces, $161 Onlife No. 2, 15 pieces, $65.
Two dresses, postpaid, $2.76. Send two cents for free samples and catalogue. Anextre Wanter.
H. J. SPEAGUE & CO., Falser Hosse Heek, Chinge, 10.

THE BABY'S DELIGHT EXERCISING MACHINE

is an invaluable aid to every is an invaluable and to every mother. It almoses the body and at the same time gives him an exercise that is highly benedicial; strengthens his imple; percents bow-legs; leaches him to walk and gives him a general strength and vipor that will go far in ward off all infandle diseases.

PRICE, $8.00.

THE WILDER MAN'F'G CO., - Salem, Mass.

FRAGRANT CREAM Cures Chapped Hands, Face, Lips of any Roughness of the Skin, precents ten dency to wrinkies or ageing of skin, keeps the face and hands soft, smooth and plump. It is also highly recommended for applying and holding face powder. Once tried always

For Sale by all Bruggleis and Bealers in Funcy Goods

MOTHERS I Do you wish $1000 with which to educate your child when R is because it. For particulars, address v P. Pitencia, Sacry Children's Endowment Society, Minnespolis, Minn.

FILL YOUR OWN TEETH with Crystaline. Stop Pale and Decay. Lasts a lifetime. Circular free. T. F.TRUMAN, M. D., Wells Bridge, N. Y.

Natural Carle Benes, El. Paried Bangs or Wares. for Kiberte Latins, St.50 to $1.00. Feylisches. $1.00 to $13. according to length and quality of beit. Ladins' and Gents' Wigs. $0.00 to $20.00. Send manple, beit, Try Hearts Bahn and Powiet for Complex-tos. It death each. R. C. STREHE & 400., 101 Wakash Avenue, Chicago, III.

YOU HAVE TROUBLE In trying to keep your Banga and Guris in position? If so, sand so ess, to A. B. AUSTIN, Manufacturer of Tulet Specialists, GT N. St. St. TERRA HAPTE, 18 to, for a bestla of COLUMBIAN CUSLING CREAM, which will turn your irrelate into joy.

Digitized by Google

EDITED AND CONDUCTED BY MARY F. KNAPP

This Department will bereafter alternate each month with "Knitting and Crocheting," that both of these branches of woman's handiwork may be distinctly and more fully treated.

Both Departments are under the editorship of MISS KNAPP, to whom all letters should be sent, addressed to 20 Linden street, South Boston, Mass.

DOILEY DESIGNS IN APPLIQUE

By Anna M. Porter

VERY pretty idea for the manufac-ture of dainty doilies is shown in the accompanying illustrations. The special characteristic of the work is the employment of the work is the employment of Honiton brast as a foundation upon which various stitches used to hand-made lace are rendered in white embroidery silk. The result is at once both rich and delicate.

Illustration No. 1

The method of setting to work is as fol-ows: Tack the Honiton braid carefully upon groundwork of fine French cambric in the manner indicated in Illustration No. 1. Illustration No. 2 gives an example of the work in its simplest possible form, button-

Illustration No. 2

Illustration No. 3

hole stitch only being employed in conjunc-tion with the braid. When it is employed for the edge of the circles toward the inside, every third stitch is made twice the length of the others, a variation which is adopted to give a softer finish to the design.

Illustration No. 4

In Illustration No. 3 are given the details of the wheel pattern, which is the main feature of design No. 4—so beautiful in effect. The cross-bars or "spokes" of the wheel are first made and knotted securely in the middle by looping the thread over each bar, passing it from one to another, round and round as seen in Illustration No. 3, until the circle is of the requisite size. When the whole is worked, cut all the cambric away with a sharp pair of scissors, except that which forms the center of the doiley.

the doiley.

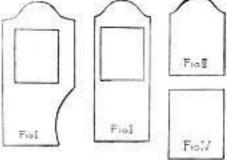

In a really handsome set, every doiley should be of a different pattern. Those accustomed to drawn work will be familiar with many stitches that may be readily adapted when once the method of the work is seen. For the benefit of the novice, however, a series of articles on this subject will follow with several new stitches introduced. Any of our readers wishing to purchase these doilies already commenced as in Illustration No. 1, can obtain them by sending to The Journal.

SEDAN CHAIR PHOTOGRAPH CASE

BY LINA BEARD

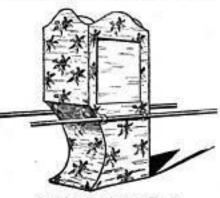

from the bottom; next cut one piece from Fig. 3 and one from Fig. 4. Cover each piece with silk, using delicate flow-ered silk for the outside cover, and white or some light shade for the inside lining; now take one side piece with a window and one without a window; cut from Fig. 1 and over-hand them together around three of the edges, leaving the top open, so the photograph can be slid down between the two pieces. Sew together the remaining two pieces cut from Fig. 1 to form the opposite side of the case; then over-hand together on three sides the two fronts cut from Fig. 2. This done, sew the two sides of the chair on the front; next sew the top part of the back on the sides (Fig. 3) and last the lower portion of the back (Fig. 4). This must be slightly bent in center before sewing in, so that it will fit. When all the sides are over-handed together, conceal the stitches with a delicate silken cord blind-stitched around all the outside seams and edges (Fig. 5). Use slender polished sticks for handles and make the supports for the handles of narrow ribbon, which must be sewed on in place when covering the sides. If white silk, with yellow or gilt flowers be used for the outside cover, let the handles be slender brass rods. The chair abould measure seven inches in The chair should measure seven inches in beight, the sides three and a-half inches in width, and the front and back two and three-fourth inches in width.

BOW TO CUT THE CASE

THE CASE AS FINISHED (Fig. 5)

AN ARTISTIC GIFT-APRON

By FLORENCE E. PERRY

PROSS were never more popular than at A the present time, and never were so many pretty designs offered for their shape and

The unique apron herewith illustrated was designed especially for a builday gift. It has the favorite pointed girdle, which is wide enough to form soft folds about the waist and long enough to tie in a full bow at the back. The straight apron is gathered to the girdle, and has a frill of handsome lace at the bottom. Heading the fell hordering the stells and Heading the frill, bordering the girdle, and falling from it in two bands each side of the point, is a lovely needlework decoration re-sembling a braid, which while imitating pus-sementerie in arrangement is yet light and delicate enough to correspond with the soft silk of which the apron is made. The braid is outlined in chain-stitch with twisted embroidery silk, the stitches should be short and even—to resemble embroidery braid—but not tightly drawn, or they will wrinkle the silk. Each side band seems to be unbraided at the bottom and the little bells which swing from the ends of the strands—seemingly—are chiming glad holiday greetings.

Silk in delicate shades of cream, pink or blue embroidered with rich bronze would be beautiful, or white—either silk, mulle or lawn—with a gold color. For an elderly friend or for one who is in mourning black silk with silver-gray or white embroidery, or white silver-gray or white embroidery, or white with black, would be pretty.

TO MAKE A FANCY APRON

BY MARY J. SAFFORD

HE materials are one yard of linen lace wide—the kind used for window curtains, one yard of any pretty white lace two inches wide, crochet edging will do, a few skeins of embroidery silk, and two and one-half yards of ribbon one and one-quarter inches wide of the same color.

If possible, get the scrim in a pattern of broad and narrow strings the parrow one-half broad and narrow stripes, the narrow one-half inch, the broad two and one-half inches wide.

Then, commencing eleven inches from the end, feather-stitch on both sides of all the narend, feather-stitch on both sides of all the narrow stripes with the same color. Then featherstitch on both sides of all the wide stripes with some shade that will harmonize or contrast well; for instance, dark blue for the narrow, Indian-rod for the wide.

Beginning seven inches from the bottom on the other side of the scrim, feather-stitch down to the bottom in the same way. Pinish with a narrow hem, and feather-stitch across it. Turn this piece up six inches on the right side of the aprox, sew the lace to the hem and catch it (the lace) to the apron at spaces seven inches wide at the top of the aprox, and ornament it with two rows of feather-stitching running across it, one at the top and the other ment it with two rows of feather stitching running across it, one at the top and the other at the bottom of the hem.

The model I am describing has the narrow stripes worked with blue of a medium shade, and the broad ones with shaded blue, running and the broad ones with shaded bine, running from a pale to a very dark tim.

The ribbon may be drawn through the bem, crossed, and tied in front, or the hem can be drawn upon half a yard of ribbon, and the remainder used to make long-looped bows or rosettes at each end. The latter way is very pretty, but the apron must then be pinned on to the dress when worn.

A JAPANESE SOFA-CUSHION

By G. A. DALLY

WHAT could be daintier than a cushion for a couch made of two Japanese silk handkerchiefs? Either buy or make a muslin-covered feather pillow of the same size as the handkerchiefs you intend to use, and arrange around the edge a putfing of light blue satin. Then with a stiletto and white embroidery silk make eyelet holes around the four sides of euch handkerchief, and lace the handkerchiefs across the blue satin with narrow white ribbon, fastening a rosette of the ribbon at each corner. When soiled, the handkerchiefs can be removed and washed.

The best made, one ounce in box, all good colors, sent postage paid on receipt of 38 cents in money order, postal note, or stamps. Liberal Commission paid Agents, who can make from five to fifteen dollars a week. Address,

> EUREKA SILK CO. BOSTON

Agents wanted in every large place. Ladies can make from Janon to pooks a week Address the BRAINERD & ARMSTRONG SPOOL SH.K.CO., 1-1 Market Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

DO YOU CROCHET

GOLD COIN in PREMIUMS

GLASGO

LACE THREAD. circulars giving full information, write us. DO NOT DELAY. Glasgo Lace Thread Co. (Box A)-Glasgo, Conn.

ormandie

Stamping Patterns

Any one who wants Stamping Patterns can have them sent to select from on agreement to pay for what they keep and return the rest. Address HENRY MITCHELL, North Reading, Mass.

A Roll of Perforated Stamping Patterns sent on approval to responsible parties. Send stamp for circular. Mrs. S. S. HUBBELL, Fort Edward, N. Y.

LADIES WANTED to work for me on my PARLOR HOME EMPLOYMENT, making light fancy goods; can be done in leisure hours. Constant work; good pay. Address Manageress Ant Needlework Bazaar, Chicago, III.

Shawknit

CASTLE CALENDAR

FOR 1892

is uniform with that for rigt, which was so favorably commented upon for its artistic and literary merit, and presents excellent pictures of twelve more famous castles of Great Britain and Ireland, accompanied by bistorical and descriptive text.

It will be mailed to any address upon receipt of loc. directed to

CALENDAR DEPARTMENT. SHAW STOCKING CO., LOWELL, MASS.

"PARTED BANG." Bade of natural CUBLY HAIR guaranteed booseing to helics who were their hair parced. § 6, p., according to size and ovier. Scaraffring Root, with preparation. § 8. Bair Goods. Co-merico. etc., sem C. U. D. stoywhere.

RELIABLE WOMAN

Signal St., New York NICHOLS MFO. CO., 378 Canal St., New York

ON HOME DRESS MAKING BY EMMA M. HOOPER

MISS HOOPER invites, and will cheerfully answer any questions concerning home dressmaking which may be sent to her by the JOURNAL sisters. While she will answer by mail, if stamp is inclosed, she greatly prefers to be allowed to reply through the Journal, in order that her answers may be generally helpful. Address all letters to Miss Emma M. Hooper, care of The Ladies' Home Journal, Philadelphia, Pa.

WHAT TO DARN WITH

OR stockings there are cashmere and cotton varus of several sizes in colors and fast black. Silk comes on cards, spools and in knotted strands under the comprehensive name of "mendings," and balls and cards of white cot-

one. Balbriggan "mendings" by the skein are of a deep cream shade and of a soft un-twisted yarn that can be used in one or several

HOW TO USE THE "MENDINGS"

THE halbriggan cotton is excellent for un-bleached towels as well as hose, while bleached stockings are darned with the white ball cotton. Bleached towels should be darned with this cotton or white flax threads that come in skeins and have the high lustre peculiar to linen flax. These may be had in several num-bers, and are also valuable for durning table bers, and are also valuable for darning table linen. Old material tears quicker than new, and for that reason when darning old fabrics, for I hope you will all be spared the trial of tearing a new garment, use a finer thread than you would in a new, strong material. A soft cotton or linen thread wears better, but in woolen and silk "mendings" a harder twist is recommended. Fiannels should be darned with the custumere yarms sold for stocking mending. I spoke of darning dress goods with ravelings of the same in the December Journat. All darning should be done on the right side, our old ladies to the contrary, and right side, our old ladies to the contrary, and the wrong side kept smooth. Darning hosiery over an egg-shaped darner, or a tiny gourd, I think a snare and a delusion. Many darners are made that look well in the neatly kept work-basket, but they usually stretch the hole under which they are put until the new darn is larger and faller than the original gap. Run the hand in a stocking and darn over the palm, holding the stocking in the mean-time taut and smooth.

time taut and smooth.

If a garmeut is "giving out" all over, there is not a bit of use or economy in trying to mend it. In a case of this kind, economy is falsely employed. If a towel has worn so thin that pulling the darning thread through makes a larger hole, then fold it away for old linen, and use that time in resting or working where it will pay you, as such an article will not.

WHAT TO HAVE IN A SEWING ROOM

CORRESPONDENT sends the description of a " nearly perfect sew-ing room" that will be of interest to many, as the convenience of such a nook can hardly be oversuch a nook can hardly be overrated. It saves many weary steps in hunting for thread, thimble, etc., and saves the family slitting-room from being a resting place for the sewing. This room is 8 x 12 feet, with two windows and a small closet. In front of one window stands the sewing machine, which has one end of its cover cushioned to use as a footstool. On the right is a row of foot-wide shelves running almost the width of the room. One shelf is for the family medicines, the others hold all the sewing paraphernalia in boxes having the projecting ends labeled.
They can be read from the sewer's seat at the machine, and are within easy reach. Patterns, left over pieces, buttons, trimmings, etc., all left over pieces, buttons, trimmings, etc., all have boxes and are kept in them. Below the shelves is a low cutting table always ready for use. A sewing chair without arms and having short rockers, is handy, and a straight chair for machine use. In one corner is a dress chair for machine use. In one corner is a dress form, and in the opposite corner is a long nar-row mirror, which shows the effect when fit-ting on the form. By the door three books are screwed from which hang a well-filled pin-cushion, pattern book and slate and pencil. On the slate goes every want of the family in the sewing line as it is thought of. The cost of fitting up such a room is small, as the win-dow has a buff blind, and a rug for the feet is the only floor covering, but the convenience and comfort of such a place is unbounded.

ABOUT OLD WAIST LININGS

OFTEN the waist lining of a worn-out dress is perfectly good, in which case rip off the buttons, open the seams and cut the dress goods from the buttonholes as closely as possible. After removing the outside material stitch up the seams, hem the buttom, hind the neek and are believed with a big strice. material stitch up the seams, hem the bottom, bind the neck and arm-holes with a bias strip, and sew on flat bone or pearl buttons. A good morning walst to wear while at work is now evolved and saves a nicer corset cover. Such an article may not be very pretty, but it is useful and economical, and answers for the above purpose under the working dress.

DRESS AIDS FOR MOTHERS

TRLS from twelve to sixteen years of age are now called misses, and are dressed older than their little sisters while not yet fully initiated into the womanly gowns of girls considered grown up. It is better to dress a miss too young yearer can be young again.

than too old, as they never can be young again. GOWNS FOR GIRLS OF SIXTEEN

THEIR gowns are worn decidedly short and their skirts are gathered, have a fan or box-plaited back, or the plaits may extend to the front to meet a plain or gathered front, or a "bell" skirt of the same appearance as a woman's is worn. Many are trimmed with a border of velvet, the hem headed with gimp, or a bias ruffle trims the lower edge. Sleeves are the full topped coat design, or have close deep cuffs below a full drooping sleeve to the clbow. Bodices are invisibly fastened, back or front, or small pearl or crochet buttons are worn. Collars are straight, or turn-down frills of silk or the dress fabric are worn. A flat vest, full blouse or gathered plastron trims a waist when a full gu imp or yoke is not selected. Frills from the center of the waist line to the shoulders trim the bodices of slender girls, then the suspender trimming, described before, in heaviles are all to the store of the waist line to the shoulders trim the bodices of slender girls, then the suspender trimming, described before, is becoming, also velvet corselets, girdles, fitted belts, revers, etc. Waists draped over a fitted lining and apparently without any seams are as fashionable for a girl of sixteen as for one of eighteen years. Jacket fronts over a blouse vest and coat-tail backs are very popular, and the coat effect is often given by a ruffle of the goods or large pocket pieces. Misses wear cloth, crèpon, serge, cashmere, cording, homespun, cheviot and camel's hair dress goods.

FOR THE LITTLE MEN OF THE HOME

WHILE boys from three to six years of age wear kins they include in receiving lackets for outdoor wear or long Russian coats inspeed on the side, trimmed with fur and worn with a leather belt. Then they don kid leggings and a Tam O' Shanter, Neapolitan, sailor, or fez cap and are ready for a stroll. White receives having pearl buttons in two rows on the double-breasted front are also worn. Smaller boys wear coats of white lambs' wool, eider-down, French cloth and cording, or tan or blue cloth or cording, with a plaited skirt, round waist, full sleeves, deep cape or large rolling collar and a trimming of far. Baby boys of one to two years have white "Tams" trimmed with a feather ruche around the head-hand. Cloth jackets and white "Tams" trimmed with a feather ruche around the head-band. Cloth jackets and vests, blue, brown or black are worn with plaid, cashmere or cloth kilts. Blouses of silk under jackets still appear with kilt skirts. Tan vests are pretty with dark jackets and kilts. Jersey trousers are warm to wear under kilts in winter. Little ones of two years wear gingham and cushmere dresses made with a gathered skirt, round waist, corded on the edge, turn over collar, full coat sleeres, and the front of the waist cut in a V, which is filled with a plaited vest of silk or cambric. Black Hercules or cord braid trims small boys as well as ladies' cloth kilt suits.

SOME FROCKS FOR THE GIRLS

FUNE qualities of butcher's linen make excellent wearing aprons that entirely cover the dress beneath, and have large sleeves. They have three box plaits to the waist line in the back and two in front, with a tiny voke and cutts of drawn work. Older girls wenr cambrid lawn and dimity aprons having a low round neck, gathered skirt and no sleeves, with embroidery trimming the edges. Large bonnets of silk, velvet or the two materials are worn by girls of two to six years to match their conts. They have rosettes, ruches, tips, aigrettes and ribbon bows trimming them. Coats of and ribbon bows trimming them. Coats of cording, plaid and plain camel's hair, cloth and chinchilla in soft plaids, cream, tan, brown, old and navy blue and dark green. Angora, beaver, astrachan, velvet, feather edging and moufflon fur are used as trimmings. Cashmere is thickly lined and trimmed with gray krimmer or black astrachan. Large felt and beaver hats are trimmed with a huge bow of ribbon and onills or a plaited rucke and of ribbon and quills, or a plaited ruche and three rosettes holding black quills in front, each rosette being of a contrasting color. Black appears prominently as a trimming on dresses and hats, but not as a complete gar-ment. Long gathered skirts of cashmere are worn to just escape the floor on girls of two to five years, and have very large sleeves and round waists in fine or medium tucks, with a corselet of velvet covering the waist so that conly the upper part shows like a voke. Dark red and green mixed goods are lit up with a plastron of cardinal cashmere. Red gowns are trimmed with black velvet accessories for the

DRESSMAKERS CORNER

Under this heading I will cheerfully answer each month any possible question on Home-Dressmaking sent me by my readers.

EMMA M. HOOPER

I must ask my correspondents to write me just how their pieces are cut up when they wish information regarding the remodeling of a gown; and also to state the occasions for which a certain costume is wished, when asking how to make it. Another point is in regard to an outfit of any kind, which can be more plainly written of if the writer will tell me how much she wishes to spend upon it. One more important item is—to be brief, yet give necessary detail in an explicit manner.

Mrs. D. Z.—Bend answer to "Mrs. Chas. V." It only ones in white. Enterdown comes in many colors.

Gill of Inquiny.—Read answer to "Alys." A soft crown felt walking hat costs $1.35 untrimmed.

ORERLES.—Although your directions were very value an answer to your questions was sent early in October.

ALICE X.—Gend'arme blue is a greenish-blue cast, ow quite purel. Bengaline and fallie are the favorite GLOVES.—Bead answer to "J, T," Cream and pearignly for the evenings spaken of. Have strings to your books.

SUBSCRIBER.—I do not approve of washed linings for a made-over gown, as they will stretch out of shape when ironed.

Makes S—The latest French method shows cloth gowns with the "bell" skirt unlined and worn over a silk petitional.

H. S.—The corded effects are becoming to a stout figure. You can wear invisible checks and mixtures, but not plaids.

CORA.—Slik makes a prettler ruchs for the bottom of a dross than cashmere. Cut on the bias, and triple box plait closely together.

BETTER R.—You must give me some Mea of your pieces or I certainly cannot tell you how much new ma-terial and what to buy.

Powesty.—You can have your black Henrietta re-dyed and make it lest two years more. Trim with slik passementerie and a surah vest.

B. T.-Make your Medici collar over the already shaped lining, for sale everywhere. Use velveteen on the skirt in place of a skirt braid.

M. O.—Line the lace sleeves. Twin a black silk with narrow jet gimp and sind the was with nailheads, sew-ing them on with linen thread, wares.

DEMONMANCES.—I regret to say that the skirts all drug in the back. The sheath fit is closely followed; too closely, semetimes, for grace or beauty.

MISS NANNE.—Wear the black woolen fights upon going out and remove them when in the house. They are from $1.50; in silk from $3.00 and not as warm.

Mast Canton L.—Hang your elderdown comfortable occasionally in the sun, which will bring the down up soft and fluffy as it does Smikers exposed to the air.

Miss. M. F.—Send me a stamped envelope and I will give you the address wished, which I cannot do in this column. Attend the afternoon reception in a bandsome visiting customa.

BLACKIE.—Read answer to "M.O." Bengoline, fallle or pean de sole for a black silk. Line a lace net with satin serah. A brocade vest and siceves will alter your last year's cloth gown.

Mxv.—I can recommend an excellent make of glace kid gloves at $1.55 and $1.50 for a four-button length, but address me privately for this information, which can-not thus be publicly given.

COUNTRY.—Read answer to "Marke S." Sieeves are very full above the ellows and close below. The gaunt-let or Cromwellian cuffs are just the shape of the gaunt-let affixed to a riding glove.

Mrs. T. F. G.—I have never received a letter from you. Every letter requesting a personal reply and en-closing a stamp is carefully attended to. The others take their turn in this column.

JENNIE J.—Cleaks are high this senson, but if you can wait until after January first you can secure one much cheaper. Tan and black are the chief colors, select a long cape or deep jacket.

ONE WHO SEWS.—A percalled bodies is used and pleasant to wear, but it will not endure the strain that a good sliesha will; therefore, for a "stout"figure liking a soug basque, I would not advise it. DANCER.—White with all of the gowns mentioned, Bone every seam of a short, pointed bedies and have inty puffs for elevers. Line chiffon with satin, Trim a copper-colored silk with black lace.

Mus. Chr.s. V.—Lambs' woot at ninety cents, twenty-four inches, would answer for your beby boy's cost, with a slik or plush Tam O'Shamer. Let the older boy wear our of the Nespolitan sailor hats.

Mysey.—To answer as you desired would send your letter to the printer a few days after the Issue named was out. Please time your inquiries earlier, and you will not be so "dreadfully disappointed."

Mary F.—A silver key-ring, two silk hankerchiefs, kid gloves, silver cigar cuter, pocket match safe, box of linen handkerchiefs, muffler, and many books and room decorations come within the sum named.

E. M. G.—I would describe your hair as a light red-dish-brown; Nilegreen is only becoming to a clear, fidr-skin. Pale bine would be better, also deep cream. Red-browns, clear gray, dark green and navy-blue for street wear.

Grygn—Ladies' cloth at $1.50 is as light a weight as I would recommend. The pieces should all run the same way of the goods, and unless the cloth is sponged before making it up it is sure to spot with rain or snow.

MATTIE.—Each winter wardrube differs according to the secial position of the wearer, the size of her town and arount of mency to be spent, hence the difficulty of laying down any set rules as to what must be lind for

NELLIE K.—Very pretty evening shades of bengaline are $1.50, twenty-one inches in witth, and should be triumed with chiffer ruffes, thirty to saty-free con-tinues and a half to five inches deep, and narrow bend

ETHEL.—Black saths skirts are never trimmed with lace. They are worn in summer chiefly. Black slik skirts are worn threschoid the year. Mohair at $2.00 makes a nice skirt slik from $0.00, and many cloth skirts come from $1.00.

A RESTER.—Your jacket is probably altered by this time, but your letter was too late for earlier attention. You could only make the plush into a short, pointed cape and add full sleeves of black Astrachan cloth. I fear that you will be obliged to give this garment up.

Anys. Bedford cords range from thirty-eight cents to $4.00 and are very much wors. Trim with simp, feath-ess or velvet of a shade darker. Suppers or fancy ties, usually the former. Light shades of brown and tan are very fashlomble, though dark shades of blue and green are very stylish.

X. Y. Z.—I really can not assist correspondents in re-making their sowns unless they describe the condition and shape of the pieces they have, as upon this from de-pends the style selected for them. Such little details will enable me to give them practical advice, not merely suggestions.

J. T.—Wear the buttonless Hiarritz gloves in dark grap, tan or brown, which are eighty-nine or ninety-eight cents and $1.00 in price, or a four-button glackful in one of the above colors. A young lady can certainly wear black lace as a trimming. Do not wear black for traveling unless in mouraing.

CASH'S HEMSTITCH FRILLING.

SOLD BY ALL LEADING RETAILERS.

FOR TRIMMING

Bed-Linen and Ladies' and Chil-dren's Underclothing.

ILLUSTRATED BOOK (with woven patterns of inaterial) free by post. Address J. & J. CASH, 92 Greene St., N.Y.

SLEEVE SUPPORT.

ADIES, the little article we call your attention to is really a processive in every boustid as well as in the shop of the dressmaker. With you can press the sleeve and waist seams of trees in a few minutes, without any of the suyance this place of work generally brings you.

DRESSMAKERS all over the country are been and country are to country and to the country are to country are to country and to the country are to country and the country are send sample by supress. $1.00. AGENTS prepaid, upon receipt of $1.00. AGENTS GRAVES EROTHERS, Rfrs., SANDWICE, ILL.

MOTH PROOF BAG.

No Pasts or Glue necessary. No bad odor about tarments when taken out to use.

sazzes:  ${24 \times 48}$  inches, when closed.

Expressed to any address on receipt of price, 50 cents each. When ordering, send New York Draft, Postal Note or Registered Letter.

DETROIT PAPER BAG CO., Detroit, Mich.

DON'T He Penny Wise and Pound Foelish. When you buy, buy something good or don't buy whether it be become or bicycles.

The American Ideal
Rambler fittycle is something distinctly good--is made of the finest superiest weldless steel tubing; has ball bearings; spring frame; is adjustable for either boy or girl and every wheel is backed by a responsible guarantee.
The American

The Ideal Rambler costs $65—not the cheap-est in price, but the cheapest in the end. It will outlast a half decen cheap crocks and can be handed down in the family. A more sub-stantial or appropriate gift it would be hard to find. ****Catalogue on application.

GORMULLY & JEFFERY M'F'G CO.,

Boston.

Chicago,

Washington.

Briggs' Pattern for Embroidery & Painting. 236 Page Catalogue of designs 28 Page Canasogue of designs 12 Good designs ready to stamp-

All for 10 S-cent Stamps (20 cents). JOSEPH WALKER, - Irvington, New Jersey.

KENNEDY'S

Medical

cogle

PRICE, $1.50. SOLD EVERYWHERE.

SOME ALL-BLACK COSTUMES

By Isabel A. Mallon

LACK has never been given such a vogue as it now has since the day when Mrs. Manning, the poisoner, elected to wear a black satin gown on the scaffold. For awhile black of all materials, but especially black satin, was shown no favor; but as the years have gone on, as we have gone on, as we have become better educated in the art of dress, the beauty and style possible in black stuffs are thoroughly appreciated. The stuffs, that is, all the woolen goods, or the silk-and-wool mixtures, are liked, but for more elaborate gowns black satins, brocades and silks are chosen. The brocades show very large figures on dull black grounds, and a French fancy is to have sleeves, waist-coat, cuffs and collar of a brocade upon which the flower is either of some bright color or else of gold or silver.

THE NEW BLACK VELVET COAT (Illus. No. 1)

A very pretty costume of black brocade made in princess style has full sleeves of the brocade with tiny red roses upon it; the collar, which is a broad turn over one, is like the sleeves, and the slight drapery that goes over the hips, and ends in a sush at one side, is also of the slik brocaded with a color. With this is worn a small bounet of black jet with scarlet Prince of Wales tips tied on, with black ribbons at the back and front.

BLACK IN WOOL

In Wools the beavy serges, camel's hair, broadcloths, cashmeres and merinos are oftenest noticed. The last mentioned is of course very light in weight, and only suited for a house dress, but as it falls gracefully there are many who like it. What is known as a real India camel's hair has long threads, apparently of hair showing thick upon its surface and looking absolutely white. But funnily enough, if you can raise one of these hairs you will find that it is as black as the black ground it rests upon. There are three qualities of camel's hair; one, light enough to look almost like cashmere, then a medium, then a heavy one. The heaviest will be chosen then a heavy one. The heaviest will be chosen for out-door suits during the winter, and some most effective gowns are shown made up in

A HANDSOME BLACK DRESS.

THE heavy black camel's hair is used for the L costume shown in Illustration No. 3. The skirt is cut in the usual plain fashion, and has just a hint of a train, although it is intended for street wear. Around the edge is a two-inch border of black astrachan for, and just above this is an elaborate braiding in gold and black soutache. The bodice is long, and has for an edge finish a deep fringe formed of strung beads, gilt and black alternating; above this is a braiding similar to that on the above this is a braiding similar to that on the skirt. About the throat is a high turned over collar of astrachan fur, and the deep cuffs on the sleeves match. The muff is of astrachan, and the bonnet, made of a piece of the camel's hair, has on it a border of astrachan and stiff shaving-brush pompons in which some gold threads show through the black feathers. The gloves are black undressed kid. Such a cos-tume would be pretty trimmed with jet after this fashion; or, if greater simplicity were this fashion; or, if greater simplicity were desired, the fringe could be silk cord, the braiding done with the ordinary black braid, and not a glint of either gold or jet sparkling to relieve the sombreness.

SOME OTHER STUFFS

THERE are many women who do not care for the very heavy materials just described, and to them the fine black cashmere, or henrietta cloth, seems most desirable. Various qualities of each of these stuffs may be gotten, but there is one little advantage in buying a good quality of henrietta; in fact, I might almost say there are two. One is the great width, and the other, which is most important, is this:—and now my dear general woman I speak from experience—a good henrietta cloth may be worn and see the sun of two winters, then if it is good enough, that is, if it is perfectly whole, it may be ripped to pieces, sent to the socurer's, go through the cleansing process, and come out looking so exactly like new that you can bey new to go with it if your pattern is short, and the difference between the materials will never show. The cloth and the cashmere certainly make the nextitiest house dress and nawadays the ference between the materials will never snow.
The cloth and the cashmere certainly make the prettiest house dress, and nowadays the women who study economy know that the bouse dress is the salvation of the street one.

AN EFFECTIVE HOUSE GOWN

AN EFFECTIVE HOUSE GOWN

THERE was a time when we were all very rendy to scoff at the theories of the so-called asthetic school; but now that the chaff has been taken from it, it is easy to see where-in much that was exaggerated can, when the nonsense is taken out of it, be really not only useful, but beautiful. The house gown is essentially economical, and there is probably no more becoming dress than one of soft, clinging black stuff with a smart girdle of jet, gold or silver, and decorations of either ribbon, lace or velvet as may be deemed most becoming. The house dress is not of necessity a tea gown, though it is often developed in that style. There are many women who do not care for tea-gowns, and who, while they wish for an easy-litting dress, still desire one that has an air of close fit. A very dainty gown of this sort is after the style much affected by Mrs. Oscar Wilde, and in which she looks as pretty as the proverbial picture. It is made of black henrietta cloth, as pictured in Illustration No. 2.

The skirt is slightly full, of the soft flowing tion No. 2.

The skirt is slightly full, of the soft flowing

The skirt is slightly full, of the soft flowing stuff, and has just sufficient train to add to its gracefulness. The bodice is shirred about the neck, a toby frill of chiffon outlining it. Just below the bust the shirring ceases, and the fulness is then confined at the waist line by a belt of black ribbon clasped just in the center by a curiously carved silver clasp. The shirring could, if one desired it, he regularly smocked, but I do not think this is as pretty as the very careful and close shirring. If it were wished, the back of this gown could have a double watteau from the neck down, which would, of course, make a fuller train, but after all the plainer method is the more desirable for a dress rather than a gown.

ABOUT BLACK VELVET

ABOUT BLACK VELVET

THE gentlemen of olden times used to think that the height of elegance was reached when they were black velvet coats, point lace ruffles, and sparkling steel buttons. That coat is almost duplicated to-day. The black gown has made the black velvet coat very recording and cervery popular, and cer-tainly, when it is well cut, properly decorated and fitted, nothing can make a woman look better. The style of the cut tends to broaden the shoulders, the rich black pile of the ma-terial to make the skin and hair look brighter and ball look brighter and glossier, and the length of the cont will give the slenderness of figure which is so much desired. A black velvet coat worn by Mrs. Kendal is typical of the style in vogue. It is shown in Illustration No. 1. The coat is quite long, being longer than the ordinary Louis Quinze, and yet it does not come to the knees as do some of the cloth coats. In front, the close-fitting jacket parts flare away to show a black silk waist-coat richly braided in gold. The sleeves are high on the shoulders, shaping to the arms, and have, as their finish, frills of fine thread lace. The collar is a high one, fastened just in front with a brooch in the shape of a gold hook and eye. Such a coat, or indeed any kind of a black velvet coat, may be worn with a silk, lace or wool skirt. atik, face or wood skirt.

It may be made as plainly as possible, may be trimmed or untrimmed, but must be as well-fitting as the hand of woman can devise. And every woman knows that the brain must also work for this result.

A BLACK SATIN DRESS

THE fancy for black satin of the heaviest The lancy for black satin of the heaviest kind is increasing more and more every day. Full skirts of satin are worn with marquise coats of striped satin, a blue and black, red and black, plnk and black, or yellow and black coat being proper adjunct to a black satin skirt. Of course, the costumes are only suited for visiting or evening wear, but they are extremely stylish. A very rich black satin dress to be worn at the opera has a plain skirt with a slight train, the coat is of plain black satin with sleeves of black, embroidered in small gold dots, and a full jabot of gold lace extends down the entire front. The bonnet worn with this is made of gold lace and has black feathers, wired to stand up well, for its decoration. The gloves are a very light yellow undressed kid. The slippers are of black satin with tiny gold buckles upon them.

AN EFFECTIVE HOUSE GOWN (Illus. No. 2)

A quieter black satin

A quieter black satin
A quieter black satin
to liette is combined with broadcloth, and is for street wear.
The back shows full breadths of black broadcloth, but sensibly escape dragging the ground. In front is a deep tablier of black satin heavily bordered with cut iet and drawn with cut iet and drawn with cut jet and drawn up on one side under an elaborate jet orna-ment. The long deep coat is of the broad-cloth, and the sleeves are full puffed ones with jet cuffs. The bat is a soft crowned hat is a soft crowned one of black satin with a full brim of the black cloth; clusters of Prince of Wales feathers decorate it. This is an extremely stylish costume, hand-some enough to be generally copied, and yet not very expensive. WHY YOU SHOULD WEAR

WELL, of course, one of the numerous reasons is because it is almost universally becoming; then, too, it has a quiet, refined air that commends it to the mascu ine side of the world, and, after all, we women dress to please husband, brothers and sweethearts. However, in choosing your black, get the dull and sombre-looking if you are a blonde, and that which has some gloss upon it if you are a brunette, for these are the shades of black that will bring out the complexion of each the best. You think there are no shades in black? Go to a store where they have a large variety and just see how many different ones they can show you.

Appropriate and Pleasurable

HOLIDAY GIFTS. HANDKERCHIEFS.

With us Linen is Linen. We have no substitute. We keep no Cotton and Linen. These handkerchiefs represent the fullest values possible to get at their respective prices.

This cut shows a fine This cut shows a fine Linen Hemstliched Handkerchief, 5-inch hem, with small Hand-Embroidered Initial, ladies and gentlemen's stees.

25c. A superb assortment of ladow' fine all lines Handk erchiefs; facey blocked bemstitching, with dice corners; embridered vines reability around the hemse clusters of embrokley in reat, dainty designs; scalloped edges embroklered in black or white.

25c. and 50c. each. Ladies' Mousseline-de-sole, or slik Muli Handker-chiefs, in delicate shades of pink, hins, yellow, laven-der, etc., with scalloped edges, artistically embroidered in colored silks,

$1.00, $1.25 and $1.50 each. GLOVES-

None but the best and most reputable find their way to our counters. These are an index to the whole stock.

This cut represents a 5-botton French Kid Glove with pinked wrists, in tans, grays, browns and black. Ex-cellent value at $1.50 a pair. The 4-botton celebrated "Trifousee" Suede Gloves, in modes, tans, grays and black, are $1.50 a pair. The 8-button length moreopetaire "Trefouse" Suede Gloves, in medium and light grays, modes and black, with narrow embroidery, perfect fitting, $2.00 a pair.

Postage on 14 dozen Handkerchiefs, 6 cents. Postage on 14 dozen Handkerchiefs, with box, 4c, extra. Postage on Gloves, 2c, a pair; with box, 2c, extra. Orders promptly and carefully attended to. When ordering mention THE LASTES' HOME JOURNAL.

WOODWARD & LOTHROP, WASHINGTON, D. C.

CROCK OP FADE

IN SPEER INDIA LINGUS PRINTED EFFECTS

WARRANTED ABSOLUTELY FAST

LADIES, DON'T FAIL To Send a Two-cent Stamp for Samples of

KING PHILIP Cambric. KING PHILIP Lawns. KING PHILIP Nainsook.

Above goods are unequalled for LADIES', CHIL-DREN'S and INFANTS' wear.

Should be found on shelves of every retailer in the United States.

KING PHILIP MILLS, 85 WORTH STREET, - NEW YORK.

DRESSMAKING SIMPLIFIED.

Any Lady Can now Learn to Out Perfect-Pitting Dresses. No one using a Chart or Square number with The McDavail Gas Drahing Machine in Criting Say Frankla and Perbed Friding Gare face to Learn, Rapid to Un, Platern, Fallern away Fashion. A vention as Uncful as the Sewing date.

Free 10 days to test at year own home.
Send for Illustrated Checker.
THE McDOWELL CO.
6 West 14th Street, New York City.

Send 35 cents for copy of our elegant French Pashion books explaining how to cut latest style garment.

THE SELF-INSTRUCTOR in Emitting, Crooket and Embroidery published by BELDING BROS, & CO., now ready.

This book will be mailed free, on receipt of six cents in postage stamps, to any one sending their address.

BELDINO BROWN & CO., New York, N. V.; BELDINO BROW & CO., Chicago, III.; BELDINO BROW & CO., Chicago, III.; BELDINO BROW & CO., Chicago, III.; BELDINO BROW & SARRINO, PA.: ADAMS & CURTIS, BOSSON, Mass.; COVIE & SARRINO, PA. ADAMS & CURTIS, BOSSON, Mass.; COVIE & SARRINO, PA. LOUIS, MO.; WOODWOOKT & HOWES, SI. PARIS, Minn.; THE CARLSON-CURRIER SILK MFO. CO., San Francisco, Cal.; BELDINO, PAUL & CO., (Lid.), Montreal, Canada.

Ladies, if you wish to dress well at moderate cost, write for our WINIER

FASHION CATALOGUE Illustrating the NEWEST PARISSTYLES in what to wear at the Lowest New York Prices.

by addressing SENT FREE!

CONSETTON ON THE STREET THE PROPERTY OF THE PR M. DEWRY, Mr. 1987 W. Mouroe St., Chicago. 2 AGENTS Send Musey by P. O. Order. Catalogue From 5 WANTED.

SHOPPING MY MAIL and LADIES' GUIDE, Philada, Pa. Shopping of all kinds free of charge. Chapterone carded; these. With the decide and refressors.

Ladies, Send Stamp for Primer. I do shopping of all kinds. High was repulsional OOGIC

A HANDSOME BLACK DRESS (Illus, No. 3)

THE SMALL BELONGINGS OF DRESS

By Isabel A. Mallon

MRS. MALLOS will be glad to answer any question about woman's wear which may be sent to her by JOURNAL readers. She asks, however, that she be permitted to answer through this Department in the JOURNAL; though, if stamps are inclosed, she will reply by mail. Address all letters to MRS. MALLON, care of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, Philadelphia, Pa.

UST what to have for the beads of small people is always a question of im-portance to mothers. For baby girls this sea-son, the most pictur-

For taby girls this season, the most picturesque bonnels are made of soft bengaline or fine cashmere, shirred about the brim, having soft crowns and trimmed with a tiny bunch of ostrich feathers and high loops of ribbon, like sigrettes, fastened just on the top. These are regular picturesque bonnets and should be very large; they are at once pretty and keep the little bead well warned, something that is very necessary. Larger girls, those about five years, also wear large bonnets or felt hats tied down in bonnet shapes. A girl even larger than this may wear a very large felt hat trimmed either with ribbon or pompons, but it must not have too elaborate a look, and the younger the girl is the more certain must it be to have ribbon strings to tie it in place. Baby boys wear big Tam O'Shanters made of white cloth with a fancy band either of quilled ribbon or earlich feathers next to the face; wide strings, having very often cloth ear tabs, are tied under the chin. All of these bats are pretty and becoming, and most of them can be made by the woman who is these bats are pretty and becoming, and most of them can be made by the woman who is handy with her needle. The little girl's bou-nets are made exactly like the gingham ones were last summer, and as the cloth is easier gathered into place it should be quite as effec-tively and as well made as was the one of cotton. Just remember that to keep the little head warm means a great deal; not only keeping it from all pains just now, but from a good many troubles in the future, so see that it is well protected from the winter winds.

THE gold chatelaine, which it is said, will The good chartenane, which it is said, with supersede the silver one, has upon it first of all a small gold purse made of links joined together, and for a pendant a gold tassel; this is supposed to hold the money that is to be given to the poor; but it would seem wisest, when the number bought is considered, if the purse itself was sold and the money received for it donated to the worthy.

HAVING been educated to the advantages of silver belongings of silver belongings, we are now grad-nally learning the beauty of glass. The handsomest inkstands are those of very heavy cut glass, cut so they look almost like a block of ice with a very small silver cover on them. This may have on it a monogram or a crest, as is funcised.

THE woman who knows how to knit slip-THE woman who knows how to knit slippers has it in her power to give comfort to many of her friends. The knitted slipper with its comfortable lambs' wool sole, is not only desirable as a bed-room slipper, but may be worn in bed by an invalid or one who suffers from cold feet. They become specially valuable to those who travel much in sleeping cars where the draughts are many and chances for catching cold are more than mercily many for catching cold are more than merely many. In pink or blue wool, in bright scarlet or scarlet and brown these slippers are oftenest noted. A rosette or bow of satin ribbon that is in harmony, gives a dainty finish to them.

THE young lady who finds the stiff sailor hats becoming to her, should be satisfied with the one that is shown for winter wear it is a very light snuff color, has a low crown and broad brim, and is worn well over the forehead; the felt is stiff and the brim is bound with brown galloon; a band of galloon is about the crown, with a stiff little bow concealing where it terminates

THE fancy for estrich feather fans seems The lancy for ostrich seater tans seems to grow greater every season, and as they can be gotten to suit any costime, one is sure not to have an inharmonious toilette. The liking for absolute contrasts is shown in the latest feather fan; it is of black and gray feathers, and seems like a somber combination, but it is one upon which Dame Fashion has set her see! has set her seal.

A PRETTY present for a busy woman is a white slate framed in gold with a pencil suspended to it. This hangs beside her dressing case, and upon it each morning she writes what she expects to do during the day, and she is a happy woman if she completes what she has set out to as her duty.

A NOVELTY in knives for dinner is that where the handle of each knife is of china, matching the dinner service. These knives are beautiful, if not dutable, and would have to be used at a table where a woman is "mistress of hers though china falls," and would shudder at seeing a clumsy servant drop one of her much-prized knives and break the

THE fancy which has arisen for wearing Till have which has arised for wearing the watch on the outside of the bodice has created a demand for fancy watches. One of those shown is small, and has its case enumeled to represent a purple pansy; another one, an open face watch, has a gold face with the figures said to onogram in black charged upon it. Pockets not unlike those made in mon's waist-coats are noted on jackets and are intended to hold either the watch or one's loose change; they are a delight to the girl who likes to affect masculine belongings.

SHADED velvet ribbon is faucied for the D perf little bows that are liked on the front of bonnets and little bats. The loops come forward and the two short ends, cut out come forward and the two short ends, cut out in Vandyke fashiou, stand up as pert as possible. A bow of this sort is sufficient trimming for a small felt bonnet, one of the capote shapes. It does not need to have strings to match it, for they should be of velvet of the same color as the bonnet itself. A dark blue felt has a bow of scarlet, while the ties are of blue velvet. A bonnet made for evening, but fitting as closely as the felt one, is of green velvet and has a bow of pink, while the ties are of green velvet ribbon. By the by, a new arrangement for the velvet ribbon straps is to bring them forward, cross them under the chin, draw them back and fasten them with a fancy pin well up on the back of the hair. This looks best when the hair is arranged high, as it takes away somewhat from what would be otherwise a hare look. Pins showing imitaotherwise a bare look. Pins showing imita-tion diamonds, rubies, emeralds and supphires are liked for fastening the straps.

A MONG the novelties in ribbons, one of pale yellow silk has a design of black-berries wrought on it, the betries themselves being formed of sparkling jet bends, while the heaves and brambles are of black silk.

HE stiff black ribbon velvet bow worn at The still black ribbon vervet bow worn at the waist, in the hair or in the center of a low corsage, is made more attractive when it has a hollow circlet of Parisisa diamonds just in the center. As nobody presends that these are real, and they are only used to look protty, there is not the same feeling that there would be in wearing what is often known as paste.

CLOTH petticonts of pretty shades are trimmed around the edge with pinked frimmed around the edge with pinked flounces rather sentilly gathered; these are usually of two shades, as three flounces are used. On a brown cloth petticoat a pale blue will form the center flounce; on a black one a bright scarlet will be in good taste, and on a gray one a sapphire blue would look pretty. Silk petticoats are lined with flaunch, not only to make them may better but to give them. to make them wear better but to give them greater warmth.

It is seldom that a piece of jewelry becomes such a fad as the lovers knot lace-fin, which this season is being produced with every conceivable assortment of vari-colored gens and coamels. Some are shown tied with Puritan precision, and others with reckless irregularity, the latter being the most popular, however. Diamonds, of course, are the prevailing stones for this oddity, but pearls and rubies, the latter representing the back or lining of the material that forms the knot, are considered more recherch, owing to their conservative and sober appearance. servative and sober appearance.

THE great liking that has been shown for brooches shaped like bearts, like coronets, and like fleur de lis, has caused the appearance of a pin made of garnets where the heart is surmounted by the coronet, which has a fleur de lis background. Of course, this is merely all outline work. It is shown in rouny of the precious and semi-precious stones, and in brilliants makes a most beautiful pin for evening wear.

THE woman who is fortunate enough to T possess a star or crescent of diamonds, or good stones imitating them, fastens it just now right in the front of her three-cornered hat when she wears it in the evening.

VERY dainty handkerchief is one made A of white crope lisse and having for a border bright red strawberries and green leaves. The colors chosen are barmonious, and the work itself is so beautifully done that it is difficult to believe that the machine, rather than the needle, wrought it out,

FOR a large hat a large veil is required, and it is wisest in buying one to get a full yard to drape about your chapean. Pin it just to the edge of the brim in front, and let the depth that comes over be drawn under your clain in soft, loose folds fastened at the back high up on the bat. These folds tend to give the soft effect desired by strings.

THE strings on large hats must be at least two inches wide and sufficiently long to On almost any hat such strings may be attached, and they can be either of black satin, gros-grain, or soft black velvet. Velvet is the most becoming, but the loops refuse to stay in position unless pinned, and the ribbon itself is apt to grow shabby. In times gone by ites decided whether what one were on one's head was a hat or a bonnet, but now-a-days even Solomon bimself could not solve this question.

HE heavy walking gloves which are the oftenest assumed for street wear by women who dress well, should be gotten a quarter or balf size larger than the ordinary glove, for one is supposed to put them on with great ease, and to permit one's hands to move about with perfect freedom.

FOR general use fine white linen handker-C chiefs, having a very narrow edge, ben-stitched, and with a tiny finish of valenciennes lace, are counted in best taste.

*1820* FURS **1890* C.G.GUNTHER'S. SONS. 184FIFTH:AVENUE:NEW:YORKCITY -poppodeddada-

OPERA CLOAKS.

LINED WHITE MANDARIN LAMB AT $75 AND UPWARDS.

PRICE-LISTAND-FASHION-PLATES 優勝·SENT·UPON·REQUEST·機・網

Special attention is called to this relebrated brand of Bleached Muslin, which for flueness and durability is nasurpassed. This cloth is manufactured with great care, particularly for LADIES UNDERWEAR and

GENTLEMEN'S SHIRTS. in 36, 41 and 45 turk widths, and is guaranteed not to Cruck or Turn Yellow.

Inquire for this brand, and take No Substitute.

In purchasing garments, ask for Pride of the West.

For sale by all leading retail Dry-Goods dealers in the United States.

YOUR NEW WINTER CLOAK.

YOUR NEW WINTER CLOAK.

You wish your new cloak to be of good quality, nicely made, perfect fitting and reasonable in price. Then remember that

WE ARK MANUFACTUREIS OF CLOAKS, and by setting direct to you WE SAVE VOLTHE JOBBERS and RETAILERS PROFITS.

WE CUT AND MAKE EVERY GARMENT TO ORDER, these inserting an elegantly diabled and perfect fitting cloak.

WE PREPAY ALL EXPRESS CHARGES AT OUR OWN EXPENSE.

WE BUT IT AND JACKETS, 84.00: three-quarter length JACKETS, 84.00: REFER JACKETS with Fur Sharel Collar and Facing, 86.6: LONG CAPES, 82.00: REFER JACKETS WIN PLUSS JACKETS, 84.00: BISSES' NEWMARKETS, 84.00: CHILDREN'S CLOAKS, 82.80: also new designs in Fur Trimmed Garments, Croaks, Capes, etc.

We also make higher qualifies

We also make higher qualifies styles of Laddow, Misses' and Children's Cloaks, Wraps and Furn of all kinds. We will swind it to you, together with a 66-inch Tape Measure, new Measurement Hageram (which issures perfect fitting garments, in a flower than FORTY SAMPLES of the cloths and plushes of which we make the garments, to select from, on receipt of four cereb postage.

You may select any style garment you desire, and we will make it to troir for you from any of our cloths or plushes. Our samples include a spleaded line of Cloakings in all the now effects: we also sed Coth and Plushey ite yard.

THE NATIONAL CLOAK COMPANY, 21 Wooster Street, New York City.

THE NATIONAL CLOAK COMPANY, 21 Wooster Street, New York City.

EVER READY DRESS STAY

Cut Through.

See Name "EVER READY" on Back of Each Stay.

Gutta Percha on both sides of steel. Warrazted water-proof. Beware of Imitations. Manufactured by the YPSILANTI DRESS STAY MFG. CO., Ypsilanti, Mich.

STUDEBAKER PHAETONS

and Carriages of all descriptions have an established reposition for style, beauty of design, excellence of make and daish second to no similar productions in the land. Here are a few of their standard makes of Finations:

No. 521. Two-Spring Special Phaeton. No. 522. Three-Spring Special Phae-

No. 523. Two-Spring Special, canopy. No. 524. Three-Spring Phaeton with No. 525. Three-Spring Albert Phaeton. No. 526. Ladies' Phaeton, Scroll loops.

No. 527. Countess Phaeton.

No. 528. Queen Phaeton. No. 529, Goddard Phaeton,

No. 521. SPECIAL PHAETON.—The sketch litestrates our Two-Spring Special Phaeton with fine hand-buffed leather top and learner side curtains. We offer it as the best constructed vehicle to all respects that can be produced for the price. It combines in an embast degree room and constructed which each beauty of design. Whatels are A-grade axies, double-collar, side), and springs iong and easy, of best steel, of it rempered and graded. It has a large wing dash and silver line-mil, leather covered. Trimmings, English cloth or Morocco, as preferred. The custom and spring back are stuffed with curted hair. Handsome librarialed catalogue on application. Address, mentioning this JOHENAL. STUDEBAKER BROS. MFG. CO., South Bend, Ind.

Pianos on Easy Payments.

However far away you live you can get a Piano by paying a small sum down and the balance in still smaller monthly payments. We send the Piano subject to approval, to be returned if unsatisfactory at our expense for railway freight both ways. Write us and let us explain our methods to you. Clear, simple, easy.

Ivers & Pond Piano Co., Masonic Temple, 183 Tremont St., Boston.

OVERMAN'S SPECIFIC OXYCEN A Medicated oxygen Rosso Treatment for Diseases of HOAG, Throat and Lungs.

Separate Specifics for Catarrh and Hay Fever.

Separate Specifics for Catarrh and Hay Fever.

Separate Specific Separate Specifics for Catarrh and Hay Fever.

Believes Hay Fever, Bronchitis. Asthma. Rossa Catarrh, La

Grippe, Catarrhal Deathers and Nervous Prestration.

A REMEDY PRESCRIBED BY PHYSICIANS.

Believes Hay Fever, Bronchitis. Asthma. Rossa Catarrh, La

Grippe, Catarrhal Deathers and Nervous Prestration.

THE SPECIFIC DAYGEN CO. N. Na. | Low Swille, Kv. THE SPECIFIC DAYGEN CO. N. Na. | Low Swille, Kv. THE SPECIFIC DAYGEN CO. N. Na. | Low Swille, Kv. THE SPECIFIC DAYGEN CO. N. Na. | Low Swille, Tens.

MUSIC PROF. RICE'S BELF-TEACHING SYSTEM. All can learn music without the sid of a teacher. Basid, correct, TAUGHT. accompanies by his large, rec. Ten Lessons 10 cents. Crulers free. G. S. NICE MUSIC CO., 243 State Street, Chicago.

in Alexander

PRETTY DRESSES FOR LITTLE PEOPLE

By Isabel A. Mallon

ENSIBLY, indeed, are the children of our day cause of the healthy play, grow better and stronger, and all because they are sensibly, as well as prettily, clothed. The picture-que ele-ment strongly obtains in cloaks and hats, and though the frocks are picture ones also, still it cannot be claimed that there is any special change in their styles; wise mothers having discovered a comfortable and pretty design, are clinging to it.

THE FABRICS FANCIED

THE FABRICS FANCIED

THE fabrics fancied are invariably wood, cashmere, camel's hair, the rough floccy stuffs or the soft wools peculiar to plaids being selected. For school dresses, dark blues, browns, deep crimsons, and bright scarlets in cashmere are pretty, and are colors that usually wear well. The plaids are most popular in the blue and green combinations, the bright red ones so funcied by little English girls not having the same vogue here, possibly because our skies are brighter and the brilliant coloring is not so badly needed to improve the weather.

For little wrappers, intended to be worn when some nursery disorder has made of a merry maiden a little invalid, gaily striped flooness, buttoning all the way down the front, quite loose, and with a belt of the same material to hold them in, shows how all the different times of life, the good and the bud, are alike estered to.

EVERYDAY DRESS

GOWN that is to be worn A every day and is suitable for either school or home, for sister who is eleven years old, and who can write real letters. is shown in Hustration No. 1.
The skirt is perfectly plain, gathered in around the waist and sewed on to the bodice and sewed on to the bodice which is also a plain one, the hooks that close it being in-visible; the collar is a deep turned over one of blue silk that matches the cashmere used for the little dress. A broad belt of blue silk folded over to look as if it were tucked, is laced in the center in front, and readles to the top. in front, and reaches to the top of the gathers for up on the bodice, giving the desired short-waisted look; the sleeves short-waiseer look; the seeves are high and full, gathered in at the wrists and finished with cuffs of blue silk. This little sister still wears her hair cut in a picture-sque bang and fall-ing loose at the back far below her waist.

her waist.

If one did not care to have a silk belt, collar and culfs, then they could be made of the same material as the gown, or if one wished them to be a little more elaborate one wisned them to be a little more claborate the coarse. Russian lace could overlay the collar and cuffs and a buckle fasten the belt. In making the belt, put that stiffening be-tween the lining and the silk that is used by tailors in making standing collars stand up, or straight cuffs straight.

FOR A WEE MAIDEN

THE same dark cashmeres or stuffs are used for the gowns of the wee maidens as well as for the girls who are counted as large in nursery parlance. Golden-brown cashmere is particularly pretty for the small blonde people. Little gowns continue to be gathered or plaited in at the neck, and then they are permitted to fall loose at the back, and are only partially confined by a belt of ribbon or velvet in front. No frock could be more comfortable or more picturesque, and no more comfortable or more picturesque, and no frock could be more easily made at home. The little girlle forms the only decoration, except, indeed, broad collars and cuffs either of white embroidery or linen. One small girl wearing such a gown is pictured in Illustration No. 2. The real golden-brown cashmere is used for this, and the full skirt is gathered and fastened in at the neck skirt is gamersa and fascened in at the facts to a yoke that is invisible. Fur up under the arms comes a narrow-pointed girdle of dark-brown relvet drawn down in front and caught just in the center under a relvet rosette. The just in the center under a velvet rosette. The sleeves are full and gathered at the top and at the wrist, and a deep square collar of coarse embroidery hides the yoke and is fastened in front under a velvet ribbon bow, the loops and ends of which are so stiffly placed that one feels like calling the weaver little Miss Prim. Deep cuffs matching the collar are also worn, and form a pretty finish to the full alcover. In blue wardet any of the ulwide sleeves. In blue, ecaries any of the plaids, gray or mode, a little gown like this might be made. A small woman who is to keep the cold out this winter by means of agray krimmer cost has a gray cashmere gown made after this fashion which she wears under it, but, of course, a light shade like this will need to have special attention, and little Miss Prim will have to be on her best behavior when she wears it.

OVER-DRESSING OUR CHILDREN

I DON'T think any of us like to think of our babies being sacrificed to their clothes, and while a little lady will see that she does not mass or soil her gown, still it is a little hard for her to be hampered by the consciousness that her frock is her first consideration. Dame Fushion has offered us suitable styles and sensible materials for our children, and if we do not dress them properly nobody will be to blame but ourselves. Not very long ago I heard a nurse in one of the parks make a queer comment on a much over-dressed child. The poor little tot had on silk stockings, shots with ridienlous heels, a silk frock, a white bat ladeued with blue feathers and a much trimmed coat. Looking at her own charges, who were plainly but sensibly clad, and who were DON'T think any of us like to think of our med coat. Looking at her own charges, who were plainty but sensibly chad, and who were trundling their boops and romping about searching for good health, with an air of satisfaction, and then looking at the over-dressed child she said: "She evidently belongs to a tenement house." Although this was rough and rude, there was wisdom in it; she knew where ignorance was the dressing of such a child would result, and she was certain that the woman who could count her money by the millions would never commit such a blunder as to over-dress a child.

THE WISE APRON

THE WISE APRON

THE apron has always had for little people a prestige of its own. To put on a clean apron usually means that one is in good standing in the nursery, and that the freshening up of an afternoon is deemed desirable. The materials used for aprons nowadays are nainsook, lawn, cross-barred muslin and an unbleached linen that is supposed to be made in regulation pinafores to be worn when toys or books are being painted by young and very zealons artists. In their designs, the aprons are almost exactly like the frocks over which they are worn. A square or pointed yoke, with the skirt straight and full gathered into it, is often seen, and this may have either long, full sleeves, or simply a ruffle around the armhole, as is fancied. The broad sash to hold the fulness in is made of the same material as the apron, and has its edge finely hemmed by hand and so flattened out that it doesn't curl up after it has visited the laundry. up after it has visited the up after it has visited the laundry.

Aprons are very sensibly made quite plain; the dressiest have a yoke of coarse embroidery or Russian lace, but the putting of innumerable frills or the decorating them with gay ribbons is not considered good taste. When a yoke apron is not selected, then the square-cut one, tying on the shoulders—a pattern that I am sure our grand-mothers wore—is chosen. For the lattle woman who goes to the little woman who goes to school, and who has gotten past the wenring of a yoke or a body apron, one that has a square skirt and a good-sized bib is selected. It has a quaint housewifely air, and as it is housewifely air, and, as it is usually carried folded and assumed in the school-room with much precision, it not only tends to keep the gown clean, but teaches the value of caring for one's belongings.

THE LITTLE HANDKERCHIEFS

OF COURSE they shed them as the roses do their leaves, and for that reason the little handkerchiefs want to be as simple as possible. Those shown in the shops are of plain white lines with a narrow hemstitched edge. Occasionally the Christian name is embroidered on them in red, pink or pale blue entered this is done to avoid any discussion as embroidered on them in red, pink or pale blue cotton; this is done to avoid any discussion as to whose the handkerchief is, for if only the family name is upon it, it will be quite possible for the boys to claim it as their own, and so make very wretched the tidy little maiden who takes care of her things and who grieves over their disappearance "by those had hove."

EVERYDAY DRESS (Illus. No. 1)

To teach a child that her clothes are her own, that her handkerchiefs and her collars nanckereniers and ner conars are hers individually, is to make a child careful. When she knows it is her very own she is upt to put the bandker-chief back in her pocket and not risk throwing it on the floor, or laying it on a chair mithout a thought as to its without a thought as to its future. The wise mother will, as soon as her little daughter is of sufficient age to under-stand, give up all of, or part of, a bureau drawer in the nursery to her, and will teach her that hair ribbons, handher that hair riomsis, hands kerchiefs, the small fan that is bers, and her numerous be-longings are to be put away there by herself until they are required. This is the way to not only teach a child to care for her stathes, but to be systematic in the disposal of them.
Once the habit of tidiness is formed, it will only be natural for the child to adhere thereto.

WHEN SHE GOES OUT

WHEN she takes her walks abroad, the W HEN she takes her walks abroad, the young woman who is at present the woman of the future and who is just now the child of your heart, wears a pretty warm cloak which the dressmakers call the Florentine cloak. It may be made of camel's hair, of warm heavy cloth, of plaid, but it is the pretiest and most suitable for the season when it is of cloth or heavy camel's hair trimmed with some inexpensive for. In Illustration No. 3 is pictured the veritable Florentine cloak. It is made of a deep mode fleecy cloth, the yoke is pointed in the back and front, the material plaited on it and allowed to flare; in length it should be an inch below the skirt of the dress worn underneath. The sleeves are full, and come just below the elbow to deep cuffs bordered with instituted between the collar of natural beaver is about the neck; a pointed girdle of mode velvet only about two inches wide confines the fulness in front. A little must of natural beaver is carried, so that the small hands do not get cold. Leggings of the same material as the coat are buttoned up to keep the little legs warra. The hat is a large soft felt of the mode shade, with a hage bow of brown ribbon as its only trimming, unless, indeed, the strings that tie it down so primly under the chin and which make it look so picturesque, are counted as a decoration. Krimmer, any of the beavers, chinchills, or seal may be used as a trimming upon such cloaks, or if one did not desire a decoration, the collar and cuffs could be quite plain. For school wear, long cloaks with capes, and hoods made of plaid lined with some bright color are in vogue.

WHEN SHE GOES OUT (Illus, No. 3)

A WORD FOR YOU

A ND when I say you, I mean you happy women who are fortunate enough to have little people of your very own. Don't make the playtime of life a burden by making a child think too much of its clothes and feel that the little body can't have its natural freedom of movement because a frock will get out of place, or something come unbooked. Give your children every pleasure that you can; the dark side will come to them only too soon, so let them have all the sunshine possible, and dark side will come to them only too soon, so let them have all the sunshine possible, and let them think of the many pleasures that come to them from you. I don't mean you mustn't teach them to take care of their belongings, for you must. A child is never too young to be tidy, and if it only begins by hanging up its stockings at night be sure that in a very short time it will learn where the skirt belongs and where the other garments should be put. But don't make tidiness and tyranny synonymous. Never, if you synonymous. Never, if you can help it, make a tear come in your little girl's eyes about her clothes. Teach her their value, and teach her quietly and made her clothes. and gently how to take care of them. She will learn, and as for you, well, no matter what happens, when she goes from hoppens, when she goes from you you will not have to remember that for some little fault about her frocks you made her unhappy. Just think always how things will seem to you in the future, and I do believe that you and your neighbor and I will all act differently in the present.

There is nobody quite so unhappy as the child who does not have a real childhood; who isn't saved from as many of woes of this life as is pos-who isn't saved from as many of wees of this life as is pos-sible, and who isn't given golden days while it is young. Make them as happy as you can, for you and I will never forgive ourselves if we don't.

B. & B.

We want to sell

10,000 DOZENS Handkerchiefs and Gloves

- THROUGH -

OUR MAIL ORDER DEPARTMENT

to the readers of this JOURNAL, before Christmas.

The values we offer in every line, in both these Departments, are so unusual and attractive that we are sure of this result, provided you are interested in the matter.

Linen Handkerchiefs FOR CHILDREN,

FOR LADIES, FOR MEN,

Silk Handkerchiefs, Mufflers and Reefer-Scarfs.

KID GLOVES:

The best or Genuine Kid Glove

at $1.00 a pair in America-black and all colors.

Our Mail Order Department is sending Dry Goods of every kind all over this Western Hemisphere, and doing this only because of SUPERIOR VALUES.

Correspondence Invited.

BOGGS & BUHL,

115, 117, 119, 121 Federal Street, ALLEGHENY, PA.

FREE, TO LADIES!

A Leaflet, about stylish ways of using ribbons. Address FAIR & SQUARE, 67 Greene St., N.Y.

for Illustrated Catalogue.

L. L. LOOMER'S SONS, BRIDGEPORT, CONN. (Sale Manufacture and fattation) by Google

A Department devoted entirely to an interchange of ideas among our band of JOURNAL rs. Address all letters to AUNT PATIENCE, care of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, 433-435 Arch

HRISTMAS light streams out far and wide, and we who live in its brightness weeks before it comes are cheered and comforted by it for weeks after-ward. I have thought that we would let it stream into our room this after-noon, and would admit nothing We will have only happy that would mar it. words and cheerful thoughts. Some of us carry heavy burdens of sorrow, of fear, per-haps even of want; but for one little hour we will forget them and be strengthened to bear

I WAS left a motheriess girl at the age of thirteen, with two younger sleers to love, work for and swe for. I am now mistress of "Grandpa-x," and the little ones come home and love to come. I have always had to wirk hard, doing our ewn housework, with the exception of the washing, and sometimes that, My education was gotten from my faither, with the exception of a little albendance at select schools after my sisters were old enough to be as helpful in our home as myself. We "ave always been obliged to economize in the most careful way, so thave had my trains. I have waited to do my sweeping until after I came from my painting lesson, because, if I did it before. I would be too tred to paint; but I never hated the sweeping, and that beings me to the point. Love your work, We will do wall by whatever we really love. "Bising superior to your work," does not mean to go off into Egypt and it the potatoes burn. Doing anything well is upiditing, and there is no work in life so emobiling as home-making. If a woman has a poetical or artistic soul she will feel a real thrill of delight when she takes a dainty cream-colored dish and places in it fresh delicate leaves of crisp green helitoe, cutting over it an egg, boiled until the golden heart is mealy. It is beautiful, and she must feel it so. Then, think of a plate of toast, with each bit of loast holding a poached egg, cooked to perfection. Why, there is real science in poaching an egg. Is there so beauty there? Is there to satisfaction in a well-accomplished task? Then you have not attained to the posebility of gathering up the sunshine that is scattered along your way.

You might as well educed to painting, and say you felt.

possibility of gathering up are saiding your way.
You might as well object to painting, and say you felt it degrading because you must wash your brushes after it, as to feel home-making so because there are stoves to blacken and dishes to wash. Any one who has ever painted, and has done a good day's work with hig briefle brushes, knows that the washing up the tea things is a dainty job compared with the washing of all those dirty brushes.

brushes, knows that the washing up the tea things is a stainty job compared with the washing of all those dirty trushes.

And why have pots? I did away with them long ago, when I found there were pressed the and again vessels which would held as much, and were light to handle. I have my fall share of vasity, and object to estarging my wrists, as well as wearing out my strength, of which I have note too much. Another way I have saved myself I have never had a khethen, but cooked in my dining room. So I have saved many steps and gained what many women miss, the privilege of always having my family near me. Whenever my father is at home, and I am there, be is there also with book or get time to read so masch?" I explain, "My father reads to me." So I am posted on politics, and read foreign news and seemon, and seem wiser that my girl friends say to me, "How do you get time to read so masch?" I explain, "My father reads in secure things that can bettered women only. I think if you will let a man read a good dead to you that is interesting so him, he will sometimes read something ust to piease you.

I have made five ray-expects in my life; now, I think that a waste of time, but some of the sunsilest memories of my early girlhood are woven two the first two; for the rags were severed in this habiten: One of the three sisters read about, the other two sewed, while father sut by correcting the reading and cutting rags. "Why, bless those rags!" I say now. Was there anything degrading the that? No; the severe influence of that father-love will remain with us through life, the rags are for gating. The reading and cutting rags. "Why, bless those rags!" I say now. Was there anything do grading the that? No; the severe influence of that father-love will remain with us through life, the rags are for ourselves and good books, yet we never know we were toned or poor in those days.

If I have seemed to speak too much of myself it is because I wanted to leid Mrs. John Smith that some one has really lived a hard workaday life, and

We see the secret of this happy home; all were of one mind, and shared the labors and so the joys of the household. There must be one central point, of course. Mother, or sister, it may be, will, by her own sweet magnetism, draw all the members of the family to her, and she will be the unconscious director of

A FTER having been obliged by illness to remain at themse the greater part of the past test years, I have now sufficiently recovered to make a visit to my physical and the part of the past test years, I have now sufficiently recovered to make a visit to my physical a relact by have and studiess. After entering a bright to my parties, Mrs. P. In her affectionate way, said: "You are now considered one of the family on long as you remain with us." That sendence, so thinkly solven, made med held readly "one" of them. Ah, their sisters, you who have good health brook not how delightful it is to get out after having been shot up so long within four walls.

But affliction has its advantages as well as its privations. I have been comfiscion knowing that thus I am apply from the impractions of weeking that thus I am apply from the impractions of weeking that I have been comfiscion for weeking that thus I am apply from the impractions of weeking that I have been comfiscion for weeking the summary of the su

We pray "lead us not into temptation," but we are not usually ready to thank God for be-ing led away from temptation by sickness. A bright welcome to a weary or an invalid guest is like a tonic. I have tressured in my memory the refreshment which came to me more than once when I was worn and ill from one dear home, whose very walls seemed to give me

If is always darkest just before dawn. But when I wrote my letter of remonstrance many months ago I did not know how soon the day would dawn glor-losely for me.

Since that time, by a kind dispensation of that Providence that has never fabed me in sensitive or shelow. I have been permitted to John my hirshand, and now have every prospect of remaining with him to the end of our natural lives.

We have so much of happiness offered us at every turn if we will only take it; and now that my hashand and boy are growing stronger, all the dark past seems like a bideous nightmare that cannot possibly trouble the awakened present.

I hope the other decouraged wives may ended my experience; for I am very sare if we are padient and trustful, and secept the duty that lies rearest, we cannot field to be thoused; and oh! how richly one Pather blosses! He gives of His largess, and loys in the giving. In this consection I am reminded of a thought remarding the "four-leaved shamrock," symbolical of happiness, or, as it is more commonly bermed, "Goodlock!" Let me quote these words that have been so replete with menning to myself. "Fluck the common flowers and leaves about your path, and maybe you will find the little locky leaves among them; if or the seads that are blown by the strong wind over Paradise gardenest second on the common paths. And if you don't chance upon it here—why, be sure you'll find a there, and we all know that the shortest way there is by the potain patch!"

With one other combriding quotation and I am done. I cannot refinin from offering these crumbs of comfort that have been so much to me in times of despendency to other despairing releave; "What mainers it where the feet stand or wherewith the hands are busy? So that it is the spot where God has put you, and the work He hasgiven you to do."

It is not always that our hearts are comforted so soon by a turn for the better in the tide of affairs. We thank God with you, and pray that your brave heart may be strength-ened daily, not only for bearing your own burdens, but for teaching others how to bear

I HAVE received a nice supply of reading and some up: Those kind, loving letters: 1 think there are some spheroid strais in the warid yet. I have tract to thank each kind donor of reading in a letter personality, but I have a large family of children, and inoney is scarce for postage. Though I live so far away, I seem to be visiting with the Sisters. I am not a "King's Baughter," but wish I were good cought to be one. I will do my best for the Journal when measy guis more pleasing; it is the only woman's paper taken in the nighborhood. The people never look at the dates on the magnatuse and papers. If you, who are in the midsi of good liberature, could only know how much good it does: I am ashamed of being so popular at others' expense. My neighbors come and get the reading, and though it about so as to make it go as far as possible, and they thank mo, too; and I will send the thanks of a good many fard-worked women and treatiles.

Thank you and bless you for your kindness. Long may Tot Lastins Hook 5012 and 10, will it spajendid advice and loving sympathy, and long may its staff of spleadid women live who help to dill its pages with such contolling influences and sol-infling words; Yours will live.

And this is one of the ways in which the

And this is one of the ways in which the good seed of printed words is scattered. Do not be ashamed, rather be grateful, that you can be a blessing to your neighborhood. I hope that in the numerous other cases where newspapers and magazines have been sent, the good has been, if not as great as here, enough to reward those who have taken pains to send the packages. And, as far as possible, I hope thanks have been sent to those whose gifts have been received. have been received.

W.F. all have teesble. I, myself, have had what seems to me the "block share." what with sickness and wrestling with pois and kettles, and no one hates dishorabling more than I. But when the wrinkles begin to make my forebead look like a newly plowed gardens, I just reil up my slavren (I might add here I do my our work, take care of two balies under three years, and cook for three men and say: "Oh bother: looking mad won't wast the dishes, and only makes one look fike a witch." I always can misster up a smile of two thinking of something that happened in my schoel-days. I know what crying balies and deorder are, but I always think every squall is one less of the grand total. Thunk heaves I have (I'll not be sitly enough to say the best) one of the very best husbands in the whole world, so it is not so had even if we do work hard, and sometimes used, and lote of it, is the very heat thing for m. Now our think I'm one of the over-chaseful kind. I'm nothers. don't think I'm one of the ever best thing for the Now don't think I'm not not the ever-choserial kind, I'm nothing of the sect, for sometimes I do get very despondent, leady had an hour ago I said (Parden any wicksdross, Aunt Patience); "I wish the world would come to an end, for I don't want to like and I don't want to die," but I must explain that I have been sick, or about half sick, for two days, and my work mast so on, sick or well, I laughed it off, anyway. Now, as the ugly little girt in the September assuber did, just take a pencil and paper and gait down year beesings opposite your wee and see which is the longest column.

Toway.

which is the longest column. Towar.

My bushand is "sweet tempered and happy looking" in house-deaning time, even though the proverbal horsestood was over sume years ago.

I don't think I ever usaded the kitrhen floor but he supped savefully over it and said: "How sho you make it look," or "Take it us easy as you can, my dear." (Lean windows are sure to call forth some pleasant vords of appereistion, and even after the weekly soverping of the chambers I expect the usual remark as he issues through them: "How week and fresh it smells." In the early serion of a pareciation, and even after the weekly soverping of the chambers I expect the usual remark as he issues through them: "How week and fresh it smells." In the early serion I go themsels were piece, but and closed and trink mid berson and arrange and classify so that when scrabbing time comes all things are in order, and it is not a serious disturbance at all.

These the good man engages men to take set the solves; then one corpet course up at a time sed goes down the satisfied by.

Them he thinks of pictures collected during the year which he forthwith text and langs in place.

A new aftile he take thinks will be convenient here, a chair there, and a rug somewhere else, and so he abbs to the good of the pictures of the picture of this way work of clounles.

the three ways his sympathy and impetus to the general work of clearing.

As he has done his share I keep mine out of his way by giving him his unual three weaks a day in the dining-coin and not on a tob in the harm; I look as well as lever do, which he says her's a taill had, and is it down with him in the evening, also as usual, and loave my straight out of skint, out of rolled.

Why, of course, it can be done; in micros should be the strength and by of work.

HELEON VINGINIA.

A LESSON has been taught me which bears repeating, I think. A little blind boy has larly come inder my notice. He is about ten years old, and has been blited from inflancy. I was at first attracted by his pleasant counteriance, and afterward his bright and cheerful disposition and conversation. His poor mother, who is smooth the many bread-winners, inde me, Being worried and discouraged, one day, I said; "What a dreary old world, anyway!" B—, who is always with me, looked up with a smile, and said; "Oh, manuma, I don't think so! I think it is sufully siece, and especially when the sun shines." Needless to say, the good woman complained no more. What a lesson for us who are thessed with all our senses! How little we appreciate deed's great gifts! When we are in trouble and everything seems against us, let us think of this sweet child and his sunshine, and I feel that our darkest days will be brighter. I, for one, have found it so,

Hellers G.

Surely, if a blind boy may find joy in the sunshine, we, with open eyes, are worse than blind if we fail to be glad in its brightness.

I WOULD like to say a word about the honeymoon.

The June brides are settled now, in their own coxynests, each trying to realize all the happiness anticipated in those lovely summer days; but now and again there is a thorn among the roses, is there not, dear girts? Well, of course, being true where all, you will not admit it even "Among Ourselves." "All the world loves a lover," but I love the brides. They are so fall of promote and sweet faith. Having been a bride myself—only the other day it seems—I feel in sympathy with all the fields. I hear of, and especially so with the Journal brides.

When I was married I came to the far west, hundreds.

brides I hear of, and especially so with the Journal at brides.

When I was married I came to the far west, hundreds of miles from home and friends, to make my home among strangers. The nest weatwesting me, very oney and comfortable it was, too, and I felt, as I settled myself and my many little belengings into place, that I could never be lonely in my new home; but also: there was one thing which I had never taken into consideration in dreaming of my new home. In locking forward to making home pic "sout and beautiful for my husband, I did not remember the long hours I must spend alone while my husband was at his place in the storn. Beinday too, I was alone, for he was a prescription clerk. This was thorn I found among my roses.

When my dear grandmother was bed that I was soon to marry, she excisioned: "Married' why the child can't knit!" and each day brought to hight some new thing which I could not do; until I began to think the way was very rough indeed. Other brides may think so, too, and to there if wish to say only be puleon, for the roughest places wear away. My John works in I so own steer now, and stays at bome on sounday; and other worries disappear, so that we are really and truly having our honeymoon, although we have been married five years. To those who have found a tay cross to bear, I wish to say, take heart!"

Onk of the Bernes.

Ah! happy the couple whose homeymoon

Ah! happy the couple whose honeymoon still rises clear and bright after five years, or ten years, or twenty years; and for fifty years it is possible; yes, even longer!

THE writer has been married six and one-half years to a man of mederate means, and eighteen years her senior. There are few couples who have mere dismitiar tastes, but we find enough that we do bothenloy, and count it a piensere—for the sake of the other—log give up that which displauses the other. And I can truly say that I am perfectly contented in my little home, and more than happy in my bushead's love, and would not for the world go back to the tiresome old school-room as teacher—which was my former occupation.

I congratulate you on your present happi ness, but your somewhat contemptuous words for the school-room! Ah, I thought they would stir some loving teacher to a reply!

SO often am I strengthened and helped by some word I see in The Labries' Hones Journal, that I cannot belp saying so. I am a besy school-teacher, with the care of feety pupils in school hours, and the responsibility of a very nervous, delicate sider out-of-school. Is it any wooder, thick you, dear Aust Patience, that semetimes I long for some dear motherly care to letten to my troubles?

I must confess, though, that my joys for exceed my woes, and I find in my daily work much peasure. For my peptles are very fixed of me, and my little sider devoted to me. I enjoy the Journal, very much indeed, and it can always be found on my reading table.

ELIZABETH.

and it can always be found on my reading table.

ELEKARTH.

I. TOO, was a school-ma'am: I, too, live in the country; I, too, am "general utility woman." I have two bables, one two-and-shalf years old, one only four mouths. I have no belp with any of my work, and get very tired semectimes. But when I feet must like compinioning, the thought comes up—" How many thousands of working-women in our country would fiss! diesest indeed with the comforts of life I enjoy! How many telling widows in our great cities would thank (lot fir the food and clothing my little ones never lack! How many mothers, whose bables are sleeping undergrass, would never complain of my trouble and work! When I think of these I wonder I can ever complain because my life is a basy one. Thank Ged for my home, my bables and my husband. In all the five years of our married life be has never met or helf, me with a frown upon his face, and Assac is the dearest place to both of set. I do not enjoy washing pots or kettles, but our heavenly Father knew where to place is one earth, and He sees and knews it we do our duty is still things. I know a woman who interried a farmer. His beaith was not good, and she brought up the children, and cared for him, working inducers and out, in the haydest, pinntine corn and diagong positions. This begins he field, bleesing her with his hat breath. Do you think she regrets all her years of work? I am hand-in-hand with you, my sisters, for labor and fir love. Let us kneed and pmy to see our bissings count, and think of the bright things in our life, and forget the diagreenble ones as field as we can. Look for mercies and you will find them. We must take some bitter with the sweet, or the sweet will love its flavor. Above all, remember our troubles are the refuseries of the soul.

Bornellyes are set in sorrew,

As genes are set in gold."

Yours for the your down.

When we are rasped and irritated by the moment they do seem great—which must come into the household, and especially where there are little children, if we could but stop and think what it would be if we had the home no longer; or if the little ones, whose demands are so exhausting, were gone further out of our sight! And let us remember that our own unhappiness and irritation is a fruitful source of confusion and misconduct in the household. A sweet-tempered and placid mother will rarely have ill-tempered and vexations children, even though their circumstances may be far from comfortable.

"These trifles! Can it be they make or mar A human life? Are souls as lightly swayed as rushes are, By love, or strife?"

"Yea, yea! A look the fainting heart may break Or make it whole;

And just one word, if said for love's sweet sake

LADIES' AND CHILDREN'S BOOTS AND SHOES.

Awarded Aighest honors of Philadelphila 1876 Melbourne 1880
Berlin 1877 Prankfort 1881
Parls 1878 Ansterdam 1888

And wherever else exhibited.

For the expecse purpose of bringing the "Percosas" flat Farceer before every lady in the United States that wears a hat, we will mail to all who send us so clas (the regular price), three pair and two pair Free; or single part for 20 clas, to milliners, dealers and canyassers and all who with to get up clote, 12 pair for $1.00. This sources $1.40 profit on the investment, on the investment, and its deservoying and otherwise unsatisfactory long pin. This useful and indispensable article retails everywhere for 20 cents, which price rounins uncharaged, and on merit is cheap at $1.00. Manufactured only by H. H. ROTH & CO.,

SPECIAL OFFER for thirty days only, and FREE at that. For the express purpose of bringing the "Peerson" Hat

H. H. ROTH & CO., 1111 and 1113 Market Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Fargo's $2.50 Ladies' Boot

FASHIONABLE HAIR.

We will mall goods to reliable parties throughout the United States for approval. The new-est styles and best of goods at lowest prices. No money re-quired until they are received. No obligation to keep goods if unsalishctory. Send for circular.

JOHN MEDINA,

QUEEN OF STORMS-Sent, prepaid, anywhere a receipt of 20 cbs, two pair $1. Keep feet and boom pair R. Keep feet and osc., we sell them chemp-to adtice our famous French
Dongoin Kid Button Boot, sent, prepaid, for 6.50; equals any Eleboot.
Common Sense or Opera, lly to 5, widths
C, Dor E, Gunranteed C, K. or monor refunded, BEXTER
SHOE CO., 290 Decree

Home Work for Ladies. Pin Money Easily Earned.

Our work involves so canvassiss, and may be undertaken by the most modest and refined.

It consists simply to addressing and mailing circulars, making little of minus to which we can mail sample copies of our elegant Fashion Magazins. The work benedits us and pays many laddes handsomely. While in our employ we send you the FREE Sample copy and full particulars mailed upon receipt of factor stamp. Address.

MIRROR OF FASHIONS,

order a Bangle Pin with our name engraved; you will cant more for Holidays and your name engraved; you will want more for Holidays and Britishay Giffs after you see one; made of rolled-good plate or solid silver, to ets. Cubs of five, $2 (solid gold, $1.50). H. F. Leland, Worcester, Mass.

ROCSERVER, N. Y.

CROCHET with "Kensington Crochet Twist," any color. Large ball, III confe.
C. G. HUBERT, 85 Walker Street, New York.

CROCHET WORK, Latest and complete In-librationed, All Einde of Crocheting, Cotton, Linest, Silk and Wool. Sent, postpaid, for St cents, L. WHITE & CO., 214 Baste 1979 Charge Google

• MISS PARLOA will at all times be glad, so far as she can, to answer in this Department all general domestic questions sent by her readers. Address all letters to Miss Maria Parloa, care of The Ladies' Home Journal, Philadelphia, Pa.

fast do inquiries pour in upon me in regard to matters which have perplexed housekeepers that it would be impossible to answer all of them at once, unless the space allotted this department were doubled or tripled. It is pleasing to see by these letters from all parts of the country that domestic science has a warm place in the correspondents' hearts, and that so many of the writers are typical American women—intelligent, progressive, possessed of many original and excellent ideas, and lovers of their homes. If they will be patient, an attempt will be made to respond to all their questions in good time,

WHAT TO GET FOR A SUNDAY DINNER

WHAT TO GET FOR A SUNDAY DINNER

A SUBSCRIBER says she does the house-hold work for her father and herself, and is troubled as to what to get for dinner Sunday. She goes to church, and would like to ask friends home to dinner, but thinks the meal is not good enough. She therefore wants some suggestion as to what to get. Since her differma is one that many hundreds experience, I will try to make it my own, and suggest what seems to me to be both suitable and healthful.

what seems to me to be both shitable and healthful.

In New England such cases are provided for with the great Sanday dish, baked beans and brown bread. The pot of beans is left in the oven and the loaf of brown bread in the steamer. When the family returns from church the beans and bread can be served smoking bot; a cold dessert and a cup of tea completing the dinner. In winter, cold dinners give the table a dismal appearance, and are, moreover, unhealthful. There should be at least one warm dish. In cities and cold climates the kitchen fire is kept burning all day, so that many dishes which are not injured by long, slow cooking can be prepared before going to church, the cooking to go on until serving time. If the housekeeper lives in until serving time. If the housekeeper lives in a warm climate and uses wood fires, she cannot, of course, depend upon these conveniently prepared dishes. It is well, however, to have at least a warm drink, such as tea, coffee or

MEALS WHICH CAN BE QUICKLY PREPARED

HEALS WHICH CAN BE GUICKLY PREPARED

HERE are some of the Sunday dinners which one can prepare easily and quickly:
Any kind of cold meat, sliced thin. Lyonnaised or creamed potatoes, fried cabbage, preserved fruit, cake, tea.

Cold corned beef, vegetable hash, bread and butter, fancy crackers, cold costard, tea.

Eggs, either boiled, pouched, scrambled or as an omelet, toast, cocoa, fruit, Salad, rolls, Washington pie, peach preserve, coffee.

Cold ment, Weish rare-bit, brown bread toast, sice pudding, ten. Canned salmon (or any kind of cold fish will dot, vinnigrette sauce, rolls and butter, baked Indian pudding, coffee.

Creamed dried beef, brown bread, toast, bianc-mange with cream, tea.

Braised beef, boiled hominy, bread and butter, cake and preserved fruit, chocolate. Beef, real or mutton stew, rolls, crackers, cream pudding, cocoa.

These are only a few of the many combinations one can have without much trouble. The beans, brown bread, hominy, braised beef or a braised chicken, stews, baked Indian pudor a braised chicken, stews, based indian pun-ding all can be cooking while the bousekeeper is at church. All the preparations of the other dishes can be made in the morning, and but a few minutes will be needed to finish them when one returns from church.

If one have no fire and object to making one, the eggs, creamed beef, potatoes, vegetable hash, drinks, etc., may be prepared on an oil

If one have a patent oven that does all the work with the aid of a lamp, a hot dinner would, of course, be possible with but little trouble. Some kind of sauce or preserves, olives, fancy crackers, canned meats and fish, cannel peas, corn and tomatoes are all valuable for these dinners. Cold mest, with one or two of these vegetables made hot, is a very good dinner.

Any kind of cold mest can be freed from skin, bone and fat, cut into dainty pieces, seasoned with salt and pepper and put away until the return from church. A simple white or brown sauce can be made in less than five minutes and the mest be warmed in

To the average mortal one hot savory dish is more satisfactory than several cold ones, and it seems to me that the housekeeper who follows these suggestions will not find it hard to get at least one hot substantial dish and a hot drink for her Sunday dinner.

BUYING MEAT AND FISH FOR TWO

A LMOST all young bousekeepers find it hard to make economical and satisfactory purchases of meat and fish. They should understand at the outset that it is impossible to save in the same proportion as one who buys for a large family. Another point: it is wiser to get only the parts and the amount actually wanted than to buy large pieces simply because they are cheaper by the pound.

Broiling meats is the most expensive of all methods of cooking, but, to my mind, the most healthful. When a housekeeper really can afford to follow it, she should do so.

When planning to roast or broil a piece of LMOST all young housekeepers find it

When planning to roast or broil a piece of meat its adaptability to being made over into various little dishes should be considered. Pork is the least desirable of the fresh ments for these purposes. For warming over in va-rious ways the following named ments are the most valuable: poultry, veal, lamb, mutton and beef. The white ments are better than the red for this purpose. This is also true of flsh, the white, dry varieties being much bet-ter for made-over dishes than the dark, oily

Here is something that one can buy in a small quantity and use to advantage: A short porter-house steak will answer for two dinners. Cut out the tenderloin, broil it and serve with a good sauce. If the weather be cold the remainder of the steak can be used two days later. In hot weather it must be cooked for dinner the following day.

ECONOMICAL USE OF LEFT-OVERS

BROIL two pounds of halibut for one din-ner and there will be enough left over to make a nice little dish of escaloped fish. The same amount of fish, cut in a square piece and same amount of fish, cut in a square piece and boiled, can be served with an egg sauce, and what is left over be used for an escaloped dish; or, it can be put in a deep dish, with cream sauce, and covered with mashed potatoes and browned. Still another way is to combine it with mashed potato and make it into croquettes. Any kind of cold fish can be used in this manner. A small white fish, lake trout, bass, or, indeed, any of the smaller fish, can be baked or broiled, and such part as may be left can be used as suggested for halibut.

A small turkey or a chicken of good size can be roasted, served hot, then cold, and what is still left can be prepared in any of the following named ways (the bones being boiled down for stock): as croquettes, blanquette, down for stock): as croquettes, blanquette, with rice border, fricassee, chicken pie, hashed chicken on toast, creamed chicken, salad, chicken omelet, timbal of chicken, etc. The tough pieces and bones can be used for soups.

A FEW FACTS ABOUT ROASTS

If you are to have a friend or two to dinner indulge in a roast. Cold beef, mutton, lamb and yeal are all nice if sliced thin and served with vegetables. The cold meat can be made into timbals, croquettes, escaloped dishes, hashed on toast, or be warmed in a hoorn or white same.

tisties, hashed on toast, or be warned in a brown or white sauce.

The smallest prime roast of beef is one of the short ribs, weighing from three to four pounds. There are two of these short ribs. In Boston they are called the tip of the sirloin; outside of New England, the short ribs, or first cut of the ribs. The two ribs are included in the cut, but it is possible to get the cut divided. A small loin of mutton, lamb or veal, weighing about three or four pounds, makes a roast that will not last forever. One must exercise great care in treating such a roast; the heat must be moderate after the meat is browned, and there must be a generous and frequent basting, else the beef will be dry.

POSSIBILITIES WITHIN EASY REACH

O NE can buy half a pound of sausages, a thin slice of ham that will not weigh more than half a pound a quarter of a pound of dried beef, a quarter of a p.und of smoked bacon, half of which can be used with chicken livers, while the other half may be cooked another time with one pound of calfa liver. A quarter of a pound of smoked salmon or halibut to be broiled for breakfast or tea, will be a very generous allowance. One pound of sait codfish will answer for three or four dishes—fish balls, fish in cream, fish hash, etc. One thin slice of round steak weighing about a pound can be made into beef olives. A slice a pound can be made into beef olives. A slice of veal from the leg can be used in the same way. A piece of beef cut from the shoulder, and weighing about two or three pounds, can be braised. About a pound and a quarter of fresh beef, cut from any of the tough parts of the animal, can be prepared in a stew. Mutton and veal can be used in the same way; in-deed, any of the cold meats can be used in a

One grouse or partridge, a pair of pigeons, a pair of quall, a rabbit, a duck, etc., all come within the range of the family of two. SOMETHING ABOUT MAKING SOAP

A FEW years ago, when on one of my lecturing tours. I boarded with a family where the ladies did their own work. The housekeeping was perfect; the table was exceptionally good, the food being well cooked and in 6 nerous quantities; and there was no waste. Now, these folks made their own hard soap. One night have known it would be good, but it was more than that: it was of such superior quality that I asked about the process they followed. I had always made soft soap for cleaning purposes, and had been accustomed to save my grease, as I shall ex-plain. For nearly three years now I have made the hard soap, and should be sorry to have to use any other.

I have a stone jar for frying fat and a few five-pound lard cans for soap grease. All the beef fat is clarified and strained into the stone jar; all mutton and other kinds of fat for which I have no other use are strained into the tin cans. When a can is full I put it aside and begin with another. When I have three canfuls I make the soap in this way: Three canfuls I make the soap in this way: Three canfuls of clarified soap gresse (fifteen pounds) is put on the back part of the range, that it may melt slowly. The potash from three one-pound cans is put into a large earlien or stone bowl or jar. Upon this is poured three quarts of cold water, and three tablespoonfuls of powdered borax is added. This mixture is stirred with a wooden stick until the potash is dissolved, then it stange until cold.

stirred with a wooden stick until the potash is dissolved, then it stands until cold.

When the fat is melted, pour it into a but-ter tub. It must not be hot when the potash is added; should it be, it must stand until so cool that it will hardly run when poured. When the potash mixture is perfectly cold pour it in a thin strenm into the fat, stirring all the while. When all has been added, continue stirring for about ten minutes when the soan stirring for about ten minutes, when the soap should begin to look thick and ropy. At this stage pour it into a box, having it about three or four inches deep. Let it sand a few hours; then cut it into bars, and the bars into pieces of a convenient length for handling. It will still be very soft, and should not be removed from the box for at least two days. It will be hard and white.

If you attempt to combine the fat and potash mixture while the latter is at all warm it will take a long time to make the soap, and the result will not be so satisfaceory. It is well to put paper under the soap tub and the bowl in which the potash is prevared. Remember that potash is very strong, and do not spatter it on yourself or on the floor.

THE BEST WAY TO REMOVE IRON RUST

BUY four ounces of muriatic acid at a druggist's. It is useful for various purposes. Have it marked plainly. It should, moreover, be labeled as poisonous.
Fill a large bowl with boiling water. Have another bowl or pan full of bot water. A bottle of household ammonia also is necessary.

bottle of household ammonia also is necessary. Place the spotted part of the garment over the bowl of hot water. Wet a cosk in the muriatic acid and touch the iron rust with it. Immediately the spot will turn a bright yellow. Dip at once in the lost water and the stain will disappear. When all the spots have been removed, rinse the article thoroughly in several waters and then in ammonia water (a tablespoonful of household ammonia to a quart of water), and finally in clear water. The acid is very powerful and will destroy the fabric if allowed to remain upon it. Ammonia neutralizes it.

neutralizes it.

If the directions be followed carefully, the most delicate fabric can be successfully treated

PRESERVING THE COLOR OF SPINACH

If in cooking spinach you use only the water that clings to it after the washing, and add one tablespoonful of salt for each peck of spinach, the green color will be preserved. The spinach is more bitter when cooked in this manner than when it is cooked in more water. As for myself, I prefer the more delicate flavor one gets by cooking it in a large quantity of water.

TO REMOVE BLACK INK STAINS

SEVERAL subscribers ask how ink stains can be removed. If the stained article be washed immediately in several waters and then in milk, letting it soak in the milk for several hours, the stain will disappear.

Washing the article immediately in vinegar and water and then in soap and water will remove all ordinary ink stains.

Washing at once in water and men in liquid

Washing at once in water and then in liquid citric acid or oxalic acid is another mode. Oxalic acid is very corrosive, and should be removed from the article by a thorough washing in water. If, after the washing, the article be wet with household anomonia, any acid removed into a mill be neutralized.

maining will be neutralized.

No matter what substance be used to remove ink, the stain must be ruished well. If the article stained be a carpet on the floor, use a brush. As the acids often affect the colors in a fabric, it is wise to try the water and milk, or the water-and-vinegar, methods before resort-ing to the acids. Chemicals should always be the last resort, unless one be rather familiar with their action.

My own experience is that it is a most difficult matter to remove the stains of some kinds of black ink if they have stood for a few hours; whereas, other kinds, notably stylo-graphic ink spots, can be removed easily with

TO PREVENT A MERINGUE FROM FALLING

FROM a far-away reader there comes an inquiry about the means of preventing a méringue from falling when it is taken from the oven. Usually the trouble arises from baking the méringue in too high a temperature. If you beat the whites of the eggs to a stiff, day froth, then gradually beat eggs to a stiff, dry froth, then gradually beat in the powdered sugar (a generous table-speonful for each white of an egg), but the meringue on the pie or pudding when par-tially coaled, and bake in a moderate oven. with the door open, for eighteen to twenty minutes, the annoyance may be avoided.

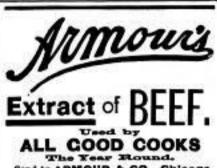

from w ich the excess of oil has been removed, absolutely pure and it is soluble. No Chemicals are used in its preparation. It has more than three times the strength of Cocos mixed with Starch, Arrowroot or Sugar, and is therefore far more nomical, costing less than one cents cup. It is delicious, nour-ishing, strengthening, EASILY

DOUBSTED, and admirably adopted for invalida-as well as for persons in bealth.

Sold by Grocers everywhere. W. BAKER & CO., Dorchester, Mass.

Send to ARMOUR & CO., Chicago, for Cook Book showing use of ARMOUR'S EXTRACT in Soups and Sauces. Mailed free.

Makes an every-day convenience of an old-time luxury. PURE and wholesome, Prepared with scrupulous care. Highest award at all Pure Food Expositions. Each package makes two large pies. Avoid imitations-always insist on having the

NONE SUCH brand.

If your grocer does not keep it, send soc. (or stamps)
for full size package by mail, prepaid.

MERRELL & SOULE, Syracuse, N. Y.

DON'T rain your Cake, Ice-Cream and Pastry by using poor extracts. SEELY'S have stood the test for twentyfinine years.

SEELY MFG. CO. Detroit, Mich.

BOND'S BOSTON BROWN BREAD FLOUR.

Acker, Mersail & Chicker & Co. Chichandli 2. IV. politic Michell, Frischer & Co. Chichandli 2. IV. Probles & Sons. Chicago: C. H. Slack, C. Jeves & Co., Buckwood Bros. If we keet by sear grown, with GOOGLO

This Department is under the editorship of EBEN E. REXFORD, who will take pleasure in answering any question regarding flowers and floriculture which may be sent to him by the JOURNAL readers. MR. REXFORD asks that, as far as possible, correspondents will allow him to answer their questions through his JOURNAL Department. Where specially desired, however, he will answer them by mail if stamp is inclosed. Address all letters direct to EBEN E. REXFORD, Shiocton, Wisconsin.

SOME SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

grow, give more freely, as the young roots which are pushing in the soil can make use of a more liberal quantity, and will do so in proportion as the top-growth demands. Twice a week is quite often enough to water plants in mid-winter, when the sun is low and the weather often dull.

Now is a good time to re-pot many varieties from which flowers are expected through the spring season. Wait until you notice a tendency to make new growth. Then shift. If old plants, they may not require larger pots—simply fresh soil, or a top-dressing of fresh earth. If you do not care to repot wholly, dig out as much of the old soil as you can conveniently without disturbing the roots, and put rich compost in its place. This is easier than to wholly re-pot the plant, and generally answers as well, if care is taken to have the soil rich. Do not disturb a plant while it is dormant. If the plants are young, or comparatively so, and a larger development of top is desired, it is well to give a size or two larger pot. or two larger pot.

If you notice insects about your plants, do not wait a day before beginning war on them. Act promptly, on the stitch-in-time principle. It is much easier to keep plants clean than it is to get them clean after they have been neglected.

CIVE your plants the best light possible. If you have so many in the window that all of them cannot get the sunshine at the same time, give each its turn, unless it happens to be one that doesn't care for sunshine. Most plants require all the sunshine they can get in winter to encourage early and healthy growth.

CLEANLINESS is very important in floriculture, if you would grow satisfactory plants. Never let the top of the soil in a pot become covered with moss or mold, or old leaves. Stir the soil. Pick off decaying leaves and fading flowers before they fall. Wash the pots frequently. Attention of this kind helps to make and keep the plants healthy and vigorous, and it adds very materially to their sppearance. Nothing is more unpleasant to the lover of flowers than the sight of a window full of neglected plants. Healthy plants, if clean, even if without flowers or buds, are always attractive.

WHEN it is once understood that plants breathe through pores in their leaves, the same as we do through our lungs, the necessity of giving them plenty of fresh air will be apparent. On every pleasant day open the door and let the out-door air in. Do not let it blow directly on the plants as it comes in, but let it mix with the warm air of the worm before it reaches the plants. room before it reaches the plants.

If a plant becomes sick, and droops, exam-ine the soil. If, instead of being open and light as good soil ought to be, it has a heavy, sticky, soggy look, you will be warrant-ed in thinking that the plant is suffering from over-watering. Remedy: Withhold all water until the soil becomes dry. Then give only enough to keep it slightly moist, and wait to see if the plant does not show sign of taking F a plant becomes sick, and droops, examn fresh start. When such sign is seen, it will be well to re-pot. The old soggy soil will gen-erally be found to have lost its health giving

IF growers of plants fully understood the benefit derived from a moister atmosphere than that which usually prevails in the ordi-nary living-room, they would try to secure it. Showering below greatly, but after a little the air becomes as dry as before. If water can be air becomes as dry as before. If water can be kept evaporating steadily, much better results are secured. Keep a pan standing on the stove, or near the register, and see that it never gets empty. As fast as the water in it evaporates, put in more. Another plan, and a good one, is to bave strips nailed about the edges of your plant-table or shelves, about two inches in width. Fill to the top of them with sand. Keep this wet, and steady evaporation will take place. It also answers another purpose—it takes up all the surplus water which runs through the pots at watering time.

ABOUT TUBEROUS BEGONIAS

NOTHER year's trial of this new section of the Begonia family has greatly strengthened the good opinion that I had off from my experience of last senson. All through last summer my plants were covered with flowers; and such flower of them new two and three looks.

fast summer my plants were covered with flowers; and such flowers! Some of them were two and three inches across, some single, others as double as Camellias, which they somewhat resemble. And the colors! Brilliant scarlet, purest pink, rich, dull reds, bright yellows, white, salmon—the variety seems endless. The flowers are borne well above the foliage, on stout, erect stalks, of branching habit, and remain in perfection for many days, generally dropping before they begin to fade or wither. For variety, beauty and brilliancy of color they are quite the equal of the Geranium, to which they must prove a most formidable rival. It will be seen that they have all desirable qualities asked for in a plant for the decoration of greenhouse or window.

I find them, I am glad to say, of the very easiest cultivation. This nserit commends them to the amateur, who often finds desirable new plants so difficult to grow well that he gives up their cultivation in despair. The tabers should be procured in March. Start them in small pots, in a light, fibrous soil. As soon as they have made an inch or two of growth, put them into four-inch pots, in a compost made up of turfy matter and leaf-mold, with the addition of a little stant. They will not do well in a heavy soil. See that the pots are drained well. Tie the stalks to small sticks as they reach up, as they are brittle and easily broken. Water daily, aiming to keep will not do well in a heavy soil. See that the pots are drained well. The the stalks to small sticks as they reach up, as they are brittle and easily broken. Water daily, aiming to keep the soil moist all through, but not wet. Keep the plants in a half-shady place.

When they are still quite small—often before they have made more than three inches of upward growth—they begin to bloom, and from that time on to the end of the season they will not be without flowers, if properly cared for. It may be advisable to shift to a six-inch potalong in Angust, as I think this has a tendency to continue them in growth and flowering longer.

In late full, when the plants show signs of wanting to take a rest by the yellowing of the leaves, withhold water by degrees until the branches have fallen. By this time the soil should be quite dry, if your supply of water has been in proportion to the decreasing requirements of the plant as regards moisture, and then the pots can be set away in some warm, dry place without disturbing the roots, and left there till the following March, when they can be shaken out of the old soil and replanted for another season's flowering.

Those who have greenhouses which they do not tike to keep hare of beauty through the summer months when most winter-blooming plants are in a state of preparation for the coming season, consequently not in condition to do much toward the decoration of the home if they are allowed to occupy it, which they generally are not, will hail with delight this grand nequisition to our very limited list of really finesummer blooming plants adapted to calcure under glass. We have had many fine varieties of flowering Begonias in cultivation for many years, and they have been justly admired, and very popular, but they are so inferior as regards bloom that they can hardly be compared with this new class.

THE ALLAMANDA PLANT

T this season of the year well-grown specimens of the beautiful but not very well-known Allamanda plants will be showing buds, and getting ready for a brave display at little later on. The two varieties in general cultivation are Hendersonii and serifolis. The latter has the largest flowers, but is no better bloomer than Hendersonii. The flowers of both varieties are tubular; they are shaped much like a Petunia though not reflied on the select and tunia, though not ruffled on the edges, and not more than half as large as the average of that flower. In color they are a very rich, delicate yellow. The foliage is a bright, shin-ing green, and the contrast between leaves and flowers is very pleusing. The plant is of semiflowers is very pleusing. The plant is of semi-climbing habit, as ordinarily grown. If planted out in the conservatory, it often clambers to the roof and can be trained along the rafters with magnificent effect.

The plant likes a soil composed of loam and turfy matter, with some sand. Drain the pot well. In planting, be careful to make the well. In planting, be careful to make the earth very firm about the roots. Loose planting is very harmful. Unless the soil is firmed well, the leaves often drop, and in a short time the plant dies, and amateurs often wonder what the trouble is. In nine cases out of ten it is simply because the plant is potted loosely. Shower daily, especially on the underside of the leaves, to keep the red spider down. Also keep a look-out for scale. If found, apply kerosene emulsion with a soft brush.

THE IDEAL GERANIUM

HE ideal Geranium should be first, compact; second, well-branched; and, third, broad rather than tall, The ordinary Geranium is tall, scraggly, or "leggy," to use a processional term, loose in habit, and has but few branches. Such a plant may bear fine flowers, but it will never give satisfaction to the lover of symmetrical plants. It will seldom have more than half a dozen clusters of flowers at a time—oftener but two or three—and would not be tolerated if grown alone in the window, but, because it stands HE ideal Geranium should be alone in the window, but, because it stands among others in a collection, it "passes." A well-grown specimen ought to be more attrac-tive when standing by itself than when seen among others, because, away from other plants, all its fine points are displayed effecttive when standing by itself than when seen among others, because, away from other plants, all its fine points are displayed effectively.

It is quite easy to grow a Geranium well if you begin right. You must take the plant at its start. When it has reached a height of three inches, nip the top off. In most cases, several branches will start along the stalk. Let at least half a dozen grow. If but one or two start, nip the ends of them off, and keep up this nipping or "pinching in "peocesa until you have at least a half-dozen branches growing from the base of the main stalk.

When these branches have grown to be six or eight inches long, pinch the ends off, and force branches to start out along them. In this way you will secure a great number of branches, which will gread out rather than grow ap, and your plant will be compact, bushy and broad. This can be brought about only by giving proper attention in the early stages of the plant's growth, and by persevering until it takes on the form you desire it to have. Some plants seem determined to grow up in one tall stalk, rather than take the shape you want them to. They will do this every time unless you give them to understand when you begin training them that you "mean business," and they wast come to your terms. If they see that you have no idea of letting them have their own way, they will yield gracefully, though reluctantly, to your wishes and gradually assume such a shape as a well-grown specimen ought to have. Bear in mind that this training must go on steadily from its beginning. There must be no "let up" in it, or the plant will soon get the start of you, and if it once does that you will find it a difficult matter to get it under subjection.

While a plant is in this formative period it should not be allowed to bloom. Finch off every bud as soon as you see it. Do not give too rich food. Too strong a soil will encourage such rank growth that the joints of the stalk will be long.

Shift to larger pots as the old ones become filled with roots. A plant that until a sprending habit is fixed.

A well-grown specimen ought to have forty or fifty growing and blooming "points" by the time it is in an eight-inch pot, and should extend eight or ten inches beyond the pot on all sides, and if it is kept properly pruned or cut back, it will seldom get to be over two feet high. Such a plant ought to have twenty or more clusters open at a time during its blooming senson, with buds in all stages of development. Those who have never seen a plant trained in this way have but little idea of the beauty a Geranium is able to display under proper management. proper management.

A RARE BUT BEAUTIFUL PLANT MANTOPHYLLUM miniatum is a plant

MANTOPHYLLUM miniatum is a plant that seems to be very little known. I have never seen it in any private collection except my own. It resembles the Agapanthus very much in foliage, though its leaves are broader, and hardly as long, and are perhaps darker in color. It sends up its leaves and flowers from a large bulb, and increases rapidly. In order to secure strong blooming plants it is well to remove most of the young bulbs, as, if allowed to remain about the old plant, the pot soon becomes full of bulbs, and as a result you will get but few flowers. The Agapanthus bears its flowers, which are small, on the extremity of a tall stalk, while the Imantophyllum has a stalk more like that of the Vallotta, and its flowers resemble those of that plant almost exactly in shape, but they are unlike in color, those of shape, but they are unlike in color, those of the Vallotta being a rich crimson, while those of the Imantophyllum are an orange-red. From three to five flowers are borne in each cluster, and each flower lasts for several days. The plant is evergreen in character, and is one of those which can be kept growing the year round, like the Calla, without injury. My plant has never hinted at resting, and from my experience with it I should hardly know how to go to work to make it rest if I wanted it to. As it blooms regularly each year, and has fine, have flowers and wears in most vertext health. large flowers, and seems in most perfect health, I do not insist on its taking a rest, but keep it growing steadily all the time. I cannot un-derstand why it is not more extensively grown. It is quite as attractive as many varie-ties of the Amaryllis, and much more easily grown. Indeed, my plant gets no more care grown. Indeed, my peant gets no more care than a Geranium, and does as well as I could wish it to. It likes a good deal of water at its roots, and a rather large put. Mine grows in a soil composed of loam, leafmold and sand, and has good drainage provided. It generally blooms in March or April, and is to the spring decoration of the sitting-room or greenhouse what the Vallotta is to sitting-room or greenhouse in fall—one of our best plants. When I say that I know of but one firm of plant-dealers from whom it can be obtained, its rarity will be understood.

OVELY WEEPING PALM.

This King of Ornamental Plants, the Weeping or Finiters Palm, is stately and beautiful beyond description. It can be grown in any window as easily as discussion, and is a superb addition to any collection for plants. It we do a compact growth, with elegant large taneshaped leaves from which hang fong thread-like filaments giving the plant a most old and beautiful appearance. In fact, there is nothing like it cultivation, and good specimena sell for enormous prices. Plants are easily raised, as the seeds are large germinate quickly and grow rapidly. It is a plant whose grandour and beauty will supprise you. For PAID, ALL OF THE FOLLOWING:

5 Seeds of this levely WELFINO FILIPERA PALM.

5 Seeds of the WONDROUS WEATHER FLANT.

1 pkt. JAPAN REST EGG GOURD. Carless and whalls, 1 pkt. MAGNIFICENT GLANT SPIDER FLOWER.

1 bulb GLADIOLUS LOVELY WHITE VARIETY.

1 bulb GLADIOLUS LOVELY PINK VARIETY.

If you already have our Catalogue for 1892 any to, and we will send searching else instead. These rare bulbs and seeds (worth $1.30) will all flower this season, and we end them for $300,, only to introduce our superior stock. Get your neighbors to each with you, and we will send four of these collections for $1, drefer at once, as this offer may not appear again. Our Bronze-Blue Catalogue for 1892

Our Bronze-blue Catalogue for 1952
A senseth work of art pristed in Erronze Bluet of PLOWER AND YEARTABLE SERIES, BULBS, PLANTE, AND HARR PRUFFS, is the fassat ever samed. He pages, hundreds of elegant engravings, stipple Lithograph Covers and Tlarge colored plates.
We offer the fassit movelles in Flowers, Vegetables and Fruits, notably: Our great Japanese Wineberry Exterry Orchid, Glar Philozes, Water Flants, Nec
Boses, Drillans, School, Correct Caroline, Nec
Boses, Drillans, School, Caroline, Water Flants, Nec
Boses, Drillans, School, Caroline, Water Hands, Nec Boses, Drillans, School, Caroline, Water School, School, Caroline, Caroline, Correction of FlowerBoses, Drillans, School, Caroline, Water School
School, Caroline, Caroline, Caroline, School
School, Caroline, Caroline, Caroline, School
School, Caroline, C

JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, Floral Park, N. Y.

MAKE NO MISTAKE

in the matter of SEEDS. Demand and accept only D. M. Ferry & Co's. No weeds from # Perry's Seeds A handsome book that tells all you want to know for your garden, will be mailed free if you sok for it. No planter, be he ever so expert, can afford to do without it. Send to-day.

D. M. FERRY & CO., P. O. Box 1317 DETROIT, MICH.

LOVELY FLOWERS, Fuller's Perfection Pansys.

J. ROSCOE FOLLER & CO., Floral Pack, N. Y.

SEEDS, BULBS, &C. KI-OTE SEED CO.

FLOWERS TANDERS OF STREET

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S

Quite naturally, people prefer to purchase from the largest stock. They get better assortments, better prices, better service. We are (and have been for years) the largest Rose growers in America. Mail trade is our great specialty. We have made it, and it has made us; no accident either way.

As said of the British Empire, the sun never sets on the Dingee & Conard Roses. Wherever the mail goes, they are at home, Grown on their own roots, they thrive where others fail-satisfy where others disappoint,

Our New Guide for 1892 is now ready, Better and handsomer than ever, It describes over 2000 Roses, Bulbs, Hardy Plants and Seeds; offers many Exclusive Novelties, and points the way to success with flowers.

Sent free on request, Write to-day,

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO.,

ROSE GROWERS West Grove, Pa.

RARE AND UNIQUE PLANTS.

To extend our list of customers, we are practically giving away a boundfal collection of Six Ferm, Palms and Britist; together with our elegant illustrated Catalogue of Tropical Plants. These will be sent to anyone, securely boxed and postpaid, for only 80 cents.

Our special collections of plants have become very popular, and we trust that this one will meet with the same general favor. Den't full to get our catalogue, and note prices before buying elsewhere.

THE AMERICAN EXOTIC NUBERRIES.

D. HOTT, Manager, Seven Coke, Florida.

FLOWERING Send 10e. and I will mad to you 2 Tuberness Bulber (I new variousted and I or sage flow) and 10 Radbe in two new varieties Sammer Oxalis. For 25e. 3 largest Tabernes Bulbs (I dbd. Paive).

15 Bulbs in two new varieties, Summer Oxalia, For 50c. 12 Gread Salla. Double Pearl International Zephyranthus Rosen, new summer flowering rose colored Amerillis, spiendid tall for fet, 2 for Fet. Illustrational Descriptive Catalogue of Plants, Bulbs and Cattings free with each order, CSAS T. STARR, Avendule, Chatter Co., Fz.

Healthy, learning growth and abundant bleasens produced by Bowker's Flower Food, a clean, cotories, chemical drassing, dissolved in water used to loose blants. An attractive trial package, enough for m plants a mentis, mailed, postpaol, for sick. Also Frof. Represely irresting "Window Gardening."

sent free with each package. However Fertilizer Co., 43 Chathan St., Baston, Mass. Circular free.

GIVEN AWAY! This is the most ber tifel new ROSE the year which we go

ENTIRELY FREE to our customers of BSE. If you are interested in new Flowers send for our Catalogue describing the grandest novelties and specialities over afford. IT WILL PAY YOU, Write new ROBT, SCOTT & SON, Philadelphia, Pa.

LADIES appreciate Roses and ornamental ing our stock. We also want good men for the general line. Get terms.

CHASE BROTHERS COMPANY, New England Nurseries, - Rochester, N. Y.

50 PER CENT. SAVEDI THE LYNN SHOE CO. manufacture. THE LYNN SHOE CO. manufactures and well this consumer the most durable, stylish, fine-flitting Ladies' Boots in the world. FROWS IT, by Smidling 5.50, $2.00, $2.50 or $5.00 in postal note, money-order or cash, giving sho, style, Common Sense or Opera Tee, and width worn, and receive, express paid, boots sold for nearly damble the money at retail, and sure to the ANTISPACTION GRANATERS. Shoes made to order.

LYSS SHOE CO. How Cild.

SELL MUSIC We will pay a liberal Balary to Agente who will take to be constructed for sent for sent Woodward's Masteri Monthly. Send four cents and re-ceive sample copy with fine complete pieces of latest excel and instrumental music. Address begins. Woodward's MONTAL BOSTILLY, 442 Breadway, Am York.

GENTS inflivers pays for your address in the Thousands of Brins want addresses of persons to whom they can mail papers, imagazine, pictures, cards. Ac. FREE as samples, and our patrons receive hundred of mail. Try big you will be WELL PLEASED with the small investment. Address T. B. CARTUELL, B. 651, Reylesses, indicate HATCH CHICKENS by STEAM improved EXCELSIOR Incubator Simple, Perfect and Self-Revoluting Thousands in successful operation. Sens &c. for Illus. Caig. 1000. H. STAME, Quincy, Ill.

WHAT Thele Sam and Aust Cohmilia think, see, of ASHINGTON and Sentile. Sent examps to the work of the Co., Southe, Wash,

CARDS | SOTTAGE AND CONTRACT FREE

MOUTH ORGAN Chart teaches anyone to play a time in 15 minutes. Circular Sc. Agents wanted. Music Novelty Co., Detroit, Mich.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS;

Only such questions as are of positively general interest will be answered under this title from this time on. Therefore, in asking a question, before you request a reply through the paper, satisfy yourself that an answer will be of interest to some one beside yourself. If it isn't, don't sek it, for it will not receive attention.

N. A. G.-Use Sulpho Tobacco Soap for ridding plants of aphis.

Miss. H. A. H.—Your ground was too rich for Sweet leas. Leaves sent are Esponia.

Mas. S.—You can get the kinds of Oleanders you want rom Mr. John Sanl, Washington, D. C.

Mas. F. Syndatz, - The Harriell Lily is not hardy

E. C. S.—The Bridesmaid and Mrs. Moore Geraribuns onn be procured of James Vick, Boebester, New York. Mas. S. A. T.—Leaf sent is Cyclamen. For treas-nent, see back numbers of THE LABIES HOME JOUR-

"ONERS."—(1) Propagate Roses by layering. (2) The Lilies would not be likely to prove hardy in New York. (3) No.

M. E. H.-Keep the old Geranium plants left over, utiling back well in spring. Don't put them in the

Mrs. J. H.—The plant is Camellia. It is almost im-possible to grow it successfully roubide a greenhouse, as too much or too little water, and frequent changes of temperature, cause it to drop its back.

K. E. M.—As you give me absolutely no information except that you have Lily of the Valley in your yard, I can give you so information reparding a remedy for the trouble with which they are afflicted.

Constraint Beadum.—Have you tried spraying with London Purple, Paris Green, or other insecticities for the worms on your trees. I presume you would be able to rid your trees of the pesis by this method of warfare.

Mas. S. S. C.—A quart can is too small for a large Hallotrope. Give more root-room. Turn sots containing Calles on their side and let them go without water all summer. Re-pet in September. Leaf seat; Au-thericum.

Mas. D. M.—(i) I can't answer your first question be-cause you give me neithing to form an opinion from. (2) Water will not injure the bods of the Olive, judging from my experience. (3) Plant sent is Aucuba sarrea variegala. It is fine for its foliage.

Miss A. K. W.—I would give the plural of Coleus as most writers on flowers now give the plural of Gindlo-lus—that is Coleuses. Strictly speaking, this may not be proper, but Coleus has become a word in our own language, and I would treat it accordingly.

Mss. A. M. W.—I presume you will find worms in the pot; if you do, apply lime water. It is possible that you give too much pot-ment and the plant may have more food than it can make use of, thus bringing on vegetable dyspeptia. It would probably have done better in a smaller pot.

Mrs. L. J. 8.—(1) Use brackets, large and small, on casings between windows, and wire or iron stands for greeshouses. (1) English Ivy and Hoes carness are good plants to train over windows. Also Cotes som-ders and Passion flowers. (1) For brick walls there is nothing better than Ampelopsis.

E. M. B.—Asks if Excelords grandifors and Spires. Van Houtil would be sultable for cenetery planting; also what vine to use to creep about the base of a moni-ment. Both the shrubs named are excellent for that purpose. Vinca's a good creeping plant, evergreen in character, with bine flowers, and would give satisfac-tion.

Mus. G. W. G.—Asks how to make Oxalis bloom; also how to increase or propagate Mad. Plantier Rose. If the builts of Oxalis are allowed to dry off during summer—all that is necessary to do to bring this about is to withhold water after June—and are reported in september or Oxtober, flowering is quite sure to take place by November, and be continued all through the wister. Propagate the Bose by layering. Too late to do it this season.

H.—(1) The Achania likes a moderate amount of smobles. The white grains on the leaves of this plant are excretions from 11—not insects. (3) The Germonus having red, white and plank or salmon flowers—striped or bindched—on same plant is. New Life. (4) Inshelfs Sorunt is not a good winter-blooming lose outside greenbouses. (4) The small, fragmon, semi-double dark red Rose year refer to is doubtless Agrippina—one of the best varieties for pet collure. this plant lecandom striped Isabso

L. L. H.—I think the following list of Geraniums in-cludes the best of its class: Mrs. Moore, Bridesmald, Advance, W. C. Bryant, Mary Hallock Foote and Ri-cipit. A good specimen of Calla ought to give five or six flowers through the winter, perhaps more. Begonias for winter use eight to be repetited in summer, cat back, and not allowed to bloom till fall. They can be kept nearly dermant for a time by withhelding water to a great wisten. Don't but them get dry, but don't keep the soil very moist.

Mus. A. E.—Asks if Easter Lilies should be pecied and placed in the dark for awhile for roots to form? Also, if they require yick soil and a good deal of waier. To the first question, yes. I do not think any halbdess as well in the house, in a very rich soil, as it is likely to its soil of moderate richness. Heat and too strong a soil tend to bring about a rapid, weak growth not favorable to flowering well. Speciosum can be posted and treated the same as it. Harrish. Treat Narcissus and Jouquil boths same as Hyacinth.

ANNA M.—This correspondent asks if the Trumpet Vine is poisonous. No, if by Trumpet Vine she means Bignouts Radicass, a strong-growing vine bearing large clusters of bright real forces, which I presume she does as it is often called Trumpet Plower. Research the Bourbox, Noisette and Tea classes are profuse bloomers at the south through a large part of the year. Hybrid Perpecuals would doubtless follow out their habit of thooming at intervals. The profusion of their bloom would depend on treatment given.

To Several Confession with the confession of readers ask questions similar to this; "No Geraniums bud and thust. Why?" Surely I have said often enough that you must bell not how your plants hars been breafed if you expect me in sell you what I think the trouble is with them. You don't expect a doctor to diagnose your case when you are sick by writing to him that you are ill, and asking him what nile you willout selling him assurething that be can base an opinion on, do you?
Trouble with plants may come from many causes, and I can give no labelligant opinion without knowing something about what you have done to them.

semething about what you have done to them.

Mas. G. H. L.—Wants to know how to preserve out drovers be exhibition at county fairs; also about designs for same, and ways that her Gerandams surn black afterbeing put in the cellar, and would like to know why. Most exhibitors of out flowers at fairs insert the stems in most sand, which is covered with most. Sand and most sead, which is covered with most. Sand and these trees for the stems in most sand, which is covered with most. Sand and the feethers flowers. As to designs, that will have to be decided by the exhibitor. If this imposer wants wire frames in which to arrange her flowers she can get illustrated catalogues of same, with prices, from almost any denire in seeds and plants. I think your cellar is too damp if the wood of Gerandams turns black in it. Young Gerandams ought to white as well as old ones. I cannot tell you why your Hyacints fall to do well. They ought to grow where Tulps do. I cannot name varieties of plants in this department, because no one but the laquirer is interested.

START SEEDS EARLY! Ah! but whose seeds shall I start? Some Seeds never do start. Carefully plant them, water them, pet them, coax them as you will, and they won't grow. Why? Because they are dead; the poor things died of old age before you got them, and the innocent dealer didn't know it. BUY OUR SEEDS. You don't try them; we have tried them—and they GROW. Our MONEY-GROWERS' MANUAL is free, provided you mention THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL. Send 4 cents in stamps to pay postage.

JOHNSON & STOKES, 217 and 219 Market St.

Did you ever plant Seeds and then wait sadly for the green leaves that never came? BURPEE'S SEEDS are not that kind; you plant them; they grow. That's one reason why our mail order Seed Business is the largest. There is nothing doubtful about BURPEE'S SEEDS; their strong vitality is tested before selling, while having all been grown from the most thoroughbred strains they are equally sure to delight the planter with the Choicest Vegetables and most Beautiful Flowers. If you appreciate quality in Seeds, write to-day for Burpee's Farm Annual for 1892.

It is a handsome book of 168 pages; sells all about The Best Garden, Farm, and Flower Seeds, including Rare Novelties of Surpassing Merit, which cannot be obtained elsewhere—FREE to all take intend to purchase Seeds.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SEED CATALOGUE WILSON'S 1892 ANT, TREE AND LIVE STOCK ANNUAL

112 Pages, 260 Fine Engravings, Handsome Colored Plates, Full of useful and instructive information. One of the most reliable catalogues published. Describing all kinds of guaranteed Garden, Flower and Field Seeds, Fruit and Oronmental Trees, Small Fruits, Choice Reseas, Flowering Plants and Bulbs. Thoroughbred Land and Water Fewls, Registered Pigs, German Hares, etc. Sent free, on application. Address, mentioning this paper, SAMUEL WILSON, MECHANICSVILLE, PA. UT YOUR MONEY IN THE GROUND.

THIS is the beginning of every man's garden. By investing in VAUGHAN'S Sceds you start right. For 1892 our book "GARDENING ILLUSTRATED" is larger and better; it's a mirror of American Horticulture to date. We claim for it true engravings, (which speak for their own accuracy;) plain, truthful and reasonable descriptions. It 'TELLS THE WHOLE STORY' for the Garden, Lawn and Farm. were sow. MONTON PAPER.

Our WOLFSDEN DOLLAR PLANT COLLECTION has been the best bargain in all the Seed Catalogues for two years. It is for 1892, it contains one each Manstin Viscommer French Tea Rose of '91. Spotted Calla, Geranium Mirands, Carnation American Flag, Canna Vismorin, Passifiora Mammoth Purple, Chrysanthesaum Ivory grand white, Violet Hardy Russian, the nine, pressid, with our BOOK for $1.00. For $50. we mail with the SOOK one plant Grand New Dwarf Canna, Henri Vilmorits, a magnificent flower of deep crimson center blending into clear yellow at the edges, fine for house or garden.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE, 146-48 West Washington St., CHICAGO.

BEGONIAS and CHRYSANTHEMUMS OUR SPECIALTIES.

Carden and Flower Seeds, Bardy Shrubs, Clematis and Hardy Vines—a general collection of Green Bouse Plants, and Waban, only 75 ets.—beautifully libatrated on our catalogue and Waban, only 75 ets.—beautifully libatrated on our catalogue over. They should be in every collection. Our handscone illustrated Calalogue, containing Fremburs that, will interest you, FREE to ALL. See our Low Prices, 20 Bouss, 81.09; 20 Gerandsmas St.09; 18 Carpations St.09; and St.09; and Carpanitons St.09; in Carpanitons St.09 wis only made to induce posts give us a risk. Dook order your Research or Seeds before rooting our prices. Of We can save you manay ve some time novolibes in Resea, Regonias, Chrysauthennum and Carnazions that will niesse you. Address

GAUSE & BISSELL (SUCCESSORS TO HILL & CO.) RICHMOND, IND.

NEW QUEEN GARNATIONS.

All Colors Shades

OFFER No. 1.—The enormous size of these rare Carnellous and their rich fragrance, together with the secondard arowin of the plants and profusion of bloom is something plants and profusion of bloom is something. The class far empasses the Margarrite ensem. Many of the flowers assume of the flowers are not considered to the control over the inches in diameter, and many of the most dancing shades and colors, langing from the desired crimson to the lightest shades of erease, and pink, and insuring it was the seed in the boxes, January, February or March, and row will have these magnificent plants everent with their beautiful blosecom through the only in the beautiful blosecom through the only in the beautiful blosecom through the entire wring and emmer. They may be taken into the beautiful blosecom through the only in the beautiful blosecom through the only in the beautiful blosecom through the categories and emmer. They may be taken into the beautiful blosecom through the distribution this season. At an enormous price we succeeded in obtaining a wapply of the seed direct from beautiguarders. Price, Je, per pkt., 2 pkts-for see.

An Amarullie EDEE to peakers of the

An Amaryllis FREE to readers of the

The Amaryllis is one of the levelist flowers is cultivation, and as easy to grow; a gyranium, but on account of its high pricit has not been within the reach of even; many of them cost as high as $0 or $0 such. The Markens is one of the ure beautiful of these plants, growing rapidly and therewing out grand blossoms of rich, velvely scaries color, fine for either pot or out-door culture.

pot or ent-foor culture.

To Invraoduce Our Seeds
we will send I bails of this rare Amaryllis free to every person who names this paper, silves number of offer and sends so like. In silver or postal note that stamps, for a packet of these seapers Canadisas.

Grand Upright Piano are $650 and thousands of other destrable pressume will be distributed among our patrons this season.

OUR CATAL OCUE the finest illustrated werk of this kind ever published, containing colored plates and over 80 pages of Novgarias will tell you all about the premiums. This book will be mailed from to all cyclering a pecket of this said or on reveipt of Tell, which amount may be decided from the first order seat us.

THIS OFFER WILL NOT APPEAR ACAIN L. L. MAY & CO., St. Paul, Minn.

Didinzed. Google

bright and shining gifts this Christmas! Fresh from the leveler's they fairly midiate light. You can keep them so, if you will use Stilboma—a chemically prepared chamois skin that polishes or burnishes metal surfaces will use Stilbona—a c skin that polishes or and never scratches, gift look like new. And you can make last year's

A large sample of Stilhoma will be sent to any one who will meethed where this advertisement was seen and helpes at cents in stamps to THE CHANDLER & RUDD Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

A Substitute for Tea & Coffee. Better for the Nerves and Stomach.

If not estainable enciose 25 cents to est.
Van Houtzus & Zeout, 166 Heade Stree
w York, or 45 Wahash Ave. Chicago, as ample cas, containing enough for 25 to 4, will be mailed. Mention this pre dion. Prepared only by the consumer, Va Uran & Zoon, Weep, Holland.

red with the sim to profit by the popular-be New England, at he deserved but always tootst on the lagtend Brand. The best made, SOLD BY ALL GROCERS, dealer, WHITH UP.

The PLUME & ATWOOD
MFG' CO.,

Me. 446 New York, Boston, Chicago.

HELPS IN THE LAUNDRY

BY ANNA SAWYER

VERY woman who has answered the time-honor-ed query, "How shall we wash our flannels?" thinks her own to be the best and only method; but I would beg those whose lot it has been to ask, rather than reply, to try once again. Let her, for the time, forget that one sister insists upon boiling water, another lukewarm, a third pos-sibly a judicious mixture of the two, and boildly depend upon cold, and receive her re-ward in the soft and snowy flannels which she

ABOUT THE WASHING OF FLANNELS

I MMERSE in cold water in which is a little I MMERSE in cold water in which is a little L borax. Leave the article soaking awhile; repeat the process, rinsing each time in the cold water. If very much soiled, aslight lather of soap may be made in the first water; or soap may be rubbed upon spots. Do not wring more than is absolutely needful, but "souse" instead. All mothers who know how difficult it is to keep the flannel skirts of infants, which are so often wet, soft, will never try any other way if they try this. The same process, using a small portion of soap-tree hark, will restore almost any woolen gown, white or colored. There is remon in this.
Manufacturers of woolens have the raw nonterials washed in cold, not hot or warm water, and know full well that only in this way can they get the full softness of the fleece.

Much, however, of the success of the method in home use, depends upon the ease with which they thus keep the same temperature.
Doubtless, if the same degree could be maintained through washing and rinsing, there would be the same result. This is practically impossible, however, while the changes are fatal to the wool fabric.

TO MAKE WASHING BLANKETS EASY

IF one has a suitable place for the purpose, If one has a suitable place for the purpose, the washing of blankets may become an easy matter. In an open space, have a line tightly stretched out of doors. To this fasten the upper edge of the blanket. Have strips of cotton sewed to the bottom at intervals; tie these to pegs, which drive well into the ground. Now turn on the losse. Cold water, of course, and plenty of it. Drench the blankets well, on both sides. If much soiled, rub spots with soap and drench again. The force of the stream will do more than wringing. After the article is quite clean, leave it to dry; never mind if it does min; if the work has been thorough it will not streak, but be all the better for it. When the sun has completed the task, you will possess blankets as white, soft and unshrunken as new, and the nap will not be destroyed. be destroyed.

WOOLENS WASHED IN COLD WATER

Woolen waists may be washed in cold VV water without ripping, and chudals may become rivals to those done by the French dry cleanser. Old woolens which have suffered much from different baths of varied temperature, may be always partially, often wholly, restored in this way, though such need a little more patience, and sometimes more than one

THE CLEANSING OF LACES

THE CLEANSING OF LACES

PROM woolens to laces is a wide step; but while on the laundry subject, a word upon the cleansing of the latter. Never rub laces. If badly nursed, roll upon a bottle or round stick; dampen slightly; when quite dry, unroll, and tack the lace with large stitches in folds of about six inches. Be sure that the edges be even. You will now have a sort of compress of lace. Drop this into cold water, in which put a little borux or ammonia, or both. Soak until the dirt is out, changing water if needful. Never rub the lace, but it may be gently aqueezed, now and then, lengthwise. When it is quite clean, place it just as it is in the sun to dry, after which lay it upon the palm of the left hand and slap it vigorously with the right several times. Now remove the stitches by cutting, do not pull them; refold the lace, but in different creases, and repeat the process, but put, rather than slap, the folds in the sun to dry, after than slap, the folds in the sun to the process, but put, rather than slap, the folds in the sun to the process, but put, rather than slap, the folds in the sun to the sun to the slap the folds in the sun to the process, but put, rather than slap, the folds in the sun to the sun process, but pat, rather than slap, the folds this time.

and betraying no sign of its bath. It should never be ironed, unless upon clothing where it cannot be removed. It is well, therefore, to use other than lace trimmings for cotton garments, unless one chooses torchon, a notable excep-

If other lace is chosen, however, it should not be much starched, if at all, and the iron should be used not along the length, but up and down. In this way the full effect of the width is kept, while by the other a wide edge appears narrower, and the pattern distorted. After ironing, the laundress should soften the lace by the gentle use of her thumb and fore-finger; then gather it into little plaits, pinch-ing them slightly, and after shaking it out lightly, the lace edge will wear its best aspect.

WHEN TO TRY ON NEW SHOES

THERE is a time for everything in this world, and so it is that the best time to get fitted to shoes is in the latter part of the day. The feet are then at their maximum of size. Activity naturally enlarges them. Much standing tends, also, to enlarge the feet. New shoes should always be tried on over moderately thick stockings. Then you have a margin of room by putting on thinner stockings if the shoes feel ill at ease.

N. K. FAIRBANK & CO., Sole Manufacturers,

CHICAGO, ST. LOUIS, NEW YORK. PHILADELPHIA, BOSTON, BALTIMORE, NEW ORLEANS, SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND, ME, PORTLAND, ORE, PITTSBURGH AND MILWAUKEE.

Packed and delivered at depot for $12.56 Cash, or we give this Set as a Premium to those who get up a Club give this Set at a Premium to those who get up a Club of $35,00 for our Tena, Spices and Extracts. We are Importers of Ten, Coffee and Crockery, and sell direct to Consumers. We want YOU to send for our 185-page Price and Premium List. It tells the whole story. Costs you nothing. Will interest and pay you. We have hundreds of other Sets plain and decorated, and also carry a fall stock of Lamps, Silver-Ware, Clocks, Table-Lineu, Lace Curtains, etc.

THE LONDON TEA COMPANY,

811 Washington Street, Boston.

LLSBURY'S BEST"

Makes More Bread Makes Whiter Bread Makes Better Bread

THAN ANY OTHER FLOUR MANUFACTURED.

For Sale by all First-class Grocers.

ICIOUS DESSERTS INSTANTLY.

Dissolve this package of IMPERIAL TABLE JELLY in a pint of hot water, pour into a mould, and when cool you will have a quart of DELICIOUS JELLY.

IMPERIAL CREAM DESSERT. BICH and Made by adding a pint of boiling milk to

These are two TABLE DELICACIES made quickly and without trouble. If you fail to find either with your grocer, send 15c. (to pay postage) for full-sized package of JELLY or CREAM DESSERT. Various Flavors.

E. C. RICH CO., LTD. 160 & 162 FRANKLIN ST., NEW YORK.

CHAMPION WASHING MACHINE.

Best in the World. Entirely new principle; will wash 1,000 pieces per day. No steaming the ceiling, or slopping the floor. Will sell at wholesale price, where we have no agents. Address

THE CHAMPION SHELF MFG. CO., Springfield, Ohio.

DO TOT ENOW FLOUR BINSSIEVE Combines Sack or Barrel, Sifter, Pan and Socop, preserves flour from mould and sustlesses, Keeps out dust, vermin, etc FOU OUGHT TO HAVE ONE.

YOU OUGHT TO HAVE ONE.
Ask our agent or your denier for thou,
if they cannot supply you, write to us.
Prices | 25 ics. E.50 | Satisfaction to hold | 10 line St.00 | Guaranteed.
SHERMAN & BUTLER.
25-55 West lake St., S. 43, CHICAGO, HL.

MORGAN" ODORLESS BROILER

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED. SPECIAL OFFER: To further introduce this wonderful Brodler, we will send one, all complete, anywers in U.S., all charges prepaid; upon receipt of only 10s. You examine Brodler at express office, and if O. K. pay remaining 50 cts. 1f. after using 5 or 8 times, Bredler is not satisfactory, we will remove same, and refund the dollar Total cost fo you. S. Warranded sever to crack, warp, nor break. Knedlent terms to agents and dealers. SUS STARFING CO., 405 P. St., KALARAZOO, RICH.

UNCLE SAM will bring you a cake of N.E.W. HISCUIT for 5 sts.; a rade of HIRD MANNA for its. This is a most wonderful SONG RESTORER for Canarier and all other Cage Hirds. U. S. will bring you FREE either a Bird Book, Dog Book, Howe and Cattle, Book, pager of Frencheld's Cattle Powder, box of Corn Balva or Dys Color, if you name the tought you are the Address of you must the Address.

BARNEY & BERRY SKATES

CATALOGUE FREE

PLAYS ATHLETICS DE CATALOGUE FREE.

GOLD-SILVER-NICKEL PLATING. A trade early feathed; oral little to start. I was an Google not outfits and give work & par 101 200. I little Google free. F. Lower, 202 Berger M. Brockhy, Mr. Google

HELPS BY THE WAY

HLAVORING ESSENCES: One ounce of

The oil to a pint of alcohol.

Stanca: One tenspoonful of powdered borax to one quart of boiling starch will aid in giving polish and stiffness.

Dassetso: One spoonful sweet oil, two of black ink: mix and apply with sponge to boots, black kid gloves, bags, and rusty book

Borax and sugar will disperse ants and Sprinkle dry salt among your furs, under and on your carpets, as a prevention of moths.

Remove iron rust by applications of salt and Dip spots of mildew in buttermilk and place in the sunshine.

Fruit stains on white cloth will scald out or freeze out.

Cut your new bread with a hot knife.

Dip the knife in cold water to smooth the icing on a cake.

The long-clinging odor of onions can be re-moved from knife or dish by heating them when dry

Do not fill the room with smoke from the griddle, but "grease" it by rubbing with balf of a turnip.

Use half a raw potato instead of cork to apply bristol brick to steel knives.

A. Lewis Wood.

THE GROWING OF DAHLIAS

I'very of the new Dahlias. Get the choice named single sorts, and the cactus class in preference to the large double kinds, which are not as desirable in any way as those named.

named.

These Dahlias are among the very best of all flowers for use in vases during the late fall. It is hardly possible to find anything better. They have rich and delicate colors, display themselves most effectively with very little trouble as to "arrangement," and last for days. They are not fragrant like Roses, and lack some of the dainty beauty of form and solve which that rosel flower measurables. and color which that royal flower monopolizes, but in some ways they are quite as desirable for use in vases. For large, tall vases they are preferable. The cactus class is well adapted for use in rose-bowls, if not cut with very long stems.

very long stems.

In order to grow them well, dig the soil up to a depth of a foot and a half, and have it very rich and mellow. You cannot feed a Dahlia too much. Nor can you water it too much. Tie the central stock to a stoat stake to prerest breaking by strong winds. Start early in the season, in pots, and plant out as soon as warm weather is assured, but not be-fore. Best single sorts: Bridal Wreath, white; Paragon, dark maroon; Canary, yellow; Christine, pink. Best cactus varieties: Henry Patrick, white; King of Cactus, crimson; Zulu, purple maroon; Charming Bride, white, tipped with rose.

A PRETTY SILK AFGHAN

A NEW afghan is composed entirely of rib-A bons of different shades and widths.

On a foundation of light cotton material, three stripes of dark olive such ribbon are three stripes of dark olive such ribbon are sewed about their own breadth apart. Then with narrower picot-edged ribbons in the following order, the space between is filled, each ribbon overlapping its neighbor a trifle and run down with invisible stitches. Next the olive comes shell pink, white, light blue, scarlet, blue, white, orange. If several shades of each color are used, the effect is also good. The lining is of quitted satin, and the whole is bound by an olive ribbon, the edge of which may be button-holed with knitting silk of the same color. Into this a handsome shell is crocheted, forming a border for the afghan. The strips of ribbon are each one yard and five-eighths in length.

Alice C. Tildes

HANDKERCHIEF TOILET-SET

MATERIALS: A square cushion covered MATERIALS: A square cushion covered with yellow satin, a small embroidered slik handkerchief, sheer lare three inches wide. The handkerchief is placed cornerwise across the cushion. The lace may be gathered and sewed beneath the scallops. A bow of yellow satin ribbon may be placed at one side of the cushion, or four butterfly bows placed at the corners will make an equally pretty finish. Three similar slik handkerchiefs sewed together at the points make an effective bureau sourf, and may be edged with lace like the be adred with lace like t cushion, or not, as desired.

NEW LINIMENT FOR RHEUMATISM

Oll of winter-green and olive oil mixed in equal parts and applied externally will give almost instant relief from poin. On account of its pleasant odor this liniment is very agreeable to use...

TO WASH OIL CLOTH AND LINOLEUM

Old cloth should never be scrubbed, but washed with a soft woolen cloth and lukewarm water in which a little milk has been dissolved. Soap and bot water destroy the pattern and color.

KITTIE'S LONG-TAILED APPLES

KITTIE was walking down street with her A austic one day, and her big, blue eyes were wide open to all the curious things in the world—a new world to her. Suddenly she espied some tempting-looking pears before a grocery store.

"O-co, nuntie!" she cried, "see all vose little, cunning, long-tailed apples!"

HOLIDAY NOVELTIES IN JEWELRY

BY ALICE MARSH

A GOLD pencil-case, representing a quill, with diamonds and rubles studded in the center in the form of a clover, is among the holiday novelties.

An odd conception for a ring is a bright garnet set in the head of an exydized silver lizard, which is coiled so that its tail is beld between the teeth.

A rich-appearing pendant and lace-pin con-sists of a heart of pearls circled with small conch pearls, and having in the center a beautiful diamond.

Novelties in queen chain pendants are con-stantly appearing, and among the most recent is a sprig of holly, formed by variegated gold leaves with coral blossoms.

An infant's brush of silver, having a floral scene etched on the back, with a fluted handle joined by a Mary Washington rose is above the conventional designs, and will, no doubt, prove popular.

A baby's rattle, of polished silver, engraved to represent a sparrow's nest, on the bough of a poplar tree, would bring joy to any loving mother's heart, and afford unbounded delight

A small diamond heart, having a pigeon-blood ruby in the center, and surmounted by a coronet of diamonds and sapphires, forms the mounting of a ring that cannot full to please those artistically inclined.

No lover of the weed will fail to appreciate a cigar-holder formed by a richly carved dragon's head holding in its ferocious-appear-ing mouth a meerschaum horn of plenty, with the tip concealed in the monster's jaw.

A fine specimen of the silversmith's art is seen in a six-inch fir tree of silver, which is made to form a receptable for cologue. The base of the ornament represents a patch of sward, on which two gnomes are gamboling.

An elongated odd-shaped pearl, that was recently imported, has, by taking advantage of its unique form, been transformed into a very pretty fish lace-pin, by having a gold head and diamond tail attached to each end, respect-

Among bracelets six different colored pearls, each divided by a small ruby and a diamond, and the whole circled with minute emeralds in skeleton setting, form an exceedingly rich combination, and have aroused considerable admiration among lovers of the artistic.

Nothing could be more appropriate for a Christmas gift than a brooch consisting of a small bunch of mistletoe, the berries of which are of white agate. Delicate enamel leaves, interwoven with small brilliants, surrou the berries and throw them out with effect.

Watches are now worn suspended from chatelaine brooches attached to the breast, and some exquisite designs are seen for this purpose. One of the most attractive is formed by a number of artistically curved feathers, in which small diamonds and sapphires are intermingled.

Two moonstone Cupids, with diamondtipped gold bows and quivers swinging from their shoulders, and holding on high between them a beart of diamonds, from which is apparently dropping three small rubles, consti-tutes a lace-pin that shows much thought and skill in workmanship.

In jewelry it often happens that when two old and time-worn designs are shown combined, they form a very pretty combina-tion. Thus it is that a crescent brooch, hav-ing a daisy in the center, the whole being of pure-white, small diamonds, make a very exquisite and attractive ornament.

The souvenir spoon cruze no doubt in-spired the production of a richly-curved, dull-finished gold spoon, which it is now consid-ered proper to present as a holiday gift. The spoon represents a bouquet of flowers, with the blossom forming the bowl, and the metal oven between the prany leaves to show them. open between the many leaves to show them

Some young ladies may consider it impertiwith a simulating an interrogation-point, of Roman gold set with diamonds and turquois; but, notwithstanding, such an ornament has been placed on the market, and is creating much favorable comment on its suggestiveness and unique appearance.

The beautiful enamel flower decoration on The beautiful enamed flower decoration on watch cases, which has recently been revived, and which, until this season, could only be applied to solid gold, is now shown on filled cases, and this enables many with slender purses to possess time-pieces that have always been beyond the reach of any but those of means. A pretty design, that has just been introduced, is a pansy of soft velvet colors on a plain polished surface.

The prejudice against opals which, by the way, were until the beginning of the present century always considered the most unlucky of century always considered the most unitarity of precious gens, is rapidly disappearing, and now that they are being found in our own country, people are commencing to appreciate the beauty of this wonderful jewel, and favor jewelry in which it is seen. One of the pret-tiest and attractive breast-pins this season shows the variegated and changeful tints of an opal clover, enhanced by a circle of alternate rubies emeralds and disappeds. rubies, emeralds and diamonds,

Cut This Out

And send it with your name and address to HARPER & BROTHERS, Publishers, New York, N. Y. and you will receive by return mail a sample set of AMERICA'S 4 GREATEST PERIODICALS.

Name

Address.

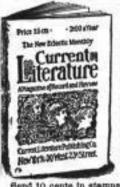

People have no idea how crude and cruel soap can be.

It takes off dirt. So far, so good; but what else does it do?

It cuts the skin and frets the under-skin; makes redness and roughness and leads to worse. Not soap, but the alkali in it.

Pears' Soap has no free alkali in it. It neither reddens nor roughens the skin. It responds to water instantly; washes and rinses off in a twinkling; is as gentle as strong; and the aftereffect is every way good.

All sorts of stores sell it, especially druggists; all sorts of people use it.

A VALUABLE PERIODICAL.

"Current Samman," is planned to creat the field of home and findigs liber. In it is a monolity to every resider and deletant in this happage. It hings often may with progress, building without prevaling aminests and liberary style, companies more transmit, and gives a greater verbrie of modify some time and periodical over published in the mirid.

Opinion of Just Chamille Marries
"Correct Literature" shows in a higher shipter than over the appropriate year torial art that has made this temporal between Neutrile Indiana and the suggested POS RALE BY ALL DRALESS

Send 10 cents in stamps for Specimen Copy.

NATURE'S REMEDY THE HEALING BAL-SAMS OF THE PINE FORESTS, PREPARED FOR INHALATION BY WM. B. HIDDEN, M. D. *Throat & Lung Specialist BALTIMORE, MD.

A positive cure for Colds. Coughs, Catarrah, Bron-chial and Lung disease. Goes directly where needed and gives instant relief. Special inhalants for Asthma and Whoveling-cough. Send it for Inhale and Inhalant

MENDING RES-TO-RE, a strong tis WITHOUT all fabries neatly and instanta necessiv. Selfs quickly. Pars well Sample, S. cls. Agents Wanted S. H. SAMUELS, 165 TREMONY ST., BOSTON, MASS

You are a School Teacher, send your address to the Mills PENCIL SHARPENER Co., Circinnati.

A package of ALL-COCK'S CORN SHIELDS or a sample of ALL-COCK'S BUNION SHIELDS will be sent, prepaid, on receipt of Ten Cents.

They are easily applied, give immediate relief, allord absolute comfort, and are the best, surest, cleanest and cheapest remedy for cheapest remedy for corns and bunions ever produced.

The Con Shields are made large and small. In ordering, state size wanted.

SHIELDS. STO CARREST CO.,

HANSON'S

MAGIC

CORN SALVE

The property of the control of the co

HENRY ABBOTT & CO. 14 Malden Lase, New York.

Price, 15 and 25c. AN OWL BACH!

We will send you a FRINGED LINEN TEDT OF "AN OWL BACH." From to more & I, INGALIZ" BOOK OF STITCHES, Ingalis 23-page Il-lustrated Calalogue of FANCY WORK MATERIALS, STAMPED GOODS, ARY BOOKS, STAMPING OFF OF INSTANCE. COPT of INGALLS HOME AND ART MAGAZINE, J. F. INGALLS, LYNN, MASS.

WINTER BICYCLES
PRICES ON BICYCLES
Dou't wait till springr buy new a save thomay. Hasy payments. All buskes new A 30 ftd. Friefres. Heast-Hazard A to 80 ftd., Foorth, Ell.

THE most Nevel and Inexpensive Xmax Pres-reits, Write for uninteges, THE CINCINNATI PURE ALUMINUM COMPANY, 7 Emery Arcade.

XMAS MONEY, SELL OLD GOLD and Bilwar return mail. Est. 1880. H. Hant, Box 183, Eochester, N. Y.

MUSIC 20c to $1 10c Sent 10c for trial Order, Windows Music Co., $10 Walnut of last Carl FREE Digitized by Google,

It is an old-fashion notion that medicine has to taste bad to do any good.

Scott's Emulsion is codliver oil with its fish-fat taste lost-nothing is lost but the taste.

This is more than a matter of comfort. Agreeable taste is always a help to digestion A sickening taste is always a hindrance. There is only harm in taking cod-liver oil unless you digest it. Avoid the taste.

SCOTT & BOWSE, Chemists, 132 South 5th Avenue, New York. Your druggest kneps Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver cil—all druggists averywhere do, $1.

Full Dress Suits

From $25 to $40 Equal in fabric, style, workman-ship. At and finish, to $75 and $100 seits of leading houses.

Why this is possible : Why this is possible! We are the only Tailoring house in the U. S. making a specialty of Full Dreas Carments and have every facility for producing at lowest possible cout. It is well known that Tailors regard the Dreas Sut a mere incident in their business and accordingly charge prices greatly out of propurion to prices charged under brisk competition for business suits.

The Dress Suit is to-day an Absolute Necessity an Absolute Necessity to pendamen attending Weddings, Reception, Parnieute, Itis not only the Correct Dress on such occasions but often other forms are absolutely prohibited
Every pentleman should own a Dress Sait.

Comparatively few cloths are suitable for Dress Garments.
Samples of these we mail free on application with samples of the mings sed complete instructions for self-measurement. No one the self-measurement requirement need be discouraged at the self-to for our system is very simple. Our Customers Risk Nothing.

Garments may be retirmed to us for any ownse and when so returned, we obligate ourselves to pay all Express charges. We are general toilors and can furnish by mail samples of any style of goods desired. For particulars and samples address (enclosing 6 cts. for postage)

KAHN TAILORING CO., 14 E. Washington St., BOX T, INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Our Mail Trade

is largely Male Trade,

(This is our Fall pun.) Send us your name on a postal card and we will mail you samples of our goods including our FALL SPECIALTIES, No. 1.—Our $15.50 Suit, No. 2.—Our $16.50 Over-coat. Sent everywhere in U. S. by mail or ex-press. Full line of pant goods always sent for he Famous Plymouth Book $3 Pants is our leader.

Address all Permouth Rock Pants Con-

We have seven stores in Bonton and a store in Washington, D. C., Chicago, Illa, Toledo, Dayton, Little Rock, Ark. Richmond. Va., Burmingham, Ale., Wercester, Mate., Troy, N. Y., Macos, Ga., Memphis, Tems., Nashvaise, Tem., Dallas, Ten., Acquista, Galventen, Tex., Waco, Tex., New Oricans, La., Perusacola, In., Adissta, Ga., Manchester, N. H., Coscord, N. H., Mentgonyery, Ala., New Hayen, Conn., Springfield, Mass., Newport, Esp. Harbor, Cottage City, Nashacket, Kansas, Mo., Lounville, Ky., Austin, Tex., San Antonno, Tex.

Plymouth Rock Pants Co.

Incorporated Capital, $1,000,000.

ASHEVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA, HOTEL BELMONT.

The finest Winter Health Resort in America. Bracing mountain air, mineral water, jersey cream and milk, creamery butter, tenderioin steak, and a resident Physician. Write for the balance. JOHN S. MARSHALL, M. D., Director.

IT'S WONDERFUL "The New Treatment" for Catarrh, by petroleum. Send stamp for 30 page pamphlet, free. Aponts wanted.

HEALTH SUPPLIES CO., 710 BROADWAY, N.Y.

GUITAR WITH Howen Charts. Soc. per set (74).
A.O. Howe, 70 State St., Chicago, Cir. free

THE MOTHER GOOSE CARNIVAL

BY MES. JOHN D. THAYER

UCH an excitement was not often seen in the busy town of Brayton. Jennie and Cordie and Tom and Harry, and a host of the young peo-ple were arrang-ing costumes to attend the "Cen-tennial of Mother Goose."

It came at last, Only the cos-floor of the hall, while the balconies were reserved for the audience.

At an early hour "Boy Blue" appeared on the stage blowing his horn heralding the approach of Mother Goose and her many followers. The march was formed under the balconies, and spanned the hall. Mother Goose followed Boy Blue and welcomed her many friends in these words:

One handred years and many pro-

many friends in these words:

One hundred years, and many more,
The Etile cones have talked my lore;
And now, as living inctares tright,
My myths before you are to night.
Little Boy Bine is here with his horn
Begardless of sheep or "the cows in the corn;"
Begardless of sheep or "the cows in the corn;"
Bonn Jill with her Jack, and Sprair's wife so fit,
And the crooked man with the crooked cal;
Mother Habstard is bere in search of a bone;
With the old, sid wessian who lives all alone.
King Cole is here with his fiddlers three;
And Nasor; Etilcost, too, we see.
The woman whose eggs brought many a dollar,
Its here with Minfilt, and the Ten o'Clock Scholar.
The old woman whose eggs brought many a shoe
With all her children, she's quite at a lose what to de.
The man with his wheelbarrow, wife, and all,
Came very late, as his wife had a fall.
Many subjects are here from every land,
To meet to night with the Mother Goose band.
Memory fails us their names to call:
But you, dear mothers, will know them all.

The march across the stage then com-

Many subjects are bere from every land.
To meet to-night with the Mother Goose band.
Memory faits me their name to call:
But yos, dear mothers, will know them all.
The march across the stage then commenced. Mother Goose, with her six attendants; King Cole, and his jolly fiddlers; Boy Blue and Mistress Mary Quite Contrary, formed the firstedivision. Mother Goose leaned upon her staff, and Mistress Mary, in garden costume, carried a large watering-pot. Then followed Bobby Shafto and his girl, Little Namey Etticoat, bearing a lighted candle; Bo-Peep with her crook. Mother Hubbard with her hungry dog, and the Three Wise Men of Gotham, holding a large wooden bowl.

Brayton was a large shoe town, so it was easy to get a mammoth shoe that went on wheels, to accomodate the famous old woman.
She had so many children the shoe could not hold them all, so they followed on close behind with the old woman, who was equipped with a switch and the bread, minus butter. The next division belonged to the "Beggars." Such a set of ragged ones was never seen together. The "beggars coming to town" were recognized without being announced.

Then came the Old Woman Sweeping the Sky. Her pointed hat and airy cloak of pea-green made her look as if she could plerce the clouds and clean the sky of all the cobwebs with her wonderful broom. Next followed the Man Going to St. Ives with his Seven Wives. Jack be Nimble was on hand quickly. Towmy Grace had an awfully swelled face in bandages; while Dicky Long stood by, ready to sing his song. A mite of a girl trotted along representing Pat-a-cake. Townny Tucker was eating his bread and butter. The antic "Hobbyhorse" was followed by a little girl with a plate of "Hot-Cross Buna."

Little Miss Mufflt had an enormous black (paper) spèder attached to her side. The Old Woman with Eggs to Sell kept the Farmer's Wife company. Nimble Dick made good speed, and Dr. Foster, with his big umbrella, started for Glosker. The Old Man was truly dressed in leather from head to foot.

In the next division were Jack

Jack Horner went next, eating his "Christ-mas pie," and Spratt's wife leaned heavily on her hangry man. Three boys acted "Ding-Dong Bell, and Tuffy, with his leg of beef, was her hangry man. Three boys acted "DingDong Bell, and Taffy, with his leg of beef, was fleeing from his pursuers.

Characters from various authors then appeared, desiring to be presented to the venerable Mother Goose. Uncle Tom and Topsy were followed by the Sleeping Beanty and the Prince; Sinbad the Sallor; a boy leading the famous Old Dog Tray; Golden-Locks; Jack and the Bean Stalk; Robinson Crusoe and Friday; Withington (Lord Mayor) and his cat; Red-Riding-Hood; Little Lord Fauntleroy; Mand Muller, with ber rake; Beanty and the Beast; The Babes in the Wood; Mary leading her lamb; the priest followed by the Maid and her Man "all tattered and torn."
The Goddess of Liberty was traveling in company with George and Martha Washington, attended by the Thirteen Original States, and she, in memory of the blessed past, deigned to nerry with her companions a brief time, to extend greetings to Mother Goose.

The march was followed by dancing, and such a mixing up of characters was almost dangerous. Jack Horner waltzed with Martha Washington, and Unde Tom was very attentive to Mother Goose. George Washington danced with Mother Hubhard, and Topsy was often seen in company with the Kings.

often seen in company with the Kings.

All Shrunk Up

the flannels that are washed without Pearline; besides, they're worn out by hard rubbing. Wash flannels with Pearline, and they will be softer, brigher and better. They will last twice as long; they will look like new while they last. Every package tells how it's done; do as it says, and it will be done well.

As one wash is sufficient to ruin flannels, great care should be exercised as to the use of the many imitations which are being offered by unscrupulous grocers or peddlets.

201 JAMES PYLE, New York.

FINE THING FOR THE TEETH.

At last a perfect dentifrire has been discovered. Never was a tooth brush dipped into a perparation so unobjectionable and so effective as Sozodont. It renders the tooth pearly white, gives to the breath a fragrant odor, extinguishing the ill humors which usually flow from a had and neglected set of teeth. No lariar can encrust them, no canker affect the enamel, no species of decay infest the dental bone, if this pure and delicious dentifrice Sozodont is faithfully used.

is a composition of the purest and choicest ingredients of the Oriontal Vegetable Kingdom. Every ingredient is known to have a beneficial effect on the teeth and gums. Its embalsaing or antiseptic property and aromatic fragrance make it a toilet luxury.

gives elasticity and ease to every step inken by the wearer. It breaks the shock or jarring of the body when walking, and is perticularly adapted to all who are obliged to be out their feet. To those suffering from Spinal. Eidney, Rheumatic and Serveous Affections, it will be found a great relief. The rubber with its annular projections is as sort as relived, thoroughly subcashed, always sharile, butther covered next to the foot, and can be instantly adjusted inside of the boot, directly under the beel. All sizes, 25 ceste per pair, insided upon receipt of price. At all dealers.

What People Say Who Wear Them:

What People Say Who Wear Them: Send 4 pairs more; they are a grand success."

'Kritively satisfactory; send 4 pairs more."

'They give instant relief; send me 5 pairs more."

Indorsed by physicians for servous troubles.

C. J. BAILEY & CO., 22 Boylston St., Boston. Everything in Rubber Goods.

How to Make a Fortune

WANTED — Salesmen; who can easily make twenty-five to seventy-five dollars per week, selling the Celebrated " Piniess Clothes Line." or the Famous "Macomber Fountain link Ernser" — Patents recently issued. Sold ONLY by salesmen, to whom we give Exclusive Territory. The Piniess Clothes Line is the only line ever invented that holds clothes uithout pins—a perfect success. The Macomber Fountain link Ernser is entirely new; will ernse ink lestantly, and is king of all. On receipt of 30c. will mail you sample of either, or sample of both for $1. with circulars, price-lists and terms. Secure your territory at once. Address THE PINIESS CLOTHES LINE CO., No. 120 Herinon St., Worcester, Mass.

SEND for our list of 19 Cata-legs of Music and Musical Instruments. W. SPORT. 20 Central Instruments.

FOUND $5,000. $13,389. We can prove that others have done at well. Cole Collecting Pays Big. If you have any Old Collet or Proofs coined after left, neve them, so they might be worth a forcase. Historian delivorary on race quien free at office as mailed for the wamps. AGENTS WANTED.

NUMBERATIC HANK, Court St., Roston, Ma COMMON BROOM Agents Wanted. Gusple Blokler senter rectife of 1.5 a.
Blokle a Broom either end

Corollar from Over 250,600 sold.
ENGLE SPHING GUN CO., L. Box 50, Haslets

CHIC" DRESS LIFTER. The Column of IN 108 Worth St., New York. SLACK G. H. LANGE & CO. IN

Cold Blast Odorless Feathers AND FEATHER PILLOWS are sold guaranteed free from Odor. Dust and Quills, in perfect condition and permanently buoyant. Ask your dealer for them or address THE COLD BLAST FEATHER CO.,

FAULTLESS BEDDING Including Imperial Hair Mattreases, Etc. 56 to 66 W. VanBuren St., Chicago, U. S. A.

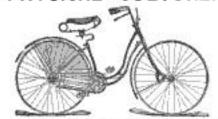

THE OTHER FELLOW'S SISTER will like you better if you don't forget your own but remember how hard it is for her to sweep up after a big brother who sever uses a door mat—saless it will use their. You can't walk over a "Hardman" Wire Mat without cleaning your feet. Moral.—Catalogue and Testimonials, mailed free.

HARTMAN MFG. CO., works, Beaver Falls, Pa. Branches: 182 Chambers Street, New York: 208 State at, Chicago; 51 and 55 South Porceth Street, Allanta, the

Our Mate have brees ing attached stamped " Hariman Digitized by Google

PHYSICAL CULTURE.

One aid-the best aid-to physical culture is recreative exercise.

In no way can this be gained so well as on a bicycle.

The best bicycle for ladies' use is the

Columbia Ladies' Safety. POPE MANUFACTURING COMPANY,

77 Franklin Street, BOSTON.

BRANCH HOUSES: 13 Warren Street, NEW YORK.

spr Wabash Avenue, CHICAGO.

FACTORY, HARTFORD, CONN. **-ACENTS WANTED

THE NEW MODEL "HALL."

PRIEST TYPEWHITES.

BEST MANIPOLOUS.
TOWNS to Agents Liberof.
PORTABLE, INEXTENSIVE.
WRITES ALL LANGEAGES.
Send for Catalogue and Speciators of Ford.
Address N. TVPEW RITER CO.
611 Washington St., Boston.

METROPOLITAN College of Music,

Leading Musical Institution of America.

Plano-farte baschers' cordificates. Examiners: William Mason, Mus. Doc., A. C. M., and Athert Rose Parsons, A. C. M. Dutter Back, President; H. E. Palmer, K. Agramente, B. R. Shelley are among the distinguished members of the Fauthy. Circulars section application. Address H. W. Greene, 19 d. 21 East 14th St., N. Y. Chy.

OHORT-HAND Send for Catalogue ELF TAUGHT for self-instruction by BENN PITMAN and JEROME E. HOWAND, WTHE PHONOGRAPHIC INSTITUTE, CINCINNATI, ORDS.

CINCINNATI CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC. winging all purposers and the following state of the constraint of the constraint of the Constraint; adding from a distance usay loand in the Conservatory, where they are under the personal supervision of the pirectrees. Students may mater at any time. For estalogue, address Miss CLARA BAUR, Cincinnati, Ohio.

SHORTHAND thor'ly taught by mail in THREE Smooths No shading, no position, cosmective vowel method. Ferroin Shorthand Lostitute, Detroit, Mich.

SHORT-HAND thoroughly taught "by mall." O and first five lessons. Circulars free. PITMAN COLLEGE, - Box 404, St. Louis, Mo.

SHORTHAND. Married of Plannello Short-hand, $1.50; Speed Brok, $1.51; Conspection and Vocabulary (for the vest pocket), or cents, send accent steam? w.w. $5500087, Put., Substite, S.Y.

PRIVATE EDUCATION.

Lady of redocment and culture with ten years' ex-perience as governous, distinct to give one or two children the very best electrical man good home, so redoct found in hourding schools. Special attention paid as te mental and physical development. A. KROENIKK, N. W. curner Sixtieth and Wright streets, Chicago.

Endorsed by Prof. H. C. Wood, M. D., LL. D., and Prof. Harrison Allen, M. D., University of Pennsylva-nia. Also Postmaster-General Washinsker. Send Sp. 64-page pampilate to E. B. Johnston's Insti-tate, 1985 Spring Garden Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CHILD CULTURE STUDY CIRCLE, A new department in the Kindergarton Magazine, devoted exclusively to the home-training of children according to FROESEL. $1.50 per year; 30 cents, on TRIAL three months. KIN-DERGARTEN PUBLISHING CO., 277 Madison Street, Chicago.

The Largest Dollege of wearsance and Tova-worse in the world, Writes College of Shorthand, Springfield, Ohio.

Outfits Send Stamping Patterns & Stamping Cards. Stamping Patterns & Stamping Cards. Stamping Cards. See Seginner's Outfit, 25c 1862 Boman Embroidery Outfit, 25c 1862 Complete Outfit, Impression Paper & Paint, $1.00. Annusse: WALTER P. WERDED

MONEY refunded if not suited. 40 pieces yould and instrumental mostly, sheet made size, all parts county as only 15 cents. Read this:

3r. Hatharay: Am very much pleased with the music sent do: 2 b a worth ten times the mosey. R. J. Allen, Hoesica, N. H. Commission and 160 sengs, words and music, 5 cents. G. L. HATHAWAY, 329 Washington street, floaton, Mass.

OFFER OF STAMPED GOODS.

One Felt Tidy 12 x 17 in. Pinked edge Stamped. | 20c. One Pillow Scarf 31 x 62 in. Stamped. | 36c. One Linen Spineter 20 x 31 in. Fringed & Stamped. | 25c. All the above free for 70c.

CLINTON STAMPING CO., Irvington, N. J.

CARDS: New Sample Book Sc. U.S. CARO CS. Cadia, 0

THE NEW FORM OF EDUCATION

BY MARY ELTING

E live in an age when the treasures of knowledge are no longer accessible only to the favored few, but its choicest stores are open alike to all, without regard to age, sex or condition. A highly educated woman is no longer an anomaly, for the time has come when public opinion ally, for the time has come when purche openion demands that our girls shall have the same educational advantages as their brothers, when woman shall stand side by side with man in the curriculum of our colleges and universi-ties. To this end there is no more important movement of modern times than the Univer-sity Evitation recoverages which has been in sity Extension movement, which has been in successful operation in England since 1872, and was enthusiastically inaugurated in this country during the fall and winter of 1800.

WHAT IS UNIVERSITY EXTENSION?

PROFESSOR MOULTON, of Cambridge, England, one of the pioneers in the movement, defines it thus: "University edu-cation for the whole nation, organized on a basis of itinerant tenchers." In other words, basis of itinerant teachers." In other words, it is a system of education devised for the instruction of people of every class and condition throughout the land, by means of a series of lectures, in connection with home study. Its aim is to bring the university of the people to place the opportunity for sity to the people, to place the opportunity for culture and education in the power of every one while engaged in the varied occupations one while engaged in the varied occupations of life. It means the education of the masses, especially those who, for want of time and means, are denied the privilege of a college training. It is the "university of the busy." There has been a change gradually and almost imperceptibly coming over the public mind, by which it has come to be recognized that higher education is no longer adapted to any particular class, condition, or period of life, but should be placed within the reach of all, as one of the permanent interests of life, side by side with such universal interests as religion and politics. University Extension is the outgrowth of this inner scaling, and if universally accepted by our people cannot fail in being a blessing to the whole nation. It is called "University Extension" because it was first started in England under the auspices of first started in England under the auspices of the universities, and it can readily be how much of permanence, dignity and im-portance is given to the word by thus being under the fostering care of some university, enabling the student, after having completed a certain course of study, to receive a certifi-cate from such an institution.

ORGANIZATION OF THE MOVEMENT

IT requires a central organization, in con-I requires a central organization, in con-nection with some university or universi-ties, which shall supply traveling lecturers for different courses of study to local organi-nations, over the whole country, under the management of a committee or some local in-stitution, the relation of these two organiza-tions being that of separate independent states to the general government. Three things are important for establishing a local center—a library for reference, a suitable meeting place, and a local organization which will furnish a nucleus of attendance to start with. Profes-sor Moulton says: "The first university exsor Moniton says: "The first university ex-tension was the invention of printing, which sent the books itinerating through the coun-The time has now come to send teachers to follow the books.

THE METHODS EMPLOYED

FURST-Courses of weekly lectures are P given on various subjects, and rendered attractive as well as instructive, thus drawing andiences as miscellaneous as will be found in any church or hall. A three months' course is required for each subject, and many of these courses are given in the evening for the bene-courses are given in the evening for the benefit of busy people engaged during the day.

Second—The syllaims, which is a printed pamphlet, prepared in advance by the lecturer, for each course, and sold for a trifling sum. It contains the salient points of every lecture, which will enable the student to grasp the subject comprehensively; it directs the attention to collateral reading, and is furnished with questions on rach becture.

nished with questions on each lecture.

Third—Weekly exercises. These questions the student may answer in writing at home, and, with any comments or queries of his own, mail to the lecturer, to be returned with his corrections, at the subsequent "class."

Fourth—The "class" is an informal meete students and others an hour at the close of the lecture, where the points suggested by the weekly exercises of the students on the preceding lecture are discussed by the lecturer, and an opportunity given the student to have any difficulties explained and to be brought into closer personal contact with the lecturer.

Fifth—Examinations. At the close of the course an examination is held for the students who wish it, and certificates are awarded to those whose work is satisfactory. The merit those whose work is satisfactory. The merit of the work depends on the weekly exercises, as well as the final examinations,

THE COST OF MEMBERSHIP

ONE of the beneficent features of this or securing its opportunities. The payment of five dollars a year constitutes a membership in the American Society of University Teaching, and three dollars per year a mem-bership in a local center, and entitles the person to tickets to all the lectures and the use of any books of reference found in the library provided by the center. If any one profess a single course of six lectures, tickets can be had, as a rule, for one dollar. In addi-tion, ten cents for the syllabus, and the sta-tionery required for the weekly exercises and examinations are all the necessary expenses.

UNIVERSITY EXTENSION IN AMERICA

THERE had been several attempts, from time to time, in various American educational centers, to distribute university edu-cation among the people; but it was not until the early part of the year 1800 that Dr. Pepper, Provost of the University of Pennsylvania. met a number of prominent professors of dif-ferent institutions, to discuss the imaggiration ferent institutions, to discuss the imaguration of the work in Philadelphia, proposing as far as possible, to follow the English models. In June of the same year the Philadelphia society was organized, with Prorost Pepper as president. The secretary was sent at once to England to study the methods and plan of operation there, and on his return in the fall the work was entered upon with zeal and enthusiasm. Professor Mouiton came over from the mother country and save new innertus to the mother country and gave new impetas to the work, and did much toward the popularity and permanency of its organization. His lectures were attended by large and appreciative audiences, and his class work was most gratifying.

So great was the demand from all parts of the country for information and assistance in organization that it became necessary for the Philadelphia Society for the Extension of University Tenching to enlarge its field of op-eration, and on February 25d, 1890, it was made the American Society for the Extension of University Teaching. Thus was this movement born, and it seems destined to diffuse far and wide, over the whole land, the bless-ings of that culture and education which are found in our colleges and universities.

PROGRESS OF THE WORK

THE society has many eminent presidents of different universities as an advisory committee, as well as a number of prominent educators of our country, and also a council for the active direction of affairs, composed of cultured ladies and gentlemen. It has estab-lished Local Centers in many states, and an active interest is already manifested by the leading universities throughout the country. Forty-two courses of lectures were given at the different centers during the fall and winter of 1890, or about two hundred and fifty ter of 1836, or about two bundred and fifty lectures, the total attendance being nearly sixty thousand persons, a number never sur-passed, even in England. These courses em-braced astronomy, botany, chemistry, elec-tricity, English literature, history, higher mathematics, psychology and zoology. Such has been the wonderful sucress of this movement that several societies have been organized in other cities on the university extension

HOME DEPARTMENT FOR HOME STUDY

So much was accomplished during one short season that the movement attracted uni-Season that the movement attracted uni-versal attention, and as local centers out only be established in populous towns, letters came pouring in from everywhere, asking what could be done for isolated students. The eager ery for knowledge came from the home and the workshop; from the locely dweller in the country and the busy denizes of the city. It came from school-teachers and members of all the professions, too busy to attend the weekly lectures; from the youth of both sexes, without the means to obtain a college education; from the "bread-winners of all ages, who long for self-improvement; from busy women amid their household cares, the cry for university extension in the home, at the fireside. In response the society formed the home department, and it offers, this coming season, at a minimum cost, a variety of courses of "Home Study." These courses will extend over several months, and a full course, if taken, will cover a period of three or four years. It will be regular, systematic college work, under specially qualified instructors. The student will be in regular correspondence with his came from school-teachers and members of all specially quantied instructors. The student will be in regular correspondence with his teacher, and his work will thus be thoroughly tested and guided by a college professor. No home is too remote, no hamlet too secluded, for this home department to extend a helping hand to the earnest seeker after the same instruction enjoyed by those favored with a regular university training.

EVERY SUBSCRIBER TO

FRANK LESLIE'S POPULAR MONTHLY

For 1802 will receive:

Over 1,000 Fine Pictures by the best illustrators of Over 1,000 Fine Pictures by the best illustrators of the day.

Twelve Beautiful Fall-Page Colored Plates.
Two Serial Stories of surpassing interest, by fav-orite noveliets.
One Handred Short Stories by the most original writers in this popular department of literature.
A Splended Series of Illustrated Papers by special-lets and writers of recognized ability, covering from month to month the various subjects foremost in popular interest.
These in addition to the regular departments, in-cluding current Scientific, Geographical and Literary News, Wit, Anecdote and Foetry.

THE HOLIDAY NUMBER,

For January, 1892,

(Published December 15th),

Contains a store of contributions, in proce and wree, from the pens of favorite magazine writers of the day, and is unusually rich in libertations. Bound in a special illuminated cover of appropri-ate design, this number of FRANK LESLIE'S POPULAR MONTHLY constitutes the ideal holiday book of the season.

SPECIAL-Send for 1892 Prospectus and Clubbing Rates. Specimen Copy on Receipt of 20 Cents.

SINGLE NUMBER, 25 CENTS.

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTION, $3.00.

For sale by all Newsdealers, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price. Address

MRS. FRANK LESLIE, Publisher,

110 Fifth Avenue, - New York.

If Women Knew

the luxury of getting a charming bouse

the luxury of getting a charming bousehold paper every week, at a cost of only $1.00 a year, none would ever be without the Housekeeper's Weekly.

MARION HARLAND'S capital "House and Home Talks" each week. Trials and experiences of readers, and fresh, spicy discussion. A weekly feast. "Tills the place of a dozen monthles, at the cost of one."

No rease same as. Send age, for ten weeks vial. $27-And if you are so fixed that you could do some work for us at your house, compiling lists, addressing, one, please any so, saming this paper. Henry-keeper's Weekly 20. 27: 32 Philada. Housekeeper's Weekly, 29 N. 7th St., Philada.

OLD MAIDS made now by "Fref. Baxter's In-vention." Pr. No. List of new plays FREE, BAKER'S, 23 Winter St., Boston, Mass.

LIDA CLARKSON'S PANSY FRIEZE.

THIS ILLUSTRATION shows only a part of the Prison. We have had thus Passor Faunts reproduced for 1947 size 295 by 25 inches, in all its Baaptipus. Cotons. It is not a chesp Chroma, but an Exact. Artistic Respondences or this Concensal Paratipus. We send this Passor Paints by mail, postage paid, for June, and it you are not preferably reliabled return it, and we will return your natory. Adapt to Waxten.

**ACT Sine 9% by 40 inches, in all its BRACTIFUL COLORS. It is not a chose Chouses, but are Exact, Artistic Reproduction of the Original Parkting. We need this Passy Friezry by mill, postage paid, for $1.00.

$2.00

**MAGAZINE**

**MAGAZINE**

**MAGAZINE**

**MAGAZINE**

**The Artistic Reproduction of the Original Parkting. The Artistic Reproduction of the Original Parkting. The Artistic Reproduction of the Original Parkting. The Artistic Reproduction of the Original Parkting. Each unable is finely for the Artistic Reproduction of the Artistic Reproduction of the Original Parkting. The Artistic Reproduction of the Original Parkting Reproduction of the

WHEN WAS MY BABY BORN?

If you will send us the name and address of any baby born since 1885, and a postage stamp, we will mail that child a copy of "OUR LITTLE ONES and Twn NUSSERY," the nost beautiful magazine in the world for young people,

RUSSELL PUBLISHING CO.

196 Summer Street, - Boston, Mass.

30 days on trial. Roof's Magic Scale, the popular lands Tallocing System. Historided circular free. Book Maste Scale Co., Chicago, III.

10. Siver, Floated Sea Sees. 6. S. Sillis, See Steps, Cal.

W. E. Skilmer. 35 Washington, Street, Seese, See.

Digitized by Google. (

TO THE READERS OF BOOKS

Are you desirous of obtaining information regarding the price of any particular book or books? Do you wish to pursue a certain line of reading, and are you uncertain as to just which books are the best for your purpose?

Are there any points concerning books and their prices which you would like to investigate?

Those in charge of the Premium Department of THE LABORS HOME JOURNAL make a specialty furnishing information of this character, and will be very glad to hear from you.

HARRYCASTLEMON'S BOOKS

Any one book given as a Premium for a Club of 3 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each ; or, for & Subscribers and 25 cents additional. Postage and packing, 12 cents extra. Price, 22 cents each, postpaid.

There are few boys who could fall to be interested in manly out-door sports, as described by Harry Castlemon. He writes within their comprehension: his adventures are stirring without any attempt at artificial coloring, and he is so thoroughly acquainted with his subject and has such a happy method of treating it, that the seeker after information is never disappointed or misled. Fields, woods and streams take on a new beauty and charm when pictured by this genial lover of nature. The charm of his storice lies in the consummate skill with which he weaves together the warp of practical information and the

Frank Nelson Series

99.000

CETLEMEN

Frank in the Forecastle The Boy Traders

Roughing It Series

George in Camp George at the Wheel George at the Fort

Go-Ahead Series

Go-Ahead No Moss

Rocky Mountain Series Frank Among the Rancheros

Frank on Don Carlos' Rancho Frank in the Woods

Sportsman's Club Series

The Sportsman's Club in the Saddle The Sportsman's Club Atlost The Sportsman's Club Among the Trappers

Boy Trapper Series The Buried Treasure

The Boy Trapper The Mail Carrier

Rod and Gun Series

Don Gordon's Shooting-Box Rod and Gun Club The Young Wild Fowlers

Gunboat Series

Frank the Young Naturalist Frank on a Gunboat Frank Before Vicksburg Frank on the Lower Mississippt Frank on the Prairie

Forest and Stream Series

Snagged and Sunk Steel Horse True to His Colors

Price, 30 cents per volume. Postage and packing, 12 cents extra, whether purchased or obtained as a premium.

"THE BLUE AND THE GRAY" SERIES

BY OLIVER OPTIC

Either book sent, postpuid, as a Premium for a Club of 5 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 8 Subscribers and 50 cents additional. Price, $1.40 each, postpaid.

What boy need be told anything about that indefatigable writer-the author of these books?

Oliver Optic knows his boy sodience, and the youngster of this generation are as much his friends as their seniors were years ago.

> Taken by the Enemy

On the Blockade

Within the Enemy's Lines

Stand by the Union

In all of these the scenes are connected with the War of the Rebellion. There are hair-breadth escapes enough, and sly villainles and conspiracies, and dashing actions and chivalric deeds, to set any number of boyish pulses to throbbing. They are all very prettily bound in the two colors which supply the title for the series.

Price, $1.40 each, including cost of postage and packing.

Oliver Optic has written for us an article entitled "How I Write My Stories." It contains his portrait, and we shall mail a copy free to every boy sending us an order for one of his books.

TO ALL CORRESPONDENTS: Any question from our readers of help or interest to women, will be theer-y amnered in this Department. But please bear in mind: Write your questions plainly and briefy. Don't use unnecessary words: editors are busy persons.

The right to answer or reject any question is reserved by the Editor.

Answers cannot be promised for any special issue. They will be given as quickly after receipt as possible.

All correspondence should be accompanied by full name and address, not for publication, but for reference

UNKNOWE.—The largest city in the world is London; Paris comes next.

REBRICCA, -- Newnham College for women, at Cambridge, England, was opened in 1876.

Synce.—No woman has a right to incur debts in her husband's name without his permission.

BKYKKLY.—The present Emperor of Germany is William II; his father was Frederick III. JOURNAL BRADER.—" Elsinore." mentioned in Rambet," is one of Denmark's scaports.

K. L. C.—R. S. V. P., on an invitation in an abbrevia-tion of Responder sel tour plott, which is French for Answer, if you please."

Wistram.—If your powers of confensation are an great, one you not induce the editor of one of your local papers to give you a trial?

Mas. S. G.—Send congratulations to the newly-mar-ried couple at ours. A man should wear mourning for either parent for at least a year.

D. C. M.—A. little salt used in the water in which mourning handkerchiefs and thack stockings are washed will cause them to retain their color.

A. F.—The names of the months of the year and the names of the days of the week should always commence with capital letters; there are no exceptions to this rule.

Mas. T.—We cannot give addresses. Such designs may be procured at almost any good dealer in action, indic-rials. Write to some well-known firm, and state your requirements.

Santa.—If your face is long and narrow you should arrange your helr flat on the top, loose and soft at the sides, and cover the forebead to some extent with a light curir bang.

CRISA.—Ask an apothecary for a weak solution of permanganate of poinsts. We think you will find that betting the armpits with this will relieve the profixe perspiration of which you complain.

Chuppy,—"Esh" is the non-de plures of a New York rerespaper woman of report. A little powder will not do your hands any harm. A married lady should always be addressed by her husband's rame. M. G. B.—The illustrations of dresses given in the Journal are only introded to serve as models of the styles worn during the month in which the pictures are given. We denot publish or sell patterns of any sort.

GRACK.—The best coemetic is rain water. Use nothing cise for a month or two, avoiding perfumed soaps, ammonia or anything which serves to make the skin dry, and we think you will soon find an improvement in your complexion.

6. B. H.—Try sizing the percelaist or ground glass. We do not think, however, the oil paints ought to spread if used with a very little Press spirits of turpenties and no oil medium. If the turpenties is old, it becomes oily and spreads directly.

Anxious Laur.—A murried bely should use her husband's name upon her visiting card; the eldest daughter should prefix "Miss" before the family name. The younger daughters should follow the "Miss" with both Christian and surname.

MANY.—A good totion for freekies may be made from one ounce of alom, one ounce of leason lates and a plot of rose water. Apply to the face just before retiring, being careful not to allow any to enter the eyes, and work off with warm water and soft cloth the next morning.

C. H.—Time will make your face thin. Until then be very grand of your runnd, may face, and be content with yourself as you are. We cannot alter our features, but we can cultivate sweetness of character, which will make our faces beautiful, no matter how homely their features may be.

INQUERER.—The English Committee for the Barbion of the Hible was appointed by the Convocation of Can-terbury in May, 1915, and consenced its week the fol-lowing month. The American Committee was organ-ted in 1911; it and the British Committee were virtu-ally one organization.

CLARA BRILLE.—We do not think that eyebcows that grow together denote a not temper. The only remedy for such trouble is to use a very small comb and keep the brown combed away from the center; do not attempt to remove the hair; any such attempt will serve to increase the growth.

Chena.—Make up your underwear, wrapper, blouse waits and tra-gown faring January. Later commence with the gawns, which should include a visiting costume, street gown, home cress, evening tellects and the white bengaline wedding dress trimmed with chiffor ruffles and pearl passementeric.

Mrs- Macouri T.—One of your hair and complexion may were cardinal of a deep shade, old rose, yellow, clear deek green, narry bite, lan, red and golden-berwen. Wear the "bell" skirt, high sleeves and pointed con-tails or coat basques as well as round waists, yekes, and full and plain fronts to your bellows.

Fun Signam - Your joint letter was well written, although it was an easy matter to discover where Let of Man and M. began. Golden-brown and gray, many blue and grees, plum and chandron are some of the contrast that you may adopt for gawns, also yetlow and Nile, pink and blue, cream and mance.

EVERUM.—A letter of your date could not be answered in the "next issue." Combine the silk with velvet and Henrictia of a darker shade, using the velvet for revers, coilar and deep gauntiet outh. Have a "belt" skirt of the silk and high sleeves with a coal basque of Henrictia. A silk ruffle or hand of velvet as a skirt border.

Say Jose.—You should wear bright colors, avoiding all neutral tints. Black is soo old for a girl of eighteen. You should meet certainly acknowledge a basket of flowers sent you by a gentleman. Make your note format, but polits, and be careful to word it so that he may have no excuse for continuing the correspondence by a recen-

HOUSEKEEPER.—Use furniture portiers and curtains that harmonize but not match. Out rose, gold, of bites, copper. Nile and pale blue are important effects in up-holstery. Cover matche-topped tables. Bress a house maid in seal brown or navy bites gowns, with white apron, collar and cap. Art squares and rugs rather than all over carpets.

Africke L.—When with any young girl sek yourself this question: "Am I treating her as I would wish any young man to treat my sister?" If you can answer that question in the affirmative, you may know that you are behaving like a grotteman. Would you like any man to kies your sister after seeing her home? We do not think you would.

Nallers.—Simple remedies for a poor complexion are plenty of soan and water, plenty of firsth air and plenty of plain, wholesome fact. Here early, and if you have no becase-work to attend to, take a brisk walk before breakfast, and for breakfast out fruit, and either fish or broiled ment, and break as to at a day old. Do not drink tea, coffee or chorolate, and avoid hot cakes of all sorts.

shops all day to retain as far as possible their good looks is far them to walk to and from business, to avoid their good looks is far them to walk to and from business, to avoid their good and anything which may keep them up lais at night, and to try and areasge some way in which they can have a substantial item hat stoon. And above all, let them try to be happy at their work. Contentment is the best medicine.

CONSTANT READER.—The title "Esquire" does not properly belong to any person in this country any more than any other title: still, it is much used, and there would be nothing wrong about the address "Frank Smith, Soq." In writing a postal it is always well to make it as general as postals and to avoid all terms of orderment. It is not at all recessary to give refreshments to either morning or afternoon callers.

Manan,—The gentleman should always be introduced to the lady, and the younger lady to the older one in some such form as this: "Mrs. — allow me to present to you say friend Mr. — or Miss —" "Sleeping with the mouth opes is a very common habit and one which it is not so easy to break; it is sometimes aggravated by a poorly-ventilated bedroom, and great care should be taken that the sleeping apartment is kept well filled with fresh air by having the wholess open at the ton. at the top.

Manuteners.—A good way to develop any part of the body is to take regular exercise. Girls who follow a course of physical culture find their shoulders much breadened and their busts much developed by systematic exercise. Going up and doors stairs slowly, and holding the benefit of the body error while doing so, is said to be benefitial. We would advise you to discontinue the excent buller, and to try collectionle exercises of some sort. Do not tire yourself the first day, go slowly and we think that you will servely succeed in improving your figure. Try and to make the processions of any defects you may have; that is often the surest way to correct them.

BERTHAC.—We do not think your writing in the slightest degree mascadine. Trim the serge house dress with black velvet corselet, collar, cufs and skirt border. Bedi" skirt, bodder, collar, cufs and skirt border. Bedi" skirt, bodder pointed in the back, corselet in front, and high sleeves. Orecen velvet tooks well on gray Henrietta, but if you need a quantity of the material get a gray or gray and green plaid, and then use green velvet accessories. Have a "beli" skirt of the red and swar with a black surah blosse or cloth cost or a plained blosse of surah of the same color. Have a black hal for all gowse, or golden-brown is equally as fashionable, and may be were with any color.

ALLES.—A weaking invitation should not be allowed to go unnoticed. A card enclosed in an envelope sent by mail is a sufficient arewor. If you wish to send regets do so in some such form as the following: "Mrs.—reprets entremely that a prior engagement will prevent her from accepting the invitation of Mr. and Mrs.—to be present at the marriage of their daughter on—." Write out the dates in full, and piece your address and the date in the lower left-hand corner of the sheet of paper upon which your note is written. It is not necessary to acknowledge as "at home" card; shuply go on the day pamed, and if unable to go send your card by mail.

by mail.

F. E. D.—In this country it is considered quite proper for ladies to ask gentieroen to act as their eworts to places of amusement, provided they firmish the between We would not advise a young girl to ask a gentierman to take her to evening service at a neighboring church; it is always wont to allow the young men to do the esting. Any young man who objects to a girl dancing with other young men, when the is not his betrothed, is unreasonable, and does not deserve consideration. Engaged non-active, if they are dancing men consider it quite proper for their fancés to dance with other men. A girl with but eyes and light-brown hair can hardly easily so called a brunette.

called a brunette.

ORRENTE,—The sample you enclose is rather dark for a bridesmald's gown; still, it might be brightened up with a crimson silk or velvet vest and collar and cuffs. A large but is more appropriate as a welding than a small one. It is perfectly proper for the bride's sister and brether to act as bridesmald and best man. It is unstemary for the groun; to choose his most ischmate friend for his best man, and if the bride's brother stands to blun in that light it is quite proper for him to be chosen. At any shop they will show you pretty and issepectate actives suitable for weaking presents. Silver is always a nice present, and any small piece is always appreciated.

Presents should be sent to the bride before the weaking and marked with her initials.

and marked with her initials.

Mus. C. H. M.—(i) You can use lavender oil only in mixing the chins paints, but the odor of this is very strong, and affects many people even more disagreeably than tarpeatine. Alcohol may be used for riusing the trushes in this case, as to employ the oil for such a purpose would be wastefully extravagant. (2) After once grinding the color up with turpentine (where the latter is used), it is sufficient to moiston it with invender oil, as it dries upon the palette. It is wheat for those who dislike the smell of turpentine to procure the mineral water colors, which are perpared in such a way that water is substituted for the turpentine in thinning them. They require more careful drying before being sent to the Klin than the ordinary paints, but otherwise are easy to manage. They may be used together with the Lacroix colors, the brushes and polettes being kept separate, however, not therefore, if expense is on object, may gradually be acquired, as the old tubes are used up.

Maner.—We think a dress bottoned at the back more styllsh for a little girl than one bottoned in frent. A nice present for a boy of eight would be a fainty top, or a box of building blocks, or several boxes of toy soldlers. Each semetime stop singing because they are over-fed, and because they are not bong in the sunshins. Do not give your bird any segar to coasionally put a piece of Iron in the draking water. Keep the cage in a warm place and out of all draughts. A black serge gown looks prettilly made up with a bright plaid or bright crimeon triming. A blue cloth jarket would do nively trimmed with your blue Astrachan. Your mother would doubtless like best for her Christmas gift from you a piece of your own work. Table make, carving cloths, doylies are always neceptable gifts. Give your brother a book or a pretty picture for his reom. A dark green cost would go alorely with your green gown. You might have it faced with red. Try sait water for your lark, weeking it in a week solution once or twice a week.

B. C. W.—Your difficulty is not in the least surrorising.

week.

R. C. W.—Your difficulty is not in the least surprising, as it is extremely hard to paint a thickly weeded landscape in water-culcus. The reason, probably, that you have seen so few pictures representing dense insees of foliage is that such subjects are not by any means always the most artistic and picturesque, and also that artists of more experience are less spit to set themselves such difficult tasks as amateurs are ready to undertake. This kind of scenery is more easily managed in oils. If you do attempt it in water-colors, study exceledly the tree diffigult and stade, without alming for more detail than you can see. Hemesakes that the foliage is dothed upon a skeleton of trunk, branches and twigs, not suggest their form. Make single studies of trees, althoughouty in black and white, would be presently helpful to you in learning how to represent their various characteristics. What you aim at is not by say means an impossibility, but it must be the result of long practice and experience, with many a failure by the way.

Less.—We do not assessed mostions as to the value of perience, with many a failure by the way.

Ina.—We do not asswer questions as to the value of delect. Prices for them vary, and are requisited by the degrand. We do not know hew you can get a light complexion if you have a dark one. A good way to become white and unbealintly is to keep out of the light and air, and eat nothing that would be nutritions. There is nothing more beautiful than a sirl with a good, row, healthy complexion, and we would advise you to chivate one by being in the wealight as much as possible, sleeping in a well-wentlisted room said avoiding all rich said indigestible food. Your hands may be kept in good condition by the use of ansecnted seap, and by rutholing into them at night a little glycerine and rose water. If your hands are stained use a little bemon julies, and if you have any rough work to do invest in a pair of rubber gives and wear them as much as possible. But always remember that nothing is more besoniful than a hand that leoks useful, and that any hand that is kept clean and is useful, will always be beaufilled than a hand that leoks useful, and that any hand that is kept clean and is useful, will always be benuiful. It is very singapoper for a young girl to accept presents from a gentleman to whom whe is not engaged.

BOOKS FOR BOYS BY HORATIO ALGER, JR.

Any one book given ara Premium for a Club of 2 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 2 Subscribers and 23 cents additional. Postage and packing, 12 cents extra. Price, 92 cents each, postpaid.

We give the titles below, and the books have been arranged in series. They are all 7x4% inches; bound in Cloth, ornamental covers and glit back stamp. All illustrated. Mr. Alger is probably as popular a writer of boys' stories as there is in all the land. He bounded into the favor of the lads when he wrote "Ragged Dick-the Newsboy," and he has held his place there ever since. His books are of the rousing, rattling, open-air order, and they are filled with bealthful, racy narrative, and with sparkle, vim and adventure from beginning to end.

He teaches them wholesome lessons, and teaches them so pleasantly, one is never aware of the teach ing until it is all over, and the story stands out plainly and impressively from the parrative. His heroes are invariably worthy of emulation; they are always bright, manly, courageous and conscientious. How many boys would be interested to know whether Mr. Alger's heroes were taken from real. live boys?

At our request be has written for us an article on this subject. We have printed it in a fittle book which we send to every boy ordering one of the following list:

RAGGED DICK SERIES:

Hagged Dick; or, Street Life in New York. Fame and Fortune; or, The Progress of Richard Hunter. Mark, the Match Boy.

Bough and Ready : or, Life Among the New York Newsboys.

Ben, the Luggage Boy; or, Among the Wharves. Rufus and Rose; or, The Fortunes of Rough and Ready.

TATTERED TOM SERIES-A continuation of

"Ragged Dick" Series: Tattered Tom; or, The Story of a Street Amb. Paul the Peddler; or, The Adventures of a Young Street Merchant.

Phil the Fiddler: or. The Young Street Musician. Slow and Sure; or, from the Sidewalk to the Shop. Julius: or, The Street Boy Gut West. The Young Outlaw; or, Adrift in the World. Sam's Chance, and How He Improved It.

BRAVE AND BOLD SERIES:

Brave and Bold; or, The Story of a Factory Boy, Jack's Ward; or, The Boy Guardian. Shifting for Himself; or, Gilbert Greyson's For-

Wait and Hope; or, Ben Bradford's Motto.

LUCK AND PLUCK SERIES:

Luck and Pluck : or, John Oakley's Inheritance, Sink or Swim; or, Harry Raymond's Resolve. Strong and Steady; or, Paddle Your Own Canoe. Strive and Succeed; or, The Progress of Walter Conrad.

Try and Trust; or, The Story of a Bound Boy. Bound to Rise; or, How Harry Walton rose in the World. Risen From the Ranks; or, Harry Walton's Suc-

Herbert Carter's Legacy; or, The Inventor's Son.

CAMPAIGN SERIES: Frank's Campaign. Paul Prescott's Charge.

Charlte Codman's Cruise. ATLANTIC SERIES: The Young Circus Rider. Do and Dare.

Hector's Inheritance.

the Plains.

Helping Himself. PACIFIC SERIES. The Young Adventurer; or, Tom's Trip Across

The Young Miner; or, Tom Nelson in California. The Young Explorer; or, Among the Sterras. Ben's Nugget: or, A. Boy's Search for Fortune.

Luke Walton, The Chiengo Newsboy. Bob Burton, The Young Ranchman of Missouri. Price, 80 cents each. Postage and packing, 12 cents extra. The publishers' price for these books, as published in their catalogue, is $1.25.

CARBUNCLE SCARF-PIN No. 2904

Given as a Premium for a Club of 2 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Postage and packing, 10 cents extra. Price, 65 cents. peripaid.

This pin is of such a shape and character as to be available for use either by a lady as a bounctpin, or as a scarf-pin for a gentleman. The design is attractive, being a cluster of oxidized silverplate rings; the setting is a Car-

The quality of the plate is the same as on all the silver-plated jewelry we often-the very hest to be secured.

Price, 65 cents, including cost of postage and packing.

Digitized by Google

GIRLS WHO LOVE MUSIC

Are Offered Musical Educations at the Expense of

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

A YEAR or Six Months' tuition, without cost, at the best and most beautifully located Musical Conservatory in America. Instruction in either Vocal or Instrumental Music—or, in both.

It may include Board and Incidental Expenses, or Instruction only. The offers are very attractive and most liberal.

There is no element of competition. Every one stands an equal chance, and a girl in a small village has the same opportunity as another living in a large city.

No one loses anything by trying. A Cash Commission may, at any time, be taken for all subscribers secured.

Is there a girl with musical aspirations, who desires to acquire perfection in her chosen art, who will not eagerly jump at an opportunity of securing, for a very little work (say 115 subscribers), a course of careful Conservatory Training in an Institution offering the unrivalled advantages of a cultured home-training amid a musical atmosphere and under the best instructors?

This offer was first made in April, 1891, to expire January, 1892. The unusual success of the plan, the large number of successful girls, and their continued requests that we allow them to continue to send lists of subscribers in order that they might extend their terms of residence at the Conservatory; the prospect of disappointing hundreds of girls who, commencing late in the year, have not secured the full number of subscribers before January, 1892, has led us to make arrangements to extend the time.

We have not sufficient space here to explain the most popular and successful Premium ever offered to the Many girls have been successful and are now ready to enter the Conservatory; others have already partially completed their year of study. Over five hundred more are busily at work, and, if we judge by their letters, feel certain of success.

If YOU are interested, a full explanation of the plan in all its details with advice and offers of assistance will be mailed to any girl addressing

OUR NEW 75-PIECE ROYAL DINNER AND TEA-SET

Given as a Premium for a Club of 25 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 20 Subscribers and $1.25; or, 25 Subscribers and $2.50; or, 20 Subscribers and $2.75 additional. Price, $10. Sent, carefully packed, by Freight, charges to be paid by the receiver.

Consists of the following pieces (in dishes, each piece counts one—for instance, Teapot and Cover count two pieces): I Covered Vegetable Dish, is Breakfast Plates, I Bowl, is Individual Butters, I Teapot and Cover (2 pieces): a Butter Plates (5 in.), I Pickle Plate, is Tea-cups, 2 Bread Plates (8 in.), I Sugar-bowl and Cover (2 pieces), I Meat Plate (18 in.), I Sugar-bowl and Cover (2 pieces), I Meat, I Sugar-bowl and Cover (2 pieces), I Meat, I Cream Pitcher.

This set is a fresh importation. It is an English underglaze decoration on white granite body. The design is first placed on the body of the ware and then covered with the glaze and burned in.

placed on the body of the ware and then covered with the glaze and burned in.

The design thus becomes a part of the goods, and it is impossible to remove it. The decorations are beautiful sprays of Ivy in a soft delicate brown scattered gracefully over the various pieces.

The retail price of this set is $15.00. To any of our patrons who do not wish to raise a club of subscribers and receive it as a premium, we can offer a very decided bargain. On receipt of $10.00 we will send one of these sets, carefully packed, by freight, charges to be paid by the receiver.

Each set will be carefully packed by an experienced packer. If, through careless handling on the part of the milroad company into whose hands it may be intrusted, one of the pieces should be broken, we shall not consider ourselves responsible.—We do not guarantee deliveries.

TRIPLICATE TOILET-MIRROR No. 245

Given as a Premium for a Club of 3 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 5 Subscribers and $1.00 additional. Price, $2.25. Must be sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver.

This Triplicate-Mirror is handsome and very desirable. The size of No. 245, extended, is 29 x 10 inches. There are Three Beveled Mirrors (8 inches square), hinged in such a manner that a lody can arrange her hair, either back or front, with the greatest case. It is an absolute necessity for the toilet. The frames are of Antique Oak, and the backs of Embossed Leatherette; Nickeled Chain and Hinges. Folded and closed, as it hangs on the wall, it is very handsome and ornamental.

Price of No. 245, $2.75, sent by Express, not prepaid.

TRIPLICATE-MIRROR, No. 423

We have another larger and finer Mirror, No. 423, The glasses are 10 inches square and the Mirror, extended measures 31 x 10% inches. The frames are of Carred Antique Oak, and the backs are Embossed Leather and Sik-Plush. Otherwise it is much the same as No. 245. Given as a Fremium for a Club of 13 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each; or, for 5 Subscribers and $2.00 additional.

Price, $4.00. - Either one must be sent by Express, charges to be paid by the receiver.

(BOUND IN ONE VOLUME)

Sent, postpaid, as a Premium for a Club of 2 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Price, 35 cents, postpaid.

The collection includes:

The Greatest Thing in the World
Pax Vobiscum The Changed Life
"First" How to Learn How
What is a Christian?

The Study of the Bible

The latest and, by far, the finest edition of these most wonderfully popular addresses. The two later ones have been added, making seven in all. It is printed on Cream Laid Paper. It is bound in a superbly elegant Byzantine style; in initiation of half-calf with silk rep covers ornamented in gold and colors; ornamental full-gilt back and gilt top.

Price, 55 cents, postpaid, including cost of postage and packing.

PORCELAIN SPRINKLERS

A pair sent postpaid, as a Previum for a Club of 2 Yearly Subscribers at $1.00 each. Price, 40 cents each, postpaid

These Sprinklers are unusually pretty.

The body is of white porcelain, attractively decorated in gold and colors. The tops are gilt and silverplate. In ordering single Sprinklers do not omit to state whether a Pepper or a Salt-Sprinkler is desired, as the tops differ.

Price, 80 cents per pair, postpaid.

In ordering by mail these, or any other small goods, it should be remembered that all mail packages go at the risk of the purchaser unless the same are insured. It costs but a trifle to provide for Mail Insurance, and in case of loss we replace the goods.

PANELS IN OIL

Many Students in the great Art Schools of Munich and other European cities, partially provide for their academic expenses by pointing small panels in oil.

These are eagerly seized by experters, sent to this country, framed and sold very low. The new tariff laws, however, have greatly increased the prices. The Premium Department of The Larges' Home Jouenal has a quantity imported under the old tariff regulations. Write for particulars.

GOOD NEWS FOR ALL. Crab Apple Blossom Perfume

INVIGORATING LAVENDER

Annual Sale Over 300,000 Bottles. WHAT LONDON, PARIS AND NEW YORK SAY OF THEM

"Chief among the fashionable scents is 'Crab Apple Blossoms, delicate periume of highest quality; one of the choicest ever pro-need."—Court Journal.

this chart is the delight of two continents, and refreshment to thousand processing the delight of two continents, and refreshment to thousand process; are daily bringing pleasure, comfort, health and refreshment to thousand pleasure, comfort, health and refreshment to thousand pleasure, compared to the second pleasure of the second pleasure LAVENDER SALTS.

Indicates the CASWELL, MASSEY & CO., New York, and stamps or P. O. Order for either of the above articles to CASWELL, MASSEY & CO., New York, and the ETCALF & CO., or MELVIN & RADGER, of Reston, or GEORGE B. EVANS, Philadelphia, and the cordered will be sont at once, posquald, to any address. The targest sizes are the most advantageous ordered will be sont at once, posquald, to any address. The targest sizes are the most advantageous arrested insting quality of this delicious scent renders it more economical in use than the cheaper tarkable insting quality of this delicious scent renders it more economical in use than the cheaper

Send 50 cents, and a full-size tablet of the NEW CRAB APPLE BLOSSOM TOILET SOAP with be sent sentrated caskes, postpoid, to any address. Sold by all dealers in perfumery. At wholesale by McKES. & ROBBINS, HALL & BUCKEL, PARK & TILFORD, W. H. SCHIEFFELIN & CO., MUNBO & DWIN, New York, and all leading wholesale druggists.

THE CROWN PERFUMERY CO., 177 New Bond Street, London.

ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS

ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS are the great external remedy of the day. The quickest, safest, surest, best. Not only immeasurably superior to all other plasters, but also to liniments, ointments, oils and similar unctuous compounds.

Beware of imitations, and do not be deceived by misrepresentation. Ask for Allcock's, and let no solicitation or explanation induce you to accept a substitute.

Itching Skin Humors

Torturing, Disfiguring Eczemas

And every species of itching, burning, bleeding, scaly, crusted, pimply, and blotchy skin and scalp diseases are relieved in the majority of cases by a single application, and speedily, permanently and economicali, cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES when the best physicians, hospitals, and all other remedies fail. No language can exaggerate the suffering of those afflicted with these diseases, especially of little babies, whose tender skins are literally on fire.

Remedies are the greatest skin cures, blood purifiers, and humor remedies of modern times, are absolutely pure, and agreeable to the most sensitive, and may be used on the youngest infant and most delicate invalid with gratifying and unfailing success.

CUTICUBA, the great skin cure, instantly allays the most intense inching, burning, and inflammation, permits rest and sleep, heals raw and irritated surfaces, cleanses the scalp of crusts and scales, and restores the hair. CUTICURA SOAP, the only medicated toilet soap, is indispensable in cleansing diseased surfaces. CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new blood and skin purifier and greatest of humor remedies, cleanses the blood of all impurities, and thus removes the cause. Hence, the CUTICURA REMEDIES cure every humor of the skin, scalp, and blood, with loss of hair.

300 Blocases, 30 Hustranona, 100 Testimonials. A book of prioriess value to every sufferer.
COTICURA RESERVENT, $1. Prepared by POTTER DRUG & CHEMICAL CORP'S, BOSON, U. S. A.

Pimply Skin red, rough hands, painful finger ends and shapeless radis are prevented and curred by Cuttleura Sonny, in comparably the greatest of skin purifiers and beautifiers, while rivalling in delicacy and surpassing in puricy the most expensive of toilet and nursery soaps. The only medicated toilet and purples, blackheads, rough, red, and only skin, and simple humors of inflants.

SPOONS and FORKS means they are plated three times heavier on the three points most exposed to wear as shown above. THESE GOODS ARE IN THE STOCK OF EVERY FIRST-CLASS DEALER.

"FAMOUS DAUGHTERS" ISSUE

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR

JUST AMONG OURSELVES - - EVERYTHING ABOUT THE HOUSE ALL ABOUT FLOWERS - - QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS -

PHILADELPHIA, FEBRUARY, 1892

TEN CENTS A COPY

For February, 1892	-13	Vol.	IX,	No.	3
Markey Company		2060			P.	GE
THE LOVE OF AN AMERICAN GIRL - IDustrated by C. R. Grant and Aller Barber Step	dens.	Ro	se Ha	wthorne	Lathrop	1
THE TRAINING OF CHILDREN	*		Mary	Harriso	n McKee	2
UNKNOWN WIVES OF WELL-KNOWN M XIV—MRS. LELAND STANFORD— *	EN-	3) •	•	• Eth	el Ingalls	3
FACES WE SELDOM SEE—  1-A GLIMPSE OF KATE GREENAWAY		Eth	el Ma	ckenzie	McKenna	3
WHAT MY FATHER TAUGHT US -				Mami	e Dickens	4
A PRINCESS FAIR (Poem)			7		d Howells
STRAY GLIMPSES OF THACKERAY -			Anne '		y Ritchie
THE QUEENS OF WESTMINSTER ABBEY	1—Y				. Bradley
HOME DAYS WITH FATHER		Gabr	ielle (	Greeley (	Clendenin	6
SOME FACTS ABOUT THE MOON -					Proctor
A WOMAN IN THE RANKS -		Clea			Thackara
WHEN TO WEAR DIAMONDS -		-		Florenc:	Marryat	6
WISHING (Poem)	•				Richards
COUNTRY MAIDS AND CITY WIVES -	-				ve Elliott
THE CHILDHOOD OF MY MOTHER -		•	- 11	orence r	iowe Hall	7
WOMEN'S CHANCES AS BREAD-WINNE	RS-			210770000		- NACLA
XB-WOMEN ON THE STAGE					avenport
THE GIRL WHO SITS IN FRONT -	*	-			ide Banks
MANDOLIN PLAYING FOR WOMEN -		-	٠,		ara Lanza
THE GIRL WHO STUDIES ABROAD—I SCHOOL-GIRL LIFE IN PARIS	. 5	L.			nne Davis ing Dana
A WOMAN'S WARDROBE IN PARIS -	9		con tien		a Hector
HOW A WOMAN'S COLLEGE BEGAN					Gladstone
BETWEEN MOTHER AND DAUGHTER					H. Dodge
HOW TO SPOIL A HUSBAND		Ch	ristine	Terhun	e Herrick	10
WOMEN WHO ARE BEST LOVED -		-			re Bunce
THE BROWNIES THROUGH THE YEAR-	_V			- P2	lmer Cox	11
AT HOME WITH THE EDITOR-
THE TRAINING ) Julia Ward Howe				eenwood	ı
OF DAUGHTERS Adeline D. T. Whitn	ey	Mrs		kander		1000
PROM A NEW INVESTAND	higren	ME			Beecher
FROM A NEW INKSTAND THE KING'S AUGHTERS		-			Burdette
UNDER MY STUDY LAMP	10	- P			Bottome Talmage
SIDE TALKS WITH GIRLS	. 38				Ashmore
SIDE TALKS WITH BOYS					er Coates
IN LITERARY IRCLES-
WHAT MAKES LITERARY SUCCESS -			Jessie	Benton	Fremont	18
THE TALENT OF READING WISELY .		- S	usan l	renimore	e Cooper	18
ART FOR ART WORKERS		-			Haywood
MOTHERS' CORNER	•	Eli	sabeth		on Scovil
ARTISTIC NEEDLEWORK	-			Mary	F. Knapp	21
HINTS ON HOME DRESSMAKING - FASHIONS IN MOURNING GOODS )			- 1	Emma M	. Hooper	22 23
SMALL BELONGINGS OF DRESS S DAINTY UNDERWEAK IN VOGUE		*	•	Isabel A	. Mallon
JUST AMONG OURSELVES				- Aunt	Patience	26

FEBRUARY

BY VIRGINIA WOODWARD CLOUD

THE world lies hushed in white, Field and hollow and hill; The forest grim hath a purple rim And the river's heart is still. Then hey for that dim hour fleet, Born of the day and the dark, When the hearth-flame red, doth leap to meet, Its far-off phantom spark!

And ho I for who comes nigh, With his yellow hair ablow! Is warmth and cheer for the traveller here, Or wilt thou bid him go? Nay, for he rideth to win,
With the young year bonny and bold;
Then open thy door, and let love in,
Good neighbor, from out the cold!

- Aunt Patience 26 - Maria Parloa 27 Eben E Rexford 28, 31

Mothers Should Give their CHILDREN
DR. WILBOR'S Compound of PURE COD LIVER (IIL

WITH PHOSPHATES.

Absolutely Free from All Injurious Substances, LARGE BOTTLES, PRICE 25 CENTS. REFUSE SUBSTITUTES. PREPARED AND GUARANTEED BY E. W. HOYT & CO., LOWELL, MANN.

SAMPLE VIAL OF RUBIFOAM MAILED FREE TO ANY AD TRESS

ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS

Allcock's Porous Plasters have attained a world-wide reputation solely upon their superlative merits. They have many would-be rivals, but have never been equaled or even approached in curative properties and rapidity and safety of action. Their value has been attested by the highest medical authorities, as well as by unimpeachable testimonials from those who have used them, and they are recommended as the best external remedy for Weak Back, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Colds, Coughs, Sore Throat, Chest and Stomach Affections, Kidney Difficulties, Weak Muscles, Strains, Stitches, and Aches and Pains of every description.

Beware of imitations, and do not be deceived by misrepresentation. Ask for Allcock's and let no solicitation or explanation induce you to accept a substitute.

Metal Tipped.

Will Not Cut Through.

See Name "EVER READY" on Buck of Each Stay. Manufactured by the YPSILANTI DRESS STAY MFC. CO., Ypsilanti, Mich. If you want any Piano the first step is to send your address for our Catalogue. A safe step and costs but a cent.

WE TELL YOU what dealer can supply you, or we ship piano on approval ourselves, no risk to you.

OUR BARGAINS AND SECOND-HANDS offer facilities interesting to many. Drop us a line.

Ivers & Pond Piano Co.,

GEO. P. BENT, MANOGERACTIONER, CHICAGO, U. S. A.

Tene, Elegant Designs, Superio Workmanship, and Great Durability. BOLD ON EASY TERMS.

Old instruments taken in exchange. Write for catalogue and full information.

170 Trement St., Boston, Mass.

Sent on Free Test Trial Anywhere IT WILL COST YOU NOTHING To Get Our Beautiful New Plano $100 Catalogue and it will Save You

It does not matter where you live, you can have an Organ or Piano sent you on trial before; you pay one cent of the purchase money, and if it is not satisfactory, it may be returned at our expense. Don't Delay! o or ORGAN CATALOGUE. Old Established WASHINGTON, and Retiable. New Jersey. ORNISH & CO.

POWERS AUTOMATICALLY CONTROLS THE TEMPERATURE REGULATOR

Agents, to whom exclusive herritory is given. We can prove above statusent if you will address
THE WORGESTER FIRE APPLIANCE CO., (Incorporated), WORGESTER, MASSWe have other Money Making Specialties.

AS far ahead of all A others as the Elec-tric Light excels the candle, Seven Walls to preserve the Ice. Air-tight Locks, Dry Cold Air. Hardwood Antique finish. Elegant designs, Sideboards or bination, if desired.

Beyond question the most perfect Refrigerator made.

Send for Catalogue. We pay freight where we have Northern Refrigerator Co.

Feathers and Feather Pillows AND IN PERFECT CONDITION IF YOURS DOES NOT, WHITE

Free from ODOR, DUST and QUILLS ALL PIRET-CLASS DEALERS HERP THEM. THE COLD BLAST FEATHER CO. CHICAGOE D Google

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

Vol. IX, No. 3

PHILADELPHIA, FEBRUARY, 1892

Yearly Subscription, One Dollar Single Copies, Ten Cents

THE LOVE OF AN AMERICAN GIRL

By Rose Hawtborne Lathrop DAUGHTER OF NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE

W HAT are you going to do," said Hazle-teen, "when your uncle dies?" Bessie Donald looked up at him looked up at him with the half-smiling reproach which means that one has been very brutal indeed.

"He has told me that when he dies he wishes me to go to Europe," she answered, in a moment, for she always answered always answered a question considerately, no matter how little right a person had to put it. "He knows I want to study painting, and so he makes this plan for me. I fear—I know—"her voice faltered, with premonitory dread—"that I shall never have another friend like Uncle Jerry!"

Jerry!"
"No," responded Hazleteen, in his sympathetic way, which was a solemn way that came over him when unyone touched a note of tender feeling. "No; your uncle is a good Bessie looked up again at her companion, saying to nerseit that he, too, was very good as well as handsome; and that was something more than poor old bald Uncle Jerry was. Hazleteen (they were walking in the garden, a network of bachelors' buttons and nasturtiums, and so forth, all vigorous together) reached up to a flowering tree and bent down a branch to smell of it. But a bee flew out at him and made him start, and speak sharply,

"I had nearly braced myself to say something from my heart to you, Bessie," he ejacu-lated, "But it is harder to hold one's innermost thoughts to view than I had supposed.
And yet—I will say it, after all! It has seemed to me that your position, when your only relative dies, will be peculiarly sad and lenely. It has seemed to me that it would be very sweet to ask you to turn to me, your playmate and friend for so many years, for protection

The girl stopped in the fragrant path as if the tangle of blooms hindered her; but she trembled.

Hazleteen caught her hand and kissed it, "John!" she marmared,

"But oh, my dear," he went on, "you have not known how it has been with me at Washington in the two years since we last met! I have become engaged to marry some one else, Bessie! and now you know my heart, dear, as I, myself, know it!"

She was taken unawares; she turned full upon him, and with her free hand seized his arm, and gazed in agony into his face. She and he had always been close friends as schoolmates and village youngsters; feeling an added feeling an added bond, moreover, be-cause it was known that Uncle Jerry had remained single on account of his unsuccessful court-ship of Hazleteen's mother, who later in life had returned to the village and been treated with brotherly devotion by the old man. Ressie had grown to love Hazleteen with an extreme and cloudless love; yet she had never—so gentle and humble was she—she had never believed that he would care for her enough to ask her to be his wife. She thought she had detected in his cordial admiration of her a chill of self-pos-session which was fatal to the great tenderness which alone would satisfy her. But to have him confess a deep sentiment for her, and in the same moment say that he belonged to an-other—this was a woe more terrible than even his indifference would have been; her honest heart shrank from such a disorder of the fin-heart shrank from such a disorder of the finest impulses.

"Bessic." Hazleteen sighed, as she looked at him, while he seemed the very picture of a hero, "I have long loved you with all my soul; I felt that, by-and-bye, as you grew to be the woman you are now, I should tell you of it, and win you for my wife. Then came the whirl of the outside world, and the day of folly. A gay, fascinating, fair creature crossed my path and enthralled me; and then I thought my love for you was a mistake! I come to tell you how my fate had turned out; and now that I see you again the madness clears away, and I confess you to be the loveliest woman I ever knew! But I am homod; my earlier hope is held in check by my fealty to another; a strong fealty, Bessie, for better or for worse. My life is doomed to an enforced duty!"

His words cut Bessie's sensitive being like sword-strokes, for she believed that his sedome.

being like sword-strokes, for she believed that his solemn accents came from a tenderness as great as her own; and her whole comhim, and her desire was to feel that his life was not to be wrecked; that it was to be as rejoicing a life as any one's ever had been.

"Oh, John," she cried, in her low, earnest voice, "you must learn that this, this fancy for me is the mistake, and that the bright, beautiful girl you have chosen is really the right wife for you. You are so full of ability and ambition that surely I should not have been able in the fashionable world, as she can! John, do not think that your life can be anything but great and splendid; there can be no defeat for such as you are!"

He kissed her forehead rever-ently, and the poor child thought herself blessed.

A voice was heard at a window, alling feebly, but cheerily, to Bessie and Hazleteen to "come up." It was Uncle Jerry Donald, summoning them from his arm-chair, for he was partly crippled. They obeyed his appeal at once, and were soon standing before him; and Bessie was pale and frightened of aspect. Old Jerry Donald's eyes, at any rate, were not crippled, and he stared a bit at his beloved niece, and then at Hazleteen, and finally remarked:

"You two seemed to be pretty confidential, down there. But now you are afraid of each other, and of me into the bargain."

"I was telling,"—began Hazleteen.

"He was telling me," interrupted Bessie, 'that he is engaged to be married. But you called us before he had revealed the name, my dear uncle—the name of the woman John has chosen! She is very lovely and accomplished, and that is what John will need her to be when he goes to London with the legation."

All this might be as true as possible, but old Donald was silent. He gave a flash of the eye to Hazleteen, and then lowered his hid, and his lips never opened. As long as she lived, Bessie remembered that silence of Uncle Jerry's; and it always was to her the most impressive moment of her existence. It was by that silence that he conveyed to Hazleteen that he was a scoundrel, and to Bessie that her future was to be very sad.

"Well," said Jerry Donald, at hat, lifting his white head; "the sooner John Hazleteen joins his legation, and goes to London, the better!"

"Thank you, sir!" the young man cried, fiercely, "I will begin my journey by leaving joins his legation, and goes to London, the better!"

"Thank you, sir!" the young man cried, fiercely, "I will begin my journey by leaving your house." And turning on his heel the young diplomat stepped out of the room, casting only a parting glance at Bessie.

"Why did you speak harshly to John, uncle?" Bessie asked, tremulously. "What should we do if he never came back to us?"

"Why should we care whether he comes or not?" cried the old man. "You know very well, Bess, that he has made love to you for years! Perhaps he did so because he thought you'd be rich one of these days when I died off and left you my little pile; perhaps he has decided now that I am going to live too long to make my pile of use to him in his fine career! Go and take the pictures of him down that you have about the cottage; we don't want a rogue's poetrait in our modest house. John Hazleteen is too much of a diplomat already, Bess; don't you ever trust him again." John Hazleteen is too much of a diplomat al-ready, Bess; don't you ever trust him again." He grasped her shoulder, and suddenly ex-claimed in a deep whisper: "Don't you ever trust him with the care of your money, my poor girl, when I am dead! but I'll take it from those lawyers, and fix it sofe and close in the hands of Mark White; he, at least, is an honest man."

honest man."

"Uncle, how can you be so angry with John," Bessie sobbed, kneeling down and hiding her face on the old man's arm. "You accuse him, just because he falls in love with a beautiful woman, of being dishonest! Oh, I will never let such a cruel thought haunt me for one moment!"

"Bessie, Bessie! you are indeed a fool when it comes to dealing with the world," her uncle plaintively faltered. "You're too good to fight it out with 'em, dear. You'll be the

That day Jerry Donald died.

That day Jerry Donald died.

The next morning Hazleteen came to see Bessie; and he brought with him a very lovely young woman, of matchless presence and clothed with the utmost elegance.

"Bessie," Hazleteen gently declared, "we have come to take you to our hearts, if you will. This is my wife, Bessie. I did not tell you yesterday of my marriage, because I thought there would be more time to break it to you, though we all realized that Uncle Jerry's last hour was near."

A self-congratulatory light blazed in the young man's eyes, notwithstanding his soft accents. Some plan of his was succeeding.

young man's eyes, notwithstanding his soft accents. Some plan of his was succeeding. "You see, we were married suddenly, because of the legation's departure for London. We start less than a month from now. Edwina wants you to come with us. You will find that she is very good, Bessie; far too good for noe, although Uncle Jerry did me hardly justice, yesterday, rest his soul!"

Bessie Donald shook like a leaf, and Hazleteen's young wife broke through her fashionable manner, and put her arm about the girl's waist, and kissed her. "I'm fond of you already; the first glance is enough to make one love you!" Hazleteen's wite said, generously. "I hope you will look upon us as very true friends; for John's marriage shall never make him forget your long conspanionship together as playmates."

In Bessie's eyes tears gathered and mirrored the light which fell upon her sweet face. But the end of it all was that she bade farewell to the old-fashioned bouse and the old-fashioned flowers, and went out into the world with Edwina and John, and thought that for-

But the end of it all was that she bade farewell to the old-fashioned house and the old-fashioned flowers, and went out into the world with Edwina and John, and thought that fortune had been very kind to her, as fortune went, for obscure and humble people.

Mark White, whom Uncle Jerry had thought faultless, brought her a bunch of delicately-pink arethuses to take with her when she left the village where she had always lived. He was the young lawyer of the place, and had offered himself to Bessie some time before, and been rejected. She remembered how Uncle Jerry had said that he should put her money affairs into Mark's keeping. But that was arranged differently.

She had decided to let John see to it, with the more willingness because of her uncle's strange resentment and distrust. John had said that thirty thousand dollars was not very much, and that he could make it a more imposing sum if she would let him do as well with it as he could with his own. And then she would grow to be a desirable match, and have the pleasure of refusing some of the most charming men in England.

When John made such humorous speeches as the above, Bessie Donald said to herself that the world was trying hard to a joil him; but she refused to admit that it had succeeded.

the world was trying hard to spoil him; but she refused to admit that it had succeeded.

In London John's wife made quite a sensa-tion. She entertained well, and she sang with positive brilliancy. And she had a dainty little shadow of a companion always at her side, who would have been a beauty if she had been a trifle vain, and who were asthetic covers like a Boughton.

had been a trifle vain, and who were esthetic gowns like a Boughton.

The painters soon picked out Bessie Donald for her artistic personality; and her talent for painting, which was true and thorough like everything else about her, made her doubly welcome in their studios. She had half a dozen offers, which she quietly put aside; and she came to be known as Little Goody No-Heart, though that was recognized as an absurdly inadequate name. She did not love these men who offered their estates, their princely incomes, to her, and she was too much of an American girl to give her hand where of an American girl to give her hand where her heart was not. And then—well, she often wondered, and would linger long over letters which came occasionally to her from America, with the postmark of her village home. True, the letters breathed nothing but friendship, but how dear that friendship seemed to have grown to her of late!

grown to her of late!

At all this, handsome, plausible John Hazle-teen hurriedly laughed, turning to "affairs," as if no one's life mattered much but his own.

" John, I want three thousand dollars!"

But a year or so later there came a sort of parenthesis in the ordinary routine, when Bessie told him that she wanted to speak very particularly with him. She stood beside a blooming trange-tree in the breakfast-room, a ray of smilight falling over it, and touching ray of sunsight falling over it, and touching also, her supi-green, chimosilk dress.

"Come, then, Bess, if you're real," Hazle-teen accorded, giving a flip to one of her high shoulder-putts, which looked like a butterfly.

"These queer, pretty, puckered clothes you wear make you seem a dream and hotbing more. And you are such a silent siren. But let us go to my workroom and talk, for a change."

When Hazleteen sat down at his big writ-ing table, as much as to say that he would give only two minutes to her communication before proceeding to the angest business papers near his hand, Bessie said, turning pale at his coldness and strangeness:

"John, I want three thousand dollars."

"What?" Hagleteen demanded.

"Just three thousand dollars, John. I want to do ever so much good with it. I am going to give it to William Leslie, the artist. He has never been to Italy, poor fellow, and his wife is threatened with consumption. I have ordered some pictures of him which he will do ordered some pletures of him which he will do about Italy, and so be consents to take the money, you know. And if it were not that Edwinn needs me I would go with them, I think, and see a few Raphaels, myself."

"My dear girl, you are crazy," was John Hazleteen's answer, as he broadly stared.

"Why? Don't say anything quite so crushing as that, Come, it is all settled with the Lesties; I have given them my word. And their trip must begin before the ugly March weather is here."

"Good granious, what authorization had weather is here."

"Good gradious, what authorization had you to go ahead in this wild manner before speaking to me?" cried Hazleteen, bastily.

"Why should not I? I am of age, John, if I do look and behave like a girl of sixteen!"

"Of age? Do you fling that in my face?" sneared Hazleteen. "Have we not given you a home as any sister and brother might, and advantages you never could have hoped for without us: and do you ask what right I have without us; and do you ask what right I have to give you advice, and attend to your money investments as I see fit?"

"Don't get out of patience with me," the girl faltered, kindly. "I owe a great deal to Ed-wina no I to you, and I hardly know how I can great make any advantage return. John. But ever make any adequate return, John. But this once I want to do some good to friends I love very much, although they are new friends. You see, you are not as intimate with the Leslies as I am; you do not realize how remarkable the man's groins is; and how he needs, and his sick wife needs, the visit to he needs, and his sick wife needs, the visit to Italy I want to give them!"

"Confound the genius of William Lertie?"
exclaimed Hazleteen, very red in the face,
"Let her Majesty send him to Italy if he would be such an ornament to English art, You can't have the money, Bessie. I am really frightfully busy to-day, and you are modelling up my ideas unmercifully."
"John?"

John. He shuddered.

"Stop speaking in that tone, Bess. To tell the truth, our expenses are many guinens beavier than I had any idea they would be. Your money is with ours, as agreed, and I am spending the income of it all, giving you what you want in reason, as you know, and all that. I can't just now disturb the bulk, or else I should get into a hole. You'll have to tell the Leslies you were a little too enthusias-

Bessie was asgentle as a lamb, but she was as honomble as a merchant prince of the high-as nonomore as a merchant prince of the high-est principles.

"I can't go back on my word," she replied.

"Uncle Jerry's niece shall never break the word of a Donald!"

Hazleteen sprang from his chair, and faced her. The real explanation of his reluctance to humor Bessie was that he had come to London and lived chiefly by the security of ther money. It was to fortify himself with the control of it that he had made pretty speeches to her in her old-fashioned garden, and insinuated himself into the care of her uncle's legacy. His return to the village had been a desperate resort for the making of his much-discussed career. So he faced her, pale ns herself.

"Bessie," he said, "shall you break the word of a Donald, or shall I stand before the word of a Donald, or shall I stand before the society of London as a ruined man?"

Horrible though his distress was to Bessie, it was partly acting. He had lifteen thousand of her money left; but he counted on it for two years more of genee, during which time he was to make his fortune by diplomatic acomen, havestment, and gradual cumulation.

The Book count down before him at his words, with that impotents weetness in agony which a soul without guile exhibits, north to the disgust of more turbulent and dramatic natures.

"Now, you need not be so sorry for me," said Hazleteen, lifting her up. "You once said that there was no such thing as defeat for a man like me; and I am sure of a brilliant financial step, since I am the very pet of the hig hankers here, for whom I can do a little turn in my line, in the hour of their need-that is a secret, though—and by whom I shall get well repoid. Why, Bess, hold up your head! I expect that we shall be rolling in riches before I have done." No doubt Hazleteen thought this. What a resource the future is for request!

is for regues!

"Oh John, it is not for fear of your worldly ruin! It is not because I loved and honored my newey that I would gladly die!" mouned the wrelebed girl. She slipped from the room, Stunning up to her chamber with pain in her eyes and dry sole, she harriedly took out the black dress which is he had worn six months before. She was a real and with her force.

fore. She put it on, and laid all her fancy dresses of smocked silk and mull upon her bed, rendy to be thrown away. She rang the bell to order her trank to be brought for pack-ing; and then thought over in her mind how she should tell Edwinn that she was going bome to America, and must have a few pounds to pay her passage. But what questions would Edwina ask? How could she be told that her husband was dishonest? What would the effect on her be? The young wife had always. been considerate, was always lovable, and de-served to be spared this blow. Bessie stood very still, thinking about Edwins; and when the maid answered the bell, the little black figure standing in the room like a dark ghost shook its head, and motioned with its band that the maid was to go away without an

In another moment Edwina entered, bringing a letter.

I thought I would convey this message to you, dear puss. It is some time since I drop-ped in to make you a call in your own quar-ters! But, Besse, why are you in that selemn

Because of a homesick feeling, Edwina; that's all. And, if you will not mind too much, I'll wear black ugain. I'm tired, tired of finery Bored by being one of the prettlest visions in Britain? But I am homesick, too, ray dear, and will not interfere with your whim, or with your memory of your Uncle Jerry." Edwina put herarm around Bessie's neck, and held the note up before her, with encouraging playfulness.

It was a word from Mrs. Leslie, telling Bessie that she and her husband had an hour before her writing been invited to go in Lady Mechlin's party to the south of France; and they thought seriously of doing so, instead of accepting Bessie's proposition of assistance for an Italian trip; since it would be a pleasure for Lady Mechlin to have their company, while Bessie's munificent offer was purely charitable.

What a relief! No dreadful revelation or mortifying excuse to make to the Leslies; no shameful disappointing of their hopes! The girl fairly smiled at this. She and Edwina went down the broad stairs arm in arm, meaning to have a chut over the drawing-room meaning to have a chat over the drawing-room fire in a couple of new-fashioned easy-chairs which they had purchased the previous day.

As they stood upon the threshold of the drawing room, giving each other the unpro-voked hug so grateful to women, they caught sight of Mark White, who had that instant come in, and who was ruefully examining his silk hat, which through an unlucky chance had hear relied in the London med had been rolled in the London mud.

A cry of delight burst from Bessie's lips, and she ran forward; and she and her fellow-villager chasped hands, for Mark bad been inspired to restore his bat to his head temporarily. in order to get it out of the way of their greet-ing. What a plain fellow be was! But something in his expression revealed to Bessie that her reading of faces had been very crude till

Edwina herself hardly knew Mark except by Bessie's affectionate report; yet she joined in the exclamations and welcomings which the latter showered upon him; and Mark smiled and smiled, and eventually admitted that he had come over to see whether Bessie was tired of England.

Edwina replied that they both were tired of it, but as the wife of a diplomat she must on her part stifle the trath. And then she excused herself for the moment, and departed with innocent grace.

After telling her the news of their village,
Mark White put some searching questions to Bessie as to how she was getting on; and hav-ing had an idea that sooner or later Hazleteen ing had an idea that sooner or later Hazleteen would mismanage her money, or otherwise neglect her interests—the young lawer was able to press his inquisitiveness so nearly that the girl had admitted a miserable distress before the was aware of it; and very soon Mark was able to fathom the whole story. The loss of her money, even if it were a permanent loss, he did not appear to mind at all. But he was very sorry for Bessie's shattered faith in her friend.

"It is right enough to trust neonle implicitly."

It is right enough to trust people implicitly "It is right enough to trust people implicitly, and with all one's strength," he remarked. "But it is never safe. Still, half faith in our companions makes cowards and culprits of us all the time, and I am glad you were so loyal to your old playmate. You have spent, let us say, thirty thousand dollars in one of the best forms of charity, Bessie; and now you must begin dispensing some other kind of charity. Suppose you dole out a fortune of love to me? You might try me with a six-penny-worth right might try me with a six-penny-worth right

Mark spoke in his deliberate way, but there as a glow and a gleam about him that told of his long devotion to the shy girl he gazed upon; and his sincere eyes looked like guarantees of justice and integrity to those who looked to him for help in their perplexities.

"Oh," murmured Bessie, blushing; "I xities.

looked to him for help in their perplexities.
"Oh," murmured Bessle, blushing; "I think my foodness for you is worth a little more than that!" more than that?

Upon which Mark started toward her, and knelt at her side. And then she exclaimed beneath her breath that her words had meant absolutely nothing.

"Well, make it next to nothing, and it will be just what I asked for as an opening fund!"

be retorted, sancily.

No. Mark! You cannot understand—but I am very unbappy!" she explained. "I never want to love and admire anybody any more!" "I wouldn't have you admire me, of all things," laughed Mark, "I should think you crasy if you did, Bessie! And the sort of leve I wish you to curich me with is of a very peculiar kind. I don't want the kind that would make it all work for you and all play for me, and I suppose notes result would real. for me; and I suppose some people would call the sentiment I crave of you just simple toler-ance. You could admire the flowers to our garance. You could admire the flowers in our gar-den, and love the stars; and by the way, if we get married now, and go beene by the next stamer, we shall be in time to see the snow-drops, and the purple and yellow and white concuses on my lawn. I had them planted last autumn in round patches as big as a Delph dinner-plate. Or, by the way, we could go to Holland and anywhere else, for I have a leave of absence from legal affairs that is intended to fit all Europe, if desired."

Bes-le could not help letting a smile perpout of her eyes, sad as they had looked; yet she tried to put a stop to such galloping plans on Mark's part. If he had a dry way with him, he could think and act at an effective rate of speed. That she did not dampen his spirits was proved by his pulling out an engagement ring of merry diamonds, which he told her to carry about in her pocket until she got used to it.

"If you ever fancy that you may consent to marry me," hewent on, "slip the ring over your finger, and you will perhaps find your mind made up, miraculously, in my favor!
But do not make that 'ever' much of a one,
I have waited so many years, and I have fol-lowed you so far, you know!"

Bessie looked directly into his eyes as he still kneit by her side. What a quiet glow of Bessie looked directly had his eyes so he still kneit by her side. What a quiet glow of gentineness she saw in them! Did she hold out her hand for the ring? Did she marry Mark White in a few weeks? Did she see "a few Raphnels" with him in Italy ?

Let each render, for herself, analyze the love of this true American girl!

THE TRAINING OF CHILDREN

BY MARY HARRISON MCKER BAUGHTER OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

Mas. McKew

I is footfah and idle to speak of training or managing exor managing ex-tremely young children. Their infancy pre-cludes any such thing as moral sunsion—the foundation of training—as their lack of rea-soning faculties provents any ability on their part to distinguish between right and wrong. They can be taught only as young animals are taught—by withholding them as much as pus-sible from temptation, and by the sharp and swift punishment of any wrong-doiry. This, to be sure will open to them a philosophy that certain acts are to be avoided because of the suffering which surely follows them. But the foundation on which the philosophy is formed will be perceived later. The desired end, in attempting to prevent a child from do-ing things which are wrong or harmful, is to restrain them not only for the time being, but In the future also, from committing the in-discretion; and any means to this end must surely be wise. Swift punishment, not so severe as immediate, is advisable, it seems to ie, with children too young to have any culties capable of reasoning further than that some actions are followed by instant suffering. You must not delay, or the sequence is lost, and the reason for the suffering will not be apparent to the small infant you may find it necessary to chastise ever so slightly.

But as the faculties develop, and your little unreasoning buby drifts into childhood, with its incressing the property after the reason of things, and its infinite appetite and desire for knowledge of any and all kinds, your responsibilities of training actually commence. The knowledge of good and evil is yours to give to knowledge of good and evil is yours to give to your child; your word is his trust. What has gone before in the care of your infant, as I have said—you may scarcely dignify it as training—has been as nothing; the little mind before you is a blank on which you are to make the impressions; the life which em-bodies it is in your care for much of its future harmings or minery. As this development. happiness or misery. As this development occurs be very chary of panishment. When your small boy tells you, with unblushing ef-frontery, probably with crumbs on his face and apron, and a piece of the sweet in his innel, that he did not touch the cake forbidden to him—the fibs of childhood are always transparent—do not punish him. It is prob-ably but the old Adam which is in us all, and which can be estracised in children more firmly and successfully, as in grown people, by kindness than by punishment. Take the small offender in your lap, and convince him by logical question and answer, making use of the proof at hand, that he has told you what was not true. When he has acknowledged his conviction, as the most obstinate of children will if he finds that his convictor is calm and lustration, the serious effects of a lie, and then assure him of the sin of it. He has been told doubtless, by this age of the Christ, and has doubtless, by this age of the Christ, and has, as children, and the extremely young children more particularly, are apt to have, a peculiarly vivid love and picture of the Saviour in his little mind. Then tell him that lies—I believe in using the real word, not disguising an antroth by any lighter designation, as "fib" or "story"—are grievous to Him, and ask the little one to say a prayer for forgiveness and help. All this will take more time than a "spanking," but it will be, I am sure, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, far more efficacious. When the fault is repeated have a second talk with your infant offender, dwelling more particularly on the necessity of his heeding the importance of what you have dweiting those particularly on the necessity of his heeding the importance of what you have been telling him; and when it occurs the third time punish him as an aid to his remem-brance, not as the result of his wrong-doing. Let him understand always what these results are, and that whatever punishment you may inflict is simply to remind him of the necessilv for remembering to avoid the wrong-doing, and then there will be no rebellion or questioning in the childish heart at your right to so punish. The child is most truly the father of the man, and what man is there, who, having sinned, would acknowledge the right of any human mortal greater in position or strength to punish him for the sin? He knows that it has consequences, and that knowledge and its realization is his punishment. So is it with the child, but, as the consequences of the wrong-doing are not so keenly felt here, because of the smaller scale on which all things appertuning to childhood are formed, so it becomes necessary that there shall be a sharp reminder; hence the punish-ment is reasonable, and no one will appreciate ment is reasonable, and no one will appreciate this more quickly than will a child.

But make your distinction evident, and be assured that the little one appreciates your position in the matter; else is your punishment but in vain, and can but cause incalculable hurn to the sharacter of your child. Justice is one of the strongest feelings of childhood; and any violation of it, especially where they feel such violation an injustice to themselves, generates have and hitter feelings. The most obstinate and unreasonable of children will acknowledge its parents' claim to see that it does what is right, and will acknowledge, too, that if this can only be secured by prinishment, that the punishment is just. But the most amiable and reasonable of children will, with swelling, nugry heart, question your right to fleg him because be bas told a lie. The flogging is not, to his orind, in any direct way the result of the untruth. That any direct way the result of the untruth. That he will see in your disappointment and in his own discontent of conscience, and perhaps in the disaster which may follow; but, if the lie was the result of forgetfulness, he will ac-knowledge your right to aid his memory; If it was the result of a deliberate choice on part between right and wrong, he will knowledge equally your right to punish him, so that in the future it will be to his advan-tage to choose the right. But let him see the justice of the case if you desire your punish-ment to be effectual.

ment to be effectual.

If, at this important time of lile, a mother should be chary of punishment, she cannot be too prodigal of encouragement and rewards. See always the best side of the action of your little ones; by which I do not, of course, meon that you are to gloss over any carelessness or inaccuracies; but that when there is an opportunity for praise, give it, and do not take all the little generosities and self-denials of childhood, and they are many, too entirely as a matter of course. You will not spoil the child by this if you are careful to have your praise and commendation founded upon reason; for I believe thoroughly that children see the justice and injustice of that children see the justice and injustice of things, in miniature, precisely as do older people, and appreciate and resent it in like proportion. Do not praise indiscriminately then, but be just always, and while you are just be also generous. Do not let the one wait for the other, even if the proverbial advice is to this effect, but combine them and see how much of lappiness it will bring to you.

Of course, there is a great difference in clubbren, and the peculiarities of disposition often found in a single family must be respected. Do not attempt to apply precisely the same rules in half a dezen different cases, and do not have so many cast-iron rules that and do not have so many east-iron rules that your children will live in constant dread of breaking them, and be, in consequence, ner-yously predisposed in that direction. Emulare nature here as elsewhere; and in your emulation notice that while there are a few great natural laws which are scrupulously ob-served in the management of the universe, served in the management of the universe, there are also innumerable variations in treatment. So let it be in your training. Let the fundamental laws of justice, love and kindness be always existent, and you can vary your treatment of individual character as much as is necessary to scene good results. Your responsibilities are so much greater when your family is larger, and the necessity for the study of the different dispositions which compose it, that you may minister to their best interit, that you may minister to their best inter-est, so important that many a woman has reason, if not excuse, for feeling a little ap-pulled at the task before her. Of course, this feeling is only transient, and but seldom re-current, but that it must not be encouraged I need not urge.

One word more of advice or opinion and I have finished. It concerns the necessity for having a reasonable foundation for your dehaving a reasonable foundation for your de-mands or requests to your children. Do not test their obedience by foolish or unnecessary commands; be careful always that there is reason in what you request, if you would in-crease their respect for you. But once having made your request, insist upon obedience. That and truthibulness are the two most important qualities to be discovered and developed by mothers.

"In all things be reasonable," would be, I think, a good motto for mothers to base their training upon: for a child old enough to be trained at all is a reasonable, thinking mortal, with a mind capable of understanding and an intellect competent to appreciate justice; and it is most surely your duty to this mind in minipure that its glimpses of the government of this world shall behold a government founded on truth, liberty, justice and reason.

Headache

Indigestion, Biliousness,

Dyspepsia

And all Stomach Troubles Are cured by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Digitized by Spogle

*XIV.-MRS. LELAND STANFORD

BY ETHEL INGALLS

DADBUTER OF HON, JOHN J. INGALLS

HE wives of our millionaires are surrounded by so much splendor that our eyes are fastened to their exterior loveliness, and are rarely given the pleasure of seeing into their inner lives. In detail, we are teld of the gorgeousness of their robes, the luxury of their robes, the luxury of their tables, and of the brilliancy and quantity of their jewels, and this minute description of their worldly goods has become so extensively general that these ladies seem more like radiantly adorned statues than like human beings.

Now, the simple mention of Mrs. Leland Stanford's name brings visions of rare seems Stanford's name brings visions of rare genus and unlimited gold. These are her posses-sions, and the public mind has for so long associated her name with wealth alone that her personality has been partially eclipsed.

MRS. STANFORD

Riches sometimes mar the character, but they have made Mrs. Stanford's perfect and entire.

Some sixty-three years ago she came to bless a home in Albany, New York. Her maiden name was Jane Lathrop. Her parents were well-to-do and highly respected. It was at Albany, when still in her early girthood, that she met and afterward married Mr. Stanford, who was at that time a bright young lawres. she met and afterward married Mr. Stanford, who was at that time a bright young lawyer, practicing his profession in Fort Washington, Wisconsin, to which place he took his bride and resided for a short time. But the course of their lives was changed by a fire which totally destroyed Mr. Stanford's effects, After this less he determined to try his for-tunes in that enchanted country on the Pacific count. Leaving Mrs. Stanford with her parents tones in that enchanted country on the Pacific coast. Leaving Mrs. Stanford with her parents he started on his long journey, finally reach-ing the State which has given him so much, and to which in return he has added an ad-ditional honor. Mrs. Stanford did not join him for three years, prevented from doing so by the illness of her father, but at his death Mr. Stanford took her with him to Sacramen-to. Their home was a simule wonden dwellto. Their home was a simple wooden dwell-ing, and their only household assistant a woman-servant.

But as years went by riches come rapidly and also honor, and in 1861 Mr. Stanford was elected governor of California. Then Mrs. Stanford's social career commenced, and with an intense interest she worked for her husband's success.

Their home now had lost its humbleness and had become the hendquarters for all the prominent members of the party in the State. During one winter every member of the California legislature and their families were entertained at dinner.

There are few people who have not heard about the awful sorrow that fell upon the Stanford home by the death of their boy seven stanford home by the death of their boy seven years ago. They were married eighteen years when he came, and never was the advent of a prince the cause for more rejoicing. He be-came the idol of their hearts and hopes, and self was forgotten in the noble lad that grew beside them. After sixteen years of sweet companionship the youthful life was closed. He was with his parents in Europe traveling, when he was taken with a low fever and died in Florence, Italy. Full of promise, un-

* In this series of pen-portralis of "Unknown Wives of Well-Known Men," escamesced in the January, Pet, Journals, the following, each accompanied with portrals, have been printed:

January 1881
February
March April
June July Asgust
September
Getober
November
Junuary 1882 portrait, have been printed:
Miss. Thomas A. Edison
Miss. P. T. Harners
Miss. P. T. Harners
Miss. Charlestone;
Miss. T. Die Witt Talmade
Miss. Charlestone;
Miss. The Mitt Talmade
Lady Machenalis
Lady Machenalis
Lady Tennyson
Miss. Will Carleston
Miss. William McKipeley
Miss. Mak O'Rell
The Phissesse Bissaley
Miss. John Wanamaker
Any of these back numbers in Any of three back numbers can each by writing to the Journal. he had at 10 cents.

usually intelligent, with a remarkable love for archæology and mathematics, he had more than a bright future in prospect, and aside from his eleverness he was tender, affectionate and considerate of his parents, who made him their constant companion. It is not strange that after such a cross much of the brightness of this earth has gone for the father and mother, but Mrs. Stanford's beautiful and perfect faith in an All-Wise and Merviful Father has been her strength and comfort, and the spirit of the boy is shining in the multitude of charitable deeds of which his life and death have been the inspiration.

denth have been the inspiration.

In 1874 Governor Stanford built a magnifi-In 1874 Governor Stanford built a magnifi-cent home in San Francisco, but of late years be and Mrs. Stanford have preferred "Palo Alto," their country seat, situated some thirty miles from San Francisco. Here they have raised to the memory of their only child that wonderful seat of learning which bears the name of "The Leland Stanford, Jr., Universi-ty." In October last, its doors were opened to over four hundred students. In this me-morial is centered the interest of both Senator and Mrs. Stanford. In all the details incident to the completion of the University Mrs. Stan-ford had a hand. Not a building was creeted without the plans being submitted first to her, and their interior arrangement, decoration and furnishing have been executed under her imfurnishing have been executed under her im-mediate supervision. Mrs. Stanford has crect-ed at her own individual expense a museum which will contain works of art and a collection of curios gathered by her boy during his tons in foreign lands.

Senator Stanford gives his wife his closest confidence on all business matters, whether political or financial; she has consequently political or financial; she has consequently a wide range of experience in worldly affairs. Besides the gigantic endowment to the University, Mrs. Stanford has given bountifully to many charitable institutions. In Albany the Children's Hospital was built from a gift of $100,000 from her and is supported by an endowment of $100,000 more. The Kindergarten Schools in San Francisco have also received a gift of $100,000. These are her public works of charity, done in remembrance of her boy, but the silent deeds of mercy are almost as great as those about which the world knows, for her tenderness and sympathy draw to her aching and wounded souls, striving and wearied hearts that are sinking beneath their eartily burdens, and for them all she has a loving interest and a word of comfort.

Her retinue of servants have the greatest af-

Her retinue of servants have the greatest af-fection for her, and to them she is the kindest fection for her, and to them she is the kindest of mistresses. She has bousekeepers, but they, as well as the servants, report to her for in-structions. While in Washington she audits and pays all the household bills, keeps the pay roll, and personally pays all the monthly wages. The Chinese have her sympathy, and she considers them somewhat abused. Her chef is a Celestial, and as the Stanford dinners are among the famous ones given in Washingchief is a Celestial, and as the Stanford dinners are among the famous ones given in Washington, his Chinese Highness must be familiarly acquainted with the most intricate mysteries of the cuisine. One of the servants has a great fondness for birds, and in this fancy Mrs. Stanford allows her to indulge. In the Senator's Washington home these feathered pets are given the freedom of the whole house. A talkative parrot is an interesting orator. Two doves usually take lancheon with the Senator, perched on either side of his chair, or wander unmolested around to the guests, who drop some dainty morsel to the gentle birds. A pair of magpes chatter and quarrel with each other from their perches on the lawn, while in Mrs. Stanford's boudoir canaries sing in their pretty gibled cages. in their pretty gibled cages.

As the wife of a Governor and United States

Senator, Mrs. Stanford has seen the social world in all its glory, and with her untold fortune and all that it brings should feel her happiness to be entire. But the gry life of a society leader has no fascination for her, though by courtesy she must be among those who lead society's merry festivities.

by contriesy site must be among those who lead society's merry festivities.

Mrs. Stanford is a tall, stately woman with great dignity of manner, yet with a poculiarly gentle and sympathetic bearing. The humblest person that comes to see her and the wonders of her home on her reception days in Washington, is sure of a pleasant greeting, for she is ever mindful of the soul within, and exterior adornments mean little to her. It is her happiness to see others happer. within, and exterior adornments mean little to her. It is her happiness to see others happer, so the presence of the humble stranger is never questioned, and they are as welcome as the titled guests. I remember once hearing a fashionable matron ask Mrs. Stanford how she tolerated the mob of common people that came to her "Thursdays." Mrs. Stanford simply said: "My loouse is free to the public on Thursday, and any stranger, no matter how poor, is welcome, and if from my table she can get something to stay her hunger I give it joyfully, and if at home some little mouth would relish a sweet she can have some from my table, put it in her pocket and take it mouth would reish a sweet she can have some from my table, put it in her pocket and take it home." Mrs. Stanford dresses quietly, but her gowns are very rich and handsomely made. Being in mourning, she has but few colors from which to select. One gown that is par-ticularly beautiful is of pansy velvet, which has a pretty history. During one of her trips abroad some friend told her of an aged priest abroad some friend told her of an aged priest who was in need of pecuniary assistance, and to get it be would like to dispose of some lace that was an heirfoom in his family. Mrs. Stanford called, the lace was shown to her, and charmed by its delicate beauty she purchased it, and the price paid was so generous that the old priest's last days were spent in peace and plenty.

The Washington home is filled with works of art, principally paintings. One that always calls forth admiration is a portrait of General Grant, the work of our American artist, Miss Georgiana Campbell. Mrs. Grant is a warm, personal friend of Mrs. Stanford, and is frequently her gaest during the winter. Mrs.

quently her guest during the winter. Mrs. Stanford's friends are legion, for no one comes beneath the influence of her beautiful Christian spirit without feeling for her something deeper than a mere acquaintanceship.

I—A GLIMPSE OF KATE GREENAWAY

BY ETHER MACKENZIE MCKENNA DAPORTER OF SIR MORELL MACKENZIE

Is now nearly eleven years since "Under the Window" made its first appearance, and war since then the name of Kate Greenawny has been "familiar in our mouths as household words;" indeed, has become a descriptive term for the style of children's costume she has made so popular. Not only must the little ones, to whom her drawings have afforded such endless delight, feel gratitude toward the elever artist, but all lovers of the picturesque must recognize the debt they owe to the pencil that has transformed our babies from over-dressed little frights into the quaint miniature pictures that now charm our eyes; for the shady sun-bonnets, the frilled caps, the old-fashioned fichus, the short-waisted gowns, are all the result of Kate Greenaway's enthusiasm for costumes which have their foundation in those of the last century, but to which she has given a charm and spirit entirely her own.

MISS GREENAWAY

It frequently happens that genius, fearing in anything to resemble its spurious brother, who anything to resemble its spurious brother, who by plentiful advertisement succeeds in personading a large portion of the public that mediocre talent is really the divine spark, has a morbid dread of publicity, and hides itself with never-tiring pertinacity from the eyes of its admirers. There is a story told of Lord Tennyson, who so resolutely shuns the gaze of the curious, that when he was walking in the village near which his place in the Isle of Wight is situated, and chanced to meet a stranger, his morbid dread of observation was instantly aroused.

was instantly aroused, and drawing forth his handkerchief he cov-ered his face in its yoluminous folds. leaving the harmles unknown, who had not before observed the author of the "Idylls," to wonder at the eccentricity of the venerable old gentleman.

Miss Greenaway—she is fortunate in her name, for there is something suggestive of quainliness about the very sound of "Kate Greenaway," which has led to a very general belief that it is only a now de please—although in her case this trait is not quite as strongly marked as in that of the Poet Laurente, has a righteous horror of seeing the details of her private life in print, and regards the interviewing friend with a feeling nothing short of id with a feeling nothing shorter to thing. She is not, like many of her sister artists, in the giddy whirl of society, and the crowded "at home." and still more througed "private view," know her not. But, though by no means a lover of society in the transparance is not in the least Greenaway is not in the least unsociable. It is "Mrs. Lion Hunter" and her host of fol-lowers to whom she is averse. and though at receptions and miscalled "small and earlies" be is out of her element, a quiet tea party is not without its charms as a relaxation from work. So great is her dislike to being lionized, and her fear of a wolf in sheep's clothing, in the person of an unknown newspaper correspondent, that she always re-

* The first of a series in which will be given sketches portraits of women, noted in song, charity and public rocks, where names are as household worsts, yet who are in reality and minimize to us by their faces and lives. This series will appear from this to their faces and lives. This series will appear from this to their in the Joern-Sat, in conjunction with the other law popular series of "Unknown Wices of Well-known Men." and "Clever Desighters of Clever Men."

fuses to make one of a house party, and when visiting friends in the country specially plends visiting friends in the country specially plends that she may be the only guest.

No doubt her limited circle of acquaint-ance has some foundation in a very natural desire to be undisturbed, for Miss Greenaway is a most energetic worker, and gives up nearly all her time to her beloved art. Her big studio, with its countless unfinished sketches, is not her only field for labor, and she spends long days sketching out of doors.

No one who met this dark, somewhat insignificant little woman, so quietly and plainly dressed, would ever imagine it was before her pencit that children and "grown-ups" alike boused down. On the picturesque but plebeian Heath of Hampstead hers is a well-known figure, for while desiring to escape the "madding crowd" and turnoid of London streets, Miss Greenaway has wisely elected to live agire, for white desiring to escape the "manding crowd" and turnoil of London streets. Miss Greenaway has wisely elected to live within easy reach of her publisher, and has pitched her tent at Hampstead. Her house, which stands with a few others on a delightfully open piece of ground at the foot of a hill, is the most bewitching of Queen Ann mansions. The lower story is of red brick, while the upper part of the house is entirely covered with red tiles, from among which windows of every size and shape seem to peep in the most unexpected manner. One can see at once where Miss Greenaway received the inspiration for her quaint gabled houses, latticed windows and old-finshioned window seats. Whilst in the garden I caught sight of the identical apple tree which, in a somewhat idealized form, so often figures in Miss Greena-often figures in Miss Greenn-way's sketches. It was in blossom, too, and made a most suitable background nost suitable background for some realization of spring in a "Kate Greenaway Almanac." Inside, the house was not as full of "inspiration," though the long windows with their full curtains, the cozy window seats, backed by pots of flowers, a few old-fashioned chairs and some uncommon bowls and vases for the reception of flowers, had a familiar look to those who have studied the works of the talented artist. The big studio is at the top of the house, and the huge window, with its north light, opens onto a fiscinating square bolcomy, which on a cool summer's evening must tempt even the most untiring of workers. I have an idea that I caught sight of Miss Greenaway's "model" cat, but she evidently possesses her mistress' horror of the would-be interviewer, and fled precipitately on my approach.

mistress' horror of the would-be interviewer, and fled precipitately on my approach.

Since the hour when Kate Greenway first decided to devote herself to art, and put her hand to the plough, there has been no looking back. The Art School at South Kensington, the life classes at Heatherley's and the celebrated Slade School were all fields for hard work. When she exhibited her first tiny pictures at the Dudley Gallery the public, who passed them by with a careless glance or a nod of admiration, little dreamed that ere long the artist's name would have obglance or a nod of admiration, little dreamed that ere long the artist's name would have obtained world-wide fame. For at this time Miss Greenaway had only reached the lower rungs of the ladder, and was glad to earn money, if not reputation, by designing Christmas cards and illustrating children's books. The idea of baby figures in the quaint frocks she admired so much had taken possession of her mind, but she was not content with studying the pictures of Reynolds and Romney, copying old plates and designing from the sketches in books of costume. With the help of these, she created with her own fingers various dainty little dresses which, while recalling our these, she created with her own tingers various dainty little dresses which, while recalling our grandmothers' gowns with their short waists, frilled lichus, huge muslin caps and long mittens, were more suited to the young figures for whom she destined them. Having dressed up her juvenile models and realized the effects, she produced "Under the Window," and the success which greeted its publication left no doubt that it answered a genuine need. We were growing weary of the conventionality of our children's clothing, and Miss Greenaway's sketches instantly brought about a change.

The want that German and French artists had felt, and endeavored unsuccessfully to

The want that German and French artists had felt, and endeavored unsuccessfully to supply, had been filled by this English girl. The ladder was now quickly mounted, each book produced mising the artist higher in popular favor. Perhaps the greatest boon she had bestowed on the children she so loves was the publication of a new edition of "Mavor's Spelling Book," illustrated by her clever pen. Who has not spent dreary hours pouring over spelling lessons? The long column seemed endless, and our poor little brains ached with trying to master them. But the "Mavor's Spelling" of to-day, with its delightful illustrations, is quite a different book, and youngtrations, is quite a different book, and young-sters no longer dread it as an instrument of

It is satisfactory to know that it is not only It is satisfactory to know that it is not only in England and America that Miss Greenaway's designs have produced a revolution in the matter of children's garments. The French nation, always so ready to scoff at English art, and holding themselves to be all powerful on any matter relating to dress, have during the last few years entirely altered the style of frock worn by their girls and boys, and the overdressed little citizens once so and the overdressed little citizens, once so common at all French watering places, are transformed into far happier looking mites in quaintly smocked gowns, picturesque coats and large sun bonnets after the clever little creations from the mind of Kate Greenaway.

Digitized by Google

WHAT MY FATHER TAUGHT US

By Mamie Dickens

ELDEST DAUGHTER OF CHARLES DICKENS

IT has been my pleasure, within the last few months, to be sought out by the editor of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL to be some u.co. to become a con-tributor to the pages of the magnzine, It has been agreed be-tween us that I should write for JOURNAL read-

Mos Dickess

JOURSAL readers a series of articles which, under the title of "My Father as I Recall Hism," will shortly begin in these pages. This article is in no wise a part of that series. I wish it simply to serve as an introduction to you of that name which we all hold so highly in love and veneration—you, as his reader, I as his daughter. And if through this article, and the series to follow, I can be the means of making you know better the home-character of Charles Dickens, the later I have undertaken will be repaid a hundred-fold.

THE PRAYER HE TAUGHT US

TO begin this little article, I cannot, I think, A do better than take the little prayer which my father wrote for us and which each

A do better than take the little prayer which my father wrote for us and which each one of us was taught to repeat night and morning, as soon as we could speak:

"Pray God, Who has unde everything, and is so kind and merciful to everything He has made who tries to be good and to deserre it.

"Pray God bless my dear papa, mamma, brothers and sisters and auntic, and all my relations and friends.

"Make me a good little girl. Let me never be naughty, or tell a lie, which is a mean and shameful thing. Make me kind to my nurses and servanta, and to all poor people.

"Let me never be cruel to any dumb creature; for if I am cruel to anything, even to a poor, little fly, Thou, who are so good, will never love me.

"Pray God to bless and to preserve us all this night, and forevermore, through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen."

The word "auntie" was not in the original prayer. I added it for myself. I was quite a tiny child, when she, a very young girl, first came to live with us. And, as I do not remember any part of my life without her, and as I have knelt at her knees as often as I have knelt at her knees to say this prayer, it seemed only natural to me to put her name among those specially mentioned in our evening supplications.

HIS HATRED OF FALSEHOOD

THE line in the prayer "Let me never be naughty or tell a lie," recalls an incident in the childhood of my eldest brother and I, and which will illustrate how my father dealt with falsehood in his children.

with falsehood in his children.

We were quite small children, and were living at Uburo, near Genoa, for the summer months. My brother and I were made to promise that we would not pick or eat any of the fruit in the garden, peaches being especially forbidden. But, alas? I grieve to confess that, Adam and-Eve-like, we disobeyed, and did eat of that fruit! Whether we confessed our guilt I cannot remember. Anyway, we had through much tribulation to feel the heinous offense of telling a lie. We had a dose of physic each, were undressed and put to bed before noon, and allowed brend and water only for the rest of the day. But and put to bed before noon, and allowed bread and water only for the rest of the day. But it was the disgrace we were made to feel so acutely. And my cheeks get hot now when I think of it! My father did not come into the nursery until late in the afternoon. I remember that his dear face bore a rather sorrowful expression as he saw our shamed looks and downesst eyes, and noticed how tossed about our little beds had become through the long, hot day. He talked to us seriously, though sweetly and gently, and kissed us as he said "good-night." So that although not actually out of diagrace until the next day, we knew that he had forgiven us; and when we know that he had forgiven us; and when once a fault had been forgiven by father we never heard an allusion to it again. He rarely referred to past deeds—especially misdeeds.

MY FATHER AS A MASTER

M Y father interpolated the line "Make me ML kind to my nurses and servants" in the prayer because of his rare qualities as a master. As tiny babies, kindness to, and con-sideration for, others, were qualities taught us even before we could speak, and my father was quick to notice any breach of such on our parts as he was also in the case of grown-up people. He simply hated anything like rudeness of selfishmess to servants of subordinates.

The same spirit actuated him in regard to

The same spirit actuated from in regard to the invocation: "Let me bever be cruel to any domb creature."

Any act of cruelty, however, so-called small, was loathsome to him, and seemed really to but him, and to fill him with disgust.

"Mark my words," he said one day about him companies of care where he had discussed.

a boy companion of ours, whom he had characted to see ill-treating a goat, " that how will never grow up to be a good man." And he took a distinct to him there and then. Certainly— poor tellow? he is dead now—his was not a very worthy life!

HIS INTEREST IN OUR LESSONS

MY father was always much interested ML about our lessons, looking over our copy-books, slates, etc., pointing out where we copy-books, slates, etc., pointing out where we were wrong; taking the greatest pains to impress upon us the why and the wherefore of any faults be had to find. He had a curious dislike for the very large round-hand writing copies which were set us in those days and which I have seen still in many school-rooms. He stopped them entirely, at last, considering them a waste of time and of no use whatever in forming a child's handwriting.

WE WERE TAUGHT INDEPENDENCE

WE were all taught, from our youngest W ags, to be as independent as possible.

If we kept pets—birds, rabbits, never mind what—we must see to them ourselves, feed them, look after them, clean out the cages or batches. If we neglected such care, then the pets would be taken from us.

My sister and I, as little girls, made many journeys from London to the Isle of Wight, where lived some well-beloved friends quite alone. It was rather a formidable journeys for where lived some well-beloved friends quite alone. It was rather a formidable journey for two such little things as we were, many changes to be made before we arrived at our destination, but we never minded it; were never the worse for this early show of independence. In later years, when we were out of the nursery, we never had a nasid to walk out with us, or to dress us, or to count out our washing for the laundress, or to spoil us in any way, with what my father thought unnecessary help; but had to be self-helpful, instead.

HIS ADVICE TO HIS CHILDREN

WITH the exception of the first-born, my

W ITH the exception of the first-born, my brothers were sent to school very young. And as they grew up, and were sent out into the world, my father wrote a letter of counsel to each. Here is one such letter:

"I write this note to-day because your going away is much upon my mind, and because I want you to have a few parting words from me to think of now and then, at quiet times. I need not tell you that I love you dearly, and ano very, very sorry, in my heart, to part with you. But this life is half made up of partings, and these pains must be beene. It I need not tell you that I love you dearly, and am very, very sorry, in my heart, to port with you. But this life is half made up of partings, and these pains must be borne. It is my confort, and my sincere conviction, that you are going to try the life for which you are best fitted. I think its freedom and wildness more suited to you than any other experiment in a study or office would ever have been; and without that training you could have followed no other suitable occupation. What you have always wanted until now has been a set, steady, constant purpose. I therefore exhort you to persevere in a thorough determination to do whatever you have to do as well as you can do it. I was not so old as you are now when I first had to win my food, and do this out of this determination, and I have never slackened in it since. Never take a mean advantage of anyone in any transaction, and never be hard upon people who are in your power. Try to do to others as you would like them do to you; and do not be discouraged if they fail sometimes. It is much better for you that they should fall in obeying the greatest rule laid down by our Savioor than that you should. I have put a New Testament among your books for the very same reasons, and with the very same hopes New Testament among your books for the very same reasons, and with the very same hopes same reasons, and with the very same hopes that made me write an easy account of it for you when you were a little child. Because it is the best book that ever was or will be known in the world; and because it teaches you the best lessons by which any luman creature who tries to be truthful and faithful to duty can possibly be guided.

"As your brothers have gone away, one by one, I have written to each such words as I am writing to you, and have entreated them all to guide themselves by this book, putting aside the interpretations and inventions of men. You will remember that you have never at home been wearied about religious observances or mere formalities. I have always been auxious not to weary my children ways been auxious not to weary my children with such things before they are old enough to form opinions respecting them. You will, therefore, understand the better that I now most solemnly impress upon you the truth and beauty of the Christian religion as it came from Christ Himself, and the impossibility of your going far wrong if you humbly but heartily respect it. Only one thing more on this head. The more we are in carpert as on this head. The more we are in earnest as to feeling it, the less we are disposed to hold forth about it. Never abansion the wholesome practice of saying your own private prayers night and morning. I have never abundoned it myself, and I know the comfort of it. I hope you will always be able to say, in after life, that you had a kind father. You cannot show your affection for him so well, or make

I HAVE given you this letter in full, because it will show you, better than any words of mine can, what a true, earnest and humble spirit my father had, and what a thoroughly home-loving spirit it was, too, "There are not," and these are his own words, "in the un-sen world voices more gentle or more true, that may be so implicitly relied on, or that are so certain to give none but tenderest counsel, as the voice in which the spirits of the fireside and the bearth address themselves him so happy, as by doing your duty.

In my series of articles further along it will my endeavor to point out other instances of the home-leving spirit which was so truly that of my father.

A PRINCESS FAIR

BY MILDRED HOWELLS DAUGISTER OF WILLIAM DEAN HOWELD

OUT from her casement a princess fair Leaned to watch the waves below; The salt wind played with her golden hair, As she watched their ebb and flow.

Each glittering wave was blue and gay, And salt as any brine may be; The lady's eyes were blue as they, And her tears as salt as the sea.

The princess leaned from her casement wide She said: "You are very fair, oh Sea! And I would that your restless, azure tide Were flowing fathoms over me."

STRAY GLIMPSES OF THACKERAY

BY ANNE THACKERAY RITCHIE DATURTER OF WILLIAM M. THACKERAY

IT HAPPILY does not al-ways follow that one cares for an author in exact proportion to the sale of his the sale of his books, or even to the degree of their merit; otherwise some of us might be overpowered by friends and

Mas. Riveria overpowered by friends and others remain solitary all our lives long. It also does not follow that people who write books are those who see most of each other. On the contrary, authors as a rule prefer, I think, playmates of other professions than their own, and soldom keep together in the same way that soldiers do, for instance, or dandles, or lawyers, or members of Parliament. Lawyers, politicians, soldiers, and even doctors, do a great deal of work together in one another's company; but the hours do not suit for literary people, and one rarely hears of five or six authors sitting down in a row to write books. They are generally shut up spart in different studies, with strict orders given that nobody is to be abown in. This was my father's rule, only it was constantly broken; and many people used to pass in and out during his working hours, and of course one way and another we saw a great many people of different sorts.

O NE of the most notable people who ever came into our old how-windowed drawing-room in Young Street, Kensington, is a guest never to be forgotten by me, a tiny, delicate, little person, whose small hand nevertheless grasped a mighty lever which set all the literary world of that day vibrating. I can still see the scene quite plainly! The hot summer evening, the open windows, the carriage driving to the door as we all sat silent and expectant: my father, who rarely waited, waiting with us; our governess and my sister and expectant; my father, who mrely waited, waiting with us; our governess and my sister and I all in a row, and prepared for the great event. We saw the carriage stop, and out of it spring the well-knit figure of young Mr. George Smith, who was bringing Charlotte Broute to see our father. My father, who had been walking up and down the room, goes out into the hall to used his guests, and then, after a moment's delay, the door opens wide and the two gentlemen corse in, leading a tiny little lady, pale, with fair, straight hair and steady eyes. She may be a little over thirty; she is dressed in a little "barège" dress, with a pattern of faint green mose. She enters in mittens, in silence, in seriousness; our hearts are beating with wild excitement. This, then, is the authoress; the unknown power whose books have set all London talking, reading, speculating; some people even say our father wrote the books—the wonderful books. I think it must have been on this very occasion that my father invited some of his ference in the avenue. the books—the wonderful books. I think it must have been on this very occasion that my father invited some of his friends in the evening to meet Miss Broote, for everybody was interested and anxious to see her. Mrs. Brookfield, Mrs. Carlyle, Mr. Carlyle himself, was there, so I am told, railing at the appearance of cockneys upon Scotch monatain sides; there were also too many Americans for his taste; "but the Americans were as God compared to the cockneys" says the philosopher. Everyone waited for the brilliant conversation which never began at all. Miss Broote retired to the sofa and nourmured a low word now and then to our kind governess. The room looked very dark, the lamp began to snocke a little, the conversation grew dismore and more dim, the ladies sat round expectant, my father was the ladies sat round expectant, my father was too much perturbed by the gloom and silence to cope with it at all. In one of my excursions crossing the half I was surprised to see him opening the front door with his hat on. He put his fingers to his lips, walked out into the darkness, and shut the door quietly behind him. When I went back to the drawing-room again the ladies asked me where he was. I vaguely answered that I thought he was com-Vaguery answered that I thought he was com-ing back. I was puzzled at the time, nor was it all made clear to me till long years after-ward, when one day Mrs. Procter asked me if I knew what had happened once when my father had invited a party to meet "Jane Eyre" at his house. It was one of the dullest evenings she had ever spent in her life, she said. And then with a good deal of humor she described the situation, the ladies who had all come expecting so much delightful conversation and the gloom, and how, finally over-whelmed by the situation, my father had quietly left the room and gone off to his chis, Korron's Norm.—The editor expected that he would be able to present an original article by Mrs. Ekclar, but her manifold liberary and domestic daties speciested, and the above "glimese" were revised by permission from "Magniflatis" Janualite" and sutstituted. The Jan's Nat. haper, between his publish the expected artists by Mrs. Editable in a former bases.

MY father was very fond of guing to the play, and used to take us when we were children, one on each side of him, in a hansom. He used to take us to the opera, too, which was less of a treat. Magnificent envelopes with unfcorns and beraidic emblazonments used to come very constantly containing tickets for the opera. In those days we thought everybody had boxes for the opera as a matter of course. We used to be justalled in the front places with our chins resting on the velvet ledges of the box. For a time it used to be very delightful, and sometimes I used to suddenly wake up to find the singing still going on as in a dream. Also, I never possessed a note of music of my own, though I have enred for it in a patient, unrequited way all my life long. My father always loved music and understood it, too. He knew his opera tunes by heart. I have always liked the little story of his landing with his companions at Malta on his way to the East, and us no one of the company happened to speak Italian be was able interpret the whole nearly be humining the his way to the East, and as no one of the com-pany happened to speak Italian be was able to interpret the whole party by humming the lines from various operas. "Un bigletto-Eccolo qua," says my father to the man from the shore, "Lasce darent is mano," and be belped Lady T. up the gangway, and so on. He used sometimes to bring Mr. Ella home to dine with him, and he liked to hear his inter-esting talk about masie. esting talk about music.

A T the back of the house in Young Street A T the back of the house in Young Street was the study where my father used to write. The vine shaded his two windows, which looked out upon the hit of garden and the mediar tree and the Spanish Jessamines, the yellow flowers of which scented our old brick walls. The top school-room was over my father's bed-room, and the bed-room was over the study where he used to write. We kept eur dolls, our bricks, our books, our baby-houses and most of one stupid little fancies in the top room. My little sister had a menagerie of smails and thes on the sunny window-sill. These latter, chiefly invalids rescued out of milk-jugs lay upon rose leaves in various little pots and receptacles. She was very fond of animals and so was my father—at least he always liked "our" animals. Now looking back I am full of wonder at the number of cats we were allowed to keep, though De La Phuche, the butter, had Gray, the housekeeper, waged war against them.

O'N one occasion a friend told me he was talking to my father and mentioning some one in good repute at the time, and my father incidentally spoke as if he knew of a murder that person had committed. "You know it, then," said the other man, "who could have told you?" My father had never been told but he had known it all along, he said, and indeed he sometimes spoke of this curious feeling he had about people at times as if uncomfortable facts in their past history were actually revealed to him. At the same time I do not think anybody had a greater enjoyment than he in other people's goodness were actually revealed to bim. At the same time I do not think anybody had a greater enjoyment than be in other people's goodness and well-doing. He used to be proud of a boy's prizes at school, he used to be proud of a woman's aweet voice, or of her success in housekeeping. He had a friend in Victoria Road, hand by, whose delightful household ways he used to describe, and I can still hear the lady he called "Jingloby" warbling "O du schone mullérin" to his great delight. Any generous thing or word seemed like something happening to himself. How proudly he used to tell the story of his old friend Mr. F., of the "Garrick," who gave up half a fortune as a matter of course because he thought it right to do so, and how he used to be stirred by a piece of fine work. I can remember when "David Copperfield" cause out hearing him say to my grandmother "that little Em'ly's letter to Old Peggotty was a masterpiece." I wondered to hear him at the time, for that was not at all the part I cared for most, hor indeed could I insigne how little Em'ly ever was so stupid as to run away from Peggotty's enchanted house-boat.

But then my father was Thuckerny, and I enchanted bouse-boat.

But then my father was Thuckeray, and I

WHAT TO TEACH A DAUGHTER

TEACH her that not only must she love her father and mother, but honor them in word and deed.

That work is worthy always when it is well

That the value of money is just the good it will do in life, but that she ought to know and appreciate this value.

That the man who wishes to marry her is the one who tells her so and is willing to work for her and her the same life.

for her, and not the one who whispers sill: love speeches and forgets that men cease to be men when they have no object in life.

That her best confidant is always ber mother, and that no one sympathizes with her in her pleasures and joys as you do.

That unless she shows courtesy to others

she need never expect it from them, and the best answer to rudeness is being blind to it. That when tied name her body be intended that it should be clothed properly and mod-tly, and when she neglects berself she is insulting Him who made ber.

Teach her to think well before she says no or yes, but to mean it when she does. Teach her to avoid men who speak lightly of any of the great duties of life, who show in their appearance that their habits are bad, Teach her that her own room is her nest, and that to make it sweet and attractive is a duty as well as a pleasure.

Teach her that if she can sing or rend or draw, or give pleasure in any way by her a complishments, she is seltish and unkind if she does not do this gladly.

Teach her to be a woman-self-respecting, honest, loving and kind, and then you will have a daughter who will be a pleasure to you always, and whose days will be long and joyous in the land which the Lord hath given her.

THE QUEENS OF WESTMINSTER ABBEY

By Miss E. T. Bradley

DAUGHTER OF THE DEAN OF WESTMINSTER

IN THREE PAPERS. FIRST PAPER: -- THE EARLY QUEENS

N THIS and the succeeding articles, it will be my pur-pose to sketch briefly the pose to sketch briefly the lives and sepulchres of the queens of England, the wives, mothers and daughters of kings whose remains lie beneath the ancient roof of Westminster Abbey. Even to those who have not visited the abbey, a few of the facts given in these articles may be found of interest.

EDITHA OF THE SWAN NECK

THE first queen, indeed, the first woman, who found sepalcire here was the widow of Elward the Confessor, the sainted founder of Westminster Abbey. With all his virtues, his picty, his kindness of heart, Edward was more fitted to seek the retirement of a monastery than to rule a turbulent kingdom. Peace he sought, and peace he found however for the most part, when the troubles of exile and persecution were over, and he was established on his throne, the Danes bought off and Earl Godwin conciliated by the king's marriage to his daughter. For Edward's marriage to his enemy's daughter was purely from political motives, and it is said that he never treated her as his wife, but for this statement the monkish chroniclers, who used every argument to prove the pious king a saint, are responsible. The Confessor's conduct to his queen does not show him in the most amiable light. When Godwin and his sons rebelled, Editha was ponished for their sins. She was degraded from her rank, her jewels seized, and she was shut up in Warwell Abbey, where her sister was abbess, for about a year. When peace was restored again she was allowed to return as queen to Edward's court. The old chroniclers all unite in praise of the queen's amiable and virtuous character, and she seems to have been a great contrast to her barbarous tather, "a rose growing from a prickly briar." She was not only beautiful and good, but also learned. In the quaint phrasoology of the time it is recorded that her breast was a storehouse of all liberal sciences. From a certain abbot of Croyland who was brought up at Westminster Palace we get a personal account of the queen. After extolling her storehouse of all liberal sciences. From a certain abbot of Croyland who was brought up at Westminster Palace we get a personal account of the queen. After extolling her beauty, learning and excellent conduct of life, he tells us how he used often to be stopped by the royal lady as he went to and fro from the court to the monks' school in Westminster cloisters, and not only would she examine him in the classics, but pose him with wondrous readiness in grammar and logic. This ordeal was, however, atoned for, the queen seldom dismissing the boy till her little waiting-maid had given him some pieces of money and refreshments.

Another aspect of Editha's life shows us the queen scated among her maidens, embroidering the splendid robes Edward used to wear on collar days. But of her relations to her husband we know absolutely nothing, and it is not till the very end of his life that we find a trace of any mutual affection,

For many years Edward had been engaged in the pious work of building a splendid abbey church for the monastery which be had founded on Thorney isle, the West Minster, as it was afterwards called. The last stone was laid and the consecration fixed for Innocents' Day—December, 1065—when the king feil seriously ill; and it is a

The last stone was and and the consecration fixed for Innocents' Day—December, 1965— when the king fell seriously ill; and it is a proof that any gradge against Editha was forgotten when we find her filling her husband's place of honor at the ceremony. She returned to Edward's sick-bed, and nursed him devotedly, often cherishing the dying man's cold fast its rates and mining at the last works. votedly, often cherishing the dying man's cold feet in her lap, and winning, at the last, words of approval from her austere husband, who commended her that she had been ever at his side, like an affectionate daughter.

After the penceful Confessor's death a period of great misery ensued, Godwin's two sons fighting for the crown. Harold conquered and reigned for forty weeks, till he was killed by the Norman Congueror at the battle of and reigned for forty weeks, the newes stated by the Norman Comparor at the battle of Hastings. Editha, who favored her other brother, Tostig, had meantime retired to her own city, Winchester; and here she spent the remaining nine years of her life, treated with great respect by William the Comqueror.

When she died (January 15, 1975) her body was conveyed to Westminster, and received honorable burial beside her husband, before the high altar, by order of the Norman king, who mised a costly tomb of stone over the masses's remains.

queen's remains.

When Henry III rebuilt this part of the Abbey Editha's coffin was removed; and when her husband's costly shrine had been completed, it was placed beneath the pavement, on the north side of St. Edward's chapel, in the Abbey. During the reign of Henry III, the plaus second founder of the Henry III, the pious second founder of the Abbey, a lamp was kept always alight above Editha's grave, and a service was annually celebrated on the day of her death. Afterward, however, the exact place of her sepulchra was forgotten and the chroniclers all disagreed as to whether she lay north or south of her husband's tomb. At last all doubt was set at rest by the care of Dean Stanley, to whom we owe the inscriptions out in the proposest which mark the arrays of Editha. pavement, which mark the graves of Editha and the other Saxon queen, Matilda, who lies south of the shrine.

THE GOOD QUEEN MAUD

M ATILDA originally bore the same name as her relative, Queen Editha, but was obliged to change the Saxon Editha into the Norman form, Matilda or Maud, to please her subjects. For by the marriage of the "good queen Maud," great grand-daughter of Edmund Ironsides, and daughter of Margaret Atheling, to Henry I, the rival claims of Saxon and Norman were finally and forever united. Matilda's father was Malcolm Canmore, king of Scotland, and her childhood was passed in the rugged north. In 1903, when Matilda was thirteen, Malcolm was treacherously killed fighting against William Rufus, and his wife did not long survive him. Malcolm's brother, Donald Blane, usurped the Scotch throne, universal rejoicings. The new queen's blushes, it is said outvied the color of her crimson robes. Matilda seems to have resembled Editha in her piety and learning, but unlike her she was treated with great love and respect by her husband. To Matilda's influence her people owed many material improvements. The suppression of the tyrannic Conqueror's curfew bell, and the granting of Magna Charta received the queen's powerful support, while besides contributing from her private purse towards repairing the highways throughout the country she founded a priory and two hospitals, one for lepers, called "Mand's Hospital," and built two bridges, one at Struford-le-Ban; another across the Thames, near Westminster. Besides these public benefits, Matilda's private charities were enormous, and her piety remarkable. Every day in Lent she would walk barefoot, dressed in haircloth, to prostrate herself before the Confessor's shrine, and often spend her nights kneeling in the church. She was once reproved by a courtier for her habit of washing and kissing the feet of beggars.

Matilda died at Westminster Palace (May J., 1118) during one of her husband's frequent visits to Normandy. Her body was probably first laid in the old Chapter House, and more than a century later removed to St. Edward's new chapel.

The Royal Chapel in Westminster Abbey

while the orphan children were conveyed in safety to England by their maternal uncle, Edgar Atheling. Matilda and her sister Mary were placed in Eomsey Abbey, where their annt Christina was abbess, whence she afterward removed, taking them with her, to Winton Abbey. Christina had long desired Matilda to take the veil, but the child had always rebelled against the idea, encouraged by her father, who, when as sometimes happened, the zealous abbess had placed a novice's black veil over his daughter's head, would tear it off and fling it away in a rage. Now her father was not there to protect her, Matilda was obliged to take refuge in the convent, the only place of safety in these rough times the only place of safety in those rough times for fatherless girls; yet she still continued to resist her aunt's wishes for a long while; and when finally exerced to take the rows, or to enter upon her povitiate, as it is not certain whother she was ever actually a nun, used to wear her veil sighing and trembling, and take it off whenever the abbess was out of the way. The chroniclers assert that Henry and Matilda had met and loved one mother before a match between them was arrangen; our when the king, immediately upon his accession, asked for her hand, Matilda herself resisted his proposal for awhile, it is said because Henry had led a gay and wild life before he came to the throne. However, so politic a union did this seem to the English people that a match between them was arranged; but every objection was surmounted. Matilda's resistance can have been but feeble, as she is known to have been sincerely attached to Henry. The Church, by the authority of Archbishop Anselm and an ecclesiastical synod, declared her yows null and void; and after reciting all the reasons for the judgment in the presence of a large multitude of people Anselm finished by asking whether the nation consented to the king's marriage, whereupon a loud shout of approval was raised. The mar-riage and Matilda's coronation took place in the Abbey on St. Martin's Day, 1102, amidst

THE STORY OF QUEEN ELEANOR

THE only queens buried in the abbey before the time of Henry III are Ediths and Ma-tilda, while Henry's own wife, Eleanor of Prov-ence, rests at Amesbury. But two of his daughters-in-law were interred in his new church. The one, Aveline, daughter of the mighty earl The one, Aveline, daughter of the mighty earl of Albemarie, was the first bride wedded in Heary's new abbey, which was then in process of building. Her benutiful tomb is on the north-side of the sacrarium, close to that of her husband, Edmund Cronchback, the founder, by his second marriage, of the house of Lancaster, the red rose rival to the house of York

Queen Eleanor, Henry's other daughter-in-law, was the daughter of Ferdinand III of Castille, and heiress in her mother's right to the earldom of Ponthieu. The arms of both places may be seen round her tomb. She was married at the age of ten to Prince Edward, then a boy of fifteen, at Burgos, in Spain (Angust 3, 1254). After her reception in London, the child-bride was sent to Bordeaux to complete her education, and did not come to England again till 1265. Young Edward, after-ward Edward I, was at first a neglectful husband, and it was not till Eleanor accompanied him, against his will, to the crusades in 1270 that he learnt to appreciate her worth. So rough and unlit for women were these crushding campaigns that every effort was made to persuade fleatout to remain in safety at the court of her father in-law, Henry III. "Nothing ought to part those whom God bath joined," she replied to all remonstrances, adding: "The way to heaven is as near from Syria as from England or my native Spain." During his three years' absence from England Edward went twice to the Holy Land, and it was on the second of his crusades, when besieging Acre, that his assassination was attempted by an emissary of the "old man of the mountains." The real story of Eleanor's conduct, when she saw her busband dangerously wounded, is less heroic than the well-known legend, but very characteristic. A serious operation was found necessary to save the Prince's life, and Eleanor, herself in delicate health, was unable to repress her tears, and had to be tion was found necessary to save the Prince's life, and Eleanor, berself in delicate health, was unable to repress her tears, and had to be carried protesting and weeping from her husband's tent. It was better, her brother-in-law. Edmund Cronchback, roughly told her, as he helped to carry her away, that she should scream and cry than all England mourn and lament. Here, very shortly after Edward's recovery. Eleanor gave birth to a daughter called Joanna of Acre.

This same year (1272) came the news of Henry III's death, and now it was Edward's turn to lament, for he was much attached to his father. The new king landed in England nine months later (August 2, 1273), and he and Eleanor were crowned together in the abbey on August 15. A fortnight was spent in feasting the citizens of London, and refreshment booths were erected in the fields about Westminster Palace. On the coronation day itself five hundred great horses were turned loose in the streets, "catch them who could."

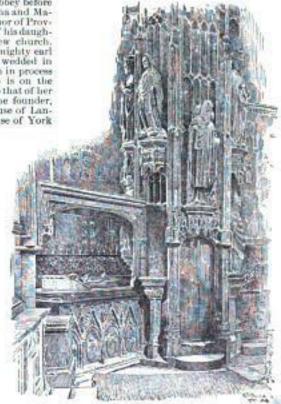

Seventeen years later the abbey was the scene of a very different spectacle, the solemn obsequies of Edward's fair and faithful queen. On November 28, 1230, Eleanor died at a small village near Leicester. Edward was then holding a parliament in Sherwood Forest—the famous trysting place of Robin Hood—and Eleanor, who fell ill there of low fever, had been carried to the quiet village of Hardby, within a ride of Clipston, of low fever, had been carried to the quiet village of Hardby, within a ride of Clipston, where the king at that time held his Edward was, therefore, able to be present at his wife's deathbed, not being, as some ac-counts have it, absent in Scotland, and he accompanied the body to London. The funeral procession was the grandest England had ever seen.

accompanied the body to London. The fineral procession was the grandest England had ever seen.

Twelve times did the bearse rest before it reached the abbey, and at each stage Edward ordered a beautiful cross to be erected in memory of his dead wife, two only of which now exist. An idea of the cost of the procession may be gathered from the fact that eighty pounds of wax were used in a single night at Dunstable. At St. Albans the hearse rested in the Cathedral while Edward pushed on to London. The next day, the king in state, surrounded by the nobility, the prelates, and the lesser clergy, all in magnificent robes, met the procession at Charing Cross, so called from the cross afterward erected there to the chère reine, and escorted the hearse to the abbey with lighted candles and funeral chants. For four days (December 14 to 17), Eleanor's body lay in state before the high altar, and was then interred at the feet of her royal father-in-law, Henry III, with every honor that the sorrowing widower could devise. The king also provided that each successive abbot should swear an oath on his installation to keep lights always burning upon the queen's tomb, and to have a solemn service yearly, on the day of her decease, St. Andrew's Eve, tomb, and to have a solemn service yearly, on the day of her decease, St. Andrew's Eve, on the day of her decease, St. Andrew's Eve, for which purposes a sum of money was bequeathed to the monastery. Three tombs were raised to Eleanor's memory, in Lincoln Cathedral, Blackfriars Monastery and Westminster Abbey, but the latter is the only one that survived the dissolution of the monasteries and the civil wars. Henry III's tomb was still unfinished when Eleanor died; and the same artist, William Torell, a goldsmith of London, made the effigies for both. Though an ideal face, and not a portrait, it is allowable to believe that Torell imparted something of Eleanor's lovable character to the features.

The Tomb of Queen Eleanor Digitized by Google

HOME DAYS WITH FATHER

BY GARRIELLE GREELEY CLENDENIN DAUGHTER OF MORACE GREELEY

MRS. CLENDENIN

FRIDAY evening was always the brightest and happiest of the whole week at Chappaqua, for that was sure to bring my dear father home, The whole house was alive with bappy prepara-tion. The very pine trees point-ed tiny little fingers down the wild woody road coming. How wild woody road to show the way be was coming. How engerly I remember watching a certain little pink gingham fruck being ironed in which I was to go and meet him. I used to sit between two patriarchal oak trees till in the distance the familiar figure was seen, slightly bent forward, his arms loaded with good things, entering the gate; and then I would fly to meet him. How my little arm used to try to crook itself up and take as much of his load as it could, and how somehow the burden was always lifted just a little higher, so my help was only an empty form. We used often on these walks to talk of a wonderful pony that he was looking for, and which arrived, sleek and round, and mischierous, one pony that he was looking for, and which at-rived, steek and round, and mischierous, one birthday morning.

The first thing when we reached the house was to seek mother's room where the dear in-mate for years struggled with a terrible cough. From there, carried in triumph on his back, I would side down to dinner. After dinner, sit-ting around the table, he would call for Dana's book of poetry and read to us many of his favorites. I look now at the familiar lines and smile to think how incomprehensible it must have been to my childish mind, and yet i have been to my childish mind, and yet I loved the reading, and thought, like the wise men of to-day, I "knew it all." I used frequently to pipe up at those happy times "Papa, please tell us a 'nanybote." One of the ancedetes still remains in my mind; of a section on contain who travelines for his com-"Papa, please tell us a "nanyanae." One of the ancedetes still remains in my mind; of a certain sea captain who traveling for his company used to bring in very long bills. One of the charges they especially objected to was three pounds for "a cocked hat" to be worn on a visit to an Indian prince. The next time the accounts were more wisely itemized, and they expressed themselves as perfectly satisfied, "Ah," he said, with a twinkle in his eye, "the cocked hat's there, but you don't see it."

At one of the home gatherings some one, fearing I was being petted too much, said: "Mr. Greeley, don't faster the child."

"But," I answered in his defense, "Pussy just loves flatty," and if gentleness and a great-loving heart injures anyone he would have given me some excuse for being spoiled.

I remember one incident of his indulgence. One day he brought home an unabrella with a wooden dog's head as a handle. My covetous little heart proceeded to set itself upon that canine effigy. In vain papa offered me a canine effigy. In vain papa offered no a whole dog. But I pleaded that no other lead in the world would be like that head, and the result was be sawed it off and went back to result was be sawed it off and went back to town with a handleless umbreila.

I cannot recall my father speaking a single barsh or unkind word to either my dear sister or myself, but I can recall to-day an occasion in which I longed to give myself a good shaking. Papa was engrossed in his paper, and no word or inquiry of mine could rouse him. So, to get his attention at any price, I began tearing away little bits of his newspaper. I must have reached at length the article be was reading, for, gently rising, he lifted me by my arms (for my legs I made instantly limp) and so deposited me outside his locked door without a word. Howls of indignation from me brought word. Howle of indignation from me brought anxious inquiries from a relative, but be made no explanation; neither did I. My humilia-tion was too great at being ignored.

The faces of people are children's books, from which they read searchingly. Scanning carnestly his dear face, so full of the sonshine of purity, so bright with humor and wisdom, a deep impression, never to be effaced, was made upon me at the terrible sorrow I saw written there when he came home and told us of Abraham Lincoln's assessination. Never again did I see that look till the one he loved to call "Mother" passed sway. Then it set-tled down with a grief from which he never roused binuself. I never could trace any signs of disappointment at the presidential cara-paign going against him, but rather a quiet and hunsurous philosophy. I think his main regret would have been for those faithful friends who had followed a lost cause. Saturday before my mother's death he walked with me to Salut Mary's School, where he had placed me a few days before. Little did I think, as he left me at the door, we should meet on Monday at the side of that dear meet on Moonly at the sale of that dear mother from whose five death had smoothed the cares and sufferings of years. From that time he could not sheep, and he seemed not to care to cat. The connecting of his home had eare to cat. The mainspring of his home had broken. The one who, though sick unto death for years, had been such a force and scrength at home, holding up the noblest and highest examples to her children, teaching us that truth must be followed at any cost, yet reaching down in womanly tenderness to the smallest animal, or going out in the snow, through sick herself, to protect some poor drunken man whom the boys were pelving telling me never to laugh at such a one for they were suffering from a terrible disease; yes, the look that he had worn when Lincoln was killed came back to stay. The heart that could love and work for others could break when the highly-strong chords were strained too far. There had to listen to long explanations about his disappointed ambition. To die or live for the good of his laboring brothers

or live for the good of his laboring brothers and sisters was the only ambition I could ever discover in that gree loving heart. He had no tears to shed at his wife's funeral. But as he turned away from the simple plot at discenwood he said: "That wall will be opened for me in less than a month." And it was not the first of his prophesies to be saily fulfilled.
Years afterward a society man told me how one evening, near midnight, when Delmonico's was filled with gay pleustire sockers, he caught sight for one moment, in the hight which streamed across the poventien from the doorway, of an old man in a white cost carrying the baskets of two little ranged girls, evidently taking them to a place of shelter from the storm. So do I love to picture him again. The world of the prosperous and thoughtless was little affected by his life, but as he fades into the darkness of the night of oblivion, I like to think of him as one who desired ever to bring the homeless and the wretched to shelter, and to carry their burdens for them.

SOME FACTS ABOUT THE MOON

BY MARY PROCTOR ACQUITER OF PROT. DECRARD & PROCTOR

Full the heavenly bodies, the moon has attracted the most attention among astronomers. This is doubtless due to the fact that her comparative nearness to the earth brings her pecu-liarly within the range of our observation. liarly within the range of our observation.

Group together a few facts about this wonderful heavenly body, for example, and see how interesting they are:

In distance, the moon is two hundred and forty thousand miles away from our earth, around which she gravitates like a satellite.

Her diameter is about 2133 miles; she has a solid surface of 14,000,000 miles, and a solid context of about 10,000 of cubic miles.

content of about 10,000 of cubic miles.

The earth's surface only exceeds the moon's about thirteen and a ball times. The moon's surface is fully as large as Africa and Australla together, and nearly as large as North and South America without the islands.

Yet large as the moon are islands.

Yet large as the moon is, it would require seventy million of such bedies to equal the volume of the sun. The moon appears to us as large as the sun because she is four hundred times mearer to us than the sun.

The time datas within the sun.

The time during which the moon goes through herentire circuit of the beavens, from any star till she comes to the same star again, is called a sidereal mouth, and consists of about twenty-seven and a quarter days. The time which intervenes between one new moon and which intervoises between one new moon and another is called a synodical month, and consists of nearly twenty-nine and a half days.

When the moon is invisible to us, it is because her dark hemisphere is turned toward the earth, and this condition of the moon is called new moon; but when she has truxeled a little further on, and has her bright side full toward us, she is our full moon.

A new moon occurs when the sun and moon meet in the same rart of the beavens; but the

A new moon occurs when the san and posen meet in the same part of the beavens; but the sun, as well as the moon, is apparently travel-ing enstward, and nearly at the rate of one degree a day, and consequently during the twenty-seven days while the moon has been going around the earth the sun has been going formed about the same number of degrees in forward about the same number of degrees in the same direction. Hence, when the moon comes around to the part of the heavens where she passed the sun last, she does not find him there, and must go on more than two days before size comes up with him again. The moon has two motions, one of revolu-tion around the earth, another of rotation on itself. These two movements, by a curious coincidence, are made in the same interval of time. We know that there is a new moon when our satellite is invisible both during the day and night. She then occupies a place very near the sun in the heavens, presenting to us her dark hemisphere; for this reason, and be-cause she is merged in the splendor of the solar rays, she is then invisible to us.

About four days clause between the disap-pearance of the moon in the morning in the pearance of the moon in the morning in the east, and her renpearance in the evening in the west, a little after the setting of the sun.

Between the first quarter and the full moon seven days clapse, during which the form of the illuminated part approaches nearer and nearer to that of a complete circle; the moon rises and sets later and later, always turning toward the west the circular portion of her disk. About lifteen days after the new moon, the whole of her illuminated norther is one. sented to us, and the hour of her rising nearly that of the setting of the sun, which in turn rises when the moon sets. It is midnight when she attains the highest part of her course; then the sun itself passes the lower meridian under the horizon; that is to say, relatively to the earth, the moon is precisely opposite the sum.

The light which the moon gives, which we call "moonlight," is given by the sum, and is reflected back from her surface, just as it is from Venus and the rest of the planets. The mean is a solid globe like the dainets, and she does not shine by any light of her own.

The power of the light of the mean is in-ferior to that of the sun. Dr. Wellaston, by certain photometric methods, compared the light of the sun with that of the full mean, and found that to obtain meaniful as interesand found that to obtain moonlight as intense in its batte as sunlight, it would be necessary that 801,072 full mesons should be stationed in the firmament together.

When viewed through a good telescope, the surface of the moon presents a wonderful us-pect-extensive vallers, shelving rocks, and long ridges of elevated mountains projecting their shadows on the plains below. The mountain scenery equals in grandeur the rug-ged. Alpine, heights and the Apennines, after some of her mountains have been

A WOMAN IN THE RANKS

BY ELEASOR SHERMAN THACKARA DESCRIPTER OF GENERAL W. T. SECREAN

MICS, THACKARA

THE camp fires smonldered low, and most of low, and mest of the soldiers tossed upon their blan-kers, or sent up hearty signals of sound sleep in son-orous breathing. A few strugglers still loafed around the fence mils that kept up a crackle fulling slowly into embers. It was the only fire that had been re-plenished, and more than one slept within reach slept within reach of its warm glow. It was a sleepy company and yet a talkative one.

"He's a devilish plucky little man, if he is confounded pale," said Sergeant Gun. "And he sticks that close to Stewart they might be the Sianness Twins but for looks!" put in old Lag. "Srewart says they're not brothers, but just friends, sort of a Duvid and Jonathus case, but the poor lad's no subject for these d—robel bullets, nor yet for their starving prisons. It's the finest chaps get hit the first, and I bet my last canteen that little Sommers will be tucked under a hedge with cold lead in him before we see our seemed day's fight," him before we see our seemad day's fight."

"He's bound for more hard fights an one," drawled sleepy Sunggers.

And the het was not taken up.

"I describe the seeman of the seeman of the head of the seeman has not taken up.

"Let alone his last roll-call, he's a curious case, and they're both made of neighty queer stuff. Sometimes I think Stewart's more 'an half inclined to join the crowd, but that little Sommers weers round and tugs him off."

On into the night the loquacious sergeant held forth until, the listeners steeping, he beat a forced retrent to his blanket, and joined the nocturnal trampeters.

Waking the colors of the wood, reveille stirred all the camp to activity, when later load rang the call "to hoots and saidles," War moved on space, and Sergeant Gun found the stalwart Stewart and plucky little Som-mers true to their posts. All through the thickest of the battle, and whistling bullets thickest of the buttle, andd whistling bullets and bursting shells, they worked like Trojans; and the sun set upon the deserted field, and the old group round a new camp fire with some faces gone from it.

"He ain't tucked under a hedge yet!" drawled Sauggers.

"But he's spotted and doomed," insisted Seegeant Gun; "the rebs "Il have him, he's that daring. His cap was shot off, his right hoot torn and a great rent in one sleeve; but he called to nee at dusk, 'We'll he on their tracks to-morrow, eb, Seegeant Gun!"

"And so we will," echoed several voices.

"Has Stewart knocked under vet?" asked

"Has Stewart knocked under yet?" asked

"Has Stewart knocked under yet?" asked one of the group.

"Not by a long shot!" was the reply.

The two friends did, indeed, still survive; and half-reclining in the lee of a commissary wag of talked in low tones of the narrow escapes of the day, and of home. Once Sommers started up, exclaiming;

"What sort of a friend would Sergeant Gun be?"

"Much better friend then common Linear.

"Much better friend than enemy, I imag-ine; and he takes a lot of stock in you, I "Then I'll count on him," said Sommers, to himself.

to himself.

Sharing the most server privations, or snatching some little cheer around the campfire, those two held the drend of separation above the fear of death. Gallant deeds had decorated the steeve of one and then the other with chevrons which made them both corporals. Theirs were charmed lives, coming through desperate battles unseratched, though begrinned and smeared with wars ernel paint. Not in battle, but in a short skirmish made by scouts ordered upon the skirmish made by scouts ordered upon the heels of the enemy's spies, was a death wound dealt to one friend's body, but to the other's heart. All the terrors of war had not steeled heart. All the terrors of war had not steeled the surviving friend to bear the loss, which was overwhelming. The poor, battered form was rescued from the common pit, to be buried near a gnarled willow tree; half the night was spent in carring an initial on its trank. On moved releatives war, and almost at its close, a day of desperate strife, found the general in bis tent, weighing the chances of the morrow. Officers came and went rap-tilly monographs of life and death, when the is of life and death portly form of the surgeon stretched open the tent fly,

"I have a strange piece of business, general," broke in the strong, kindly voice.

"You need my advice?" interrogated the general, scarcely lessening the rapidity with which his penell traced a despatch, his eyes holf glancing at an outspread map.

The doctor came very close, and whispered in a breath;

in a breath;

"Corporal Summers has been wounded, not mortally, brought to the hospital and confesses to bring a Womas!"

"Impossible! Why, he is a brace soldier!"
blarted out the general, now actually dropping his pericil, and deserting his map study.

"It is a fact," continued the doctor, "What shall we do with her?"

"Can she stand transportation in an army

She is as strong as meet of our best men.

and declares herself ready for the march, but implaces that her secret be kept."

"It shall be. Here. Give this to Corporal Sommers, captain, and see that she is in a hospital numbulance bound north to-morrow. We ensure have a woman on this murch, even found its sequel, when those cognizant of the facts discovered that she had married but fiance on the eve of the departure of the troops, and joined him the next morning, dis-guised, to share the dangers of war with the gaised, to share the dangers of war with the man she loved.

When war summoned men to the field, women's sphere, so lingitless in peace, seemed to many to sink into insignificance. Yet to the brilliant achievements of many a hero, woman's part formed a strong, indispensable background. Inspiring the departing troops, mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts sped their dear ones to daty, even through the mothers, wives, saters and sweetness specified dear ones to duty, even through the "valley of death." Endless work for the battle-field and baspiral was nided to the tasks for the basy hands in the home. Lint bad to be picked, near rows of bandages swiftly piled, and warm garments weven. Letters full of loving cleer were wring from anxious, uching beauts to help the grips saidings. Then married hearts to help the grim soldiers. Then marked forth that great rear-guard of women whose home ties could be severed—the brave, tender-hearted nurses of the buttle-field.

There were many Evangelines in those days who soothed the last anguish of many of our who soothed the last anguish of many of our gallant men. All through the war, in greatest perli, on fields veited in the lingering, grimy smoke of the day's battle, there constantly moved a dark-habited mun, directing able as-sistants. Her heart and bands were always full of potent aid. A great statesmum of that day said of her: "Poss-essing man's nerve, woman's tenderness, and the skill of bath, her sorvices were valuable beyond description." This account mys Sister Annula of the Holy This woman was Sister Angela, of the Holy Cross Order.

The Sanitary Commission furnished many the santary Commission introduction brave women, whose names fill columns; eases like that of Mrs. Goneral Barlow, a woman of good position, who matried at the sound of the war transpet to follow her husband to his death under no disguise, working among the wounded.

WHEN TO WEAR DIAMONDS

BY FLORENCE MARRYAY DAUGHTER OF CAPTAIN MARRYAT

MISS MARRYAY

THERE 18 something stognarly fascinating about a diamond, its perfect clearness, the number of colors that bork in it and that are brought out wonderfully by the gas light, its absolute look of purity, and its sharp, finecutting all toud to make it the most beau-tiful of stones. When a woman is asked the kind of ring, or brooch, or bracelet she desires, she is apt to say "A diamonal one." And unless she has a great many jewels this is a wise choice, for the diamonal may be worn many times when the colored genus are in bad taste. Anaricans have been loughed at very much for wearing their diamonds at all times and in all places, but I think the woman of good taste and relined feelings realizes when and where she shall went ber jewels.

Diamonds should not be worn in the morning ever. ring, or brooch, or bracelet alse desires, she is ing ever.

They should not be ween when a simple visit is paid before two o'clack.

They should not be worn when one is doing charitable work.

They should not be worn where they are

Ricely to attract so much attention that they will cause envy and heart-hornings.

They should not be worn in profesion with any street toilet, although a small broach, a pair of solitaire extrings and a ring which is concealed by the glove, are frequently noticed on refined women. on remed women.

They should not be worn in bathing; this sounds a little cald, but as they have been seen in such places somebody evidently needs to be given a word or two about them.

They should not be worn to any extent, even in the evening at places of amusement, They should never be seen on children.

They should not be wern by people who are They should not be worn ny people who are in materialise.

They should not be worn unless one's gown is in harmony with them, for a soiled, mussed costume and a profusion of diamonds is a very bad combination.

They should not be worn by then. They should not be worn at all unless they are real, unless they are properly set, and un-less they are saited to the wearer.

Enormous ear-rings, padiling down the lobes of the ear, are the essence of vulgarity. Enormous pins that look like electric lights are in equally bad taste.

Choose your diamonds for their elearness and perfection of cut rather than their size. and wear them, not as did the young lady who royed all over Ireland covered with gens, unless indeed it is in the evening when the soft light is upon you and you can feel as did the poet who described her, that your beauty is far beyond your sparkling genus.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria. When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria. When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

HOME STUDY, Young and middle-aged the mental order and women given the mental and graceful instruction by Mark, at their own How is, in Book Arreycing, Histories, Farms, Processing Mark, Shorihand, etc. Adapted to all ages and both seases. Students from a way Mark. Histories no objection. Low rates and realist claim granulosed, Trial become sent free. Write to payable A Strattonia and Stratton

WISHING

BY LAURA E. RICHARDS

I wish I were a queen, All so stately, to be seen,

Mass. Richards

With a robe of gold and green, And a crown! With a face so lovely-sweet That to see it were a treat; And hair that to my feet, Floated down!

On my throne of ivory I would sit apart, and see How they came a-wooing me, Far and near.

How the armed knights would ride With their keen swords by their side, Seeking me to be their bride Fair and dear

I would watch them come and go, I would smile, and answer "No! I will not be courted so

For my crown; But when some one's face I see Who loves me, and only me, 'Twill be he, and only he, I shall own !"

Then a crowned king will ride In his golden-mantled pride; He will sit down by my side On the throne. He will say: "I give to you Crown and robe and kingdom, too, If you'll only love me true, Me alone !

Then I'll answer low and clear—
"King"—but hark! there's mother dear,
I must listen and must hear What she say. "Put away your golden wishes For they'll never turn to fishes! Come and help me wash the dishes, Little May!"

COUNTRY MAIDS AND CITY WIVES

BY MAUD HOWE ELLIOTT

It is a very diffi-decide which is the best place to live in, the coun-try or the city. Half the year I give my vote for country life. In the early spring, when the city trees soften at the tips, and grow mellow and grow mellow with the promise of a new beauty, I

Mrs. Ethert of a new beauty, I hear the voices of mendow grasses, and of rippling brooks, calling me away from the hard pavements and crowded streets of the town to the country nooks I know and love so well. Then I cry without hesitation, "To the country! Away from crowds, and business, and electric lights. Away to the fields pied with dandelions, the open skies full of the strange, sweet surprises of the spring." Summer comes, and finds mestill imppy in the country quiet. Summer passes and autumn reigns—useful, sturdy, practical autumn, with its pride of harvested grain and fruit, its rich fulfillment of spring's promise. Then I hear the voices of the city calling me to return. Rumors reach me of great concerts; of famous men who have crossed half the world to share men who have crossed half the world to share their art, or their learning, their adventures with me. Stanley is here, and I may look into the courageous eyes that have faced death for days, weeks, for months, and faltered not?

Paderewski has come, that inspired pianist who pours upon our senses a wonderful flood of Chopin's music, which intoxicates us like a pure, strong wine. Sarah Bernhardt is here, with her finished, exquisite art, which makes her the first actress on the boards to-day. her the first actress on the boards Pleasure, art, culture, education are all wait-ing for me in the city. More than these, work awaits me among my sisters and brothers, among the thousands of toilers in the great city; those that labor with their hands, those that work with brain and will, those that exhort, pray and lift men, and those who degrade, persecute and oppress them.

The voice of the running water, the rustle

The voice of the reliming water, the rustle of the falling leaves are not lead enough to drown these distant rumors of the city. I say "good-bye," to hill and valley, to the pleasant autumn fields, to the friendly kine and sheep, and turn my face cityward, hun-gry for the feest that there awaits me!

gry for the feast that there awaits me?

I have been asked to give a little practical advice to country-bred girls who come into the city to live; and it has seemed to me that the best way I could do this was by showing what I, who know both the country and the city ife, find in the city to atom for the less of the incomparable air, the beauty of nature, the peace and simplicity of a country life. Beware of mistaking the false for the true. Bo not let the glitter of the sloop windows dazgle you. Now that you have come to town. sle you. Now that you have come to town, you may need different clothing than that which sufficed you in the country; but do not fancy that the covering of your body is of any greater real importance in the city than it was in the country. It should be suitable, confortable and becoming here as there; but it fortable and becoming here as there; but it should usurp no more of your thought and time. It may be that your new position makes it necessary for you to have fine dresses, whereas your old home standard was simple and limited. If this he the case, seek out the aid of some one of the many women whose business it is to make dresses for people in your position. Give her your commissions; in securing her services you enable her to gain her livelihood, and she will enable you to be as well dressed as is proper, and yet leave you your time in which to attend to the more serious duties in life, the next and tasteful ordering of your house, the care for and comserious duties in life, the nent and tasteful ordering of your house, the care for and com-panionship with your husband and children, the study and thought which are necessary to make that companionship a precious one to them. If economy has to be regarded in the yearly expenditure, and you are obliged to make your own dresses, get through with your dressmaking as quickly as you can.

THE DAUGHTERS OF JULIA WARD HOWE

Mrs. Richards, Mrs. Elliott and Mrs. Hall

Eashionable acquaintances are no more a dressmaking as quickly as you can.

Fashionable acquaintances are no more a part of the great advantages the city can give you than fashionable clothes. Many fashionable people are very agreeable and deligistful folk, but that is not because they are fashionable; it is rather in spite of it. Try to make friends with real people, no matter in what rank you find them. It is a good thing to seek always the society of men and women whom you know to be your superiors in intellect, in cultivation, in character; it is a very bad thing to try and know people merely because they are richer or more fashionable than you. Their money will do you no good; you cannot shine in the reflected light of their wealth and position. They may, on the wealth and position. They may, on the other hand, do you a great deal of harm. What bitter envy I have seen among ac-quaintances who called themselves friends when one was very rich and the other very quaintances who called themselves friends when one was very rich and the other very poor!

Mrs. Augusta Webster, a very interesting woman, and a true poet, tells in one of her charming poems a little story which has a very good moral, I think. It is a scene between a husband and a wife. The wife comes into his library wearing a splendid ball dress, glittering with jewels, fragrant with the perfumes of her laxurious boudoir, rendy to go out into the great world where she is greedy to win attention and make conquests. He asks her to sit with him a moment while he draws a picture for her, holds up the glass of memory hefore her eyes. He describes a country field, with a band of haymakers, and the noontide sun pouring down upon the fragrant hay. The tired men are just wiping their scythes for their midday rest. Toward them comes a young girl, "brown Madge," carrying her fither's dinner to him, brightening the bright-day with her brown beauty, her simple face, her homely country grace and charm. That was the girl he sur, that was the girl he courted, the bride he married and brought to his home in the city, that her simplicity and charm might make a green place in the dusty desert of his hard-working life! and this tine and fashionable lady is the wife that brown bride has become!

If you who read this are a brown country

If you who read this are a brown country lass, and should find that your fate leads you to the city, carry with you all that you have learned in the years of childbood and maldenhood on the old farm. You will need it all in the feverish city; the memory of sky and upland, the smell of the clover, the hum of the heat that had a pland, the set that had a pland of the new will the best that had a pland of the new will the best that had a pland of the smell of the clover. the bees, the taste of the new milk, the breath of the kine, the strength which milking and of the kine, the strength which milking and butter-making have given you, the knowledge of nature's recrets; which lilad leaves out first, which oak is last stripped of its foliage, where the ground-sparrow hides her nest, when the blackberries are fit to make into jam! Bring the simple, healthy habits of early rising, of energetic work, of out-door exercise to your city home, for you will need them now more than ever before. They will belp you in gaining an understanding of the best things city life can give you, the broader experience of men and ideas, the love of art, the appreciation of literature. No matter how rich you may become, never be wasteful. Out of your abundance you should find enough to give to others, but nothing to waste. Keep some hour of the day to yourself. In the netive companionship of your new affections and friendships you need time for thought more than ever before.

No life is complete which has not had the Notife is complete which has not had the two opposite experiences which city and country give. In the country we learn to love nature, to respect her laws, which can never be set aside, save with a dire result. In the city we learn to love humanity, to respect its laws, and to realize that the social law cannot be broken more safely than the natural law. In the houses of persons of taste and cultivation we find landscapes, pictures of moor and glen, of plowed fields, of trees, of cattle, of all the sweet and reminiscent phases of coun-

I have an interesting picture before me now; an autumn landscape with eatile drink-ing from a still pool; the trees and foreground are all warm with the colors of the autumn. are all warm with the colors of the attitum. That picture is a constant reminder to me of the country, where I have learned so much that has been of use to me. I keep it where my eyes can fall naturally upon it in the panses of my work. It has helped me through many a land task and dull hour.

In the suffery of your mind been more for

In the gallery of your mind keep room for memory pictures of the old home; look often at the familiar scenes, for they will refresh you and give you strength for your new life.

Above all things never be ashumed of being country-born and country-break, for you have the country-born and country-break, for you have there an advantage which no other experience could have given you.

THE CHILDHOOD OF MY MOTHER

BY FLORENCE HOWE HALL

MRS. HALL

I T was in old New York, in a street whose very name is now strange and unfamiliar, Mar-ketfield street, that Julia Ward, the second daughter of that name, was born on May 27, 1818. The first little Julia Ward died of whooping cough, before the birth of her who has so long borne the name. Mrs. Howe tells the story of the death of this little sister whom she never saw, and it evidently af-fected her childish imagination. It was thought that change of air would benefit the little sufferer. As her mother was in a very delicate and precarious state of health, the child was sent, with two careful and responsible attendants, to a place in the vicinity of New York city. She grew worse instead of better, however, and her father left directions that if the disease should terminate fatally, a messenger should come to him, asking for the child's shoes, as Mrs. Ward would not be frightened and alarmed by so apparently innocent a message. Shortly after, he started to visit his little daughter, and meeting the hearer of ill tidings upon the road fell in a faint. This anecdote shows the intense affection of the father, an affection which his children fully recognized, in spite of the dignity. I had almost said stermness, of his manner. Mrs. Samuel Ward, a woman of gentle and lovely character, whom her distinguished daughter remembers as a semi-in-daughter remem-bers as a semi-in-valid, died at the ageoftwenty-seven, after a happy mar-ried life of ten years, during which she gave birth to seven children, six of whom lived to grow to. The beloved up. The beloved mother soon be-came only a sweet and gracious mem-ory to her children. She died soon after the birth of her youngest daughter, and when Julia was only five years old. Her husband never married again, and his grief at his be-reavement, and that reareneed, and that of his children, threw a shadow over their young lives of which they were too childish to understand the reason. Mr. Ward was a man of sterling principle and great nobility of character. He spared neither pains nor expense in the education of his children, and he code any that his daughter Julia was a child early saw that his daughter Julia was a child of great promise. He was wont to say after the death of his wife: "I must now be father and mother both to my children," and to assist him in his task, he placed at the head of the household his wife's sister, a woman of vigorous and original charvigorous and original char-acter, noted for her bright and witty sayings, and for her kind and charitable heart. She brought up her motherless nieces and nephews with great care. To her practical mind the little absent unioded. Inlie.

TWO PORTRAITS OF MRS. BOWE

absent-minded Julia, little absent-minded Julia, with her dreamy ways, was no doubt something of a puzzle. Probably she little thought of what was going on in the child's busy brain, and if she had known these youthful fancies they would have seemed to her strangs enough. The little Julia was early filled with vague longings and aspirations toward intellectual and literary life. She remembers delivering orations in the nursery to her younger brother Marion, her constant friend and companion for many years. These childish speeches, delivered with many necompanying gestures, were, Mrs. Howe thinks, as nonsensical as such youthful performances usually are. It is significant that at this age she dreamed of mounting the rostrum.

Her mind also ran much upon romance, and she determined to write the finest possible novels when she should be a grown woman! It may be said of her that "she lisped in numbers," though she herself is too modest to assert that "the numbers came," and dees not think that her early poetry was of any special value. When she was eleven years old she ventured to hand in a piece of postry to her teacher in lieu of a proce composition. This lady rebuked her young pupil for such an ambitious attempt, saying: "If you had the talent of Lucretia Davidson, you might try to write poetry; but as you have not, it is foolish to make the attempt!"

The little Julia's relatives, however, had more discernment than this school-teacher:

The little Julia's relatives, however, had nore discernment than this school-teacher;

The little Julia's relatives, however, had more discernment than this school-teacher; and when she was fourteen years of age she wrote, by request, a poem to accompany an article on Wilson's book of birds. The article was written by her uncle, I believe, and both it and the poem were published in one of the magazines of the day. This constituted the first appearance in print of our young author. When she was less than eight years of age she was twice taken to the opera to hear the famous singer, Malibran, then Signorina Garcia. These performances made a strong impression on her mind, and they were reproduced in the nursery, in a childish extravagant way, her little brother Marion, who had been with her at the opera, aiding and abetting her. It was judged best not to take the child to any concerts or operas for several years lest the excitement be hurtful to her. Her own musical education began at an early age, and at fourteen she was more predicient in instrumental music than at any subsequent period. At this age, however, she made up her mind that literature must be the main affair of her life, and realizing from experience the amount of time and practice necessary to become an accomplished musician, she decided that music must occupy with her a secondary position. At school the little Julia was not, according to her own recolection, a very industrious scholar in her early childbood. She learned her lessons very easily, and enjoyed the literary part of them. For languages she had a special talent. The French letter here reproduced, written when she was eight years of age to her bother Samuel, was found recently among the latter's papers. Mrs. Howe remembers very clearly the circumstances connected with it, as her father, proud and ter's papers. Mrs. Howe remembers very clearly the circumstances connected with it, as her father, proud and pleased at his little daughter's performance, bestowed upon her a handsome child's bureau.

Of childish fun and pranks she had a certain share, although the grave tone of the household made the merriment of the hold made the merriment of the children more sub-dued than is the case in our day. The kind aunt who brought up the Ward children took the greatest possible care of their beaith, and Mrs. Howe feels that the robust health which has distinguished has distinguished her throughout her long life is largely owing to the watch-fulness of this indy. Some of the latter's views, however, seens very singular to us. She believed in desing the chil-dren frequently. dren frequently with old-fashioned in French but simple modicines, not because they were ill, but in order to keep them well. Mrs. Howe

well remembers the grief and consternation of her aunt when she first rebelled against of her aunt when she first rebelled against these constant and nauscating doses! Having grown old enough to think for herself on these matters, she flatly refused the customary Epsom salts, thus asserting at an early age the doctrine of the enancipation of woman from the restraints of unwise, even though well-meaning, authority.

THE HOUSE AT BOND STREET AND BROADWAY, NEW YORK, WHERE JULIA WARD SPENT PART OF BEILDHOOD AND BY GOOGLE

Sant inr

Se y a long temps que le cliene vous écrire ce ne parte lette en fançais pour nous thuignes vous amil s'apen que le cons vousié dempus de temps, de verse par outelé de vous à deut at le l'allande avec impaliences, che lettre no sera par his longue, parcegne de no sus par toi pueliña avez la langue funçais/spon An se porte asur him, suba le funçais/spon le letin et la mungar et de forsi mon pueble pour rivour dans cerdena dianese de sirona Il set amon't i stem by up un homme qui sut frice loste souls à rumana en come, mon that m'a mariet avec lui from lome to the me a nechati we putt them; The lafter were and imperior to emperior amount, et een met ster fine, et een mete soon affectioners

See mise

The Letter in French written at the age of eight years

*XII.-WOMEN ON THE STAGE

BY FANNY DAVESPORT

DAUGHTER OF E. L. DAVENPORT

DO not think the stage was ever in a better condition to receive and foster talto receive and foster talent than it is to-day, nor have those in whose hands lie the power ever been more willing to assist "the girl who wants to act." With increasing competition, our managers are becoming more and more alert each day for fresh talent, and the ton-dener to combinations affects more the tendency to combinations affords more room for the debutants.

It is an undoubted fact that beauty of face and figure are two of the strongest aids for seand figure are two of the strongest aids for securing a hearing on the stage. The public likes to see a pretty woman behind the footlights. But to these prime essentials must be added something else. A woman, to win her way on the stage, must have a perfect store-house of perseverance, application, energy, tact, and besides these, talent. I have found in my career that patience, a still tongue, plenty of good nature, a good amount of common sense and a dogged determination to reach the goal before me, are as serviceable attributes as can be brought into requisition.

Real success on the stage is won exactly in proportion as a woman possesses talent and

Real success on the stage is won exactly in proportion as a woman possesses talent and brains. And it is a struggle even with these attributes. Innumerable things will count against her: mannerisms, height, weight, voice, press prejudice—these are things which a woman, if they are against her, overcomes only in exceptional cases of commanding centres.

The aspirant owes nearly everything to herself. She must, first, learn how to carry her-self amid all forms of temptation. She must have that difficult little word in our language. "No," constantly on her tongue, and know how to use it. She must be strong enough to resist presents and resent flattery. She must rise above the overtures of strangers. Herart must be uppermost with her, first, last and all the time. She must be an actress because of her art, not for the flattery and attention it may bring her. Success comes from hard work, not from time spent in listening to the soft words of friends and strangers over a late supper. After the performance is the time for rest; not for play. I have always been proud of one fact: that in all my career on the stage, extending now over twenty years, I have never been to a supper after the play. And I can see where it has helped me; and it will help any aspirant, who goes on the stage, to have a principle and stick to it.

a principle and stick to it.

If a girl goes on the stage she should be prepared to begin on a small salary. My father's first salary was ten dollars a week. I was more fortunate, since my first earning was thirty dollars a week. Money should never be allowed to measure successful woman on the stage to-day—I mean successful in the best sense of that word—who adopted the profession with the dollar mark in her mind before her art. If this little article is read by one girl who has an idea of becoming an actone girl who has an idea of becoming an act-ress simply because she thinks she can make more money than by becoming anything else, let me say to you in all sincerity: Stay away from the stage. When I received fifty dollars a week as first soubrette, I thought the salary a very large one. But when I came to pay board, washing, dress for stage and street, I had only but a trifle left for my saving fund. The salaries of actresses look large, because the public hears only about the salaries and nothing about the expenses.

An honorable living can be made on the stage, but such a living cannot be made any easier as an actress than as a seamstress. Acting is hard work, and success at it means much. From a moral standpoint: If a roman is silly, irresponsible, frivolous, easily led, she will find plenty of trap-doors on the stage; but she will find just as many in the office, the factory or the store. If a woman makes of the stage a foolish pastine, simply a vehicle for her vanity, a place to parade either beauty or her clothes, it will make a mental fool of her, and a moral wreck at the same time. But let a woman go upon the stage in the firm belief that it is an honorable calling; that good men and true women nightly have trod and tread its boards; that it is an artistic sphere in which close adherence, endurance, patience and modesty are crowned with suc-cess, there is for her a good living, a pleasant —not an easy—life, and an honorable name. As I write, there comes before me the vision of a woman who sought the stage when she was five years old. She faced its hardships at night, while during the day she learned at school. She married, had her troubles and ber griefs. Twelve children were given to her, and each in turn became her heart's choice. She saw much of the stage; its people were her companions at home and on the boards.

" This series of papers " Women's Chances as Bread-

"SLOW TO BEGINE A THATNED NUMBER" JANUARY, 1801
"WOM HER AS STREEDING PRINCES" February, "World as Descouragement, March, "Bedic Reservation For Women" April, "April, "Women as Hortons" , May, " Women as Byensoma Prices. February, I Women as Dyessoma Except.
Women as Doessoma Except.
March, Machelland Bourson.
March, Monen as Bostone.
Women as Bostone.
Women as Terresertime.
The Grid, Won Waxin to Trace.
Women as Institution Decoration.
Women as Institution Decoration.
Women as Act.
Women as Act.
Women as Act.
Women as Act.
November. THEN AS ILLUSTRATORS!

The back numbers can be obtained as ten costs each.

a light remark of woman an outrage. I never heard an unkind word from her mouth; faith and hope were the watchwords of her life. And only a few months since, as she lay upon her last bed of suffering, she looked back upon a life spent upon the stage, but devoted to everything that is good, noble and true. By the public she was beloved as actress and woman; by us, as her children, she will ever

To her a vulgar remark was like unto an oath;

woman; by us, as her contained, she will ever be idolized as mother, companion and friend. The stage is what a woman, who seeks to earn a living upon it, chooses to make it. It is not a pit of vice, except for those who choose to make it so. The woman who acts can be as good a Christian, as true a wife, as loyal to social laws as any woman living.

THE GIRL WHO SITS IN FRONT

BY MAUDE BANKS

DAUGHTER OF GENERAL NATHANIELP, BANKS

MISS BANKS

would be dif-SUPPOSE it ficult for the enthusiastic young woman who sits in front of the footlights and who longs to be an actress, to realize that of all the experiences that await her the surest, the atrongest, the most lasting is -bumiliation! Humiliation at the start; hu-miliation at the middle; humiliation at the miliation at the middle; humiliation at the end. And more helpful than lessons in electution, dancing or fencing would be the accumulation of force to endure it.

"Oh, no!" says the enthusiastic girl in front, "it all looks so independent, so exciting, so brilliant! That is impossible!"

Yes, I once played with a girl prettier than the average; young, very sweet and attractive. She always went for the corners; whenever you approached, she involuntarily moved aside to let you pass. When I got to know her better I asked her why. "Oh" she said, "people have sworn at me so much I have learned at last never to stand in anyone's way." There was nothing very independent or brilliant about that. "You can't make girls understand anything" she went on. "Everybody told methis was a hard life, but I only laughed."

I always feel like gasping when I hear that somebody has gained a start upon the stage. It means so much! So many cruel rebuils; such desperate forcing of one's courney; such

It means so much! So many cruel rebuffs; such desperate forcing of one's courage; such a lot of tears choked back; such a lot of pride crushed down; such tired feet; such hardening of one's better nature; such barter of one's self-respect! Well, it is done and the worst is past, we think! But one senson is not a life-time! No, we may be very good; we may do everything satisfactorily; we may show we are made of the right stuff—back we would not be the meanager's does and wait our snow we are made of the right stuff—back we must go to the manager's door and wait our turn; we must enter with the old humility, attend his leisure or his convenience, smile when he smiles, and pick up the crumbs he throws us with thanksgiving. All this we do to get an engagement. When we have it, we do more. We ransack our brains and we empty our pocket-book to get all we may need, for it isn't pleasant to horrow; offentimes we can't. We carry our own bags; we take the poorest rooms or fight our own fights at the hotels; we go to the theater alone, and we try to keep on the good side of some man who will walk home with us. If, as is generally the case, we have a small salary, we go to the case, we have a small salary, we go to bed cold and hungry, and we are rapped up at four, five or six in the morning to start for the next town. One day is like another, ex-cept Sunday; and when a few long, long Son-days have passed we are glad to have any-hody come and talk with us, even the man we thought too rules to exact to when we start. thought too vulgar to speak to when we started fresh from home.

At the theater we have to run up two flights to a dressing-room and be down in five min-utes; we have to help the best scenes go right, and be sure the principals get their calls; we have to, no matter how we feel or what we have to, no matter how we feel or what we want—we have to get the laugh, we have to get the tears, we have to get the gallery "hands," which are due to the piece. We are hourse and we must speak with a sweet voice; our eyes swim with headache and we must be sprightly on our toes; we may faint after the fourth act, but we must be in position when the curtain is rung up on the fifth.

The enthusiastic girl in front expects to make a great deal of money with her talcuts, I suppose. There is a fascinating legend affoot that other people pay for actresses' meals and recreations! But it isn't so; it all comes out of that same thin pocket-book which provides the dresses, the ornaments, the advertising flourishes and the bandsome photographs. Other people do not do anything for actresses without expecting pay; much more costly pay than the last few dollars out of the thin pecket-book. This is the most expensive delu-sion actresses and would-be actresses have! It soon actresses and would be actresses have? It costs a great many health, courage, character and life. When a woman pays with her wils or her smiles, or with anything but usoney, she will find in the end that no quicker or more certain way could she have taken to bankrupt herself.

hankrupt herself.

Another thing: A dashing, smart, unscrupulous woman will outstrip twenty eleverer, handsomer, better women in getting a position, getting a salary, getting a success of notoriety. It is done every day, and no wonder the enthusiastic girl in front thinks it pays. Does it? Ask the dashing, unscrupulous woman inten years, in five, in three. No need to ask ten years, in five, in three. No need to ask her; book at her and nurwer yourself. I said to a woman once, an actress: "Stage life is pretty hard on a good woman?" "Pard!" she replied "it is impossible."

I said to a man once, an actor: "Ella R-(a mutual friend) is going to leave the stage because she says she can't keep respectable on it! What do you think of it?" "I think she is right, but it wouldn't do to say so."

Why won't it do? If it is desperately hard for a woman to keep on her feet, why not say so and let the butterflies which, after all, are butterflies, and not earth-worms, find some butterflies, and not earth-worms, find some other brightness less poisonous to feed on! Many—I dare say, mest—pretty, weak girls would rather be good than vicious if circum-stances would help them. Well, let us tell them circumstances are not helpful behind the footlights. Let the amateurs at virtue, who shipwreck themselves and our profession, go elsewhere where life is easier, and leave room to the people who can endure as well as act. I to the people who can endure as well as act. I know it is a widely-accepted theory that one can't do both; but theories have their Judg-ment Day as well as men, and it is time for some kind of a Judgment Day here! Let us say an honest life on the stage is a giant's task, and perhaps the giants will come and help us. At any rate, let us say it load and frighten the butterilies!

MANDOLIN PLAYING FOR WOMEN

By CLARA LANZA

DAUGHTER OF DR. WILLIAM A. HAMMOND

MADAME LANEA

OF late years the mando-lin has become so popular in America that our national instrument, the banjo, finds itself decidedly in the minority. This is not surprising when we con-sider the unique pic thresqueness of the mandalin of the mondolin. its grace, and, above all, the sympathetic quality of its tone. With women, especially, the mandolin has become a favorite instrument in America. Men, for some reason best known to themselves, do not take to it so readily, few masculine performers being heard beyond the "professionals," and those women who undertake to play must be prepared to encounter various difficulties, some of which I will briefly mention.

In the first place a good teacher must be se-cured; secondly, a good "method" or instruction book.

I have been asked several times whether it is possible to learn the mandolin without a master, and to this question I am obliged to emphatically answer "No." Mandolin playing without a master is to my mind a practical impossibility. One might succeed, by dint of close study, in learning the notes, the positions, chords, etc. But no one could learn unaided the tremolo, or trill, which is the peculiar feature of the instrument, and is produced by a rapid motion made from the wrist. Those a rapid motion made from the wrist. Those who live away from our large cities, therefore, are necessarily debarred from studying the mandolin; for teachers of the instrument are rare as yet outside of New York, Philadelphia and Chicago. Even so important a town as Washington contains no instructor of the mandolin, and there are but two or three capable ones in New York. No doubt as knowledge of the instrument becomes more extensive, teachers will appear in the far west and the

The mandolin with which we are acquainted is of Neapolitan manufacture, and bears the mark of Vinoccia, an old and celebrated maker. These instruments are perfect in tone and quality. Sometimes the alternate dryness and moisture of our climate fails to agree with and mosture of our cannot talls to agree with a recently imported mandolin. The sounding-board develops a slight crack, the pretty shell and pear ornamentation falls off, or the bridge gets warped. Any good instrument maker, however, can remedy this, and once acclimated the mandolin will give you no further trouble. Mandolius are now manufactured in this coun-try, but not us yet equal to those made abroad I do not say this because I wish to disparage home products, but simply because the Ameri-can instrument is as yet inferior to the for-eign-made. The American mandolin is weak and twangy, while the other has a sweet silvery sound. Doubtless, as the demand increases, this inferiority of the American instrument will be overcome.

If a woman has passed what is popularly and dublomly termed "a certain age," and the finger joints are stiff, it is unwise for her to attempt to learn the mandolin. The mandolin is above all other instruments the very em-bodiment of poetry and youthful grare. Stiff is above all other instruments the very em-bodiment of poetry and youthful grare. Stiff buggers, from whatever cause, age, work—it doesn't matter what—are deadly enemies to it. The utmost flexibility is necessary, even to the simplest execution of the simplest piece. Without this time is thrown away.

But granted that you have a fine mandelin, a competent instructor, and supple fingers, do a competent instructor, and supple tingers, on not expect to become an expert performer in twenty lessons, for you will be worfully dis-appointed; years of constant study are required before any real proficiency can be attained. The mandolin is constructed upon the same principle as the violin. It is tuned in fifths, the first string being E; the second A; the third D; and the fourth G. The strings, which are of silver wire, are double, each two being tuned in unison. There are seventeen feets on the of silver wire, am double, each two being turned in unison. There are screnteen frets on the instrument, each representing a half tone. The fingering is done with the left hand, while the strings are struck with a small piece of for toise shell called a "pick" and held in the right hand between the foretinger and thumb. The pick is manipulated with a peculiar up and down moreovent called the tremolo, or trill. This is the west moreover peculiarity of man. This is the most marked peculiarity of mandolin playing, and is exceedingly hard to ac-quire. It takes at least six months for the quire. It takes at least six months for the most industrious pupil to produce the tremolo with a perfectly sweet and even tone, devoid of breaks, and even then there are a definess and delicacy of touch that can only come with time and endless patience.

Constant practice is necessary in order to retain the flexibility of hand and wrist, and a work of inertia or discouragement is sufficient.

week of inertia or discouragement is sufficient to undo the work of months. The amateur returns to the instrument with fresh courage retains to the instrument with fresh courage and inspiration, only to discover that her fingers, once so supple, have apparently been converted into lead, and that tiresome "studies" must be resumed with redoubled vigor.

I would advise everybody who expects to become an expert mandolinist to devote at least two hours a day to practice, and of these one hour ought to be taken up with exercises and scales. When a certain case in the matter of execution is attained so much time of ter of execution is attained, so much time of course need not necessarily be expended. But in any event an hour's practice each day is the minimum that can be allowed if the student desires to play really well.

I have heard numbers of people complain about the scarcity of good masse for the man-dolin. It is quite true that comparatively few selections of a superior kind are to be found here, but with every year that passes the composers who dedicate their work exclusively to the mandolin are becoming better known and more fully represented. The composi-tions of such famous European masters as Rovinazzi, Silvestri and Christofaro can now be purchased in most of the larger American cities, and in this country, Signor Tipaldi has written many charming wereseur which, with becoming gallantry, are inscribed "To the Ladies of America."

Some idea of the growing prevalence of the manufolin can be acceptained from the fact mandolin can be ascertained from the fact that mandolin orchestras, mandolin clube, and distinguished mandolin soloists, are heralded now everywhere. On nearly all metropolitan concert programmes the mandolin is made a prominent feature, and this is not surprising when we consider how wonderfully beautiful is the music that thrills from the fine silver strings, and recollect that even so great a musscrings, and reconcest that even so great a mus-ical genius as Beethoven wrote several pieces for the instrument. There is a quality in the s mds evoked from the mandolin that can be trawn from no other instrument, its music appeals to the sympathies and touches the soul. But it is so small and delicate that to my mind it should never be played without the background of an accompaniment. Most of the music that is arranged for the mando-in has a piano score attached.

A mandolin orchestra composed entirely of ladies has recently been organized in New York. Alrendy some twenty members are enrolled upon its list, and hardly a week passes without the advent of an enthusiastic organized. new-comer. The orchestra is made up of tirst and second mandolins, guitars, and mandolas. The mandola is really a very large mandolin, a sort of big brother to the little instrument, occupying the same position toward it as the violoncello does to the violin. The mandola is played with a pick precisely like the mando-lin, but it is strong with much beavier wire and is two octaves lower in pitch. Played either as a solo instrument or as an accompaniment to the mandolin, it is rich and beautiful in tone, and while it will never perhaps, create the same furore as the mandolin it is becoming quite a fad with many women.

THE GIRL WHO LOVES MUSIC

HOR the girl who loves music, or aspires to .P sing, and yet whose circumstances place it beyond her reach to secure a musical training, The Ladges' Home Jouenal made last year a series of offers of free musical training. The wide interest which these offers have at-tracted, and their positive success, have led tracted, and their positive success, have led the Journal to extend the time originally fixed, and the offers will now remain good during the entire year of 1892. This will enable scores of girls to take advantage of the opportunity given by the Journal, who were prevented from doing so last year. As doubtless all our readers know, these offers provide for a girl's musical training in wintever branch she may desire to perfect berself, at the New England Conservatory of Music, in Boston, at the expense of the Journal, which defrays all cost. The opportunity is within the reach of every girl, whether she lives in village, town or city. All the details of these musical offers will be explained to any girl who will write to us. Address, The Ladons' who will write to us. Address, THE LABRES' HOME JOURNAL, Philadelphia.

For Bilious Attacks

heartburn, sick headache, and all disorders of the stomach, liver, and bowels,

Ayer's Cathartic Pills

are the safest, surest, and most popular medicine for family use.

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co.

Lowell, Mass.

THE AMERICAN GIRL WHO STUDIES ABROAD

By Varina Anne Davis DAUGHTER OF JEFFERSON DAVIS

IN TWO PAPERS-FIRST PAPER

MISS DAVIS

OF late years a tendency has been developed among rich mothers to deport the coming American girl to be educated in Europe, Indeed, this custom has taken so firm a root in the gen-eral mind that a child who is thus reared is considered to have acquired some peculiar advantage by and vantage by her trip over seas, and, like much-voyaged sherry, is counted a subject for the self-gratulations of her possessors, and the envious regard of outsiders.

Probably were these poor little jackdaws in peacock's feathers to be asked their own opinion on the subject, the world might hear something of the seamy side of a foreign schoolgirl's existence, some of the hardships endured patiently, some of the necessary things left unlearned, and the unimportant things laboriously acquired, only to prove unwieldy ballast.

imlearned, and the unimportant things laboriously acquired, only to prove unwieldy ballast when they enter the race for society favor.

Instead of learning a lesson from insect wisdom, we do not enlarge the cell of the little larve, which are, we hope, to become queen bees in the future, but on the contrary rather seek to force them into the unrower spiritual quarters allowed in alien bives.

THE gradual process of Europeanizing is too long to be treated here. It is a pain-ful process from the awful sense of rebellion against the constant surveillance, the mortifi-cation of honesty misunderstood, the frightful cation of honesty misunderstood, the frightful loneliness which crushes at the beginning to the later submission to becoming like their surroundings, and the thousand sorrows, physical and mental, of an overworked, undervitalized human being who has matched nervous energy against phicgmatic endurance. These are all bad enough to contemplate, but there are pleusant places to remember, even in such a waste. The hardships might be overlooked were not the after-effects of such paramount consequence to a girl's future.

FROM the moment of her return to her native heath, the Europeanized American girl begins to find herself the victim of her misdirected clucation, but it is hardest of all that her strangeness is roost apparent when she is confronted with the memories of her calledhood in that home to which she has

when she is confronted with the memories of her childhood in that home to which she has been looking as a kind of beaven, where she may enter into her earthly rest. All her little peculiarities misunderstood, or unobserved, all her ideas regarded as odd, her mannerisms smiled over, she stands among her kindred an allen in her own family.

At this time, too, her supersensitiveness, a product of her bringing up, is being irritated by her sense of unlikeness, which is one of the cardinal sins in her sociology. Her ideals are also undergoing demolition, and the chances are ten to one that, in trying to express something of the revolution in her poor little cosmos, her ignorance of the niceties of English will cause her to offend. Of course, her dreams of home are not realized; an exite's imaginings partake too much of the character of a mirage to be substantial.

Few of us have not experienced this in some degree on revisiting the haunts of our youth; some park which was once endless, but which, to our adult eyes, takes on contracted limits; some spacious hall which dwindles into an ordinary room; but in the case of the returned exile, this disagreeable shrinkage of value takes place in human beings as well as things. The little familiar jokes that are a spontaneous growth in every family are unknown to her; the friends whose names form part of the conversation are names only; the peculiarities of her relatives, which sweet known to her; the friends whose names form part of the conversation are names only; the peculiarities of her relatives, which sweet usage would have made nearly as dear as their virtues, irritate and disconcert her. Yet this is the time when also must note the world's arena and conquer or fall as she may in a con-test where she is matched against the true American who comes fully armed for the is the time when also many-sided exigencies of our freer existence.

THE first and greatest difficulty, and the one which will cling like a shirt of Nes-sus, is that of language as spoken, and, alas, even more in written form. Having won her intellectural spars in a tournament with either French or German school books, the very names of men and places will sound strange in her ears, but when she shall chance to encounter a mythological reference her woes will indeed begin, for there is often only a thread of resemblance between the Greek forms used among the Teutons, or the Gallicized turn given them in France, and the English equivalent.

In foreign schools frequented by American girls there are apt to be enough of her compatgirls there are apt to be enough of her comput-riots to keep up the commoner forms of her mother tongue, but any one who has been long among them will agree that English-speaking girls abroad soon get to use a mix-ture of the two or more languages, laughable and almost incomprehensible to the uninitiated. Terms and phrases out of more ad-vanced studies are bodily transplanted into French for the reason that the Anglo-saxon equivalent is either unknown, or the scholar is too lazy to think it up. This is a habit which is of no importance while a girl is surrounded by people to whom both languages are equally familiar, but fraught with serious disadvantages when she is again placed in general society. The danger of being misunderstood, which is, in any event, the horror of budding womanhood, becomes ten-fold enhanced when any higher thought or aspiration halts it in its flight from the want of "winged words" to bear it upward. Nor has she the Greek and Latin necessary to assist her comprehension of the delicacies of verbal shading which she meets in her reading. Dead languages, although taught in boys' schools abroad, are not considered as either necessary or desirable in a girl's mental equipment.

FROM the cry prevalent about time wasted on ancient tongues, it is reasonable to D on ancient tongues, it is reasonable to suppose that here, as in most cases, blessings are only appreciated by those who do not possess them. Let any one try to cultivate an acquaintance with the higher forms of English without a previous foundation laid in the great root languages, and he will surely find that like the unwise builder who founded his house upon sand the structure will tumble about his ears in the first stress of weather.

This detelency leaves the Europeanized American without a clew to the maze of English spelling. The closer she draws to this American without a clew to the maze of Eng-lish spelling. The closer she draws to this mightly, and to her, appalling problem, the surer is she that the Sphinx's riddle must have had some connection with our orthography. The rigidly historic French, or the charm-ingly phonetic German, is no introduction to the bewildering variety of letter combination which we call spelling. Uncertain as the sea, but not equally fascinating, the adult mind is frightfully tossed about before it can learn to keep its fret in such unsteady waters, where a child's pilant instincts would have assisted its child's pliant instincts would have assisted its balance. For this as much as anything else, pity the Europeanized maiden.

Should time help her to master the intrica-

Should time help her to master the intricucies of her mother tongue, she yet may never be able to conquer the habit of thinking foreign thoughts and measuring by foreign standards; she is, therefore, totally unfit for light skirmishing on conversational fields, and finds that before she can limber up her heavy learning the point of attack has shifted to another quarter. It is years before such a girl ceases to be troubled with respit de recolier.

An American education would have saved her from this form of social malady, and as well from diffidence and lack of initiative which hides any originality still growing in her too thoroughly cultivated mind.

ORIGINALITY is a quality apt to be con-O'RIGINALITY is a quanty and to be condemand in foreign boarding schools, and even in America it usually finds its most enthusiastic admirers among the male sex.
Women are inclined, as a rule, to sacrifice personality to convention, especially in the absence of masculine critics.

sence of masculine critics.

Segregation of the sexes has another and peculiarly disastrous effect on budding womanhood. Queerly enough, it has a double and directly opposed action, bringing about masculinity on one hand, and fostering a morbid sentimentality on the other.

In a house full of brothers, a girl learns at an early age that her chances of being pleased rest largely with her capacity to fascinate, and having received this dogma into her baby spirit she sets about (though all unconsciously) finding how best to gain her end. She may play marbles, climb trees, hunt and fish, but these accomplishments will never emancipate play marbles, climb trees, built and fish, but these accomplishments will never emancipate her from the reproach of being "only a girl." As she grows older, this fact, the bane of her childhood, suddenly becomes its own antidote, and from the throne of her womanhood she lays down the law to her former tyrants. No such wholesome masculine influencedoes, or cm, exist in a boarding school, and the maid of superabundant health and strength proof superabulants the state and steeped per serves her mannish characteristics far beyond the age when she would have outgrown them in the natural atmosphere of home life. The other development of segregated wom-ankind is equally unfortunate, and it is some-times hard to say which horn of the dilemma is the sharpest, the tomboy, or the sentimen-tal, undervitalized little product of hot schoolrooms and over-study.

[Nore—The conclusion of Miss Davis's article on "The American Girl Who Studies Abroad" will appear in the next Journal—The Editor.]

WHEN YOU WRITE OUR ADVERTISERS

T the request of several of our adver-tisers, we would ask of all our renders, when answering advertisements in the JOURNAL, that they will kindly ascention in every instance that they saw the ad-vertisement in THE LADIES HOME JOURNAL. It is very often the case that advertisers make offers to the renders of the Jouanna, which are made to the readers of no other magazine, and in order to secure the advantage offered it be distinctly stated that the writer is a Jouanni reader. In a number of cases where complaints have reached us from readers that they did not receive what was promised by the advertiser, it was due to the omission of the writer to state that she wrote in re-sponse to an advertisement in the JOURNAL. It is for the personal interest of every reader to bear this simple matter of mention in mind,

SCHOOL-GIRL LIFE IN FRANCE

BY HENRIETTA CHANNING DANA DAUGHTER OF RICHARD HENRY DANA

RENCH girls are usually educated in one of two ways: either in convent schools, or by the coars system. The coars, or lectures of the College of France, like those of the University of Paris, are open to women as well as men, and are all free. The courses of study at the College of France are elective, and may be followed for any number of years as desired, and a great number of girls are educated entirely from about their thirteenth or fourteenth year by means of these free courses of study. RENCH girls are usually educated of study.

But the cours system entails much going back and forth between home and college, and as the young girl must have a chaperon, it is as the young girl must have a chaperon, it is not always a convenient arrangement for her family. Therefore, the favorite mode of edu-cation is, and probably always will be, that of the convent school, especially as all the ex-aminations of the university are open to its pupils. It is very much the fashion for am-bitious graduates to undergo these examina-tions.

Some of the Paris convents are boarding schools; others are demi-pensionnats. At the latter school begins at half past seven or eight (for day in the French school and business world is an hour earlier than with us), and the girls remain till half past four or five in the afternoon, having their midday meal and one or more hours of recreation in the school. A servant usually escorts them there in the morning, on her way to market or the shops, and their mother calls for them in the afterand their mother cans for them in the ance-moon when returning from paying visits or driving. As the boys' private colleges and lyceams are conducted on the same plan of demi-pensionsat, the father usually walks to school with the boys, and stops for them on his way home from business or the club, and the whole family meet and go off together till his way home from business or the club, and the whole family meet and go off together till dark on those long tramps in the parks and suburbs that the French delight in. If one lives near one of these schools or colleges, it is a pretty sight to watch these joyous family reunions that take place every afternoon. Nothing strikes one more pleasantly in the French than the close and affectionate inter-course so universal between parent and child. This springs naturally from the closerous system which, among the well-to-do classes, extends to young people of both sexes. The constant compeniouslip between young and old which it brings about is an immeasurable advantage to both. It keeps the parents young in their frelings and sympathies, and in touch with all their children's interests and emotions, while it makes the young people ingenuous and childlike, at the same time giving them a certain maturity of thought and feeling, a seriousness in their views of life, a friendly, confidential grace of manner and a spirit of deference to their clders, which makes them very charming to deal with, and is unconsciously a great help to themselves in steering through a period of life when a boy is inclined to be lawless and a girl to be silly.

The entire elimination from a French school-girl's life of the amusements of maturer years so often permitted to American school-girls, such as dancing parties, theaters and the reading of novels, has a marked effect on her work in school. Having few outside excitements to wear on her herves and distract her imagnatition, she throws all her fact on her work in school. Having few outside excitements to wear on her nerves and distract her imagnation, she throws all her native vivacity and enthusiasm into the more immediate interests of school life, and works with a steadiness, a well-disciplined attentiveness and power of application that are too often sadily wanting in the more frivolons. Americans. The methods of study also demand great attention and concentration, and develop to the utmost her intelligence and originality. The instruction is all oral. From the time a girl can write at all she begins to take notes and write out abstracts. These are corrected by the teacher as to both accuracy and style, and are then re-written and learned by heart. The pupils may ask questions freely, and discussions are encouraged in class. Thus they learn to listen carefully, to think freely, and discussions are encouraged in class. Thus they learn to listen enrefully, to think for themselves and to express their thoughts in good language. The studies are, perhaps, fewer in number than our girls take; but they are pursued with far more thoroughness, and on a far broader and more philosophical basis. The discipline of these convent schools is very strict, especially in the boarding-schools, where the supervision is constant day and night. The rules are many and minute, and the girls have a keen sense of honor about keeping to them. They are active, healthy, restless creatures, and will often be insubordinate and mischievous while the teacher's eye nate and mischievous while the teacher's eye is upon them, but the moment her back is turned the fun is over, and it is a point of honor to observe the smallest regulation. If a girl breaks a rule undetected she may pretty safely be relied upon to report it herself. I have known this done over and over again. The hardest rule for them to keep is that of silence. A French girl takes altogether too deep an in-terest in life to be expected to hold her tongue if there is any advice to be given, any question to be asked, or if there is any fun in the air.

The spirit of these schools is intensely democratic. There are no privileges of rank or wealth: and to level further all possible distinctions the girls always dress alike, in a uniform of plain, dark material, without ribuniform of plain, dark material, without rib-bon or ornament. The simplicity of their lives would frighten effentiate Ameri-cans. In school or bed-room their eye never rests on carpet or drapery; the idea of sofa or easy chair never crosses their imagina-tion. Will it be believed that in a fashiomable school of one hundred and fifty girls, of the noblest and wealthiest families of France, there was not a single chair except those given as a mark of respect to the teachers? The girls sat on wooden benches without backs, or on stools. It may sound strange, but I never remember hearing one of them complain of backache or headache.

Yet, in spite of all this austerity, or shall I say because of it? the girls thrive and are exceptionally contented and happy. If they are taught to work well, they are also encouraged to play well. In all things they are pay, gayly grave, gayly polite, gay in their picty, gay in the midst of adversity; they are hottempered, but generous; they flare up quickly forgive readily and forget utterly; they would cut off their right hand for their worst enemy if they saw her in distress, and do it so cheerfully that she would not suspect the sucrifice; they are full of sympathics and heroic possibilities that are never appealed to in vain.

A WOMAN'S WARDROBE IN PARIS

By IDA HECTOR DAUGHTER OF "MES. ALEXANDER"

Mass Histron

I T may be safely asserted, not-withstanding the absence of a court, and of an esten-sible leader of society, that on most points connected with the toilet Parisiennes still hold their old su-premacy. French women are often accused of extravagance in dress, and this is in a great measure true. Not that they have a large number of gowns of one sort at a time—on the contrary, they have perhaps fewer than would be considered necessary elsewhere—but they make up for quantity by quality, and each is perfect of its kind in material, make nod fluish. Good dressmakers are very expensive; a handsome visiting costume from Worth, for instance, would always cost from $150 to $230; but then even the most elsewing of women. but then even the most elegant of women only go to such houses for some of their toionly go to such houses for some of their ton-lettes, contenting themselves with smaller fry for their more simple frocks, in which cases the grander ones are often useful as nodels, or as suggestive of ideas. And although Parisiennes are more ready to wear their dresses straight on until they are done with, rather than allow those which are half worm rather than allow those which are half worn to accumulate, of course a woman with any pretentions as a lender of fashion must have gowns suitable to all occasions. First of all there are the indoor toilettes, for morning there are the indoor toricites, for morning and afternoon wear, which are quite distinct from those worn for morning shopping, or afternoon walks and drives, while visits, re-ceptions and weddings have each their proper attire. Then there are the intermediate gowns for small dinners or concerts—something between a smart morning dress and the regular between a smart morning dress and the regular evening dress, too elaborate for the former, but high to the throat, with long sleeves—a style of dress unnecessary in England, where decolleté dresses are much more frequently seen than in France, where they are almost exclusively reserved for balls or very big dim-ners. There must be a separate equipment, too, for the Riviera in the winter, and for Tranville in the summer.

ners. There must be a separate equipment, too, for the Riviera in the winter, and for Trouville in the summer.

Another fruitful source of expenditure is the attention paid to the delicacy and elegance of the underwear, the perfection of underskirts as to cut and fit, this latter detail being most necessary to the setting of the dress, while bonnet, mantle, gloves, shoes and hostery must all be in accord with the costume. This care as to accessories may seem excessive, but without it no woman is called well dressed.

Naturally, these remarks apply only to the richer classes, though in nearly all grades the outlay is proportionately large. Even in the middle classes, a girl with a marriage portion of $20,000 will spend a quarter of it on her trousseau, in which, however, house linen plays a considerable part, and the supply of personal linen is enormous. And it is only married women who dress so elaborately, girls affecting extreme simplicity.

Humbler folks, who, either from choice or necessity, are content with ready-made garments, find a plentiful supply, superior in many ways to that found, at all events, in London, and with the exercise of a little taste and judgment may manage to present a very fair appearance at a comparatively small cost.

One exception may perhaps be taken to the one page and a comparatively small cost.

One exception may perhaps be taken to the dressing of French women, and that is their somewhat sheepish adoption of any prevailing fashion. Individuality in dress is a thing almost unknown, all women being, broadly making attired on the same reattern allowspeaking, attired on the same pattern, allow ing, of course, for variations in costliness and elegance. This want of independence in the choice of raiment, while it prevents the eccuntricities and vagaries often to be found in an assemblage of English people, also precludes the development of any originality in the matter of dress, which should always be to a certain degree the outcome of the weaver's personality. There is no doubt that many personality. There is no doubt that many women gain immensely by adapting fashions to their own requirements, instead of accept-ing them unconditionally.

In the matter of millinery French women have a strong sense of the picturesque, and show a certain daring in their airy arrange-ments of flowers, butterflies, lace, or other trimming, as well as in the coquettish curves into which they so cleverly bend their hats.

As a rule, too, they have a quick eye for color, and while less precise and exacting in the question of perfect matching of shades, they generally succeed in producing an harmonious ensemble, being especially happy in the com-bination of different colors. Subdued tints and half-tones are more favored than the more decided and brilliant shades, though or-casionally one is almost startled by some won-derfully vivid continuous or deals of colors.

derfully vivid costume, or dash of color Digitized by Google

HOW A WOMAN'S COLLEGE BEGAN THE STORY OF FAMOUS NEWNHAM COLLEGE AS TOLD BY ONE OF ITS PRECEPTORS

HELEN GLADSTONE

DAUGHTER OF WILLIAM E. GLADSTONE

was in November, 1869, that there was held a meeting in Cambridge, England, to dis-cuse the question of lectures for women, and in the Lent

coss the question of lectures for women, and in the Lent term of 1870 courses of such lectures were delivered to seventy or eighty women. The lectures were managed by a general committee of twenty-four members of the University, and by an executive committee, four of whom were ladies. The scheme was self-supporting, but help was asked and was forthcoming for scholarships and exhibitions. The immediate object of these lectures was to afford means of higher education to women naturally resident in Cambridge, but it was announced that if women should come to Cambridge for them they would be required to reside either with their friends "or in some lodging or hall which had received a certificate from the committee of management." Accordingly, when in January, 1871, three students came to Cambridge to attend the lectures, they were lodged in the houses of three members of the committee; but it was obvious that it would be inconvenient to make such armagements permanently and on a large scale. Mr. Henry Sidgwick, the moving spirit vious that it would be inconvenient to make such armagements permanently and on a large scale. Mr. Henry Sidgwick, the moving spirit of the committee, promised himself to provide a house of residence for students, and invited Miss A. J. Clough to take charge of it; the house was opened the following Michaelmas term. This was our beginning; Newnham College may be said to have been founded mainly by Mr. Sidgwick in October, 1871, with Miss Clough as principal; but it consisted of five students only, it was situated at 74 Regent street, and it was not called Newnham College till nine years later.

DURING 1887 several rooms were added to Newnham Hall, which could now receive thirty-six students, and Norwich House, with space for about twenty students, was also taken as a supplementary hall, and was used for three years. Meanwhile the number of our scholarships had increased, our library grew, a chemical inhoratory and a generation were built, the whole machinery of the college became more and more complete, and the social life of the students among themselves became fuller and richer with their growth in number and variety. Early in 1879 the Newnham Hall Company and the Association were amalgamated into a new association called nam Hall Company and the Association were armalgamated into a new association called "Newsham College," formed mainly of our constant original friends, with the addition of many newer friends. The College Council at once secured additional land and began to build a second hall; they decided to place it in the charge of a vice-principal, and to distinguish the two halls as South and North, Mrs. Henry Sidgwick undertook the post of vice-principal, and with Mr. Sidgwick lived in the North Hall for two years. the North Hall for two years.

THUS the University gave us what I consider to be the main substance of its THUS the University gave us what I consider to be the main substance of its honors. Some day it will, I hope, be pleased to confer on women a recognition even fuller; but, in my opinion, it is fitting that women should, at least for some time, wait for this further gift, content to demand it mainly by showing the excellent use they make of what they now have, and trusting to the wise generosity of the University, to which they already owe se much. The growth of our numbers naturally continued when we attained to this stable position. In 1882 a wing was added this stable position. In 1882 a wing was added to the South Hall, containing a library and rooms for sine students; in 1884 two wings to the North Hall were added, containing a small hospital and twenty-one rooms for students and lecturers; and in 1885 and 1886 temperary houses were taken for twenty students. Also in 1883 the Bulfour Laboratory in the town was given to us as a memorial of one of our best friends, Professor Francis Bulfour.

THE system of separate halls within one college having proved very successful, and the need for fresh buildings being now clear, a third hall was built for fifty students, with a large and beautiful dining ball attached.
On the occasion of the opening of this bailding, on June 9th, 1888, the college was honored by the presence of the Prince and Princess of by the presence of the Prince and Thinks of Wates and their family, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Prime Minister (Lord Salis-bury), Lord Roesbery, and an immense num-bury), and non-resiof other friends, resident and non-revi dent, including about two hundred old son, dent, including about two bundred old stu-dents. A great improvement was now made in the names of the three halls; the South Hall became "Old Hall," to commemorate the fact of its being the first built, the North Hall and the new hall becoming "Sidgwick Hall" and "Clough Hall," to commemorate our chief founders and benefactors. The three halls were now in charge respectively of the principal of the college (Miss A. J. Clough) and of two vice-principals. In eighteen years the small house in Regent street, with its five the small house in Regent street, with its five students, has grown into the boantiful college of to-day with its one hundred and forty stadents, and two tripes students of 1874 have become the thirty-five tripos students of 1889.

IN 1880 a very vigorous effort was made by I friends of women's higher education to obtain from the university the admission of women to its degrees, or their formal admis-sion to its examinations. Fifteen memorials were sent in, with some thorsands of signa-tures, including those of nearly seven hundred monders of the university, of bend mis-

Service Norma-This article by Miss Gladenna is pointed as re-bodies of Newnham and Girton and of many schools. By this time numbers of students from Newnham and Girton had been allowed from Newham and Office ind been allowed to take triposes and other examinations, and had gained a high average of success, but their admission was informal and sub-ject to the consent of each examiner. Consent was usually given, but an occasional refusal reminded us of our precarious posi-tion, and made us most auxious to have with certainty, the honor and advantage of the highest test afforded by the university. Newn-baen and Girton students, therefore, joined most heartily in the appeal. In June there was appointed to consider the memorials a was appointed to consider the memorials a syndicate, consisting of fifteen leading mem-bers of the university. In December the syndicate reported to the Senate, recommend-ing the admission of women to the previous examination and the triposes, provided they kept the conditions as to residence required of members of the university; such residence to be kept at Newsham or Girton Colleges, or in be kept at Newmann or Girton Colleges, or in any similar institution hereafter recognized. Various other subordinate recommendations were made, and on February 24th, 1881, the re-commendations embodied in three graces were passed by the Senate by a vote of 368 to 32. And hence the 24th of February has since been kept as our commemoration day, when each fresh generation of students hears of the deeds of our founders and benefactors and of the of our founders and benefactors and of the triumphs of their early days, and learns to share with the early students their gratitude and delight, and their eagerness to be worthy of their college.

BETWEEN MOTHER AND DAUGHTER

By Grack H. Dodge DAUGHTER OF WILLIAM E. DODGE

LTHOUGH not a mother, I have been the chosen friend and ad-been the chosen friend and adviser of hundreds of girls, and perhaps have learned to know them even better than their own mothers. Over and over again girls have said to me: "I will treat my daughter differently from what my mother has treated me." When asked to explain, the answer has been as follows: "I will make her my friend from the beginning. I will tell her many things which I had to learn from hard lessons, and I will train ber in practical ways." From further intercourse with these ways." From further intercourse with these girls I feel that I can indeed give suggestions such as would be belieful to me if I had children to train.

First: Realize the influence of early impres-First: Realize the influence of early impressions, and do not think that a child is ever too young to be affected by them. "When should we begin to educate our children," was once asked of an able educator, and the reply was quickly given, "A hundred years before they are born." Physicians all agree on the truth of this, for a child's training influences the next generation as well as the present one, and the mother berseif has the greatest influence upon the young life. Within a few hours of birth the training should begin.

Second: Trust a child. Let her realize that she is a reasoning being with capabilities, even at an early age.

at an early age.

Third: Give all possible liberty, and explain
"why not" at times. A little child must learn some things from experience, and from learn some things from experience, and from the lips of mothers she should learn to know why certain things are dealed. It is easier to do oneself than to train a girl to do, and how often the first womanly instincts are thwarted by not being allowed to work out. "I wanted to help mother, but she would never let me, and I soon grew not to care to," said a young girl. It is tiresome to have a child around when busy with bousehold duties, but how soon they become skillful, and what a help a child of eight or more can be at home!

Floath! Neutness, orderliness, promptness and thoughtfulness are attributes admired in a woman. Teach them to the little girl of a woman. Teach them to the little girl of three and four, and aid her in cultivating them as she develops. Do not pick up tors, but teach her to do so; have regular hours for her, and give her practical examples in thoughtfulness.

Fifth: Do not be too busy to show affection. Fifth: Do not be too busy to show alleasens, or chill the girl's desire to cares you. "My affections cause me a great deal of trouble," said one of my girl friends. "I often put my arms around mamma's neck when I want to tell her anything, and she laughs at no and calls me n big baby and moves them away, so "loss almost ball to me out for affection." I have always had to go out for affection."

Do not let your daughters go to others for what it is their right to receive from you.

Stath: Friendship between mother and daughter! Is the relationship understood?

Mother and I are friends," triumphantly "Mother and I are freeder," triumplantify said a girl in the talk between a group who were discussing bone life. "I wish my nother and I were," said another, while a third with a stiffed sob-cried out, "O, if mother only understood me; if I could talk to her." Secath: A girl's life is made up of many things. She is full of theorist, full of for, full things. She is full of thought, full of fun, full Howshe puzzles and worries over life and its mysteries. She goes to her mother and asks questions, and is put off with an evasive answer, or with words like these:

"Little girls should not bother over such things." But little girls will bother over them, and if mother will not answer or help, some schoolmate will, or some older girl who will infuse evil thoughts into the mind. Hours and days of misery would be saved hundreds and onys or nevery would be saved interprets of girls if their mothers would talk to them of life and its beauty. Those who have met poor disgraced girls, will unite in the cry, "O, mothers, do not be afraid of your daughters, or of meeting with them bravely and fraukly the puzzling questions of life, as well as its beautiful my steries." Then those other right beautiful mysteries." Then those other girls who are shielded from evil, and yet enunet be shielded from thoughts. Mothers, they need you, too, and if you could read their hearts you would see how you could help them by becoming their friends and confidents.

HOW TO SPOIL A HUSBAND

BY CHRISTING TERRUNE HERRICK

Ила. Икиллек

THAT newly-married woman is an exception to the majority of her sex who does not cherish as one of her strongest and deepest convictions that her husband is the best busband n the world. Having once mentally estab-lished him apon this pedestal, she forthwith pro-ceeds to do her best to deprive best to deprive him of any moral right to remain upon it. In other words, she spoils hims.

Even the best of husbands resembles ordinary mortals in one trifling characteristic—there are some things he likes to do, and some other things he decidedly objects to doing. And among the latter may be included divers useful and admirable occupations, which do not happen to commend themselves to his taste. In nine cases out of ten the wife, instead of attempting gently and firmly to conquer his disinclination to these pursuits, humors him in his objections to them, and thus unwittingly sows the seeds of future annovance and trial for herself.

Let us take a case in point. Young A,

Let us take a case in point. Young A, while a clever man intellectually is physically while a clever man intellectually is physically lazy. He does not like to do odd jobs about the house, such as putting up a shelf here, a hook there, repairing this boss hings or that refractory docreatel. He can do it, but he doesn't care to, and his reply to his wife, when she timidly suggests that he should mend one break or another, is always: "Oh, send for the carpenter." But Mrs. A is on economical thoughts intent, and she knows that if the carpenter once gets into the house his bill will grow like a mushroom. So instead of mildly grow like a mushroom. So instead of mildly representing the case to her husband and inducing him to attend to the repairs bitmself, she waits until he is well out of the way, and then, arming herself with a hammer and nails, proceeds to much her fingers and thumbs, knock holes in the plastering, strain her back, and injure her temper in the effort to do work quite out of her province—work, too, that her husband would have done willingly had he understood her motives in asking it of him.

understood her motives in asking it of him.

Or, look at another libustration. Mr. B, when he and his wife set up bousekeeping in their cosy cottage or snug flat, had had very little experience in purchasing donestic supplies. Be it remarked, by the way, that a young husband's blunders in that time are quite as worthy of note as those mistakes the young wife is credited by the funny papers with making in her first marketing. Mr. B does not relish the businesse of buying meats, fish and groceries, and without being at all ill-tempered about it, shows his wife pretty plainly that the task is distasteful to him. What does Mrs. B do? Does she wisely resolve that it is her duty to ber lord and master to request him occasionally to take and master to request him occasionally to take his share in ordering home supplies? No; she his share in ordering home supplies? No; she quietly assumes the burden herself, going to market in all weathers, with the result that Mr. B forgets the little be ever knew about marketing, and feels aggrieved—and shows it, too—when a contingency arises obliging bins to go to the grocer's or the butcher's.

Now, I do not wish to be understood as advision, when he had to be understood as advision.

vising women to shift their own duties to their husband's shoulders. Far from it! What I do hold, however, is that it is much better for the men themselves to become accustomed to lending a hand here and there in the homes that belong as much to them, as to the wives, than to occupy the position of privileged boarders, who have few obligations beyond that of criticism.
The hisbands do not menn to be selfish, but that vice is one that grows with wonderful raposity upon the slightest encouragement, and women wrong both their husbands and themselves when they humor the little aver-sions of their better halves to ordinary home duties or small courtesies.

I knew a man once who had been a delicate boy and who, in consequence, had been care-fully spared all unnecessary exertion by his mother and sisters. As he grew to manbood he became more robust, but it was not easy for him to shake off the effects of the early spoiling. His wife weakly yielded to his tendencies to self-indulgence, instead of helping him to cure binnell of them. As a matter of course the habit grow upon him. I have seen course the habit grow upon time. I have seen him walk up stairs empty-handed, while his wife preceded him carrying a heavy valise, It never seemed to occur to him that he should help the ladies of his own family into or out of a carriage, or rise when they entered the room, or relieve them of their parcels or wraps while walking with them,

His wife was first annoyed, then burt, and ntways too proud to ask him to do services for ber that he did not think to offer. Finally, she became in a measure accustomed to his carelessness, but it never crossed to wound. Yet, and she set be self in the beginning of their married life to aid him in overcoming this fault, he would doubtless have succeeded in conquering it, at least in part.

Nearly every noun has some weakness of this sort. One dislikes to put on his dress-suit when he grescont with his wife in the evening, preferring to mortify her by appearing in morning does when other men are en grood fease. Another profests against going out in the evening of all. A third objects to waiting upon himself in such matters as patting away his clothing or papers, while a fourth has a well-roated custom of unputsetuality at meals. Others have unpleasant little personal habits, when he goescut with his wife in the evening.

such as a preference for sitting in their shirt sieeves on warm days, or a trick of picking their teeth or cleaning their nails elsewhere their teeth or cleaning their nails elsewhere than in private. Or perhaps one and all have some pet slang phrase, or prevariation, or grammatical inaccuracy, that grates horribly upon ears polite. If the wife condenes these offences in the early days of married life, when her influence with her husband can compass almost anything, she may resign herself to the conviction that she will never eradicate the habits she condemns. It is bard, almost impossible, to teach an old dog new tricks, especially when he is disinclined to learn.

Any reforms the wife attempts to pursue

Any reforms the wife attempts to pursue should be conducted with the utmost gentle-ness. We none of us like to be reminded that we are not perfect, and it is intensely unpleaswe are not perfect, and it is intensely impleas-nant to learn that our best-beloved do not con-sider us impeccable. The wife must bear this in mind; put herself in her husband's place and resolve to be tender as well as firm. An appeal to his love for her, to her pride in him, his sense of justice and his sense of what is right, is almost always a sure plea, and the result, when she succeeds, justices her efforts and compensates for her pains.

WOMEN WHO ARE BEST LOVED

BY CLARE BUNCK DATORTER OF OLIVER BELL BUNCK

T was a wise man and a deep thinker

T was a wise man and a deep thinker who said, once upon a time, that among all the good things which Shakespeare has given us, his women stand forth pre-eminent, a brilliant, bewitching, fascinating galaxy. It is doubtful if any individual, man or woman, would be gainsaid. The portraits of Rosalind, of Viola, of Portia, of Imogen and their sisters are familiar to us all. Those exquisite personalities are known and loved by numberless human beings. They have a place in all our hearts; the men adore them, and the women love them, yet they are essentially feminine, they know raught of woman's rights and universal suffrage; they are not troubled with the affairs of State, nor are they agents of reform. They are women, adorable women, into whose minds has crept no vicious longing for publicity, no lunger to usurp the sphere of man. Would it not be well to make such women models for our girls? Would it not be well to consider a little what are the deepest, truest, highest rights of womankind? Would it not be well to look ahead a bit and ponder what sort of a world will it be when femininity shall be extinct?

Women have so many rights that are truly theirs, so many opportunities for influence shall be extinct?

Women have so many rights that are truly theirs, so many opportunities for influence upon the great world, that they may stop and consider, not how to obtain more but how to make the best use of what already is theirs.

There pertains to true womanhood a sauctity and a purity without which the world must suffer. Politicians, lawyers and financiers can all be recruited from the ranks of men, but where are we to find the softening, refining influences of life if our women cause to be such?

No one who comes in contact with homes that are happy and attractive can doubt the influence of her who is their inspiration. A truly feminine woman, one who is thoroughly in sympathy with great and noble thoughts, influence of her who is their inspiration. A truly feminine woman, one who is thoroughly in sympathy with great and noble thoughts, has a power so penetrating that our girls have need of careful training if they are to learn to wield it well.

Every true man has stored away in his heart an ideal woman such as would require all the strength and power of the real individual to realize. Surely the sphere can not be low or limited that possesses such possibilities, and surely the highest, most inalignable, right must be that of realizing them.

Not for one moment is it meant to speak a light or disparaging word of that noble army of women who finding themselves thrown on their own recourses have bravely taken up the burden and borne it through the thick of the fight. To these be all honor accorded.

It is not the altent army of workers who do harm, but the ostentatious seekers after notoriety. There is no pood reason why a woman should cease to be feminine because she is compelled to work, but it too often happens that the girls who are forced to carn their own living become imbused with a spirit of bravado.

Gallantry belongs to all strong, vigorous men; their natural impulse is to protect and help the struggling woman. But what is to be done with an unexced creature, a thing neither man nor woman? In every situation in life, at home surrounded by luxury, or in the world struggling for perference, a woman's womanhood is her surest, strangest shield. the world struggling for preference, a won-womanhood is her surest, strongest shield.

Recently there has appeared in the world of letters a certain class of women writers who have thrown off the veil of modesty, and who, in the name of reform, pose as martyrs sacrificing themselves to a great work. To all such would be missionaries it may be admissible to bint that the loss of one chaste womanly woman does more barm than any number of novels can ever do good. Also, it neight be suggested that, inasmuch as books are read, not by a limited class only but by a large pub-lic, there is danger that more minds become polluted than parified by their influence.

Only an inter-lack of foundability could

Only an utter lack of femininity could make it possible for a woman to stand before the world and proclaim its vice. The harm ber example may do to the young and igno-runt aspirants for literary honors is only par-alleled by the cause she has given mankind to hold her womanhood in light esteem.

A SAFE AND PROFITABLE INVESTMENT

can be had in lots at certifith, Chicage's coming great manufacturing suburb. See map on back cover, and you'll be thankful for this hint.

Free for a Year I Medicine, district Pount Lection, Section Wheeld and Punished Magazines. For particulars what Proper Managing CETEON TEA CO., Sc. Paul, Minn.

Digitized by Google

THE BROWNIES THROUGH THE YEAR

A NEW SERIES OF 12 ADVENTURES OF THE FUNNIEST LITTLE MEN IN THE WORLD

By Palmer Cox

NUMBER FIVE BROWNIES IN FEBRUARY

> FEBRUARY rolled around,

An early chance the Brownies found To meet and talk about the way The people toil from day to day;

Some piling up whate'er they please.

And turning it to gain with ease;

Some losing what they saved for years.

In spite of all their care and tears.

Said one: "For all the rack and strife.

That may be found in human life.

From year to year, the truth to tell,

They hold to ancient customs well. They hold to ancient customs well; And in this month some moments find To keep St. Valentine in mind."

A second spoke: 'Ah! Cupid's arrow The hardest heart can deeply harrow. The miser, tyrant, king and knave, Have felt its power, and had to cave;

'Tis strange to see a grasping man Whose mind to money-getting ran, Turn round his business pen to shove In writing tender lines of love. How many thousands great and small, Yes, millions on this earthly ball, Do find surprises in the mail. Some state thereon with anger pule, Then crowd the documents from sight That hold them up for laughter light; While more with pleasure and with pride Display the gifts on every side, That prove beyond a doubt or fear They still are loved and counted dear."

"Your glowing words have filled my head With notions strange, another said. *To-night the band will undertake

Some striking valentines to make, And then to buildings low and high When all are done, wi'll quickly fly And leave them there to cause surprise, When people in the morning rise. Those who delight to pick and choose The words that best express their views,

To spinning out the strings of rhyme. While others draw the pictures fine Who to that special art incline. Thus each will have a task assigned Well suited to his turn

It won't take long, when once we start, To prove we're not devoid of art; The work will soon go off the red In which all hands an interest feel."

No other task, the truth to tell, Could suit the Brownies half so well As this which gives us such a show To tell the people what we know."

To find the paint and paper, too, And pen and ink the Brownies flew; Then safely housed away from sight. Some painted pictures half the night, While others matched the face or form With verses either cold or warm,

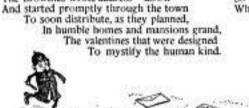

According to the kind required To pique, or please, as they desired. Some

Brownies of a comic vein From work on hand did pleasure And smiled to think how well the hit Would certain heads around them fit;

While more, with sentiment divine, Poured love into each glowing line, Until the ardeat declaration Was bound to start a palpitution.

A Brownie has a level head
Although perhaps not college-bred,
And knows just when to stop and start,
Or round a phrase to catch the heart;
And though sarcastic flings at men They may indulge in now and then, The earnest, active Brownie mind To thoughts of love is more inclined, So hearts and arrows, in the main, The Brownies' missives did contain. When every picture was con lete And all the verses had their tet, The Brownies wrote address down

Few pleasures people here below Can find unmixed with pain or woe. Whate'er the sport, the pang is near And has its inning, never fear,

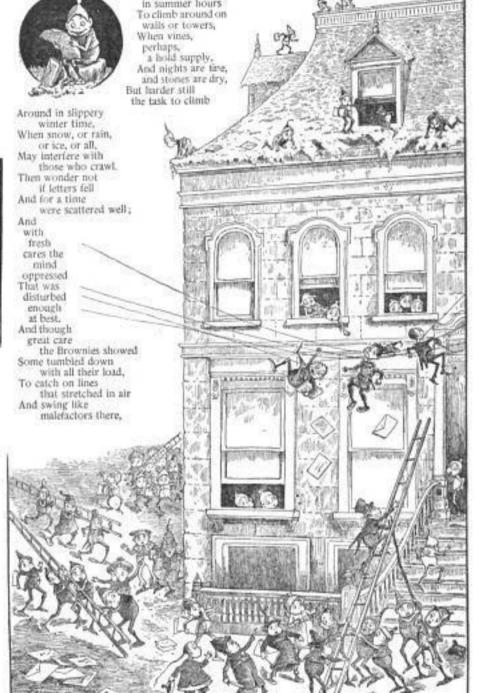

And on the roof, or window-sill, They kept their minds on business still, Till verses of a tender strain, And those of a more comic vein With pictures drawn to suit each case Could safely reach their proper place. Said one: "But that delight it brings To children to receive such things, I'd throw my packets in the fire And to some hiding-place retire, Because I've hardly got a stitch That is not torn with hook or hitch While climbing round fust like a mouse, To slip them into every house. The valentines for old and young Were into doors and windows flung;

The full grown-people, boys and misses, The brothers and the little sisses, Were all remembered by the band And valentines reached every hand.

Paineg COX

Tis hard enough in summer hours

Some by the heels, some by the head As chance the timely net had spread, 'Till friends were forced to stop their fun, And here and there for ladders run So safe positions might be gained, While yet a spark of life remained.

Just what his epitaph should be. But he who had a noble mind, With generous heart and feelings kind Was told by picture and by verse

They wondered much, and well they might,

How mail had got there in the night, But high and low on every side

The selfish man, who loth to

How mourners would surround his hearse And with sweet flowers strew the ground When he his final rest had found. While children to surmising fell Still wondering who knew them 5 > well; Knew every whim, and hope, and fear, Like kind observing mothers dear, And in addresses, full and plain They studied hard the key to gain. But every hand was strange and new, And gave them not the slightest clew

Weare creatures the night

And must vanish At day

"I know a place," another cried,
"Where we with paint can be supplied
And paper, too, of every grade
For just such kind of painting made.

And Brownies though on pleasure bent Found some mishaps as on they want, And trials that would soon outface.

Or crush a less determined race.

algoor

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

An Illustrated Family Journal with the Largest Circulation of any Magazine in the World. Published Monthly by

THE CURTIS PUBLISHING COMPANY At 433-435 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa. With Press-Rooms at 401-415 Appletree Street

Edited by

EDWARD W. BOK

In association with

MRS. LYMAN ABBOTT ("Aunt Patience") MISS RUTH ASHMORE MARGARET BOTTOME ROBERT J. BURDETTE KATE UPSON CLARK FOSTER COATES MAUDE HAYWOOD Ениа М. НООРЕК MRS. LOUISA KNAPP MARY F. KNAPP ISABEL A. MALLON MARIA PARLOA EREN E. REXPORD ELISABETH ROBINSON SCOVIL REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D. KATE TANNATT WOODS

Advisory and Contributing Editors. With representatives at London and Paris.

Rates

Subscription One dollar per year, payable in advance. Single copies ten cents.

Advertising Rates

Five dollars per Agate line each insertion before (this) editorial page; three dollars per Agate line on succeed-ing pages and all covers. Reading Notices, six dollars per Nonpareil line. These rates are net.

BRANCH OFFICES:

New York: Potter Building, 38 Park Row Boston: 7 Temple Place, Cor. Tremont St. Chicago: Chickering Hall Building San Francisco: Chronicle Building

LONDON OFFICE:

53 Imperial Buildings, Ludgate Circus, E. C. English Subscription Prices: Per issue, 6 pence; per year, 6 shillings, post-free

Philadelphia, February, 1892

AT HOME WITH THE EDITOR

by many, that the children of famous parents rurely achieve distinction or inherit the talents of father or mother. With such a belief The Labins' Home Journal has never sympathized. While there are, of course, conspicuous cases where the genius which gave distinction to a family has died with a single member, there are a greater number of instances where that genius has been inherited. T is a belief, maintained been inherited.

been inherited.

It was to prove, in a measure, the conviction in this latter belief that the editor of the Journal conceived the idea of issuing an entire number, apart from its regular departmental features, made up in prose, verse and fiction from the pens of the daughters of famous parentage. This we have sought to do in the present number of the Journal. As will be noticed, the entire eleven pages proceding this, with the exception of the single one given over to Mr. Palmer Cox's "Brownies," represent in each contribution the work of a daughter born of famous parentage. And in the large majority of the instances given Fame has crowned the writer herself. By many the fact perhaps would never have been noticed that so much hereditary talent is making the literature of hereditary talent is making the literature of to-day, and it is only when this scattered tal-ent is brought together, as in this instance, that the truth will come home to hundreds of periodical and book renders.

It is for the first time in American literature that this striking evidence of hereditary genius has been brought between the covers of a single magazine, and the Journal feels a peculiar satisfaction in an achievement which it has found possible to make so conspicuously successful. Of course, many who are entitled to be represented in this number are omitted. For different reasons it was found impossible to have represented the work of such electors. to have represented the work of such elever women as the daughters of William Collen Bryant, Longfellow, James Parton, Louis Agassiz, Charles Kingsley, General Grant, and others. But a sufficient number, we think, have been brought together to make a unique contribution to literature, and at the same time to demonstrate the truth of heredi-tary genius in families.

tary genius in families.

And as a fitting complement to the work presented to the public by these elever daughters, the editor has persuaded several of our well-known mothers to tell the methods pursueal by them in the training of their daughters. To these contributions the editor has circerfully given up has special page this month, in the hope that in them many a period and their many that a belieful one. perplexed mother may find a helpful suggestion in the training of her own children.

MRS. JULIA WARD HOWE'S METHODS

In the rearing of my girls I was fortunate in baving the aid of one of the foremost educators of his time—my husband. We agreed at the outset in desiring for our children the most solid instruction that we could command, and also, in preferring school education to the lessons of a governess, even of the most accomplished description. We were not inclined to choose for our children the most fashionable of the schools within our reach, and this for two reasons: First, because we thought that the curriculum of such a school was likely to be more showy than solid; and was likely to be more showy than solid; and secondly, because we feared that in the associa-tions there formed, exaggerated impressions of the importance of fashion and of wordly considerations might be communicated which might give a false tone and coloring to a young might give a false tone and coloring to a young girl's start in life. We desired to cultivate in our children sound and thorough views of literature and art, but did not cherish either in them or in our own minds any especial ambition in either of these directions, trusting that natural gifts would develop under kindly influences, and dreading what I may call the pursuit of false talents, i. e., accomplishments founded upon no natural bent or inclination.

In religion, we were anxious that they should combine reverence for traditions of the past with independent thought and persuasion. In this, as in other departments of training, our aim was to avoid shams, and to keep to sincerity and singleness of heart. In the careying out of these views, my bushand naturally and proper-these views, my husband naturally and proper-ly had much to say. He would not allow me to take the children to Theodore Parker's meetings, because individuals in the congregation were accustomed to read newspapers while waiting for the service to begin. This, he thought, would interfere with the feeling of rev-erence proper to a time and place of worship. He attached great value to household training eremce proper to a time and place of worship. He attached great value to household training and work, and would have had his daughters proficient in the niceties of old-time house-keeping, a thing difficult of accomplishment in these days. Great attention was paid in our household to the hygiene of diet, bathing and exercise. Early hours were enforced upon the children. Much of their play was out of doors, in a large, old-fashioned garden which they still remember with affection.

I will say, instly, that they had free necess to us at all times, and that no terrors restrained them from confiding in us all that beful them and most of what they did. This freedom of intercourse had some inconveniences, but in our view did not compare in gravity with the pain and danger of the distance which the old custom and discipline formerly placed between parents and children. In regard of this, Dr. Howe sometimes used to say: "My dear, we have brought up a republic, and we must take the concequences." And I am glad to say that neither in the past nor in the present have our children given us any reason to regret this feature in their bringing up.

Julia Wand Howe.

MRS. A. D. T. WHITNEY'S MAXIMS

WE Americans say "bring up," the French have "elevate;" in sonse places the English word is "raise." Our phrase tells it best. The others might mean something mechanical; something of educational lever or derrick. This is otherwise. We are to "bring up" our daughters, with owners, the may we are going. To what, then? To whatever you choose. In that lies the responsibility. Life is choice. Creation is choice. What we is choice, Creation is choice. What we choose, we create—ourselves, our worlds. For there are worlds many.

In three paragraphs, let us consider three of them. Home; books; society. In these chiefly, just now, our life shapes itself. Whatever you choose in your household, of ways, them. Home; books; society. In these chiefly, just now, our life shapes itself. Whatever you choose in your bousehold, of ways, words, things make up your home. You cannot choose these on one plan, and bring up your daughters on another. They will not go that way. They will grow to what you live in really, and underneath all make-believe, even the most pious. Choose then from the best of yourself. Get and express and keep to that, having no makeshifts and no shams. We are learning pretty well how to build houses; but do the homes, half the time, fit the houses? Are they drained of all that could lower or contaminate vitality; open to all that is high and broad and cheerful; sired and sunned with the breath and shine of heaven? Do our very chimneys always draw? I made a fire the other day in a new one. I smoked my friend (the editor of the Journals, by the way) and myself out of the room. by the way) and myself out of the room.

The flue-stop was closed. Is the upward channel always open from our heartlestones?
See to that, then kindle upon it fearlessly.

See to that, then kindle upon it fearlessly.

Books are a world of life that you make to yourself by choosing. Into this world you bring your children. You gather about you in it the companionship of knowledges and imaginations that you gladly dwell in. Choose for your daughters so. Do not lead them under influence of thought that you would not have them take up for their own; do not put them among people in a story with whom you would not put them in real intercourse.

Society. How much is friendship—bow much is visiting-list? Are you isside a true circle—in heart and center of something vitally uniting—or only revolving painfully ground a uniting—or only revolving sainfully ground a far-off or imaginary point? Do not put your daughters into circumferences. Do not is and chill them in twilight margins.

and chill them in twilight margins. Draw and be drawn by generous, genuine attractions, choose one by one from gift and circumstance the associations you can dwell in; make, not seek, your social world.

David, the king, sums it all in beautiful aspiration: "That our daughters may be as corner-stones, polished after the similitude of a temple," Not caps, nor pinnacles, nor towers; but corner-stones, made shining, fair—not valuly, but as a secret thing. Only the King Himself and the King's daughters are so likened in all Holy Scripture. so likened in all Holy Scripture.
ABELINE D. T. WHITNEY.

AIRS. ADMIRAL DAHLGREN'S AIMS

MY first aim in the education of ray M daughters was to firmly implant the religious principle. In the cultivation of the mind, the essential point was to discover, if possible, the peculiar adaptations, and train in these directions indicated by natural gifts, inasmuch as education is not creation, but development welopment.

With regard to an acquisition of the various accomplishments of nesse, drawing and the languages, I have deemed it imperative to let mature point the way.

In moulding manners, it has seemed to me that the influence of the home circle was most that the influence of the home circle was most to be desired, and that from earliest childhood a certain training in the usages of polite society must be given. With this object in view it was my habit, toward the close of the dinners or for a brief period each day, to accustom the children to be presented in the drawing-room, thus permitting them to gradually acquire that case of manner which force of habit alone can insure. But it was my aim to confine social training absolutely within the home atmosphere, not thinking entertainments of any kind whatever desirable for young girls unless accompanied by a matron, and even then under accompanied by a matron, and even then under restrictions. The influence of children's parties I have always deprecated as likely to arouse undus love of dress and display.

The foundations of physical culture I have thought to be best had by instilling, as far as possible, a genuine love of nature and of raral life. In order to secure this blessing I con-sidered a country bone during half the year as invaluable. as invaluable.

MADELEINE VINTON DARLGHEN.

HOW GRACE GREENWOOD PLANNED

FOR my daughter's education I had some good plans, I think. In the beginning she should sequire French, without wrestling with "la gratomaire." She should lave a Parisian nursery governess, I, myself, spenking as much French to the child as I could without undoing made no oselle's work. She should be what I was not a mathematician. She out undoing made to oscille's work. She should be what I was not — a mathematician. She should never go to a boarding-school—never? She should have not confectionery, pickles or paper-covered novels; nor frequent balts nor theatres. Her reading should be systematic courses of history, biography, philosophy and ethics! She must be on easy terms with science; all alive or dead languages; in music and art of the classical school.

Well, how was it? My daughter had for nurses, Grotchen, Bridget, Dinah—no Nannette, no Fifine! She had to go to France to unlearn the boarding-school lingo. She early got lost in the mazes of the multiplication table, and never found her way out. She went to only three boarding-schools, but had a good time in all. She was not proof against sweets, and she adored peckled-limes! She refused to be confined to classic literature, art or music; and she adored pickled-limes! She refused to be confined to classic literature, art or music; she preferred leading to reading the German, Dickens to Darwin, Shakespeare to Emerson, the theatre to academic groves; has always loved better to study human life and character than science or philosophy, and has chosen to learn geography and foreign languages through travel.

In my planning, you see, I made too little account of natural peculiarities and proclivities—of those grim mar-plots, "circumstances over which we have no control," and that stern master of us all, Kismet, or Fute!

Grace Greenwoon.

AN ENGLISH NOVELIST'S PRINCIPLES

AN ENGLISH NOVELIST'S PRINCIPLES

This question of "How I Educated My Daughters" is rather a tremendous one, and it is difficult to answer. Did I educate my daughters? or, did they educate me? I suspect it was a case of reciprocity. I fear I had little or no method, and few, if any, profound convictions. My first idea was to make the dear things as happy as I could; next to give them every chance of learning. I had no special rules. Indeed, our family life was a kind of republic, where nature established a certain balance of power. The only unpardomble sins would have been falsehood and selfishness, had they ever mised their Hydra heads. We were by no treams angelie! We had our little tiffs, but we had an honest regard for each other, and for each other's rights. You see, I was at school myself all this time, so my girls looked on me as a companion rather more experienced than themselves, though a little behind the times, because they went finiter than I did. I dare say I was too indulerent. Should I have done any bester. they went finter than I did. I dare say I was too indulgent. Should I have done any better had I held the reins tighter? I trow not; the results have not been bad.

results have not been tud.

Now, I by no means recommend this system, or no system, to others. Some girls want more discipline than others; some, more supervision, but on the whole, with English and American girls, "bonor," is a potent prinand American girls. "nonor" is a posent prin-ciple, and is the religion of freedom!

The one way to accomplish any and all good results of training is by the exercise of infinite patience and unremitting labor. Never despair of their ability to succeed in conquer-ing a fault, or fastering a virtue; for encouragement is looked for from the mother, and there is no counting the harm that may be done by a disheartening look or word. Our daughters are the guardians of the world's future destiny, and I believe most strongly in keeping this fact before them. When a girl realizes that her little faults of vanity, disorealizes that her little faults of vanity, diso-bedience, waywardness or ill temper—and these are usually the worst of our girls' failings— mean not only present discomfort to herself and parents, but possibly future misery to others, she has a strong motive power for the conquering of her failings and foibles.

Finally, there is a rock on which the great work of education of a daughter or son may be safely built: It is love, streaked with the ore of common sense! "For love is the whole fulfilling of the law."

ANNIE HECTOR ["MIS. ALEXANDER"].

MR. AND MRS. BEECHER'S PLANS

H OW did I train my children? I do not L know. Do parents ever carry out the plans they made and thought so perfect when their first child was given them? Have any adhered to the first rules made, and, perisaps, practiced, while the child was young all the up from babyhood to maturity? How seen parents learn that no two children are so near alike that the same course invested as well alike that the same course succeeds as well with all their children as it may have done with their first!

with their first!

How soon experience, governed by love, develops the unsafe points in the first rules adopted for the guidance of parental authority and government! The youngest children are usually benefited by the lessons their parents have learned through their experience with their first children. And if one is taken, ah! how the parents' ideas of true parental government are modified!

I can recall very clearly the plans Mr. Beecher felt should govern us in the management of our children. Implicit, unquestioning, immediate obedience was to be the law, from which there must be no deviation. Disobedience, falsehood, wrong-doing of any kind, must be instantly checked by panishment sufficiently severe for the child to understand; there could be no trifling with parental authority. He was most kind, most gentle and ment sufficiently severe for the child to understand; there could be no triffing with parental nathority. He was most kind, most gentle and loving, lenient to simple childish faults and folibles, but for wrong-doing, which he felt be must not overlook, unfiltechingly firm. Parents often assure their children that they suffer more in being obliged to punish than they can in being punished. But the children are often inclined to doubt that statement.

Yet in Mr. Beecher's onse I know he never said a truer thing.

A few years passed by, and we still felt that the rule we had adopted was correct. Then our little Georpie was taken from us! It was our first real affliction. After that, I saw that Mr. Beecher began to feel he might have somewhat misjudged, and that greater watchfulness would, perhaps, better abield children from many temptations to wrong-doing, and save the necessity for punishment. Little Georgie's less was a very severe trial, and through the sorrow we were led to a midder interpretation of parental daties. A reproof, and the parents' evident grief that the child had done wrong, was often found to be a more powerful preventive of disobedience than a whipping ever was.

evident grief that the child had done wrong, was often found to be a more powerful preventive of disobedience than a whitping ever was.

Then little, bright, loving Katie left us! And from our great grief was born a still stronger conviction that young parents require years of experience before they can perfect and establish the most judicious rules for the government and training of their children.

It was not often that Mr. Beecher felt the necessity of reserving to severe vanishment.

It was not often that Mr. Beecher felt the necessity of resorting to severe punishment, even from his first experience of parental responsibility, but when deemed necessary he followed unhesitatingly what he felt was a duty. But the loss of these children and others after, sank very deep into our hearts, and led to a more carnest and prayerful examination of what might be the wisest and most judicious course for parents to pursue in bringing up their children. Each year Mr. Beecher was more and more convinced that faults and wome doing were more truly overcome by was more and more convinced that faults and wrong-doing were more truly overcome by loving kindness than by punishment.

Then came the greatest trial we had ever experienced. Our lovely twin boys went out of our sight together! They were the joy and pride of our hearts, and their loss seemed almost insupportable. Their memory and the sense of their loss never faded from their father's heart. His ideas respecting the training of children, which had for years been greatly modified, after this loss became fixed. "Looking back over the past," he said to me one day, "I ree no time where I could not by an earnest but gentle and loving append or expostulation have done our children more permanent good than by a severe punishment, permanent good than by a severe punishment, however much it may have been deserved. No however much it may have been deserved. No matter how much they may love their parents, after a child has grown out of babyhood, a boy particularly, however submissive be may become, feels in his heart the indignity of a blow, even if that feeling is not openly mani-fested. An appeal to a child's love or honor-would have made a more indelible impression, and borne choicer fruits."

From that date I do not think Mr. Beecher ever resorted to cornoral numbers. But ever resorted to corporal punishment. But whether, in the early days, when it was sup-posed to be the surest mode of conquering childish faults, or later, when through great sorrow a gentler, but equally effectual way was opened, I never feared that under their father's guidance our children would go far astray. Mrs. HENRY WARD BERGUER. astray.

"MR. BEECHER AS I KNEW HIM"

IN order to find room for all the contribu-tions to this special "Famous Daughters" issue of the Journal, and to secure in its front pages an essential continuity, Mrs. Beecher's fourth reminiscent papers in her series of "Mr. Beecher As I Knew Him" is, with her approbation, omitted from this number. Mrs. Reacher's series will, of course, be resumed in the next (March) issue of the Jourson, and continued to the close without further interruption. The editor begs also to state that outing to the flattering stacess of this series of reminiscent papers, Mrs. Beecher has been induced to extend the number beyond the six articles originally announced and contracted for. The additional matter contributed by Mrs. Bescher will extend the length of the series to, at least, nine papers—an announcement which, we feel confident, thousands of our readers will receive with pleasure. Four papers in the series have thus far been printed, and our thousands of renders may therefore have forward with absorpt to five more articles. look forward with pleasure to five more articles by Mrs. Beecher. It may be stated just here that Mrs. Beecher's articles have been univer-sally received by the press and public as the most interesting series of papers of a reminiscent nature ever printed.

Digitized by Google

"Perhaps it may turn out a song, Perhaps turn out a sermon.

T goes without saying that man—weak, valu-man—the baser and weaker sex, compels thegentler and mobler gender to dance in the back row when it comes to great business enterprises and Napoleonic deals, but "It isn't so?" Don't interrupt when you can avoid it, and never interrupt when you can avoid it, and never contradict under any circumstances, no matter how great the provocation nor how strong the inpulse, if you can help it. I say that woman is almost never a successful gambler on a colossal scale. She is too timid, or too good, or something, to go to the penitentiary or Canada, with millions to her credit, and hundreds of young men contemplating her career with administion, resolving to follow in her footsteps, but without getting caught.

A WOMAN'S "operations" are on a small plane. She will keep her ticket if the conductor overlooks her; don't say she won't, as you are just aching to do. I've caught her at it; you are the very woman, too. It was a limited ticket, at that; expired the same day, before you got home. Don't you remember? You gave it to your Aunt Ellen, when she was visiting you; she tried to go home on it, and they took it up and made the poor oid lady pay local fares all the way; charged her ten cents extra every time, and gave her fits for not buying a ticket. But, bless you, while you were doing that, and giggling softly to yourself to think how you had saved three dollars and sixty-five cents—paid that for a ticket and self to think how you had saved three dollars and sixty-five cents—paid that for a ticket and then didn't use it—the fat man with the pad-lock whiskers sitting just behind you had wrecked that whole railroad for nearly three millions, and the conductor who snarled at your Aunt Ellen when he caught her trying to pass an expired ticket, touches his cap when he speaks to that great dend-head, calls him "Sic." and thanks him when he grants, and reductantly permits him to look at his pass. That's the kind of robbers we are,

M. EN are above picking pockets or lifting overcosts off a hat-rack, unless times are very dull indeed. But when it comes to "looting" a bank or stealing a farm, our office hours are all day. A good, housest woman will pass two seats full of children on a train, four of them free and two half-fare; youngest is nine, and they're all under twelve; she prosts a senious region half-fare for the second tests are instructed. tests against paying half-fire for the second one; says she never had to before, and she will have her husband speak to the president about it. She says this within a tone that leaves the awe-stricken passengers in doubt whether she means the president of the Initial whether she means the president of the mat-way company or the president of the United States. Everybody is profoundly agitated except the conductor. He has heard something like that before. Her husband, who is to speak to the president, has escaped into the smoking-car, knowing what she was going to attempt. He tells her afterward that it just made him prince and crinkle with neartification to think He tells her afterward that it just made him cringe and crinkle with ascrification to think of it; trying to swindle the railroad out of haif-a-dozen fares; it was no better than stealing. But he comes home that night in splendid spirits. She may take the children and run down to Florida for a couple of weeks. He caught Charley Putteneall on February corn and squeezed him until you could hear him squeal clean into the middle of May. And does she resember that Manitoba Ice Trust stock, for towing icebergs from Alaska and sawing them into blocks just the inside size of the refrigerator, for use in the Southern states and the West Indies, he has been hanging onto until his eyelashes were beginning to pull out? Unloaded the whole business on an orphan asylum down in Tennessee. That's the way he operates. That's the way he operates.

WHEN you steal, oh "last, best gift". who said you did steal? you do steal—accent heavy on the "when" and secondary emphasis on the "do"—when you do steal, it is like a child's half-guilty, halfnnocent little pilferings from the cookey jar. And the sublime expression of unconscious innocence which you assume is so overwhelmingly superabundant that the recording angel, who has had a bosy day of it with your lateband, laughs as be makes an entry of your pygmy offense, until his shaking hand so blurs your account that it looks like something to your credit. And no doubt the other angels, glancing over his shoulder, are deeply impressyour credit. glancing over his shoulder, are deeply impressed, and say if ever there was a good womanyou are her. Eh? oh, "she." I stand corrected; they say then, "If ever there was a good woman she are." How do I know sneels talk that way? How do you know they don't? You should know, because you married one? Ohl yes, so you did. I went to school with the angel you married. He used to have wings like pearly-tinted clouds at sunset; before he moulted. Hasn't any plumage now but rin feathers, and I heard on plumage now but pin feathers, and I beard on the street the other day he wouldn't have them if ever he tried to steer another wheat corner while northwestern deliveries were coming in.

BUT when it comes to shopping, with or without frills, we lay the cake at the feet of lovely woman. Some of it ought to be laid there; makes the most durable paving material known, second only to good intentions, which, you may be aware, are mixed with asbestos. A woman can buy better goods in a man's own line, and for less money, than he can. Nevertheless, it takes her all day to do it. If she counted her time worth so much an hoor, as a man does, hair-pins would cost her boor, as a man does, heir-pins would cost her four dollars a dozen. I wonder if women never estimate their time on a dollar and cents valuation? I trow not. No oftener than a transvaluation? I trow not. No offerer than a truns-Mississippi farmer counts his farm machinery and implements as part of his capital. He buys them on credit, uses them once, then de-votes them, like ships, to the gods of the wind, the hall and the rain, snow-drifts and cyclones. Then when the spring-time comes gentle An-nie, as it is liable to do about once a year, he tries to remember where he left the first thing he wants the last time he used it; finds it if he can, and if he can't buys another and joins a society to throw off the galling yoke of the rapacious and avar'cions manufacturer. rapacious and avaricious manufacturer.

BUT I was speaking of the value of time, and I sit here wasting it by the ink-barrel. However, my time is worth so little that I can waste a great deal of it and not lose much. Sometimes I spend a whole afternoon in less than half a day, and have to go to bed on tick. But it pains me to see other people waste time by doing things for themselves which other people could do so much more quickly and chengly, and so much better. I used to work hours and hours making a corner cupboard or a "beautiful and convenient wardrobe" "at small expense, at home," varying the exciting monotony of my labor by trips down town after more material and new tools, and more nails. After I had bent all the nails and twisted one-half the heads off all the screws, and broken all the new tools and several of the Commandments, and had cut and several of the Commandments, and had cut up all the kid gloves in the house for finger stalls, and had wrought myself into such an ecstasy—we used to call it an "ecstacy"—that I could only catch fugitive glimpses of my family flitting cautiously and swiftly through the more where I was having my fit I would the room where I was having my fit, I would go down town and buy the thing I was "mak-ing," for the price of a poem on "The Peace of Home," beginning.

Sweet twilight hour of holy thoughts, Blest mement of the soul's repose,"

NOT many moons ago, not quite one moon, in fact, I sailed away on a shopping excursion with my Cousin Winifred. I am rather fond of such excursions. I had rather spend money, or run a bill, which is much the same thing, than earn it, any time. It is not in the way of man to shop very well, and Cousin Winifred said she would help me. Something she wanted; several things, probably. I wanted about a thousand things, but there was one thing I was going to huy—a cul-Something she wanted; several things, probably. I wanted about a thousand things, but there was one thing I was going to huy—a calendar. I wanted it for a particular purpose, and was very particular about it; therefore I took her along to help me select it. She helped ne. First thing we saw was a window with calendars in display. "There," she exciained, "is just what you want." I looked at the samples, and passed on, saying I would look farther. "Well," she said, "if you aren't the funniest man; you come all the way to tour to buy a calendar, and come to a store that has them, and don't buy one." I hesitated, and was lost. I meekly went back, walked into the store and bought a calendar. Sometimes I am so meek it just makes your heart ache to look at me. Not at all times; just sometimes. "There," she said, "what is the use of wasting half a day over something you can get in five minutes? Men don't know how to shop." Then she graciously dismissed me, saying she had some shopping to do herself and I would only be a drug. At eventide we met in the station, "Get what you wanted?" I seked, "No," she said, wearily, "I didn't, because I couldn't find just what I wanted. I went all through John Lordantallor's, and back again to Macyletter's, and up to Jordanbridge & Marshier's; I've dragged all over this whole town and I'm tired nearly to death, so don't talk to me. I've got to come in again to-morrow." to death, so don't talk to me. I've got to come in again to-morrow."

THEREFORE I perceived that, as it happeneth to the man, even so it happeneth to the wonsan, and that it maketh a whole multi-plication table of difference whether one payeth a rainbow belinet of silk and lace for the uneasy head that weareth one's own head uneasy head that weareth one's own head gear, or an ornamental calendar for a gross, earthy man. For what need hath man for vexation or traveil of spirit when it is so easy to rap on the counter with his cane and cry about.' Gimme cuppl hundered calendars! But when it comes to buying a whole spool of twist, oh well! that is quite another thing; that is something you can't do in the same day, and do it right. This, also, is vanity and vexation of spirit. No one should ever try to do anything which some one else can do so much better for them at less expense. It's too much better for them at less expense. It's too hard on the rest of the family.

You know how sometimes a very little thing pleases you must immensely, when, possibly, an overdose of the same stimulant would merely stupefy you? Not longer ago than the flood I was delighted to observe two women, sitting in the great Broad Street Station in Philadelphia. They had been on a shopping foray, and were returning home laden with the spoil. They were animated and chaffy, and evidently very warm friends. It was pleasant to listen to the murmurous flow of their conversation, broken by merry ripples of their conversation, broken by merry ripples of laughter now and then. They stowed away their many knotted parcels in shopping bugs and shawl straps, until at last everything bags and shawl straps, until at last everything was ship-shape, except one parcel. One of the ladies held this in her hand with a troubled look. Suddenly a bright thought lightened her face like a winter sunbarst. She turned to her friend: "Have you a pocket in your dress you can get at easily?" I saw the 'smile die out of her friend's eyes, and the curve of her parted lips straightened itself out into a firm, implacable slit. She looked at the parcel; it was about the size, and dangerously near the shape, of a pair of overshoes. And the woman looked upon it fixedly and said firmly. "No." That's all she said; every word. The sunshine passed away from the hopeful face of the woman with the parcel, she laid the suspicious looking thing in her lap, crossed her hands, and said, "How close it is in here."

Do you know-but of course you don't; you don't know anything. Eh? Well; Do you know—but of course you don't; you don't know anything. Els? Well; I told you nearly two columns ago never to interrupt; let me finish my sentence—that isn't worth knowing. But whenever I see a man on the street, carrying a pair of overshoes in his overcoat pocket, I know that when he gets home he will have to put the baby to sleep. More than that, his wife drapes her dresses on him. I don't know anything that makes a man look mecker than carrying that burden. He can carry anything else, and makes a man look mecker than carrying that burden. He can carry anything else, and naintain his independence; he can even carry a package of lamp chimneys, linen cuffs and haby's shoes which his wife has wrapped herself and pinned, sending them back to the store by him—not necessarily because he got the wrong kind, but because a woman has a firm conviction that under the Constitution of the United States and the Rules of Discipline of the church of which she is a member, she is compelled to send back anything her lusband buys and exchange it for squething else just like it. But a man can carry a bundle—that't just what it is, a bundle—of this appalling and chaotic description and look independent; nay, he has been known to this appalling and chaotic description and look independent; may, he has been known to stride along with this assorted freight, its frail envelop gaping at every pore, and look deflant; but wrap a pair of overshoes, too small for any living man, disguising the parcel never so defity, and stick it in his pocket, and if he was a train robber he would look meck and subdued. Show me the man carrying his wife's overshoes in his coat pocket for her, and I can borrow every dellar he has on his per-I can borrow every dollar he has on his per-son; he wouldn't dare refuse me.

HOME BLESSINGS IN DISQUISE

M. M.A.N. comes home with a heavy step

M. R. M.A.N. comes home with a heavy step and a troubled brow, and Mrs. Man meets him with fear and anxiety written in enpital letters all over her tearful face.

"Ab, mel" he groats, "and you are in trouble, too, I can see, and I have nothing but heavy tidlings for you.

"Say what you will," she sobs. "I can bear anything now."

"Then," exclaimed the desperate man, "I have a telegrum from your Aunt Ironsides. She and the five children are even now on their way to spend holiday week with you, and will reach here at 11.45 to-night."

Sanshine bursts over the face of the faithful wife, and a ripple of joyons laughter drowns his mouning. "Then, darling," she cries, "I have glad news for you; she won't dare come! Jack and Bess are both down with reachet forms!" scarlet fever!"
"Angel1" cries Mr. Man, classing her in

HE NEVER WILL GET OVER IT

WHEN life and its trials, rebuffs and de-nials, its torments and troubles are o'er; when safely we've passed into Eden at last, some man will leave open the door. Though angels correct him, it will not at-fect him. He'll stop, and look wild, and say: "Hey?" then hold the door wide, as he passes inside, and come in and leave it that He'll come in so slowly that torments unholy might swarm in like leaves on a bough; and if at him you scream, he will stand in a dream, and say; "Who? Me? Well, what is

Oh patient Saint Peter, no duty discreeter is given to angels than when you stand at the portal of mansions immortal to shut the door after the men.

A CASE OF CAUSE AND EFFECT

A ND why, Mrs. McKerrel," asked young Mr. Newboarder, "is that called pound cake?" "Because," replied Mrs. McKerrel, who had kept a boarding-house when young Mr. Newboarder was sitting for his photo-graph for a "Grudge's Food" advertisement. "because you can't get it out until you pay charges on it." And Mr. Newboarder, who was nearly three weeks late, bowed his face over his empty plate and pretended to eat nothing with a two-tined fork, while a great nameless ache came into his heart and sat down on him bard.

WE'RE ALL RIGHT!

THERE are no birds in next year's nest, In next year's cream there are no files; No vain regrets disturb my breast For aught that in the future lies.

And last year's files, and last year's birds—

Have passed the reach of tears and words.

A Childlike Confidence - in the efficacy of Carlsbad Sprudel Salts is universal throughout the world. Nature's remedy for Constipation, Gout, Rheumatism, Kidney Troubles, Diabetes, Fatty Degeneration, and all Liver Troubles.

Our rich Americans visit Carlsbad. The crowned heads of Europe have been visiting this historic spot, when in search of health, for the past 500

You can now get the same treatment at any drug store, in the shape of Carlsbad Sprudel Salts.

Not a nauseating remedy.

Men and woman of sedentary habits will find life a pleasure after taking this treatment for one week.

The genuine have the signature of "Eisner & Mendelson Co., Sole Agents, New York," on every bottle.

Full Dress Suits

TO ORDER From $25 to $40 Equat in fabric, style, workman-ahp. In and finish, in $75 and $200 mits of leading booses.

with offeating houses.

Why this is possible:

*Ceare the only Tailoring house
the U.S. making a specialty Full Dress Garmenes and have very facility for producing at most possible cost. It is well soon that Tailors regard the very facility as more incident in our that Tailors regard the very facility as more incident in our business and accordingly incident to prices thought out of prooction to prices thought under salt competition for business its.

The Dress Suit is to-day

The Dress Suit is torday an Absolute Necessity to participate attending Weddings, Receptions, Participated, It is not only the Correct Dress on the occasions but often other forms are absolutely pechalised Every performs about own a Dress Suit.

Comparatively few cloths are awarded in the Dress Garments, Samples of these we mail fee on application with samples of transfers and complete instructions. For aid measurement, No one our system is very simple.

Our Customers Risk Nothing.

Our Customers Risk Nothing. Garments may be recurred to us for any cause and when so returned, we obligate consolves to pay all Eapress charges. We are general railors and can furnish by uself samples of any sayle of goods desired. For porticulars and samples address (enclosing 6 cts. for postage)

EARN TAILORING CO., 14 E. Washington St., BOX T. INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

A NEW BOOK OF HOUSE DESIGNS. ARTISTIC DWELLINGS.

The latest thing is Home Plan. Seet, Postgald, for $1.00. PRANK P. ALLEN, ARCHITECT, HOSseman Bock, GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The correct Writing Papers for society, foreign and every-day correspondence are BOSTON LINEN, BOSTON BOND, and BUNKER HILL. Superior in quality, students in prict. If your dealer does not herp them, even us your address and we will forward you out complete sumples from BAMUEL WARD CO.,

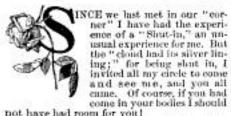

49 & 5t Franklin St., Boston, Mass.

HARTSHORN'S SHADEROLLERS NOTICE AUTOGRAPH THE GENUINE LABEL HARTSHORN

WHAT Truck Sam and Aust Columbia think, etc., of ASHINGTON and Scattle, Sterd Manager to Echelman, Herrityn & Co., Scattle, Washa

The purpose of this Department is to bring the members of the Order of The King's Daughters and its President into closer relations by personal and familiar "Talks" and "Chats." All letters from the "Daughters" bearing upon this one and special purpose outp, should be addressed to MRS. BOTTOME, care of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, and she will be glid to receive them. Please do not, however, send letters to MRS. BOTTORE concerning membership in the Order, or business communications of any nature. All such should be addressed direct to the headquarters of the order, 158 West-Twenty-third street, New York city, and prompt attention will be given.

invited all my circle to come and see me, and you all came. Of course, if you had come in your bodies I should not have had room for you!

But I had one prayer for you that met the need of every one; only three words, and it met the deepest need in the heart of your lender, and every one in her circle. "Thy kingdom come!" Where? Within us, of course, The Master and: "The kingdom is within you." Such a beautiful kingdom; but we have to become like little children to even see it, and we can in no case enter into it, or have it enter into us; but by just being like a have it enter into us; but by just being like a little child, in tru-ding, hoping, loving, the kingdom comes. It is peaceful then within. And you must be like a child in hoping; you know how hopeful little children are?

+

LOVE IN OUR FAMILY LIFE

THERE is such joy to me in being like a little child, and to all child-like souls the dear Christ says: "Suffer them to come unto use." And such souls know the joy of nestling on the bosom of infinite love. So could I have asked a loveller thing for you, my dear circle, them to ask: "Thy kingdom come?" come?

"Thy kingdom come, our stails within t Where Thou art, is no room for sin, Oh! show us what our lives may be Led home to thim by following Tuee."

And then I thought of all you might be doing to bring the kingdom of heaven into your bosnes. You know love is the highest heaven; the more love there is in your family the more beaven. I remember a father holding the baby away from him that was trying to get her little arms around his neck, and saying to her: "What are you good for?" The darling answered: "Dood to love you!" and the arms were round his neck. O, yes; more love is what most families want.

THE STORY OF A YOUNG GIRL'S LIFE

I HAVE just laid down a book in which the If AVE just hid down a book in which the poet has put a touching story in verse:

The mane of the sweet, young girl never seemed so lovely as when the one she was to wed her young life to called it. But the years went by, and he called her wife in totre not soft and tender; she no more heard her woodland name, and slowly she pined in her far western home. Only by toil the wife could keep her girl's heart clamor down, and he boasted of her skillful hands, her quick, unresting fect. "No woman like my wife I meet; on all the cape none understand how to make on all the cape none understand how to make home so sweet." But he soon knew by the blank around what she had been to him, and the soul within him awakened, and as be laid the soul within fam awakened, and as he had her favorite flower (the flower that in the early days he brought her) in her cold hand, he pierced theair with the old woodland name —Sylvia! And the poet says; "Her soul smiled back. She heard." She may have heard but she did not answer. Poetry pierces the reil, but the vision is denied to those who love too late. The only love that lasts is un-selfish love. Tender in the first days of friend-shin; sustaining in the tripls and burdens of ship; sustaining in the trials and burdens of life; and as God becomes manifested in human love, is it not within bounds to say it is "true and faithful, strong as death." But why not speak in loving tones to the souls while they remain with us in the body. O, the lifeless homes because the homes are loveless! Dear "Daughters," let your first aim be love at home, and then there will be an overflow that will reach into other homes. And if you say you cannot give when you have nothing, I say you can find the truth of Mbs Waring's lines;

"I seek the treasure of Thy love, And close at hand it lies."

And, like her, you will be enabled to say

My heart is at the secret source of every precious thing."

God would not be a God of love if He made human bearts bungry for love, and then had

"The heart bureft of all its brood of singing hopes, and

I wild tenthine bounds in an advances a reging impose.

I wild tenthine bounds, a cold, formken need,
Wills sense disker in it: foliated in The breast
Both base he deadly child; and getef that creeps
Into the sale for shelter, intring there.
The mound's deep shelt, forgets its ensure and weeps
I also part tents; and an The directed care
I also he does not shelt also there had press
I also find in the street in tolurer lagre.
Put faith in does not be dream to There delt press
I be quivering check, included the recurrings.
The want that keep their also are, foll from Thes
They have the gracium summons i more beside Hath spoken in the world-worn, 'Come to me!'
Tell forth their heavy secrets."

IN MY PERSONAL BOOK

A LL the names for the Margaret Bottome
A Lichelare enrolled in a new book that I keep myself. I was touched by receiving the names of young busbands, some of whom are such well-known names. I hope the names will stand side by side in the Book of Life, as they stand on the book devoted to my circle. I do so want to answer all your letters, but I fear if I undertake it you will not hear from me long through the Journal. You see, I not only have an enormous correspondence, but only have an enormous correspondence, but the Daughters far and near want me to come and visit their circles; and so I have levely memories of so many readers of our Jouanne memories of so many readers of our Jouana, that I neet this past actumn in Canada and in so many other places. You who write me from Michigan and Iowa and other distant States and say; "I shall never see your face." I am not so sure of that: I expect to neet many of the readers of this Jouana that a few years ago I should not have expected ever to see. I have had such a loving welcome from so many places by those who gather in our corner every month that I am thinking of seeing more of my sisters who live far from New York; so you need not be surprised to see me one of these days.

MY CIRCLE'S FIRST MEMBER

WAS a little curious in regard to the first WAS a little curious in regard to the first member of my circle (my wheel within the great wheel), and I must tell you what State was represented in this my first member of my circle. Nebraska! It seems a long way off to me. She writes me she has been a member of the order since 1887, and nids:

"My does are paid up to date at the New York. office." She says there is no circle to which she can belong in the town where she lives, and she joins my circle because she says, "I shall feel more than ever that I know you." I am so glad she has been serving our King twelve years, and every year takes in more and more what it is to be a Daughter of the King.

TO THE YOUNG MOTHERS

I PIND there are many young mothers in my circle. I am glad when you send me your names to be corolled on my list that you give me some idea of your life; and especially glad am I that you tell meabout your children. And will you let me whisper to you, young mothers, that you have in your little children, and in your baby, especially, a most wonderful teacher. I learned my deepest lessons from my declared, and an tow learning lessons from my children, and an now learning them from my grandebildren. I remember in the long ago, when my children were little, that my little boy of six summers gave me the best debildren of summers favored by the little of the little son th my little boy of six summers gave me the best definition of entire consecration I had ever had. I was lying on the lounge, not feeling very well, when he came into the room. I think he wanted in some way to cheer me, so he said: "Manama, I am going to give you something." I replied I should be pleased to have anything from him. He looked around the room and said, "Well, manama, I am going to give you all the pictures in this room." I said, "Thank you, my son." And I will give you all the books in this room." Again I expressed my pleasure at having another gift. And by this time he seemed to have gotten a taste of the joy of giving, and he went on, "Mamma, I will give you every chair in this room." Again my thanks, and then he never ceased until he gave me every article there was room. Again my tranks, and then he hever ceased until he gave me every article there was in the room; and the child was perfectly happy, and so was L. But he had not given me a thing that did not belong to me. All were mine, and yet I so much enjoyed the ehild's giving.

Many a time after that, as I enumerated the things I would give to God, the whole scene would come before me, and I knew I was only giving Him His own. But the child's char-acter was improving all the time he was giving, and we come to our lest when we say; "give Thee my time, my strength, my health;" or, as Miss Havergul says so sweetly;

"Take my life and let it be Conscended, Lord, to Thee, Take my bands and let them move At the impulse of Thy love !"

But all! bands, feet, torque, money—all belong to God. We only give Him what is His; and yet it is blessed to give with all the concerness and the generosity of the little boy tho gave me all he could see. Make me a child again !

"Except ye become as little children ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven," How do children learn language, music, form, color? By sight and sound, unconstonely growing by receiving all things, must of all by loving to be loved, and loving again; so, young mothers, your children will teach you how to love God, as gladly, freely, confidingly as they love you. "We love God because He first love you. loved us."

LIFE'S END AT CLOSER RANGE

LIFE'S END AT CLOSER RANGE

YOU thank me, as working girls, as teacher all over our land, for writing to you, and you say: "Will you not talk to us again?" My beart is strangely drawn to you all. George Eliot said she thought the real work of a life-time was done in the last ten years of one's life, for it took the whole life back of that for materials; for one needs experience. And while I have said to you so often I realize how little I have learned, yet along heart lines I have had an experience; so it is no wonder I feel with you, and I want you to help me as you have done; tell me all you want to tell me; there is a relief in telling. And the reason I want you to get a grip on the unseen is that you may go through this the unseen is that you may go through this life and its duties with joy, and I cannot see how you will be able to get through if you do how you will be able to get through if you do not have joy. There must come a time when the illusions will begin to disappear. It is always a painful time. Some of you will make up to the fact this year that you no longer like to be asked how old you are. It is an unnecessary question, you say, but you didn't care as long as you could say eighteen; and there is an awkward time later on when there is such a discrepancy between the figures and there is an awkward time later on when there is such a discrepancy between the figures and the way you feel. Yes; but, after all, something is disappearing; there was a time when fifty sounded old; it doesn't now. And there is a transition state that is painful; but after a little while you take the comfort of what Victor Hugo said; "Forty is the old age of youth, and fifty is the youth of old age;" but even the youth of old age does not stay, and in spite of everything old age will come. Now, how will it be?

EVERY DAY CHARACTER-BUILDING

ONE of the dear readers of the Journal ONE of the dear renders of the Journal wrate me a few days ago that she could not look up from nature to mature's God. She said that science perfectly satisfied except in regard to the unknown future. Ah, yes! but the unknown future we must go into. Now, if in all those stages of life, and in all stages we get out the very kernel, the thing that the other stood for! If, in youth, we had hold of eternal youth; if we firmly grasped the imperishable, you see when the outward failed, we had the inward that the outward stood for: the beauty, the child beauty, and taking we had the inward that the outward stood for; the beauty, the child heart; and taking this with us into the next stage, the progress would only be an enriching instead of an impoverishing. There must come a time when the young folks will think we are too old for their company; but if we have secured something better we cannot be left alone; we shall not miss them. The proceed people to my mind to-day are what are called ultra-society people; they are dependent on what they call society, and if the veil could be lifted we should see the slums indeed—cavy, jealousy, love of display, covetousness. There are should see the slums indeed—cavy, jealousy, love of display, covetousness. There are slums in God's sight; and unless we get to see things as God sees them, unless we get to His estimate of things, we will yet have to say, as Saul said after one of his fits of jealousy; "I have played the food!" Now, Daughters, you see no matter what your work may be, whether you teach or are taught, whether you sell. you teach or are taught, whether you sell goods or buy them, whether you work for your living or some one else works for your living, in all, through all, your one business every hour of every day is to secure a character that will fit you for a throne.

Η.

LOOKING TOWARD THE THRONE

LOOKING TOWARD THE THRONE

It has been said of the Prince of Wales that no matter where he was, nor what he did, he never, for one moment, hist sight of the fact that he was to sit upon the throne of England. He ought not to have lost sight of it, that is certain; and we must not lose sight, no matter how noble or ignoble our work may look to us, we must never forget our grand destiny. We are to sit on the throne. And if we could only see deeply enough we should see that these thrones come now, but they come only to those who have fought a good fight. But you say, "I hold no such position, I have no such natural endowments." Well, God does not measure as we do. I have an idea some people will find themselves with crowns in the next world who never droamed they would have them; and some will find themselves without them that we expected would have them. We are not required to do the work of another, but God has given us a work to do, and that is the work we must do; and our loy we shall find just there.

There is a joy we may miss in not entering into the work of another, a work which we cannot do. I have so often starg that verse:

"If you cannot on life's econe sail among the wiffset

"If you cannot on life's occur sail among the swiftest fleet, Bocking on the highest billows, laughing at the steems you meet. You can sland among the sailors, anchored yet within the bay. You can lead a hand to help them as they launch their basis away."

Did you ever read the story of the one who beloed all the others to gather their sheaves, and when she heard the sound of the harvest home found she hadn't any sheaves, and wondered what she should do? She had spent the whole day in helping others, but she had a peculiar smale from the King, and a welcome that made her heart glad. (), do get to the sweet life embodied in the little verse:

"In the shade of lits presence,
The rest of His caim,
The light of His countenance,
Five cost the pasins:
Street in His faithfulness
Probe Him and sing.
They as He beckens thee,
Do the next thing."

Margard Bottome

A NEW SAFETY.

The Century Columbia.

We keep offer our new Safety for 1982, a light-re-tight Safety, filled with Columbia Proposale Tires, P<sub>1</sub> invites in dameter, Other factores are similar to the Light Bondster Safety so popular has your. Wheels, 28 and 39 litches in diameter, Weight, 43 pounds.

Price, $150.

POPE MFG. CO.,

221 Columbus Avenue, -

Boston, Mass.

12 Warren Street, NEW YORK. Factory: 291 Wabash Avenue, CHICAGO. HARTFORD, CONN.

a buy a Pieno az a life-tiwe investment.

If the ear be naturally introduct, a physical unsatisfac-tory none is und must be the where we are; if the cur-ned inside by unformed, what more homeful than poor tone?

the fullest degree, combines that powerful, clear and ch. yet pure and delivate ione with protonged singing sality and eveness throughout the entire scale.

If But for each by your local dealer, address THE JOHN (THURCH CO., Cincinnati, O. "From Andamie to Allegre," an illustrated pumphlet, will be sent free to any one who will mention where this advertisement was seen.

PALACE ORGANS.

Over 60,000 sold dur-ing the last 90 years.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

THE LORING & BLAKE ORGAN CO.,

WORCHSTER, MASS.

SEAM

ADIES, the little article we call your attention to is really a smoothly he every house as well so in the shop of the drawmaker. With our can press the absence and waste sooms of read in a few minutes, without any of the sinmore talls piece of work greatfully brings you. DRESSMAKERS all every the country are cading it, and dimende hay for much be see proper formed by proper and proper and proper and property and property and property and property and property are an area of the property and property and property are an area of the property and property and property area.

Strong and Durable. Will test a first inc. Waseed sample by sapreis $1.00. AGENTS proposit, upon receipt of $1.00. WANTED.
GRAVES EROTHERS, Mrs., SANDWICH, ILL.

*3.00 THE READ UMBRELLA FOR GENTLEMEN & LADIES.

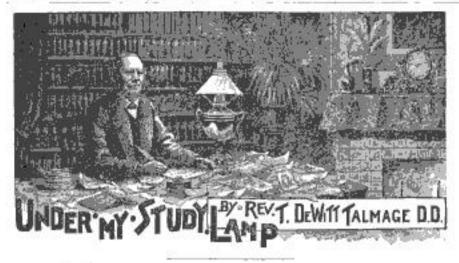

A Silk Umbrella of special quality, Very low prices. Sent free on receipt of cost. We goarantee satisfaction. Write at once for our free catalogue. CHARLES F. READ & CO.

45 BROAD ST., BOSTON, MASS.

82,50

SELL MUSIC We will pay a liberal flat any to Agenta who will take to extra sample compound the possible four cents and receive sample compound instrumental music. Address legt B. Southware Edited RESTRIAN, 642 Freedway, See Tark.

AMILIES of the earth sit by the score at all times in dumb seasement at the afflictive provi-dences of God. Bereavement for the most part is inexplicable. Why is the husband taken in mid-life before the children are educated and reared? Why does the reared? Why does the mother go away into eternity at the time when she is most needed sed here? Why must the young man die at the close of a collegiate course that was intended to fit him for great usefulness? Why not let us all die of old age, after our work is fully done and life has no more attractions?

A few weeks ago there were united in the bonds of marriage two of my friends. Amid a great throng of congratulating people they started life. A bright home was set up. God was in the dwelling. Business prospects opened. Friends without number gathered around him in the world and in the church. But on the way home from the store his foot But on the way home from the store his foot slipped, and without consciousness enough to grasp in farewell the hand that he had only three weeks before taken in pleases, he went away from the earth forever. Men of the world, explain that! Human philosophy, solve this riddle!

THE DEATH OF A CHRISTIAN SISTER

THE DEATH OF A CHRISTIAN SISTER

I REMEMBER a scene in my own expericence just as inexplicable. My sister, in mid-life, with a large family of children in every possible need of her council and tendernees, and holding the responsible position of a pastor's wife, was called beavenward from as fine a sphere of usefulness as any one could possibly hold. What her life was you may judge from her dying experiences. She said in her last moments: "It is nothing for a Christian to die. One minute here, and the next with Jesus. Oh, what a religion we have! We do insmediately pass into glory. Some say that do immediately passinto glory. Some say that dying people have doubts, but they do not. How can they doubt with such a precious Jesus. I see Him now! He endoses my chil-

How can they doubt with such a precious Jesus. I see Him now! He encloses my children in His arms of love, and they will all be saved. It was a tremendous struggle to give them up, but I know they will all be saved. I am crossing the river, but I do not fear. I will shut up my eyes now and go to sleep and wake up in glory! Good-hye!"

Her life had been in harmony with all she said. She sang more than any person I ever knew. She was always singing. I remember in my boyhood days of sometimes getting tired of this perpetual music, and of saying to her, "Mary, do stop singing;" but she would not stop. She never will stop. Why was such a Christian sister and wife and nother transported? Strike a light, if you can, over this mystery. Analyze, dissect, philosophize a thousand years, and you cannot by any human device open one shutter. But in the Gospel the sun rises. Light gradually 'reaks in as the morning tooks through the cracks of the door and the lattice—not full day, but a promise of high noon.

A CROCUS FROM SNOW-BANKED GRAVES

I almost all cases it is the loveliest one of the family that is transported. Why should not the great capital of the universe have the pick of everything? The half-anti-half Christians will get into glary, but they need be kept here a good while yet for polishing. Those who are remiy God takes. The earlier inhabitants of a place make the greatest impression upon its future character, and so heaven ought to have the best first. Besides heaven ought to have the best first. Besides that, if there were a shipwreck, and you went out with a life-boat, and you find some of your friends clinging to the hulk, you would be apt to take them ashore first. God seems to set his especial love on some; and when he finds them shivering amid this world's temptations and surrows, he first lifts them out of the breakers. Oh, weep not for the Christian dead! If they go through long sickness, in which there is oppor-tunity for parting admonition, thank God for that. But if by sudden transition, and they have not a moment of consciousness, thank God that they escape the exhaustion of sickness, and that from the health of earth they stepped and that from the bealth of earth they stepped into the health of heaven. Long not for the last words that were not spoken. If the life has been right, the death cannot be werry. If the hanquet has been rich, it matters not how the lights are turned out at the close. So many of our friends have gone over the stream we shall all want to go there too. Heaven is getting to me to be a very matter-of-fact heaven. From the cold snow banks of the grave I plucked this crocus: "Those who sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

MAN TO STATE OF

THE POPULATION OF HEAVEN

TEAVEN must be populated. There is not so much room on the Western prairies and table-lands for more settlers as there is room in the upper country for more people. Heaven has only one want, and that is of greater population. It is sparsely inhabited yet, as compared with its future critisenship. The crowns are not half taken, nor the robes half warry. Heaven is like a house in which The crowns are not half taken, nor the robes half worn. Heaven is like a house in which a levee is to be held at ten o'clock. At nine o'clock the rooms are all ablaze with lights, and the servants, gloved and vestured, are waiting to open the doors. The rooms of our Father's house are illuminated, and the chamberlains are ready, and the table is spread. A few have entered, but heaven is not yet fully beaun. They have only some the opening A few larve entered, but heaven is not yet fully begon. They have only sung the opening piece. Now, how shall God till up his house except by subtracting from this world? The continent of heaven is to be peopled from the surrounding islands. If so, I can understand why God should take the young brother referred to above rather than some of his comrades not half so useful, and my sister rather than a thousand women who are of no Christian service. tian service.

A FEW WORDS ON CREMATION

A Few Words on Cremation

NE of the Journal renders writes me and asks: "Do you believe in cremating the deal?" Now, my friend, cremation will never be carried out in this country. I know that the papers now and then ardently discuss whether or not it will be best to burn the bodies of the dead instead of burying them. Scientific journals contend that our cemeteries are the means of unhealthy exhalations, and that cremation is the only safe way of disposing of the departed. Some hare advected the chemical reduction of the physical system. I have, as yet, been unable to throw myself into a mood sufficiently scientific to appreciate this proposal. It seems to me partially horrible and partially ludicrous, I think that the dead populations of the world are really the most quiet and unbarrafid. They make no war upon us; let us make no war that the dead populations of the world are really the most quiet and unbarmful. They make no war upon us; let us make no war upon them. I am certain that all the damage we shall ever do this world will be white we are animate. It is not the dead people who are hard to manage, but the living. Some whistle to keep their courage up while going along by graveyards; I whistle while moving among the while-awake. Before attempting this barbaric disposal of the burnan form as a sanitary improvement, it would be better to clear the streets and "commons" of our cities of their pestiferous surroundings. Try your cremation on the dogs and cats with extinct animation. I think Greenwood is healthler than Broadway, and Laurel Hill than Chestnut Street, Pere in Chaise than Champs Elysees. Urns, with ashes scientifically prepared, may look very well in Madrus or Pekin, but not in a Christian country. Not having been able to shake off the Bible notions about Christian buriat, I prefer to adhere to the mode that was observed when devout men carried Stephen to his buriat.

POETRY OF OUR GRAVEYARDS

NINE-TENTHS of those who think they can write respectable poetry are mistaken. I do not say that poesy has passed from the earth, but it does seem as if the fountain Hippocrene had been drained off to run a saw-mill. It is safe to say that most of the home-made poetry of graverards is an offence to God and mun. One would have thought that the New Hampshire village would have risen in mob to prevent the inscription that was really placed on one of its temberous de-scriptive of a man who had lost his life at the foot of a vicious mare on the way to the brook :

" As this man was leading ber to drink She kick'd and kill'd bim quicker'n a wink

One would have thought that even conservative New Jersey would have been in rebel-lion at a child's epitaph which in a village of that State reads thus:

*She was not smart, she was not fair, flat bearts with grief for her are swellin"; All county stands for little chair; She died of eaths' watermeton."

Let not such descerations be allowed in hallowed places. Let not poetizers practice on the tombstone. My uniform advice to all the tombstone. My uniform advice to all those who want acceptable and suggestive epitaphs is: Take a passage of Scripture. That will never wear out. From generation to generation it will bring down upon all visitors a holy high; and if before that stone has crumbled the day comes for waking up of all the graveyand steepers, the very words chiseled on the marble may be the ones that shall ring from the trumpet of the archangel on that have when the accrets of all hearts shall be when the secrets of all hearts shall be

EPITAPHS FOR THE DEAD

PERSONALLY, I have no fear that I shall I thus be descenated by my surviving friends. I have more fear of epitaphs. I do not wonder that people have sometimes dictated the inscriptions on their own tombstones not wonder that people have sometimes distated the inscriptions on their own tombstones when I see what inappropriate lines are chiscled on many a slab. There needs to be a reformation in epitaphiology. People often ask me for appropriate inscriptions for the graves of their dead. They tell the virtues of the father, or wife, or child, and want me to put into compressed shape all that catalogue of excellences. Of course I fail in the attempt.
The story of a lifetime cannot be chiseled by the stone-cutter on the side of a marble slab.
But it is not a mre thing to go a few months after by the stored spot and find that the bereft friends, unable to get from others an epitaph sufficiently cologistic, have put their own brain and heart to work and composed a rityme. Now, the most unfit sphere on earth for an inexperienced mind to exercise the poette faculty is in epitaphiology. It does very well in copy-books, but it is most unfair to blot the resting place of the dead with unskilled poetic scribble. It seems to me that the owners of cometeries and graveyards should keep in their own hand the right to refuse inappropriate and ludicrous epitaphs. and ludicrous epitaples.

THE NERVE-CENTER OF THE WORLD.

THERE is no warmer Pable phrase than I this: "Touched with the feeling of our infemities." The divibe nature is so vast, and the human so small, that we are apt to think that they do not touch each other at any point. We might have ever so many mishape, the government at Washington would not hear of them; and there are multitudes in Reitain whose trushles Victoria never knows: not hear of them; and there are multitudes in Britain whose troubles Victoria never knows; but there is a Throne against which strike our most insignificant perplexities. What touches us touches Christ. What annoys us annoys Christ. What robs us robs Christ. He is a preut nerve-coater to which thrill all sensations which touch us, who are His members. He is touchest with our physical infirmities. I do not use that He merely sympathizes with a patient in collapse of cholera, or in the dedirium of yellow fever, or in the anguish of a broken back, or in all those annoyances that come from a disordered nervous-condition. In our excited American life, sound herves are that come from a disordered nervous-condition. In our excited American life, sound nervos are a mrity. Human sympathy in the case I mention amounts to nothing. Your friends laugh at you and say you have "the blues," or "the high strikes," or "the dumps," or "the figets." But Christ never laughs at the whims, the notions, the conceits, the weaknesses of the nervously disordered. Christ probably suffered in something like this way, for He had lack of sleep, lack of rest, lack of right food, lack of shelter, and His temperament was finely string.

was finely strang. Chronic complaints, the rheumatism, the Chronic complaints, the rheumatism, the neoralgia, the dyspepsia, after a while cense to excite human sympathy, but with Christ they never become an old story. He is as sympathetic as when you felt the first twinge of inflamed muscle, or the first pang of indiposition. When you cannot sleep Christ keeps awake with you. All the pains you ever had in your head are not equal to the pains Christ had in His head. All the acute sufferings you ever had in your feet are not equal to the acute suffering Christ had in His feet. By His own hand He fashioned your every bone, string every nerve, grew every eyelish, set every tooth in its socket, and your every physical disorder is patent to Him, and, touches His sympathies. He is also touched with the infirmities of our prayers. Nothing bothers the Christian more than the imperfection of his prayers. To get down on his knees seems to be the signal for his thoughts to fly in every direction. While praying about one thing he is thinking about another.

A CONSECRATED heart is a momentum for all Christian work. The Lord give us all a higher life, a deeper life, a bruader life. We cannot do much toward saving others till we ourselves are more surely saved. We cannot pall others out of the surf when our feet are slipping on the rock. More purity, more fieth, more consecration will be more

7. be with Talmage

GIVES a GENUINE OXFORD TEACHERS BIBLE, Containing, 1450 Pages, and measuring open, fage izonded, 7x11 inches, Free to all New Subscribers at $2.00.

It is Leather Bound, GHt Edge, Over-lapping Edges, and Contains ALL THE HELPS, Including CONCOR DANCE, 40,000 References, Subject Index 16,000 References, TWELVE COLORED MAPS, and Other Valuable Helps.

De With Talmage DI, SI, SO, 94, SO BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK SITY.

% SAVINGS CERTIFICATES, 85 and Upwards. In-terest from day of deposit. Paid on to days' notice. Address, TACORA INTESTREET CO., Taxons, Wash,

IMPERIAL GRAN INVALIDS, CONVALESCENTS, AND THE AGED. * FOR NURSING-MOTHERS. * INFANTS - AND - CHILDREN.

IMPERIAL GRANDS.—A neighbor's child being very low, reduced, in fact, to a more baby skeleton from want of nourishment, as nothing could be found which the child could retain. At the urgent request of friends the parents were induced to try Imperial Granus. parents were induced to try Imperial Granum, which proved of such benefit to the child that it grew and thrived beyond all comprehension. At the same time I had a child sick with cholera infantum; on being presented with a box of the Granum, with the high recommendation from this neighbor, used it, and continued its use to raise the child; and I firmly believe this had all to do in saving the furmer child's life and the greater part in restoring my own child to health. A. C. G.—Leonard's Illustrated Medical Journal, Detroit, Mick., October, 1887. Mick., October, 1887.

Sick room diet is often the despair of the nurse. It is easy to give medicine, but to build up with suitable nourishment is a diffi-culty perhaps best and oftenest solved by the use of IMPERIAL GRANUM.—St. Augustine, Fla.,

We are pleased to again call our readers' attention to the Inference Grands, which we have so often commended. Repeated tests of it with both children and older persons prove it to be a perfect food, the use of which has, in more than one instance, to our personal knowledge, seemed to have been the salvation of the patient.—The Cottage Hearth, Boston, Mass., July, 1890.

IMPERIAL GRANCH.-WE HAVE AMPLY TESTED I'VE EFFICACY IN OUR OWN FAMILY AND CAN MOST WILLINGLY ENDORSE IT AND GIVE IT OUR UTMOST APPROVAL. - New Hoven Journal and

What It Bought!

Twas only a dime, but it bought a package of Diamond Dye Dark Wine that gave a rich, beautiful color to a faded gown, thus saving the dollars a new dress would have cost.

You Can Dye

Dresses my fashtomble color.

Garments to look like new.

Ribbons as fresh and bright as ever.

Feathers to match the new hat or dress.

Carpets fast colors on wool or cotton. You can do all this with Diamond Dyes. You know "H's Easy to Dgs with Dismond Dyes." Our dye book tells how to do it. Bend for it, free; also 40 samples of colored cloth.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & Co., Burlington, Vt.

To Dayron Soon Co.—My wife was very much pleased with her house the best it she has but for years; she is just us pleased as a lattle sat with two calls, and I want a pair new, and one my salighers waste a pair. S. F. JUNES, Goethein, Maken,

MUSIC STREET SELF-TRACHING SYSTEM. All cas learn most without the sid of a teacher. Raid, correct. TAUGHT. Accompanients, thorough base how, etc. Ten Leesons 10 ctens. Circulars free. G. S. RICE MUSIC CO., 240 State Street, Chicago.

ALL PAPER Attractive styles. Entrene.

ALL PAPER by lee print. 100 samples on aroll. ALL DIAMERT & CO., 1106 Market 31, Phile. Pa.

This Department is conducted and edited by RUTH ASHMORE, who cheerfully invites questions touching any topic upon which her young women readers may desire help or information. Address all letters to RUIH ASHMORE, care of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, Philadelphia, Pa.

8 St. Valentine's Day has come, as the dainty lit-tle missives inspired by the loving Saint are flying here, there and everywhere, as words of admiration are spoken —words that are listened to with delight-where is the girl who isn't to with delight—where is the girl who isn't thinking a little bit about her sweetheart? It is just possible that he may not yet have appeared, and it is possible that he has, but if he has not, she must walt patiently for him, and believe that in the world somewhere there is a true, loving heart that belongs to her. "But" she asks, "how will I know it? How will I-recognize him when he comes?" Just, my dear, as we recognize all the good Just, my dear, as we recognize all the good things in this world, all the sweet things, and all the things worth having. May be your beart will not flutter the first time you meet him; you will not put out that signal flag of a young girl, the blush of modesty, but in a little while you will know, and so will he, that you two were meant to love and honor each other. That is what I believe,

A GIRL'S REAL SWEETHEART

A GIRL'S REAL SWEETHEART

I DO believe in sweethearts, I do believe in the right of every girl to have one, and I do believe that when he is the reaf sweetheart he will soon be the one who will be your bushand, whose joy it will be to care for you, whose happiness it will be to see you happy. It is a pretty word, that old-fushioned one, "sweetheart." It seems to me always to suggest the great white, sweet-smelling rose that grows in out-of-door gardens and which has reached perfection because the sun of love has made it blossom and the rain of disappoints. made it blossom, and the rain of disappoint-ment has made the sun seem brighter, the flower hardier and more eager in hoping. That is what I think a sweetheart is. He loves that the best sunshing days, and he is your consolution when the dark over come. He is consolation when the dark ones come. consolution when the dark ones come. He is a man who in honoring you respects all those belonging to you. And because he is your sweetheart he is going to try and not let you make any mistakes, and you will be a very foolish girt if you don't listen to his advice. So many of my girls have got sweethearts that I want to have this little talk with them.

HOW TO TREAT HIM

BECAUSE a man loves you is that any reason why you should be inconsiderate of him?

of him?

Because he loves you, shall you give no thought to the words you say to him?

Because be loves you, shall you laugh at his affection, and think his expressions of it are funny?

Because he loves you, shall he be the last to be thought of?

Because he loves you, shall he be treated so that he wonders, after all, if you have any love for him?

Because he loves you, shall you seem to put a tax on him in the way of presents and entertainments that, it is just possible, he cannot afford?

Because he loves you, shall you never think it necessary to say the sweet words of thanks for the courtesies he shows you? Because he loves you, shall you not think it necessary to be at your best and sweetest for

Oh, you foolish girl! If this love is worth having, if this love is real and true, if it is really your sweetheart who has come, then ye is possess a great treasure, a treasure which you may lose some day if you are not careful. Love is lost by thoughtlessness, by inconsideration, and by selfishness more than by any other way. Do you want to lose your love? It is like those old Venetian glasses, fine, slender and delicate; pour into one all the great wealth of your affection and the glass will hold it, but let one drop of the poison of self-will for indifference out there and the class is shat-

or indifference get there and the glass is shat-SOMEBODY'S ELSE SWEETHEART

tered into a thousand pieces.

YOU are pretty, you are young, you are a little bit of a coquette, and you have just met somebody's else sweetheart. It is all right to be merry, but if you are the girl I think you are you will not give those coquettish glances, those tender words and those inde-scribable but flattering suggestions to him. You may be prettier than the girl he loves; don't try to make him conscious of that; you may be brighter and wittier and able to make him feel more at ease, but never for an instant let him dream of this. Don't let his meeting with you be one that he will not care to tell her about; but rather act so that when you let the white curtains down over your big, beight eyes it will be with an easy conscience, for you will know that he has gone back to the girl he loves, and that he has told her of your kindness of your couriesy and that he has ended by saving: "Yet with it all, my dearest, you were ever before me and I never forgot you." Then you will have one other woman who is your friend, for she will know what you could have done, and she will respect you for your honce and good will.

WITH YOUR OWN SWEETHEART THERE once was a beautiful plum. It THERE once was a beautiful plum. It bung on the tree and ripened in the sunshine until in color it was perfection; people went by and looked up at it and admired it, and wished that it might fall, that its sweetness might be tested. But it never did. One day there came along a brave knight, who said: "I want the plum so much that I am willing to work for it." And with a stout heart, and the great energy inspired by love, he climbed the high tree and reached out for the plum. Reached out so gently that a kindly wind blew the leaves aside and whispered to them: "To this knight entrust the plum, for he will be gentle and kind to it." So plucking it carefully, being certain that his touch was not rough, and that he was not too familiar with it, he carried away his prize, and all the people who had wanted the plum envied him a thousand times more because it did not fall into his mouth. Do you see what I mean? into his mouth. Do you see what I mean? If it is your really and truly sweetheart who comes to you, he will ask nothing from you that it is not right for you to give; he will ask no familiarity, he will expect no coming to him on your part, but he will work and wait and hope for the love that is worth having. And warking and waiting and hope no the nd working, and waiting and hoping are the things that make men and women of boys and girls, and teach them that life without love is as nothing, and yet that love which can be gotten very easily is seldom worth having.

THE COURTESY OF LOVE

THERE is a false idea affoat in the stream A of life, which is that when people love us we can be rude to them, that because they us we can be rude to them, that because they know we love them they will forgive every lack of courtesy. Now, this is absolutely untrue; the closer two people are united by the bond of love the more necessary is it for them to observe every law of politoness. Love isn't so very difficult to gain, but it is very difficult to keep. You can afford better to be rude to everybody else in the world than to the people who love you. Being a good girl, you think that you are not rude to anyhody, but just remember how you treat Tom. You take his love as a matter of course, you think he doesn't want you to consider him first and best. Love, my deargirl, is a flower that needs best. Love, my leargirl, is a flower that needs constant attention, and the very minute it is neglected, left too long in the glaring sun of indifference, or in the cold wind of selfishness, it dies. And love is never resurrected. I don't want you to give Tom too much. Save something for the husband—the kisses it will be his right to claim, the encircling arms that it will be his pleasure to have. But give Tom your words of affection, the looks that tell him so much and the unselfishness that goes to make love, and without which there is no love, but only a miserable imitation.

THE GIRL WITHOUT A SWEETHEART

READS what I have said and then wonders if I know how many girls there are in this world who never have had a sweetheart. What shall I say to them? I say this: If there never comes to you the low of a good man, it is of course something to be regretted, but because of this regret you have no right to make your life less full of love; you have love to give people who are unhappy, you can double the love you have for those of your own household, but you must not for dear love's sake allow yourself to be bitter and disappointed because of the joy that has not come to you. What would become of half the women in the world if it were not for the women who have never married? Who have been the ones who have given their lives for their own kin? The wom-en who have never married. And surely no one can do more than this. It may be that before you is a workaday life, in which comes no great love; then make much of the affection that comes to you and live to do your work so well that regret will not be in your heart and that the affection you send out will come back to you as the water returns to the fountain, making you richer and happier.

WHY I HAVE SAID THIS

T seems a bit amusing to somebody for me to have made all this talk about sweethearts and loving, and yet I am selfish enough to wish that every one of my girls may have a loyal sweetheart to whom she may give her queen's love. That they may make a little kingdom of their own, over which the queen rules, and rules wisely for the comfort of the king. And that if in time there should come in prince royal he will only be a stronger bond between the king and the queen, and make each more anxious that their reign should be great in its goodness. That is what I want for each and every one of you. I want to see you good wives and good mothers, and then these will be a nation of women worth loving and men worth honoring. That is why I have talked to you about your sweethearts and how you should love them. Do it after the fishion described in the Bible; give them, my girls, a love that is measured by the heartfull, "pressed down, shaken together, and running over," and seal this love with a kiss of wifely respect and reverence.

WHAT YOU WANT * * TO KNOW * *

[Under this heading I will cheerfully answer each month any question I can, sent me by my girl readers-RUTH ASHMORE.]

M. D. C.—"I. H. S." stands for, "I cons Hominum Salvator," that is, "Jesus Saviour of Men."

I. L. R.—It will be quite proper for a young girl to year a white gown at an afternoon wedding at home.

PRANCES AND OTHERS-I cannot recommend any depliatory, and must request that I am not asked this question.

LILLIAN—Custom has made it proper to commence a formal letter to an unmarried lady as you do, that is, "Miss Blank, Dear Madam."

O. V.—When announcement cards are received a call should be made on the bride if she lives in the same town, and if not visiting cards should be sent her by mail.

Rose and Louise.—The engagement ring should be ween on the third finger of the left hand; it is worm un-til the weeding day, when it is removed and acts after-wards as a goard to the weeding ring.

ALICE—It is not customary for a young man to offer his arm in the daytime to any lady, unless size should be ill or quite old; so you were perfectly right in refusing to take the young man's arm in the afternoon.

ETTA R.—If your hair is a pretty dark brown, brush it and keep it leaking as glossy as possible, but do not, under any circumstances, attempt to dye it, as dyed hair is more than merely objectionable, it is vulgar.

II. F.—It is not necessary to send either regrets or ac ceptances to a wedding invitation; if you are invited to the reception and cannot go, send your visiting card by messenger during the hours named on the card.

Puss.—The only way to forget yourself, my dear girl, is to think of, and enter to, the pleasure of other people. This is the only way that you can become what you ev-idently so ardently desire, that is, a general flavorite.

JENNIE M.—Word your regrets in this way: "Miss Brown regrets that she remont accord the courtens in-vitation of Mr. Joses for Friday evening." To this add your address and the day on which the note was written.

PLOBA - Wedding cards, like every other part of the wedding outfil, are furnished by the family of the bride. The bridegroom furnishes nothing except the carriage which takes him to church and the bouquets of the bride and her attendants.

Louise and Others—I certainly do disapprove of girls marrying men younger than themselves. There are many reasons why this is undesirable, and although some such marriages have inrued out happily, still I do not think they are wise.

Incorance—I should simply not answer a note re-ceived from a man with whom I had no acquaintance no matter whether it contained an invitation to drive or not; It was a piece of extreme impertinence and only deserves to be ignored.

E. E. B.—Unkind words are never desirable either spoken or written, and if you have been ftolish enough to say them is any way I abould advise your apolagizing for them as soon as possible. The unkindness you will regret, the apology you will not.

A. S. D.—The habit of writing "Addressed" on an invelope is not to be encouraged: It is a senseless one it is in much better taste to invariably put the house address, so that if the note be lost it may eventually reach the person for whom it is destined.

Mayvinco-It is a simple courtesy to how to the people who sit at the same table with you at a bearding house; the nequaintance need not, unless you desire it, grow any more infimate. It is not necessary for you to make a formal call on strangers who come to the house to live. BLANTON-To keep the skin white and soft use tepid twater. The shock given to the skin by very cold waiter is not to roughen it! tyaseline suits some skins, but not all, and if you have found that it does not agree with you, then try cold cream, which is suited to the most satisfies skin.

Y. U.—It is always proper to speak of yourself as "Miss" in addressing people whom you wish to have observe the same formality to you. If you do not wen to correspond with the young man you can tell him so in a polite manner, for one is not forced to do what people ask them.

V. I...-Keep on your washstand a little box in which some powdered borax, and every morning dip the tip of your finger is this and touch the obnoxious pin-les. If they come from indigestion, take a tempoorful of powdered charcoal in a small glass of water every ther morning for a few days.

READER—Make your blue-slik with a plain full skirt having a ruche around the bottom of pale blue chiffon; have a draged bodice and full-puffed sleeves made of the chiffon and cought in the center with meetles of narrow blue ribbon. Loop your hair, and the R with a pule blue ribbon, and wear very light gray undressed kid gloves.

G. H.—At your brown lunchson have the guest's card beside her piace. I would not have a mean card. Why not have a picture of a "Brownic" on each one of the name or guest cards? A pretty favor would be a tiny brown sails box filled with small square checolates and ited with narrow yellow ribbon, the color that harmon-izes well with brown.

C. M. H.—If somebody who really cares for you, and far whom you care, wishes you to break off an acquaintance with a girl of whom he does not approve. I would nelve that you obey him in this. In not write to the young woman, do not return her visits, and while you are polite be a little cool when you meet her; she will understand what this means.

GRACE J.—As your ten is to be an informal one, and you wish that the men who are invited shall be friends of the voung girls you can, as you tender each invitation, say this. But then you missing the names, and whether you are aquainted with them or not send your own eard of invitation, writing on it the name of the friend who has asked that this gentleman should be invited.

PATHENCE—Do not conclude because a man is quiet and not overflowing with the bright chatter which you say you have made it a point to cultivate yourself, that he is stupid; if he is as good as you describe him to be, he is certainly worth cultivation, and you can affect to chatter even if he should just answer in monosyllables. But't it just possible if your talk were a little loss light it would be more interesting to him?

A LHAMBIA—It was quite proper to return the visit made on you, although it was followed by an invitation to a reception. No call is necessary after a reception, unless it is a very elaborate one, and then the call should be made within ten days. I do not advise calling the very day after. In making a formal call leave two of your husband's cards, one for the host, the other for the hostess, and a single card of your own for the lady of the hostes.

Morrows.ness—I do not think it is in good taste for a girl of sixteen to altend entertainments or places of amiscement with no one but a man friend, nor is it wise for her to ask him to call upon her. White one may not wish to be a hypocrite, still it is not as well to remember that love comes with leving, and that if you make an effort to have dead you will certainly do it. My child, do not fall into the habit of helicities that he is make elever to appear without helicit it is in reality one of the saddest conditions in the world.

one of the sentest commission in the worth.

By Tes—If a young man stablenly kneed you I should not be speak to him again. If this stated were taken by all the girls in your set the young mon would not actempt such familiarities. It may interest you be know that I have received a letter from a young man urging me not it stip in my endeavors to indust noy afels not to persuit any familiarity from young men, asying they little know the impression it makes on the minds of men, and that as it is the first step that comis, so the first elight familiarity simply leads on to others until it is difficult to know what the end will be.

A CRY IN THE NIGHT.

Many a Home Has Heard it, and it is a Serious Thing.

"Baby had the colic, and we were up all night."

That's not an uncommon remark of some tired, dragged-out, sleepy parent. And the pain and soffering the little one went through have plainly drawn on its store of health and vitality, leaving it fretful and sick, ready to fall a victim to some dread disease of summer, Catnip ten, anise, and all household rem-edies give only temporary relief, while medicines are often positively harmful and dangerous.

Mrs. E. D. Libby, of 18 Atlantic St., Port-land, Maine, whose baby's picture is shown above, happily found a means of preventing colic. She says: "The first two months of my haby's life, she was badly troubled with colic, but then we began feeding her lactated food, and she has been well ever since. She is just what her picture shows her to be a bealthy, happy baby."

From this experience of an intelligent mother, other mothers can learn how to keep mother, other mothers can learn how to keep their darlings free from pain and suffering. Thousands of children are now well and strong, who would have been laid away in the cold grave had it not been for lactated food, While it is not a medicine—only a pure, simple food—yet it positively cures that scourge, cholera infantam, by making the stomach and bowels healthy and strong.

Babies living upon it have but little trouble in teething, sleep well nights, crow and hugh all day, and are the happiest, rosiest, sturdiest youngsters that ever filled a mother's heart with proud joy.

Lactated Food is sold by druggists, or mailed Interesting book of prize babies and benutiful birthday card free to any mother sending baby's name. Wells, Richardson & Co., baby's name. Burlington, Vt.

"PARTED BANG."

Made of natural CURLY HAIR guaranteed becoming to helics who mean their bair parted, $6 to, according to helics who mean to fee and color. Resembling Made, with proposalism, $5. Hair Goods, Connected, etc., seat C. O. D. any whose found to the manufacture for limitation principles. E. HUESBAR, 13 Sale St. Court of the decided hair, Calenga.

FASHIONABLE HAIR.

We will mail goods to reliable parties throughout the United States for approval. The new-cet styles and best of goods at lowest prices. No money required until they are received. No obligation to keep goods if unsuitafactory, bend for circular. JOHN MEDINA.

THE NEW MODEL "HALL."

PERFECT TYPEWRITER, BEST MANIFOLDER,
Terms to Agent Lebend.
PORTABLE, INEXPENSIVE.
WRITES ALL LANGUARES.
Send for Calaborate and Address N.TVPEWHITERCO.
61 Washington St., Boston

65 cts. for i quire Irish Linen paper and servedopes; paper printed with paid. Liberal discount to those getting up a club or arting as agent. Samples and terms free. CHAS. A KING & CO., 350 Washington St., Boston.

MR. COATES cheerfully invites questions touching any topic upon which his young readers desire help or information. Address all letters to POSTER COATES, care of The Labets' may desire help or information. HOME JOURNAL, Philadelphia, Pa.

HE story is told of a famous sculptor, who load chiseled a head of the Christ, and whose work was greatly ad-mired, that he fell to weeping because his friends said it was the greatest work of his life, and he could never hope to do anything to equal it. "If that be so," said the sculptor,

"then I am to be pitied, for if this be my greatest work, and I am never to do anything better, I have ceased to grow. My mental decay has begun. My ideal has been reached.
I have nothing to live for."

A BOY'S BEST IDEAL

THOUGHT of this when a letter came to THE LADERS' HOME JOURNAL IN California. He wanted me to name some great man whom he could look up to as an ideal being; a man whose character is pure, whose education is broad, whose reputation is unsmirched, whose friendships are true and strong, a giant among men, a pattern for others to follow. I answer frankly, I do not know of such an one. The perfect man does not exist, has never existed; and although there are thous-neds of men alies to does whose mode expen-

one. The perfect non does not exist, has never existed; and although there are thousands of men alive to-day whose good examples might well be emulated. I know of no one so near perfection that he could be truthfully held up as a superior being, whose example should be strictly followed by others. But why should my little correspondent pattern after any man? Why not set up an ideal above men, and try to realize it?

I do not much believe in boys, or men either, for that matter, who go through life doing this or doing that simply because some one else does it. Boys should be original. They should read and study for themselves. They should see and understand through their own eyes and minds. They should hold their heads high, and their eyes turned upward, where they may always see the golden letters of Hope set in a crystal sky. They should begin life with an ambition so great that old age will find them still toiling and hoping on. The boy or man who is satisfied has stopped growing montally. And the boy who goes through this world with his eyes on the ground sees only those things that are beneath him. The things that he should reach out for and try to grasp are over his head. Always look up, boys! his head. Always look up, boys!

SKLECTING BOOKS FOR OTHERS

ALTHOUGH I have already given a tolerably complete list of good books for boys to read and study, hardly a day comes without some letter from a boy or girl, or a mother or father, asking me for the names of additional authors. It is not an easy matter to select books for others. In nothing so much as reading and study does taste differ. The books that appeal to us as boys seldem have the same charms for us as boys seldem have the same charms for us as the same of the sa men, and this is as it should be, for it proves that we are growing, and when we become dissatisfied with a book we may then know that we have gotten out of it all the good that is possible. Books that we may read with pleasure and profit next year, or five years from now, when we become mentally stronger, might pall on us now. Sometimes our minds are not in a receptive condition for anything stronger than a light novel or an easily-read rhyme. The thing for each one to do is to read those books which are the most helpful to themselves, and entertaining as well. Again, do not follow the tastes of others. He would be a wise man who could select books for others to read and study.

relect books for others to read and study.

I recall a little lecture on books given by that stalwart Scotch professor, Henry Drommood, whose name and fame have been trumpeted round the world during the past half-dozen years. Prof. Drammond is, per-hape, one of the best known and most rehape, one of the best known and most respected of the Scotch litterati. He is a fiscinating writer, and a speaker of great brilliancy. When he was a student in Glasgow, the first book he purchased was a volume of extracts of Ruskin's works. Of course he had read and studied, as all boys should, the standard text-books, books that we all must master to become acquainted with history, to exercise our faculties, and to learn the value of concentrativeness. Ruskin opened his eyes to beauties of nature that he had never dramed of. After a few weeks' study of Emerson, he learned to see with the mind. Ourlyle, a triffe misty, soured and disappointed, helped him some, also. And so did George Eliot, for she introduced him to pleasant people. He also studied Channing, who convinced him that there was a God. And in all these books he found strength, education, friendship, and pleasure.

all these books he found strength, education, friendship, and pleasure.

Any boy could easily get together such a library, if he chose, but who shall say, except himself, that he is ready for these books, or that a perusal of them would mean either profit or pleasure? Let every boy select his own books, reading these best suited to his inclination and the breadth of his mind.

A BROTHER'S DUTY TO HIS SISTER.

It is a complaint from a little sister, this time. She has a brother a few years older than herself, and he is like some other brothers I have known, a bit more fond of some other boy's sister than his own. He sometimes speaks rudely to her. He always has an excuse for not doing what she wants him to do, for how are so busy. He cannot find time to take her to lectures and out into countany, and when he does he impresses company, and when he does he impresses upon her how great the favor he is showing her, and he lets her sit in some corner of the crowded room, often alone, while he dances with other girls, or plays games in which there is no place for her. He says cruel words to her, crushes her, and treats her as an in-fector being. Oh, yes, I know many such hoys, and have seen them act just as my cor-respondent describes. "What am I to do with such a brother?" plaintively asks my correspondent. pondent.

In the first place, I should say be kind to him. Teach him by your own example of sisterly tenderness and devotion that he is sisterly tenderness and devotion that he is acting an unmanly part. Let him see that his cruel words hurt you. But do not complain too much, for that will hardly help you, and, maybe, some day it will come to your brother that the love and devotion of a sister is not to be despised, for true love and devotion are the rarest jewels to be found in this work-a-day world. Perhaps you exist too much of him. Perhaps you exact all of his time. Perhaps you think he should not do anything, or go anywhere without you. Be fair to him, and fair to yourself, and I'll warrant it will all come out right in the end.

The boy who treats his eister badly is not

The boy who treats his sister badly is not the sort of a boy who will go through life without himself knowing sorrow. I like to see boys treat their sisters with the courtesy, kindness and deference that they treat other young ladies. It is a manly trait in boys to love and honor their sisters. It is a glorious sight to see brothers and sisters united, loving, cheerful, and anxious to do for each other. I ask all my boy readers to be kind to and thoughtful of their sisters. It is one of the best ways to be happy. It is one of the best ways to learn how to be kind, and thoughtful, and loving to some other woman whom you will some day call wife. Learn that this is not such a bad world after all, where love for father, mother, sister and brother abides.
There are roses blooming all the year around, at our very feet, if we but look for them, and every brook overruns with the waters of helpfulness, if we only care to drink.

ABOUT INVESTING MONEY

ABOUT INVESTING MONEY

A. LEFTER from another little girl comes to me from one of the Territories. She has saved all her pennies, until now she has about $40. She wants me to invest her meney safely for her, so that when she blooms into young womanhood it will have grown into a large sam. "Do not say," runs a sentence in her letter, "that you cannot do this. I have read all your Side Talks with Boys, and I know any one who writes as you do may be trusted." A pretty compliment, little Miss, and I thank you for it. I want all my readers to trust me, to believe in me, to come to me for counsel, for encouragement, and on my part I will give all of them the benefit of my experience. my experience.

But there is one thing I cannot undertake to do, and that is to invest money for others.

I have no channels of special financial information that would give the advantage over others, and, besides, if the investment should turn out budly I should feel myself responsible, and bound to repay the neously. responsible, and tended to repay the money, I am willing to do almost anything for the thousands of boys and girls who read my talks, except to handle their money, or invest it. Neither can I undertake to recommend investments for reasons that must be apparent. I know every sensible boy and girl will see the wisdom of this.

THE BOY WHO SEEKS A POSITION

MANY boys also write asking me to obtain MANY boys also write asking me to obtain will do all I can to help my young readers. But it is not an easy matter. There are ways, however, that they may be aided. Suppose, for example, a last is desirous of obtaining employment in the office, of some well-known lawyer. Let him send a nicely-written but brief letter to the lawyer, giving all the necessary information about bimself, accompanied by cooles of letters of recommendation. To by copies of letters of recommendation, insure a reply, enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Perhaps nothing may come of it, but on the other hand the lawyer in question may require just such a lad, and be glad to give the boy the opportunity he seeks. It may be necessary to write to a score of lawyers before success finally conses. If a boy desires to enter some other business let him write to the heads of large dry-goods, functial and commercial houses, and be may, at my rate, be sure of courteons treatment.

The leg prizes in business and professional life come to the boys who are hourst, hardworking, gentlementy and pushing. Like all good things, they must be sought for.

A BOY'S QUALITIES FOR SUCCESS

I LIKE that boy. He is always cheerful.
He is never cross or surly, no matter

I LIKE that boy. He is always cheerful.

I He is never cross or surly, no matter what I ask him to do. And when I tell him to do anything be does it willingly. He never complains. He is always smiling and happy." So spoke a man who is at the head of one of the largest wholesale dry-goods houses in New York, to me the other day, as he pointed out a clean, frank-faced lad, whose countenance beamed with honesty.

It made me think again how much boys have to do with carving out their own fatures. No man cares to employ a boy who is sour of temper and surly in manner; who is fretful, querulous, and complaining. I like a boy who goes at his work with a determination to do it quickly and well. Such an one has a great chance to get on in the world. Get up in the morning, boys, and make up your mind to be gentle and agreeable to everybody about you, liegin by throwing your arms around your dear mother's neck, and telling her you love her. It will brighten all her day. And when you go to school, or to work, let nothing disturb your temper. Say a cheerful word to everybody. Your classmates or co-laborers will like you all the better for being kind and agreeable. A cheerful nature is better than any medicine. It is the tonic of life. The agreeable. A cheerful nature is better than any medicine. It is the tonic of life. The cheerful man lives longer than one who is soured and ugly of speech.

WORDS WITH MY CORRESPONDENTS

MANY letters have come to me from all parts of this broad land. To most of these I have replied by mail, but those who wish me to do so should send me a stamped and self-addressed envelope. Some of the letters are not worth answering, but in the main all my little correspondents interest me.

HERE is one from a boy in a Pennsylvania town. "I am a young man of twenty, and not one of the so-called 'sissy' boys. Some and not one of the so-called 'sissy' buys. Some time ago a family came to our town—a Methodist Episcopal preacher's family. There were two very nice girls in the family, so I thought, but the young folks didn't take to them very readily. I thought it a shame, and so introduced them into society. But after they became acquainted a little they didn't seem to care for me. They turned around and talked scandalously about me, and now, when I am with another young lady who is perfectly acquainted with the facts, should she speak to the offenders, or, if so, should I tip my hat in response to their salutations?" It would seem that the young ladies are ungrateful, but even that is no excuse for not treating them courteously. There is no time in a boy's life when he can afford to be other than a gentleman. Horause some persons act rudely is no excuse for you to do so. Politeness is one of the chief charms of a well-bred man. Never "tip" your hat—whatever that may mean. But raise it slightly from your hend when occasion requires. Only rowdles would do otherwise. If you continue in gentlemanly belavior, the young ladies you refer to will soon see their error, and they will respect you all the more for your manliness.

**CAM* HAT* would be an appropriate gift for

WHAT would be an appropriate gift for VV a boy of fifteen to make a girl of six-teen?" asks another correspondent. No boy of the tender age of fifteen has any right to make gifts to girls, unless they be related, or in payment of some obligation, and then the boy's mother is the best one to advise. Nor should any mother allow her daughter to recelve such gitts from a boy.

HERE is a letter from a young man in Hagerstown. Md., that I print with pleasure. "In reading your October number I was particularly struck with the paragraph "What I shall try to do." It occurred to me as a very kind offer for you to hear the troubles and overstoons of those yourselvers who are a reand questions of those young boys who are at a less to know how to uct at critical periods of their lives, which are often their very turning-points, and by good and simple advice at op-portune times direct them toward the life of portune times direct them toward the life of a true, howest and successful man. The wide circulation which the wonderful Journal has obtained, reaching all parts of this country, must strike some one at the very time to make them think which way is best to move. What if it is but one boy who, perchance, through mere curiosity, as was the case with myself, looking over our paper if I dare so call it now—comes upon the page devoted to boys, and, being naturally interested in that sex, reads his very thoughts, and the point where reads his very thoughts, and the point where he was compelled to stop, but now he sees through it all, and starts again with renewed vigor and encouragement, and then, after years of success, looks back to this part of his life, and blesses the editor."

NOTHER letter from a young man in a A small Obio town. "In years I can hardly becalled a boy any more, as I am a book-keeper be called a boy any more, as I am a book-keeper in a large establishment, and have laid some basiness experience. The past few years of my life have not been what could be desired, not-withstanding appearnt success, and something —I can't exactly any what—in your Side Talks, has caused me to stop and think. Something points to me the result, finally, of my present course. Your article has had a wonderful effect. I shall always remember your works and tre to follow the three brokes wonderful effect. I shall always remember your words, and try to follow the three books you recently named." Something is wrong with this young man. He is switched off on a side-track. He is running his engine too fast. Stop, before there is a collision.

ABOUT THE "THREE-WORD" PUZZLE

I REGIRET that two errors occurred in the puzzle given in the December Journal. The first small word in the first part should have been announced as necessary to find twenty times instead of twelve. Then, it was stated that the names of the five successful boys would be printed in the February number; I should have said the March issue.

At the oven scorch your face, Have the stove jest 'becoming !' Fix up' something 'good to vat,' 'Company is coming.'"

A good soup lends satisfaction to the remainder of a finner.

Cowdrey's Soups

Are Delicious, Appetizing, Nourishing.

As they are fully prepared for immediate use, requir-leg only to be bested before serving, they save much time and anxious toil.

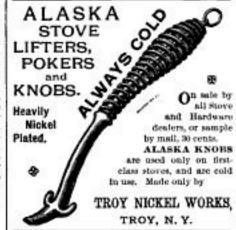

Mock Thirtle Oz Tall Consomme Julienne Chicken Vegetable Metton Printensor Green Turtle up and Bouilli Teerwpin Best Pea Okra Vermicetti Clam Broth Puree of Mullimatawny

E. T. COWDREY & CO., Boston.

IF you want to build a house, send 25 cents to J. S. Ogilvie, 51 Rose St., New York, and get HOW TO BUILD A HOUSE, containing 25 plans.

New handsome monthly journal, one year; also 25 first-class publi-cations. Order at once; offer may be withdrawn. J. A. KIM BALL, 28 W. 26th St., New York City.

5 NEW NOVEL

dete in the FERRUARY number of the Family Library Monthly. Only 15 Cents. Of all newstralers, or THE INTERNATIONAL NEWS CO., New York.

Now Ready-the February Part of the

Young Ladies' Journal,

Containing all the LATEST PARIS PARISONS with GIGANTIC FASHION supplement of $2 FIGURES, and COLDRED FASHION PLATES of $4 FIGURES, besides asomerous Stories, New Music, new EMBROU-DERY designs, PATTERNS, etc., etc.

Price, 30 cents. Yearly, $4. All newsicalers, or THE INTERNATIONAL NEWS CO., New York.

A BIG WASHOUT, and so early in the morning by the morning by the morning by the morning by the morning for it, or address DEITHER & BARROWS, Port Wayne, Ind.

WESENDI MATERIAL SERVICE FREE

MOUTH ORGAN Chart leaches anyone to play a bine in 16 introdes. Cremiar 2c. Agents wanted, Music Novelty Co., Detroit, Mich.

PATENTS PRANKLIN S. HOUGH, Washington D. C. Noatherney's fee until patent in unitalized. Write for Insenter's Guida.

FIL YOUR OWN TENTH with Crystaline. Sing Circular free, T. F. TEUNAN, M. B., Wells Bridge, N. Y.

WHAT MAKES LITERARY SUCCESS?

By JESSIE BENTON FREMONT DADGREES OF HOSE THOMAS IL BENTON

WHEN A VV young quiringly to you with faith that literary success must follow good effort, how can you discourage? How can you brush away the happy, foolish illusions of youth? The more you know, the more you pity and pro-tect that butterfly-down of pleased ignorance which cannot outlast the strong handling of real life. All too soon the morning vision will be ended, but you let some one else spoil the bright wings of innocent faith and hope.

A S you think of the inevitable distilusionment you ask yourself, "What, after all, does make literary success?" Certainly set merit alone. There is a long list of great names that walted and struggled in vain for recognition until they cause before the public and so were made known and appreciated. The public is the grand jury of literature. But how to get before it? There's the rub. Great names come to mind. We know their early discouragements as well as their later successes. To go no further back than recent days we know for how long Thackeray tried in vain to find a publisher, and in Loudon, for his "Vanity for how long Thackersy tried in value to find a publisher, and in Loudon, for his "Vanity Falr." And the manuscript of "The Datch Republic" was returned to Motley by Murray—the great, the experienced Murray himself—as "not of interest enough" for their house to publish,—backly for Motley, who published it for himself, and so resped its profits as well as its honors. It is amusing to rend the request from Murray for the "privilege of publishing" Motley's next book.

BUT that ordeal by publisher has to be gone through before the real jury, the public, can be reached, and many of the most experienced publishers make curious blunders. Even in my limited personal experience I have seen some such mistakes on the part of recognized experts.

recognized experts.

A charming woman of our circle of friends was threatened with entire loss of fortune from a lawsuit, prolonged and disheartening. Her one resource meantime was her thorough knowledge of the French language—not the Ollendorfish French, but the graceful living language as spoken and written by French society and writers. "I cannot teach it," she laughed. "If I tried teaching I think I would become a jibbering idiot, and might kill my class, but I can translate; people want loss of novels, and through friends in Paris I can get advance sheets of the best writers." And so she made an exquisite translation of a so she made an exquisite translation of a novel by Dandet. Longfellow himself tried enruestly to get her for this a publisher in Boston, but failed, as did another family friend in New York, Mr. Samuel Barlow, a man known for his sure and refined discrimination in backs in music and in all that delights the in books, in music, and in all that delights the entitivated mind. But neither could be suc-ceed in New York any better than Longfellow in Boston. Even with such sponsors, the risk was declined because "Dander was unknown."

was declined because "Dander was unknown," Then I took the handsome clear copy to a great boase and was net with the same answer, but Degged for a fair reading. The chief of the house was a pleasant, clever man, and told me be had a friend who read it with him;
hoth of them were charmed not only by Dandet's writing, but with the free, graceful rendering into beautiful English of the beautiful French. "For ourselves, we found the story fascinating, but author and translator were both unknown, and it is not the kind of French novel our public expect."

"Then give them some better," I targed.

"But that would be taking a risk," was the answer; "it might not pay."

"But that would be taking a risk," was the answer; "it might not pay."

"We usey make a mistake," be continued.

"Our house refused Blanche Howard's 'One Summer, and she has oude $17,000 on it." Lippineett "took the risks," for our brave little friend, and secured for himself the most profitable as well as the most true and graceful of translators, while for her it proved the incommendation of the second for some security with for come she needed for some years until, with for-tune restored, she could declare "I will never read, or write anything at all for the rest of my days.

my days."

And James Fields, of Boston, after reading both manuscript and printed things by Bret Harte, returned them to me with a note I sent to Mr. Harte. "Your young friend fails to interest (!) He is not piquiant enough for the renders of the "Atlantic." In a few years the "Atlantic." wrote of his merits, and I maker think few people have found that Mr. Harte "fails to interest."

But the unknown writer must clear that burrier of the publisher before reaching an audience. Prisoilly chance helps some, but I do think merit alone has small weight. Once launched, and seeling the vital force of minds launched, and seeling the vital force of minds in sympathy, the way is clear; then merit tells.

A ND among the surest causes of success I A should put as chief the touching some responsible nerve to which the public answer because it is their case. A taste of true love can always win its way, for that gets reflected (more or less brokenly) in most fives. But even greater success comes to books that treat of what is vital to humanity in its strengle for of what is vital to humanity in its struggle for or what is vital to summing in its straggle for life here, its yearning to understand the life hereafter. It was the sympathy with the poor and helpless, the instinct of justice, that made the wonderful success of "Uncle Tom's made the wonderful success of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" throughout the world. And, again, pity and revolt against injustice and oppression have toole a living book of "Ramona."

Sympathy with the oppressed is the governing cry of the day—whether oppressed by the hard conditions of poverty, or hard laws, or want of just administration of law, everywhere we feel the stirring of that active sympathy which colds by enforcing justice. Blumdering, halting, creating fresh evils while removing the old, still it is better than the stagnation of hopeless endurance. "Slukespeare would not be what he is to us had he not found ten thousand minds capable of comspeare would not be what he is to us had he not found ten thousand minds enpuble of com-prehending and commenting him; "and from lesser minds we see the writer filtering through curiously differing layers of minds and making clear the vague thought and wish for the better life.

WHEN the great public takes up a book that gives living form to the pathos of plain lives suffering under injustice, they interpret it in comy ways; but a singularly just instinct leads to the one conclusion that there is a wrong and it must be righted. And in many ways new forces are set to work. Such writers have had inspired foresight. Led such writers have that inspired foreight. Led to it by an unselfish compassion and sense of right which crities may not see, but which poes surely to the hearts of plain people—they feel the meaning—and their feeling grows to action. Wide and far goes the power of such writing. It is like the parable of the sower and the seed, and brings results according to the ground on which it fails. If it is only the comfort of recognition, of comprehension, to some sad soni, help and strength have been given, a divine privilege.

T would have warmed the heart of "H. H." A. to have nest what I came upon one morning here. Walking on the order limits of the town, where houses were few but orange groves many, I saw a commonplace but interesting group; an elderly man wheeling a buby in its carriage, a larger child treating beside. He had stopped to comfort the little one, who had been frightened by a dog running past, and the little yellow head was close held to the grandfather's white beard, with such gentle, such patient little endearments that it touched me, as coming from one of his age and rugged appearance. Some flowers I had been galbering diverted the haby's thoughts to pleasure. I saw the man was a soldier and, I thought, French. Proudly he answered, "Ach, no! German." "But a soldier, yes." A stiff leg told of real service. Children and man were both dressed in the blue cotton stuffs of south Europe, and thrift and neatness marked the small group. The man had a delightful to have met what I came upon one mornsouth Europe, and thrift and neatness marked the small group. The man had a delightful look of composure and content. It was quite-cient that he took his life as he had taken his military duties—to be gone through with cheerfully and without question. He was only part of a great organization, and did his allotted task as best he could, not with the questioning and discontent which wastes strength and hinders others. hinders others.

I knew the neighborhood, and got from the men at work some oranges which pleased the little ones and made the smiling grandfather open out to me as we moved slowly under the grateful shade of the old, time-sensored pepper trees.

Yes, it is a prenty baby. The mother she left it with me. The girl is a good girl and kind, and works well in the house and helps. with the hoy. But baby loves grandpa beet, and when the telegram came from Mexico to say that he had the fever and would die. I say to my daughter, 'Go. I will take care of baby and the boy, and the house and garden. But go. You may never see your Instead again. You see he was a railroad engineer, and he had a good offer to go to Mexico. He did want to find work here. But when a man is poor he must go where the money is. And my daughter she went and stayed with him. Now she can come back, for he is dead.

"When she gets back she will say again,
'Futher, let us go back to the old home.' Het sisters they never wanted to go back. They got married to Americans, and live in Nebraska. But always my daughter thinks of the home in Alsace."

She has the German beart," I said, " and her baby has the German blue eyes like corn-fluwers. Is its name Greichen?" I ventured

" No, a stranger name, Ramona." "Ramona?" I exclaimed.

Ramona?" I exclaimed. Yes, Ramona (the blue eyes smiled up at its My daughter read the name in a book some friend loaned to her, I think. which some friend loaded to her, I think.
She anid; 'Father, this is the story of a good, poor girl. She lost her home too, then, because she was poor; strong men and the hard law pushed ber life about. She had many sorrows. I will name my baby for her,
'Ramona."
And "Ramona" it was, and is!

THE TALENT OF READING WISELY

BY SHEAN FERIMORE COOPER. DACOUTER OF JAMES PENJMINE COOPER

(Wester in the laterant of the Giror Pricedly Society)

VERY period of time brings e-pecial duties. Every gift of provi-dence brings with it especial responsibilities connected with that The American people have been endowed to a larger extent than any other nation with one great talent. There are very few excep-tions to the general rule that all can read. We are very proud of our spelling book. We are not a little conceived, perhaps, over our school renders. But let us pause occasionally to ask ourselves if we are succerely thankful for this renders. But let us pause occasionally to ask ourselves if we are sincerely thankful for this great blessing—the ability to read. That this talent with which a gracious Providence has endowed our people should be considered by all a very great blessing, there can be no doubt. All that is most noble, most beautiful, most instructive in the writings of high genius, of learned minds, of devout souls, lies open before us, thanks to the art of printing.

But here on earth the wheat and the tares must continue to grow in the same field until the great final judgment. Thus, while the worthy printing press has bestowed such precious blessings on the human race, there is no important agent among us to-day so actively, so incressently working for evil, as the unworthy printing press. Where one really good book is printed, fifty volumes, large or small, evil in their tendencies, are daily scattered to the four winds of heaven, their pages more or less tainted with weak folly, whicked precept, presumptuous infidelity, degrading impurity.

In such a state of thines every Christian impority.

In such a state of things, every Christian In such a state of things, every Christian woman is, of accessity, thrown upon her personal responsibility. To each one of its reading may become a blessing or a curse, securding to the use we make of this talent cantrusted to us. Let us then reject what is evil, and choose what is good. No more eleverness should lead us to read a doubtful book. No display of genius, however brilliant, should allure us to open a volume whose pages are unclean. A book whose governl character is one of irreverent sceptioism should be shauned for conscience sake. Let it be remembered that a book positively evil in its tendencies is a great and dangerous enemy; no poison more deadly than that contained in a wicket book—it is poison to the body, and to the soul it is a —it is poison to the body, and to the soul it is n poison even more fatal. Nny, even the thousand poison even more fatal. Nay, even the thousand wask and trusby volumes scattered about our homes are not without danger. If read to any extent, they weaken the mind, and eneryate the character. One count be in a healthy condition when feeding on froth.

Some years ago a venerable woman, the widow of a farmer, who in her early life had been nurse to two generations of the same family, was sitting in her little parlor. A book lay on the table near her. "Have you read this book, nurse?" naked a young girl drinking tea at the farm-house.

ing tea at the farm-house.

"No, dear; I do not allow myself to read all that is printed," was the gentle answer.

Well would it be for all of us if we carried out the same conscientions rule of this wise nurse. In fetion, let us read only what has been written by the best pens. In poetry, let us shun all that is tainted with evil terdencies. In the newspaper, let us throw aside whatever spreads before us details of shameful crime.

Works of fiction, tales of all kinds, no matter how wild, how ridiculously unnatural, how intensely silly, have an especial attrac-tion for uneducated hops and girls. But, size! the novels and newspaper stories which full into the hands of young girls working in factories and shops are too often entirely flooded with folly, too often tainted with evil. Not with folly, too often tainted with evil. Not long since a young girl from a country parish went to seek work in a large town. At the end of six months she wrote to her old home, boasting that she had "a wine-colored sike dress trimmed with lace," and also that sike had read seventy novels in three months! This young girl worked a sewing-matchine for a living. The names of those seventy novels were a duriosity. They were all of the lowest class, dime novels and sensational stories, made up of cheap trush. made up of cheap trash,

Works of fiction of high character are im-proving rending. But the passion for common liction may become almost as dangerous as dram-drinking.

In many cases an inexperienced young girl cannot be expected to make a good choice of rembing. And this is one of the points where a true friend can be of great assistance to a young person. Let us inquire with loving in-terest of the young people under our charge what books and papers they are reading. Let us cantion them carnestly against trushy reading. Let us lend them to seek the advice of some older and wiser friend when in doubt as to the character of a book or paper. Let us lend them to seek suggestions in the same way as regards reading which shall be both way as regards reading which stand to com-improving and pleasure for their lossers bourn. Blography, travel, the very best works of fic-tion, the less of poetry, afford much material to make a choice of good reading for our young

WHEN YOU WISH A BOOK

WHENEVER you read or hear of a book which you think you would like to have and do not know exactly where to get it, let the Journal, secure it for you. We con, too, at all times, give you may be from you desire re-garding the prices of broken, etc. Send us your wish, and we will write to you about it. All books secured by the Joneska, are at the regular rates, postage free, Write direct to THE BOOK DEPARTMENT, THE LANGE HOME FOURNAL Philadolphia.

GREAT MAGAZINES

Goldthwaite's Geographical Magazine, A Popular Blustrated Monthly,

($2.00 per Year)

The Century Magazine, BOTH FOR $4.50.

中国HT HE NEW

Cosmopolitan Magazine,

GOLDTHWAITE'S BOTH FOR $3.00.

This offer good until February 28, 1892. A DOMESTIC

THE GOLDTHWAITES,

132 Nassau Street, - NEW YORK.

Are You Satisfied with Your Mental Habits?

The mistaken notion that education is completed with school or college course has done a deal of harm. Do you feel discouraged with your mental. haldts; do you bewall lost opportunities? Why not shake off your spathy and begin systematic reading? The Chantauqua Circle offers you wisely chosen books, a definite plan and many aids and suggestions. Begin the "American Year" this autumn and study the history, government and literature of your own land. "The work has been un unbounded pleasure—in fact, my only resource," writes a Toxas member. Write for details to Office C. L. & C. Buffalo, N. Y.

TOKOLOGY, a complete Ladies' Guide in health and discuse. Lizzie N. Armstrong writes: "If I knew I was to be the mother of innumerable children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of Tonetcor." Prepaid, $2.75, Sample pages free. Best forms to agents

ALICE B. STOCKHAM & CO., 277 Mediuse St., Chicago

SENB for free Catalogue of Books of Amusements, Speakers, Dationies, Gymanaties, Cafetherics, Services Tellers, Devan Books, Lebates, Letter Writers, etc. Dick & Firmulana L., 27 Ann 84, N.Y.

TEW ENGLAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC FAMILY BY BY EREN TOURIER.

Music, Art, Languages, Elevation and Tuning taught by entirent inscructers. Through the Generosity of one who believes in therough mested elucides, we are unabled to make this Liberal Office.

To the person under it years drug, who will forward to us to writing before February 15th, 182, the three most satisfactory reasons why be or she is describing to the term of the present school year, beginning April 18th, white Benriel. Room and Finne Kenn in my department of this institution. The successful applicant will also be eligible for receivation for the costing year. Anseria asset be trief. Address FRANK W. HALE, General Manager, Franklin Square, Hoston.

FRENCH ANUALY Spitch and Madered to GERMAN Dr. Rasenthal's Molecowchaft Rystem. [Month shousand.] all subscribers $6.00 such for each busquipe, become neteal pupils of Dr. Rase restal who certexts til curreless, and certroposis with them in report to difficulties which may occur. Sample copy. Part 1, 25 cents. Liberal cents to Teachers. SPANISH MEISTERSCHAFT PHR CO.

MEISTERSCHAFT PUB. CO.

POSTON ITALIAN

METROPOLITAN COLLEGE OF MUSIC,

LEADING MUSICAL INSTITUTION OF ABERICA.
Plane-forte tenchers' certificates. Examiners: William Masson, Mus. Roy., A. C. H. and Albert Russ Parsons, A. C. H. Dralley Back, Prevident: H. B. Palmer, Experiments, A. C. H. Palmer, Experiments, Carallary and C. R. Hawley are among the distinguished insenders of the Presity. Carallary sent on application. Address 18. W. GERPENE, 19 & 21 East 18th St., New York City.

OHORT-HAND find for Catalogue SELF TAUGHT of Books and help-BENN PITMAN and JEROME B. HOWARD, :

CINCINNATI CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC.

Miss Chara, Earle, Directress, Established 197.
Latins from a disease may beard in the Conservatory, where they are under the personal supervision of the Spirectress, realists may enter at any time. For calalogue, arbitress Miss CLARA BAUR, Cincinnati, Once.

SHORTHAND thorby taught by mail in THRES Smooths. No shortling, no position, connective vowel method. Pernin Shortland Lastitute, Detroit, Mich.

SHORTHAND. Maxwel of Phonetic Short-lard, 91.50: Special Block, 91.50: Compendium and Vocabulary slor the wed peckets, Wornis, the Symposis. W. W. 65660BY, Pab., Backeter, N. Y.

A Sketching Camera that reflects any small picking Sieblie swiff on trial. Calabague free.
C. H. JENNE, Fort Wayne, Inc.

SEND View Culturet and 25 cts, for one dozen of the largest and best infracts Photos over made in the numb for the price. Cablinet returned. Incides twistered samp for justages. W. A. SIEELESN, Photographer, Greenfield, Mass.

MUSIC Producers read rates in one better. Large to produce produced produced from the control of the produced p

OLD SAIDS made new by "Prof. Baxter's In-vention" Pr. Ido. Use of new plays PREE. BAKER'S, 23 Winter St., Boston, Mass.

* MISS MAUDE HAYWOOD will be glad through this Department to answer any questions of an Art nature which her readers may send to her. She cannot, however, undertake to reply by mail: please, therefore, do not ask her to do so. Address all letters to MISS MAUDE HAYWOOD. care of The Ladies' Home Journal, Philadelphia, Pa.

PAINTING IN WATER COLOR

SECOND PAPER

STUDIES IN FLOWERS

HE most favorite subster-color painters has always been flowers, whether merely for the sake of their own beauty and for the sake of the excellent practice their reproduction affords, as a means of gaining the greater skill necessary for higher branches of art. They can be treated in many ways. As simple studies, as pictures with necessories and background, or from a decorative point of view, realistically or conventionally.

To the beginner I would advise starting To the beginner I would advise starting with faithful and conscientious studies of flowers, singly or in groups, whatever one's ultimate ambition; they will not only serve as useful lessons at the time, but if anything like truthful representations are obtained, should be carefully preserved as invaluable for future reference, when the flower itself is such as for the moment entitionable. As perhaps for the moment unattainable. An artist cannot have her portfolio too full of such studies, for sooner or later their value will be proved over and over again. With this view in mind, make no mere impression-ist sketch—which of course in its way is well enough—but carefully observe not realize the growth and drawing of flower, leaf and stem. Try to reproduce them exactly, particularly noticing the manner in which the flower grows out of the stalk; the number of petuls, their armagement; the grouping of the leaves, their shape and peculiarities; no detail should escape notice, nor be deemed not worth representing.

BEFORE so much as touching pencil to paper, it is well to thoroughly study the subject. Then commence the drawing, sparing no pains to make it accurate. First get the general direction, proportion and groupings; then go over the whole, verifying it, and sup-plying the detail, as delicately and truthfully as possible. This being finished satisfactorily, the painting may be started, but the drawing should be continually improved with every stroke of the brush. Get the form of the flowers by blocking in the shadows and dark markings first, working sharply and clearly, but avoiding hard edges and outlines; observe how softly the shadows blend off in the model. There are no bared lines in nature, but always graceful curves, and the tender melting of one tone into another,

HAVING allowed this first painting to become perfectly dry, proceed to blot in the local color of the flowers. This requires some skill, and a light, dainty touch, for the local color is by no means a flat wash. On the contrary, strive to get the same variety of tint into the study as there assuredly is in the or-iginal, if only the student has the eyes to see it. For the word west the kindent like some he of For the most part the highest lights can be of the paper, left untouched, and most carefully preserved; sometimes, when the study is al-most finished, it may be necessary to run a very pale wash over them to subtae them slightly, but with beginners a want of sufficient con-trast in light and shade is a very common fault. Endeavor to match the color of the model correctly at first, in order to avoid working over a tint more than is absolutely necessary, for in so doing the maskilled or inexperienced are very apt to lose the purity and transparency which is one of the chief charms of water color. At the same time-always with a due regard to the preservation of brilliancy—noften the edges where needful, blending them by means of delicate half-tones. darkening or subduing by adding color, or regaining lights by gently removing superflu-ous paint with a wet brush and blotting paper. In order to beighten the effect always have some part of the study entirely in shadow; this enhances the value of the lights, strengthens the whole, and obviates the flat, uninteresting, all-over-alike appearance often presented by otherwise conscientious work.

FEW words about the coloring of the A leaves. In reply to the question often asked as how to mix pretty and netistic greens, the following suggestions will doubtless prove helpful. For lights, mix cobult and yellow other; lemon yellow and black; chrome yel-low, emerald green and raw or barnet stepna. Other good combinations are indigo and fu-dian yellow; Prussian blue and raw or burnt sienna; indigo and the siennas with, perhaps, a touch of Indian yellow; indigo and cadmium.

OIL PAINTING FOR BEGINNERS

By INA L. ALLEN,

QUESTION often asked is: "Can I learn to paint with-out a teacher?" In reply, we might quote the words of an artist of noie; "We place too much stress upon what the moster can do for us. After all, we have to learn to see for corseives. and to put down with our own hands what we see,"

In learning to paint, do not try to go too fast; commence by learning to mix your colors, and to do this, select simple subjects until you begin to know something about composition, light and shade, and harmony of colors.

composition, light and shade, and harmony of color.

The outfit need not be expensive, though the best materials should always be purchased, as they are cheaper in the end. An easel of some kind is newseary, and where it can be afforded, one having the rack movement is to be preferred, especially in painting large pieces. The enabl stick can be made of any smooth stick; it should be about half an inch in diameter, with a pad on the end that rests on the canvas, while the other end is held in the left hand; this is a rest for the rests on the canvas, while the other end is held in the left hand; this is a rest for the right hand, and is necessary when painting small objects, or when steadiness is required. The palette should be large, and light in weight, and should be kept well offer; the paint ought never to be allowed to dry apon it. If properly taken care of, it will improve If properly taken care of, it will improve

The polette knife is sometimes used to mix colors, and sometimes for applying the point upon the curvas. The blade should be flexi-ble, and when wern thin by use it should be kept only for laying on the colors, as it will do the work better than a new knife. Canvas can be obtained of any first-class dealer in artists' materials, mounted on stretch-ers, ready for use; or for beginners, academy ers, ready for use; or for beginners, academy beard is cheaper, and very good for practice; this coroes in sheets, and may be cut any size desired. Protty little decorative panels may be made of various kinds of polished wood, letting the wood answer for a background, With regard to colors, amateurs often fall into the error of thinking that the indiscriminate use of paint will help to counterbalance their inefficiency, and aid them in making fine pictures. Accordingly, they load their color-boxes with colors they will never use, or had better never use. On this point, perhaps, no two artists entirely agree, and a color regarded by one as indispensable, by another no two artists entirely agree, and a color re-garded by one as indispensable, by another will not be admitted on the palette. The best course to follow, therefore, seems to be to keep the palette as simple as possible, and to exchew-all colors that have a generally bad reputa-tion. Among such are the chromes, which turn dark with age, and should not be used except for decorative purposes, where person-nency is not of importance. The lakes and carraine are enticing to the inexperienced on account of their brilliancy, but theirs is a flecting beauty, all being unreliable, with the exception of the madder lake, which should be classed with the madders rather than the be classed with the machiers rather than the lakes. The simplest colors, if rightly handled, will produce effects quite as powerfully bril-liant, yet entirely permanent; it is folly, therefore, to confuse one's self by a great variety of colors.

If there is one point that needs to be empha-dzed and re-emphasized, it is that color effects are obtained by judicious contrasts, and not by certain formulas for mixing paints. Pic-torially speaking, no color when taken indi-ridually, can be called either pretty or ugly. "The dullest mad color, if in its right place, is charming, while the most delicate mauve, it in the wrong place, is hideous."

One of the greatest nestakes of the novice is crofity in mixing tints of green. Blue and yellow make green, but this green is never used in a picture until it is toned by certain other resident. other colors. The zinobers are recommended for early practice, as they present fewer difficulties in this respect.

culties in this respect.

Beginners expect, too, that the white paint they lary is ready for use. Silver white, the best for general use, must have a little rose machiner added to make pure white. Again, white objects, as flowers, are seldem so white but that some yellow must be added. The yellow generally used is yellow other, or lemon yellow.

Blank is an extremely useful alument in Black is an extremely useful pigment in experienced hands, being constantly added, when mixing edors for the purpose of funing don't their crudity,

We may make it a peneral rule never to use We may make it a general rule herer to use colors as they come from the takes. Other-wise our finds will not agree with those of Nature, our infullible guide, for all her colors are toned by the atmosphere through which we see them. This fact of the existence of an atmosphere is the cause of our laving so much toning to do on the palette.

HELP IN SYOUR OWN WORK

Under this heading I will be glad to answer every month questions relating to Art and Art work. MAUDE HAYWOOD.

Entrica F.-You will find advice about painting a and in sits in the September number of the JOUKNAL. H. J. J.—The work is an English publication; yeu ought to be able to obtain it through any large book-sellor.

S. M. D.—In painting on silk or volvet, use fresh spirits of terpentine with the oil paints, in order to pre-vent them spreading.

PROBLECT The flars are documed before being nade up. I am alread you will find this kind of patte-ng very passety paid in the ordinary way.

G. J. V.—It is never safe to altempt to decorate china that has been used. The black spots were protectly caused by gross baying permeable the glass.

E. B.—I do not chick the cold can possibly best off or untercolor patietings, but if the oil putiets are once al-lowed to become fracen in the taken they will be ren-dered unders.

AMAYRICH—(f) I will be glad to give some articles on tapacity painting if more of my readers write and ask me for them. (2) A specially prepared medium is used with the dyes.

43. f., B.—The designs that yest speak of should be submitted to the manufacturers of such guests. In cetter to be receptable, they must be original, and thoroughly practical.

F. P. W., L. H., H. M. G., C. R., and others.—The pyrography culties are new obtainable through the principal dealers in art materials in New York and other cities. Write effects to them for information as to price and other particulars.

STABLING—(I) A series of articles on water color intended to be trengerelessive in character was commonwed in the Jaconty buttleff of the JOHNAL OF TO make cardinal ret, mix vermillon and crimien lake. Bose consider answers to rose plak. For deep started use sanitet lake.

M. L. S.—In painting oranges, use the cadminums, new umber and lemon yestow. For a particularly rich green yest may talk yellow endmions with testigo, or with Antwerp time if a brighter almels is needed. This mixture is not usually advised, because cadmium is nather expensive to use in this way.

Lattix E.—By all means draw all you can by your-self mail the opportunity course for taking lessons. Perhaps you may find some helpful advice in the Hints on Drawing for Baginaces' given is the Julia-Nat, last April, and in the "Suggestions for Flower Studies" in the May number. They were especially intended for cases like putris.

P. B. T.—(1) The German colors may be used upon French or American ware. (2) This question is no ulde to be assumed here. The general rule may be given that colors having gold or iron as their respective bases should not be solved one with the other. (3) Nearly all the colors may be used for tisting, but some are easier in lay on than others.

O. D. F.—You have been wonderfully successful in having obtained to much remainemitte work. I would advise you to take lessons in pasted intheir than water-color pointing. Under the circumstances it will be more beeful to you, and with a good knowledge of crayes drawing, yet will find it emigeratively easy to master. Certainly, if possible, you should learn to draw from this.

Aw Inconance—For merely paleting a spray of dateles in cells on the portions, a very small catch would be treebed. Two or three medium and small-shoot breabes, a wooden paletic, and of colors, silver orbits, yellow chrones, Antwerp blan, coloub, two under, res-sidents, yethor ochre and Srory black would be found ampty sufficient. Mix the points with feesh spirits of torposition.

G. A.—It is against our rules to recommend private teachers or studies. Try to get some photographer to give you lessons in re-banching if you do not wish to gue to the school you name; the meliad is learned very quickly. I can hardly advise you as to the other. Try to find out the probabilities of your getting such a position, and iss requirements, before spending your money on the extra teaching.

M. B. B.—If you have experience in water-color painting, very few lessons—say from six to twelve-supit to give you a pullident knowletge of claim pulls-ing for you to containe the work by yourself. After as to the outift, and other hints useful for a beginner were given in the Johnnan of March, 1861. The price for firing varies according to the size of the piece, from feu cents upwards.

Mas. H. M.—(i) I never beard of any similar com-plaint to yours about editors of a good make. Baw stema usually keeps particularly well. Possibly the effective or the piace where you keep the patter, may be the cause of the trouble. (2) The deluces can be remaded by varnishing the pictures, but the should not be done until some months after they are finished. The proper varnish to use is either capal or martie.

Mass, L. R.—(1) I am not account topic of smalls.

Mass, L. R.—(1) I am not acquainted with "arrasene pointing" under that some, but imagine you mean the work usually known as "Koresington Painting." For this a large bank pur is the best affining to coarse pen will answer the purpose. (2) You may use ells intend with inspention engagement although on a principle, ambruidery is more satisfied than pointing of any kind for the decoration of this class of groots.

KATHEYN-The eartheowers places most be theroughly sixed before publicing upon k. A Scotch terrier is of a somewhat surely excep, shading to absorb white in the lightest parts. Mix raw similar, raw sixina, and yeshew order, each separately, with white, adding a little levely black where k may be precessed to modify them in hore. These three enters, with purhaps a fittle burnt steam in places, and with some could need all the cooler half-tones, will give the major of time required.

R. R.—I cannot possibly say what colors should be used in an exam scree, without knowing the conditions of light and atmosphere. If you know about the sky, you could not to have so much difficulty with the water, because the same colors are reflected in the sea, although usually becoming greater in lone, asterbally although usually becoming greater in load, especially near land, or in rough weather. A good plan would be be study the catering of some good sea pieces, or, better still, paint direct from haters.

Epp<sub>1</sub> W.—The binas on volvet pointing in the November number of the Joë RNAL were written especially for you and for some others sending similar questions. A good, rich red is obtained by mixing crimion take with scarfer vormilion. I think that as you cames take (caste, that a good handbook would be hedged to you in mixing the colors. Experiment for yourself spail you assumed in hindriching the shades on a color on each, and do not be too distributful of your cown powers.

Mass L. M.—(1) Your question is rather an odd one. It is best to aim for the most artistic, rather than the latest method of relieving a pertinit head. A qualitational proving the for the picture of a young girl is to put in a slightly bester and gradied background of neutral tones, and to paint her name surves, belind the head, in rather large, artistic lettering, keeping it, hourse express white and in the property surface of the force of the first in a little prepared lieseed oil before communicing the second painting, (3) It is not absolutely necessary to variable a finished picture. Many artists prefer not to do so.

E. S. S.—(II All the colors which are sold in tubes for china political are prepared with flox, and R is not necessary to necessary to necessary to necessary to necessary to necessary to work over color that has been already fired. (I) Jenels are negligible in with a proper connect, and need a very light firing as otherwise they would nect in the kitn, being made of class. It is therefore best in give them a special firing after all the rest of the decoration is completely floided.

HENRY ASSOTT & CO. 14 Maiden Lann, New York.

THE ART AMATEUR,

The Best Practical Art Magazine - gives -

TORED STUDIES TO HOLDING STUDIES AND PICTURES, including Rose, Water Lilles, Feaches and Grapes, Moonlight Marine, Landesapes, Dog. Cuts Meeting, Fwallows, Female Portrait shown in three progressive stages, [These progressive trasons is offs and water-colors are a special feature for 1821.] Ac.

& 3 MOS. SUBSCRIPTION

beginning with any month.

In order to secure this most Eberal offer [the ordinary price for all it includes is $2.75] you must can out this advertisement and read it direct to the publisher, MONTAGEE MARKS, It belos Squar, New York, Eg. Sample copy world colored plates, It canse.

The Art Amster gives a name one working

Eè Sample copy and 3 colored plates, 23 comes. The Art Amateur gives numerous working designs for Pyrography, with full instructions.

" Cleanliness is next to Godliness."

YOU CAN CLEAN + + + +

QOUR SKIN by using Dr. Palmer's Almond Meal which prevents and removes all humors and makes it soft and white;

GOUR DRESS, Carpets, Flannels or any tabric, removing all stains or grease spots with Russian Ox Gall Soap;

YOUR BREATH, Stomach, Liver and Bowels and aid digestion by using Dr. Palmer's Charcoal Tablets. Pleasant to take.

Good druggists keep them all. You can get either of them by sending 25 cents to MCCAPPERTY & HOLTON.

165 William Street, - NEW YORK

DO YOU PAINT?

Orde Fancy Work! Ingalls Home and Art Magazine is a Text Book on Painting and Fancy Work. Single copies 15 cts.: $1.00 per year. LIBA CLARESON'S Easy Lessons in Drawing and Painting

First and Second Series, Price, steen beach. Every tre doing, or wishing to do, Drawnen or Paretten should even these Books, We will send BOTH of those books.

FREE! to any one sending us as cents

Ingalls' Home and Art Magazine. Address J. F. INGALLS, Lynn, Mass. Box J.

DO NOT STAMMER." Prof. H. C. Wood, M. D., Li., D., University of Fennes, writes; "I know Mr. E. S. Joheston, and believe thin to be knows. Have seen him achieve a number of ani-factory curve." Send for 3-page pumphled in E. S. John-stof's feotime, 1993 Spring Gurden St., Philadelphia, Ph.

SOME VALUABLE PIRECTIONS to mix-ing uniter colors sent by mail on receipt of 10 cts, by S. W. TILTON & CO., 29 Temple Place, Section.

OLD COINS

S13,386 Paid For 10 tild Crins. Save all you get, called before 188, and

Shows the highest prices i. W. Von BERGEN, St of St., Bester, Mass. WANTED

Lida Clarkson's Pansy Frieze We want accepts to sell this beautiful PANEY PRIEZE OUTFIT FOR AGENTS, 50 cents. Terms for stamp Address J. F. INGALLES, Lyon, Mass., Box J.

TABLE MANNERS OF CHILDREN

E pleasure of a meal may be greatly enhanc-ed or entirely spoiled by the behavior of the children who are present. In most bouse-holds children come to the table with their elders, and, whether it is necessary or not, they should always do so at least at the first two meals of the day. They learn the usages of good society far more easily and quickly by imitation than by precept, and can be taught what to do and what to avoid without the necessity for the constant repetition of "Do this," or "Do not do that," which is so tiresome to both parent and child.

CHILDREN should be provided with a knife, CHILDREN should be provided with a knife, fork and spoon of a size suitable to the grasp of the tiny hands. It is as absurd to expect them to manage the larger implements skillfully and gracefully as it would be to expect them to work with the full-sized tools of the mechanic. As accidents will happen even to children of a larger growth, it is well to provide bibs, and to lay a napkin over the tablecloth to receive chance scraps of food that may be sent astray by a missirected stroke. Except with very young children, a tray should not be permitted, as it encourages habits of carelessness by making the result of no consequence. The most dainty bib is made of a fringed doily with one corner turned over under the chin, and furnished with strings. A chair of proper height is indispensable for a young child, to give it full command of its plate.

O'NE of the first lessons should be to take O's of the first lessons should be to take liquids noiselessly from the side of the spoon. This does not seem to be an easy accomplishment, judging from the small number of persons who possess it. Another should be to keep the lips closed when eating solids, to avoid the disagreeable noise that sometimes accompanies the action. Bread to be eaten with soup or milk should be laid at the left of the plate, and broken with one hand only. Meat plate, and broken with one hand only. Meat must be finely cut and eaten slowly; vegetable food requires even more mastication than meat, food requires even more mastication than meat, as it must be thoroughly mixed with the saliva to insure proper digestion. It is better to help children to small quantities and to re-plenish the plate than to give too large a por-tion at once. When there is a decided dislike to any article of food, only a mouthful or two should be given at one time, and repeated when opportunity offers till the taste is ac-ouired.

WHEN the chair is comfortable the child W should be required to sit straight on it, keep still and not to put its chows on the table. It is hard for the restless little ones to be quiet; this should be insisted upon as a matter of discipline. The polite request and the gracious expression of thanks should always be required. To see things, that we connect have quired. To see things that we cannot have and to do without them cheerfully is one of the lessons that we must learn as we grow older, and children should be taught to practice it. They soon find that there are some things that cannot be given to them, and sub-mit to the restriction without complaint.

CHILD should never be scolded at the A table. If any reproof is to be given it should be conveyed by a gentle word or look. If it needs to be further admonished the rebuke can be given in private. Children should be encouraged to take part in the conrersation at the proper time, but not to intrude versation at the proper time, but not to intrude themselves into it; nor to interrupt when their elders are speaking. A child's development may be greatly assisted by its being taught properly to express its ideas. Its little remarks should be listened to as kindly and courteously as those of a guest. Nothing is more terrible to a sensitive child than ridicule; it is felt all the more acutely because there is no ability to retaliate in kind. It is a weapon which must be very judiciously employed not to wound the feelings.

THE hours during which the family gathers A around the dining table should be the happlest in the day. This is the time to air family jokes, to tell pleasant stories and give interesting bits of news or information. Per-fect neatness and tidiness of dress should be plainest surroundings.

The gentle courtesies of life must be learned in childhood; no experience of after years will give ease and self-possession at all times Habits of politeness must be acquired so early as to become a second nature, or they will full in some unguarded moment of passion or in-ELISABETH ROBINSON SCOVIL.

DAINTY SCHOOL LUNCHEONS

BY ELIZABETH H. SHELLEY

HILDREN love dainty things just as much as grown people do, and mothers will discover that a dainty lunch basket will help to cultivate in either girl or boy the refinement which every true mother wishes her child to possess. Children are apt to be sensi-

Children are apt to be sensi-tive, and do not like in the presence of their schoolmates to open a lunch basket that is not attractively arranged. Besides this, children grow very tired during school bours and if their luncheon is not tastily put up in a clean napkin and made appetising it is apt to come home untouched. It is hoped that the sug-gestions offered in this article may be of some assistance to mothers, though they lay no claim to originality, being simply the results of practical experience and observation.

LMOST all children like cake and pie, and A LMOST all children like cake and pie, and cake and pie are accordingly, put into too many baskets as the staple lunch. Is it possible that this constant feeding of cake and pie to our children may really be thought of as assisting in laying the foundation of the proverbial indigestion, the national malady of our country, and that it is not all to be laid, as it is assually attributed, to the door of hot bread? Let a piece of cake or pie be sent as an adjunct to the lunch, but by all means see that the crust of the pie is light and wholesome, and the cake not rich. Small, nicely-cut sandwiches, wrapped in a serviette to prevent wiches, wrapped in a serviette to prevent them from getting dry. These, of course, must be more substantial for our sturdy boys. This be more substantial for our sturdy boys. This for one day: for another, bread and butter and a hard-boiled egg, varied by olives, a little preserve, or a piece of cheese. Plain cookies or graham crackers are nice to make out with. Below is given a recipe for "Scotch tarts"— outmeal crackers; these are very little trouble to make, are inexpensive, and if kept in a tin will remain crisp for months.

SCOTCH TARTS—One pound oatment, one-SCOTCH TARTS—One pound oatment, onehalf pound flour, quarter pound lard or drippings, quarter pound grunulated sugar, one tablespoonful of baking powder, a small teaspoonful of salt. Mix the oatment and the flour with the baking powder and salt sifted in it, and the sugar together. Melt the lard, and pour a beaten egg in it; then add this to the dry ingredients, using sufficient cold water to make the whole into a stiff paste. Now roll a piece of the paste to about the thickness of a dollar, cut it into rounds with a small cutter, and bake on a large tin in a moderately quick oven until nicely browned. When quite cold put away in a tin box until needed for use.

CUP of custard made with one whole egg A to each cup of milk, or one egg divided between two caps as preferred, and either baked or steamed, makes a nourishing lunch. Sweeten and flavor with lemon, vanilla or nutneg, according to the taste of the children. If baked in the oven, be careful to set the cups in a real of water to present the custard from in a pan of water to prevent the custard from breaking. Any kind of fresh fruit in season is wholesome for lunch, provided it is perfectly ripe and sound, and at times when not obtain-able a little canned fruit in a jelly glass may NOTHER wholesome appetizer, and one that when tried proves a general favorite, is a Norwegian dish, made with sago and fruit juice after the recipe below; a little bottle or cream put into the lunch basket to serve with this is a great improvement. Fruit Sago—Draw the juice from a pound of any kind of fruit—red currants, raspberries, blackberries, plants, and granes are especially, nice for the of fruit—red currants, raspectives, blackberries, plums and grapes are especially nice for the purpose—strain it off and add water to make the quantity one quart; put this in an agate sancepan, and when it boils add four benging tablespoonfuls of small sage which has been well washed; stir this over the fire until it thickens and all the grains are clear, which will be in from ten to fifteen minutes; then sweeten to taste and fill into jelly glasses.

FOR THE CHILDREN'S MEDICINE

BY LAUREL

HOSE housekeepers who possess an oldfashioned elockense about two feet high by one foot broad, or a trifle smaller, can turn it to good account in the capa-city of a medicine closet. It should be first well cleaned and then revarnished or gone over with furniture polish on the outside. Inside over the open glass front to hide the bottles, which would not look very artistic showing through the glass, hang or tack a silk curtain of some pretty contrasting color. Now for the shelves. In a case of the stated dimensions, one or two shelves can be made accord-ing to the height of the bottles used.

For two shelves make four cleats about one-half-inch square, and tack to place on the in-side of the case, being careful not to split either. Take some pieces of hard woodabout enter. Take some poeces of hard woodabout one-half inch thick and fit into the case as tightly as possible so as to leave no crevices. Tack or glue each shelf to its clears and, if thought necessary, two small blocks can be placed under each shelf at the back.

Fasten to the wall in some convenient place with screws and, if liked, brackets can be placed below in imitation of a shelf. This makes a very desirable place to keep the medicines which every bousekeeper should have handy in case of emergency.

In the absence of an old clockcase, such a closet could be made by a cabinet-maker at a small cost, and decorated to suit the taste.

Bottles should be tightly corked and plainly marked; pills and powders put in neat boxes, labeled; liniments and outward applications kept on a separate shelf.

PUTTING BABY TO SLEEP.

PUTTING BABY TO SLEEP.

MAY I say a word about "Putting Bables to Sleep?"
I have beought up eight children, and made it a rule when the dred one came, to have a little bed for it, and not have it seems to have a little bed for it, and not have it seep with me. Doo't every mother know the thred, weary freding they have in the morning after baby has been resilies and nursing all night?

Now, baby would rest much better in its own little nest than it would in your arms, mothers. I know how hard it is to put the dear little one out of our arms, but try it, and see if it is not better for you both. Take it up and nurse it when you go to bed, and when adoes hay it back on its own little pilose, and if it should wake up in the small bears of the night sit and it has beelef wake up in the small bears of the night set and it is should wake up in the small bears of the night sit and put to fall makep with it in your arms, and never wake until time to get up, then your gotting up wakes the baby, and you have to get breakfast for "John" with it in your arms, or have it crying.

If Y. H.

THE CARE OF BOTTLE-FED BABIES.

PREFARE each meal when wanted, and this only at regular intervals. Dilute the milk with holling waiter, and never sweeten after the buby has bearied to take it freely. Never new what is left in the bottle, but clean at once, and set away ready for the next meal-time; should it need an extra cleaning, put in a handful of coarse sand or small pebties, and enough water to wet thoroughly, and shake for a few minutes; rirse, and you will have a clean, sweet bottle.

WASHING BABY'S SOCKS.

MAKE a strong such with rold water, let them lie in it about half an bour, riuse up and down, rub gently a little, riuse in rold water,—with only a little scap in the water,—wring (gently also) in a dry tower, and pull out evenly to dry.

A HINT FOR OTHER HOUSEWIVES

A HINT FOR OTHER HOUSEWIVES

MIDS. H. A. J. has my sympathy. Having tried all the staffs recommended by as many different people, via., alum powdered, borax and segar, insect powder, pennyoyal oil, cedar oil, and "reach food," I limitly tried Paris green. It is effectual, but dangerous.
A large bouseholder hold me that lobseco steeped until the tea was strong was a good remedy. I procured some staffs and herves from a choise or grover, and made a very strong decochion. A brush—loug-hundled round brush—was used, and by thoroughly brushing over all crevices, and in fact over all the places they frequented, I am comfortable. To see a reach now is unusual. Of course, the brushing must occur often until the psets are exterminated, when a theoreugh going over once a work will prevent their returning. My bath room was so individed with them that I distiled to use the bath. I exist in a flat.

PREVENTING CHILDREN'S COLDS.

PREVENTING CHILDREN'S COLDS.

I HAVE a little boy five years old, and during these three years of motherbood I have learned some through through my own experience, which have become invaluable to me, and pertaps may be helpful to some young mother among the Joriawa. readers.

Although colds, both severe and serious, have prevailed in the neighborhood and community, our little one has had but one slight cold. This I attribute to one of here through:

1. The care I take of his diet, giving him only the food that is simple and nutritions, seeing that his dully habits are regular, and that the bestels are kept open.

2. For some time I have made it a rule to every marring give him a little bath, which have about one minute. Before changing the flammel shirt which he has worn at hight fir the one has be to seen during the day, I make ready the little cold, sall-water than—perhaps a quart of water and a tablespectuall of sail. I do not measure it. He learns over the bowl, and with my hand I golckip bathe his neck, cheek, and bark, finishing with a vigorous towel roth, until the little full cheek glows. I have some vascibles rindy, and take croated on my flager tips to barely grouse him over where I have some vascibles rindy, and take croated on my flager tips to barely grouse han over where I have been coldiged to omit it he has complained. The dash of cold vater accustoms the throat, cheek, and langs to the look, the sail is a toule, and the vasciline or eccon oil is an excellent preventive against cold. A physician of great prominence and success says an of rule after a half is no good as an overvout to resist the cold.

3. I have accustomed my boy, from infancy, to an out of doors every day, unless the state of weather positively forbade. When that is the case, and I have to keep him in all day, at least twice a day I open the windows, and let him have a good roup for a few minutes. The careries prevents taking cold, and the sid of the room is changed. A good breath of spice, fresh int, and a merry coup of this kl beasing and discontent in a consequence.

I know,

When a child or any one takes cold, it can be "broken up" if taken at once with the right measures—not by dealing with drugs. From the same exception, physician above referred to, and from my own experience. I have hearned that druking hot water, as but as possible, will broak up a cold, and it is sure to do it. Make it into bemorate if more agreeable, and take it every hour; if you can, remain in doors, and do not expose yourself to changes of temperature.

BOYISH SUITS FROM BABY DRESSES

DOYISH SUITS FROM BABY DRESSES

OUR little man was three years old this fall; time for kill suits, grandma suit; and he did seem too old for his haby clothes. But there were all those dainly little wooken dresses made hat fall, with their short walses, only marrow have for collars, and everything about them "babyish." Oh, not they would not do at all this winter for our young man of three. We could not think of laying them aside, however iscarcely worn at all sand getting him a complete set of new suits, so out came the baby dresses.

They were found to be large enough about the neck and shoulders, and as the long skirts of last winter worn more just the right length for the shorter ones required for a three-year-old, the only difficulty was in the short wastes and sleeves.

This had we managed: The dresses that had sufficient material left for a belt, safter collar and cuffs, were altered first, and nor the others we purchased enough material of continesting colors to make these. The skirts were ripped off, and the wabets pleved down about two inches, and over this we firsteried a broad belt with fancy backle or resette of ribbon; the shortes were preced down with a fancy cuff to hide the seam, and broad safter collars, or fancy pointed or tum-over ones, replaced the baby here at the rock.

For some of the dresses, three strips of the same material were set on the waist, both front and back, to indicate hear-plates; others had a finish of marrow gill cond on waist and sheeves with fancy backle, were carefully weeked, and trimmed with ribbon beits, and deep collars and coffs of pointed ince, without fishess.

Thus, with very little expense, all the backy dresses of last winter (for best and everyted were viewered as were retained on the standevervital week were reserved.

without follows.

Thus, with very little expense, all the baby dresses of last winter (for best and everyday wear) were converted into buyish seits, and only one new kill, with farmy blouse and jacket, was required; and the little fellow looks quite as one and manly as though all the sum were purchased this winter.

PHERE E.

STIFF SHIRT-BOSOMS

Will come of the Journal renders please tell me how I can make my bushand's shirt-bosons, col-lars and cuffs really stiff and glosey. C. W. W.

A GUESTION ANSWERED

Mrs. Walker.—Get from the drugget a quarter of a pound of quastic clies. Put a handful in a pitcher and pound of quastic clies. Put a handful in a pitcher and pour in a quart of bedfing water. Let them sook for twenty-four hours, strain and use the uniter to wash the hair thoroughly. It aboubt be repended unes a week with children who are exposed to the danger feared,

EARL MANUFACTURING CO., 20 Fifth Avenue, Chicago, III.

MIZPAH" VALVE NIPPLES WILL NOT COLLAPSE.

Make norsing easy, and prevent much cole, because they admit air into the bestie as the milk is drawn out, and prevents a vacuum being formed. Sample free by usual upon request, with valuable information for resanding and keeping nippies sweet and healthy. WALTER P. WARE, 36 S. Third St., Philip., Pa

"The Best Nurser prevents sick-tees, wind col-ic, independen-is set cleans-ing easy draw.

Endorsed and used by highest received authorities. Once my
"The Best," and you will tolerate to other Bottle. Insist or gong Braggist getting it for you. Descriptive circular from.

EASIFOLD 10., 221 Cauch Street, New York, Samulacturer.

INFANTS' HEALTH WARDRONE 50c. Short clothes 30 pat. 30c. directions, kind, amount material required. Mrs. F. E. Phillips, Keens, N. H.

BABY WARDROBE PATTERNS
Complete confr. 25 improved patterns for infancy electives. Also 25 of short clothes. Billion set with full directions for making, amount and kind of innertal, by mail, senied, in cents. Patterns absolutely reliable. BINTS TO EXPECTANT MODIFIELS, a book by a trained masse, free with each set of patterns. Mrs. J. BRIDE, P. O. Box 2033, New York.

MOTHERS If you cheeken the most healthful clothing for your babbes send for the for girls to age of 16. Send 25, stamp for free samples and catalogue. B. J. SPERUEE & CO., 24 Names St., Chirage, III.

NO MORE DULL SCISSORS. The scissors Sharpener will sharpen the dullest shears or scissors quickly and do it better than any selesors grinder. Any lady our use it. Sort postpaid, with full directions, for early 2s. in Starops or Silver. Put d Nov. 18, 26, Agents Wanted W. E. WOODRUFF, Centerbrook, Conn.

EDITED BY MARY F. KNAPP

This Department will hereafter alternate each month with "Artistic Needlework," so that both of these branches of woman's handiwork may be distinctly and more fully treated.

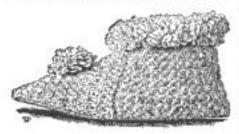

Both Departments are under the editorship of MISS KNAPP, to whom all letters should be sent, addressed to 20 Linden street, South Boston, Mass.

CROCHETED SLIPPER IN STAR STITCH

BY MINNIE E. SHERWOOD

ATERIALS: One and one-halt skeins of Germantown wool, bone crochet book. For a No. 4 sole, crochet a chain or eighty-four stitches; on this chain work ten rows of star stitch. Sew one of the short ends of this piece to the long side to shape the slipper; then sew it to the sole. Crochet three rows of loop stitch round the top of the slipper, and catch the top of the border on the inside.

CROCHETED LOOP STITCH

Make a chain the desired length, put the hook through the second st, wind the wool twice around the forefinger of the left hand, and draw the wool through the second st; this gives two sitches on the hook. Draw the wool through these two. Put the hook through the next st. Repeat to end of chain; break the wool. Each row is the same. For the pompon, cruchet eight loop stitches into a ring of three stitches, work round and round, widening by working two loop stitches in each stitch of the preceding row.

A PAIR OF GARTERS

THREE QUARTERS of a yard of silk clas-tic, and four brass rings. Covered in sin-gle crochet stitch with embroidery silk the same or contrasting color as the elastic. Take two of the rings, placing one over the other; through these draw one end of the elastic and stitch it firmly down. Not more than an inch need be drawn through. Buttonhole stitch the other end of the clastic with embroidery slik. Now bring the end up through the rings, then over the edge of the top one, and down between the two. This forms a buckle by which the garter can be adjusted to any size by merely drawing or loosening the elastic through the rings. Finish with a bow of riboon at left of buckle.

A DAINTY HANDKERCHIEF CASE

By ALICE C. TILDES

THIS case is made of a piece of white silk, thirteen inches long and six inches wide. On this silk place a thin layer of wool wadding and scatter over it a lit-tle perfumed powder, and line with a very light shade of green silk. On each end of the strip sew five small rings that have been croelisted over with white silk, and ince these rings together with line white silk cond. Fold the case flat, so the bring will cross the center of the upper side, and decorate as in Ulustration.

AN EXCELLENT KNITTED QUILT

BY MARY A. WILLIAMSON

AST up 4 stitches, knit across plain, 2nd row—knit 2, over, knit 2, 3d row—knit 2, make 2 in next st, knit 2, 4th row—knit 3, make 2 in next st, knit 3, 6th row—knit 4 over, knit 4 8, make 2 in next st, knit 3. 6th row—knit 4, over, knit 4.

7th row—knit 4, make 2 in next st, knit 4.
8th row—knit 5, over, knit 5.
9th row—knit 5, make 2 in next st, knit 5.
10th row—knit 6, over, knit 6.
11th row—knit 6, make 2 in next st, knit 6.
12th row—knit 6, over, knit 1, over, knit 1, over, knit 1,

12th row-knit 6, over, knit 1, over, knit 1, over, knit 6,
13th row-knit 6, purl 5, knit 6.
14th row-knit 6, over, knit 2, make 2 in next st, knit 2, over, knit 6.
15th row-knit 6, purl 4, over, purl 4, knit 6.
16th row-knit 6, over, knit 4, make 2 in next st, knit 4, over, knit 6.
17th row-knit 6, purl 6, over, purl 6, knit 6.
18th row-knit 6, over, knit 6.
18th row-knit 6, over, knit 6.

19th row-knit 6, purl 8, over, purl 8, knit 6, 20th row-knit 6, over, knit 8, make 2, knit 8, over, knit 6.

21st row—knit 6, purl 16,
over, purl 10, knit 6, 22d row — knit 6, over, narrow, knit 8, make 2, knit 8, narrow, over, knit 6, 23d row—knit 6, knit 1, purl 10, over, purl 10, knit
1, knit 6.

l, knit 6. 14, knii 6.

24th row—knit 6, over, purl 1, narrow, knii 5, over, knii 3, make 2, knii 3, over, knii 5, narrow, purl 1, over,

25th row-knit 6, knit 2, purl 6, knit 1, purl 4, over, purl 4, knit 1, purl 6, knit 2, knit 6.

20th row-knit 6, over, purl 2, narrow, knit 2, narrow, over, purl 1, over, narrow, knit 2, narrow, cver, purl 1, over, narrow, knit 2, narrow, over, purl one, over, narrow, knit 2, narrow, purl 2, over, knit 6.

27th row-knit 6, knit 3, purl 4, knit 3, purl 4, over, purl 4, knit 3, purl 4, over, purl 4, knit 5, knit 6.

narrow, over, purl 3, narrow, narrow, over, purl 3, over, narrow, knit 2, naske 2 in next st, knit 2, narrow, over, purl 3, over, narrow, narrow, purl 3, over, knit 6.

20th row—knit 6, knit 4, purl two, knit 5, purl 4, over, purl 4, knit 5, purl 2, knit 4, knit 6.

30th row-knit 6, over, purl 4, narrow, over, purl 5, over, narrow, knit 2, make two in next st. knit 2, narrow, over, purl 5, over, narrow, parl 4, over, knit 6.

31st row-knit 6, knit 13, purl 8, knit 13, knit 8.

321 row-knit 6, over, parl 13, over, nar-row, knit 4, narrow, over, parl 13, over, knit 6, 321 row-knit 6, knit 15, parl 6, knit 15,

34th row-knit 6, over, parl 15, over, nar-row, knit two, narrow, over, parl 15, over,

35th row-knit 6, knit 17, purl 4, knit 17,

36th row-kuit 6, over, parl 17, over, narrow twice over, parl 17, over, kuit 6, 37th row-kuit 6, kuit 19, parl 2 together, 38th row—knit 6, over, parl 39, over, knit 6, 39th row—knit across.

40th row-knit 1, *, over, narrow. Repeat 41st row-puri scross. 42d row-knit across.

43d row—part across.
43d row—a, knit 4, over; repeat.
45th row—a, knit 4, over; repeat.
45th row—knit 4, *, over, part 1, over, knit knit 2 together, knit I; repeat from star, knit 2 at the end.

47th row-part 2, part 2 together, *, knit 3, purl 3; repent.

purl 3; repent.

48th row—knit 3, over, purl 3, over; repent.

48th row—purl one, purl 2 together, *, knit 5, purl 3 together; repent from star.

50th row—knit across; bind off.
In the 3d row "make 2 in next st." You knit the st, and before slipping it off the needle knit another in the back part of the stitch, which is on the left-hand needle.

A NARROW CROCHETED EDGING

MAKE a chain of eight stitches ist row-1 s c in ôth at of ch, ch 3, 1 s c in last st of ch.

2d row—ch 3, 1 s c under ch 3 of last row, ch 8, I ac under next ch 3, 5 d e under same ch 3 ch 3.

3d row—1 d e between each d e of last row (yee will have 4 d c), ch 3, 1 s c under ch
3, ch 3, 1 s c under aux1 ch 3, 4th row—ch 3, 1 s c under eh 3, ch 3, 1 s c under next ch 3, 5th non-Some as the 4th row.

till new—Hepeut from the Si Yaw.

HOW TO MAKE TABLE MATS

BY MARY F. KNAPP

AKE a chain of fifty three stitches, 1st row-1 single crochet in third stitch of chain, 1 se in such of next 50 stitches, 2 s c in the next stitch on the other side of the foundation chain, I a 49 stitches; fasten in first se of this row; turn.

2d row—ch !, I single crochet in last se of last row, putting the hook in the back loop of the st, 2 s c in next st, 1 s c in each of next 47 stitches, 2 s c in the next stitch, 1 s c in the 48th stitch, 2 s c in the next stitch on the end, 1 s c in the next stitch, on the other side, 2 s c in the next stitch, on the other side, 2 s c in the next stitch. Fasten in first s c of this row; turn.

3d row—ch !, 1 s c in each of next 2 s c, 2 s c in the next, 1 s c in each of next 48 stitches, 2 s c in next st, 1 s c in each of next 2 stitches, 2 s c in next st, 1 s c in each of next 2 stitches, 2 s c in next st, 1 s c in each of next 2 stitches, 2 s c in next st, 1 s c in each of next 2 stitches, 2 s c in next st, 1 s c in each of next 2 stitches, 2 s c in next st, 1 s c in each of next 2 stitches. Fasten in first s c of this row; turn.

in each of next 2 students.

of this row; turn.

4th row—ch 1, one s c in each of next 3, two s c in fourth, 1 s c in each of next 48, 2 s c in next, 1 s c in each of next 3, two s c in next, at end, 1 s c in each of next 3, two s c in next, 1 sc in each of sext 3, two s c in next, 1 sc in each of next three; fasten as before. Continue of next three; fasten as before. Continue working in the same manner until you have 20 rows, being careful to always widen with 2 a c in one of the s c belonging to the last widening. For the border ch 6, miss 2 stitches, a c in each of next 4 s c, *, ch 5, miss 2, one s c in each of next 4, ch 5, miss 3, one s c in each of pext 4, repeat from star through the row;

2d row—ch 4, four d c under ch 6 of last row, ch 3, *, 1 s c between first and second s c, 1 s c between second and third s c, ch 3, 4 d c under ch 5, ch 3; repeat from star through the row, slip-stitch the thread in each stitch of ch row, slip-stitch the thread in each stitch of ch 4 at commencement of row.

3d row—1 s c in top of each d c, *, ch 5, 1 s c in top of each 4 d c. Repeat from star through the row; join.

4th row—ch 1, 1 s c between 2nd and 3rd s c, *, ch 3, 4 d c under ch 5, ch 3, 1 s c between first and second s c, 1 s c between second and third s c; repeat from star through the row, slip-stitch the thread in each stitch of ch 3.

5th row—like the third row.
6th row—like the fourth row.
7th row—*, s c in top of each 4 d c, ch 4, repeat from star through the row; join.
3th row—1 d c in each of four s c, and 1 d c in each st of ch 4, making ch 3 for first st at commencement of row; join.

commencement of row; join.

9th row—ch 3 for first st, 1 d c in each of next 8 d c, *, ch 5, miss 4 d c, 1 s c in each of next 9 d c, ch 5, miss 5 d c, 1 d c in each of next 9 d c. Repent from star through the row: join. join.

10th row-ch 3, 1 d c in each of next 8 d c, with ch 1 between each * ch 5, 8 s c in next 9 s c, ch 5, 1 d c with 1 ch between in each of next 9 d c. Repeat from star through the row;

11th row-ch 4, d c in d c, ch 2 between 1 d c in each d c, *, ch 5, 7 s c, ch 5, 1 d c with ch 2 between in each d c. Repeat from star through the row.

12th row-like last row, putting 5 s c in 7

13th row-ch 3, 1 d c with three ch between in each d c, *, ch 5, 3 s c in the seven s c, 1 d c with three ch between in each d c. 14th row—like last row, putting one s c between first and second a c. 15th row-slip-stitch in first st of ch 3, *, ch

5 slip st in second st of ch 5 (this makes a picot), ch 2 s c under next ch 3. Repeat from star 6 times more, make another picot, and s c under ch 5, ch 4, so under next ch 5. Continue in this way through the row.

There are five mats in the set: one large one, with 90 stitches, for the center, having 46 rows, two with 50 stitches, as in directions, having 26 rows, and two with 35 stitches with Materials required, six balls of Clark's cro-chet cotton, No. 30, and a medium-sized steel crochet needle.

A FEW QUESTIONS ANSWERED

6. L.—The address of "Lambs' knitting machine" is Chicopse Pulis, Massachusetts.

J. C. D.—You will find knilted collar and counterpane in Book No. 1, price, tweaty-five ceats.

If "A Subscriber" will send to the ty-five cents to Test. Lanual Heart Jouwnan, they will forward her back No. 1, containing directions for socks, sucques, etc. Stus. R. P. R.—Will find directions for many and plain Tam Columber in Block No. I, Britishic Vall-ma.

Send 10c, for Sample Speed Twilled Lance Thread Hum. Concept Hooks 500 Vards. 111ms. Concept Hooks

DO YOU GOLD COIN CROCHET in PREMIUMS GLASGO

LACE THREAD. Ask your dualer for circulars giving full information, of to be had of him, write to: DO NOT DELAY. becoughly satisfactory proofs of our reliability formats Glasgo Lace Thread Co. (Nox A)-Glasgo, Conn.

Normandie

Stamping Patterns

Any one who wants Stamping Patierns can have them sent to select from on agreencest to pay for what they keep and return the root. Address HENRY MITCHELL, North Reading, Mass.

WASTE.

The best made, one ounce in box, all good culors, sent postage paid on receipt of 38 cents in money order, postal note, or stamps. Liberal Commission paid Agents, who can make from fire to lifteen dollars a week. Address,

> Eureka Silk Co 40 SUMMER ST BOSTON

THE STOCKINGS THAT ARE STAMPED

LOOK WELL, FIT WELL, WEAR WELL,

SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHERS. For sale by the trade generally and obtainable direct from the makers, who will send a

POST-PAID PARCEL PRICE-LIST, FULLY DESCRIPTIVE, TO ANY APPLICANT

SHAW STOCKING CO., LOWELL, MASS.

A warm from passed over the back of the paper transfers the de-sign to any material Book showing 30 designs rout on reentys of 10 cents.

JOSEPH WALKER,

Box J 3. Irvington, N. J.

We will send you a friended lines Tidy of "An Owl Maid," Ploop to sweek I, Impair book of stitches and Dyn-Catalogue of rearriging Cellina, etc., all for six the strange (180.) A direct J. F. JNGALLE, Lynn. Mass. Box J.

CROCKET WORK Listest and Complete Instruction Rinds of Crockeling. Cotton, Lines, Silk and West. of postpaid, 25 conts. L. VIII'TE & CO., 716 STATE STREET, Chicago. III

LADIES, BECEIVED

BUT USE the "Pohymeroco" Duess Star, with a epds of the steel surpose allowing cap common of the steel steel surpose and the steel surpose of the steel surpose of the steel surpose of the star of the same of the star of the same of th THE DETROIT STAY CO., D HE DETROIT STAY CO., Detroit, 30st New York Office and Salestoom, 838 Broadway.

GS Colored with PERFEC-THIN Toyes will make beautiful carpon and rega and are guaranteed and W. Climber of Co., Puncsore, Maint

"PICCY

A Full sized Fringed, Lin , Danmask - Tray - Clotta, Banmask - Tray - Clotta, gramped with Pracy . Flora to proceed it and our 1802 Illus. Catalogue of Calley Cords. 25c., 50c. & $7.00 Streeting Outfits. Submiss etc. - for 20c. Address: Walter P. Webber, Lynn, Mass.

LADIES' SELP ADJUSTING BOOTS.
(Patenthel) require no breaking in. Cure Corus and Euniona. Always enterorishie. Made in "common-sense" and "open" styles. Quality guaranteed. Promota £1.00.
Prench Fields Edd $1.00. precaud on receipt of price. Send the and letter wors. Agrice wanted. Send twolf of, planes for catalogue and self-measuring diagram. Gro. B. Richardson & Co., £19 Wastengton Street, Booten, Maca.

FOR Enby Carriages, Adjustable Chairs, Invalid's Rolling Chairs, Safety Bleyeles, Refrigerators, Office Desks, Fancy Rockers, etc.,

sons to 1.Pht/life MPO (t), pp. its, pp. North COOGIG

DRESS MAKING BY EMMA M. HOOPER

> MISS HOOPER invites, and will cheerfully answer any questions concerning home dressmak-ing which may be sent to her by the JOURNAL sisters. While she will answer by mail, if stamp is inclosed, she greatly prefers to be allowed to reply through the Journal, in order that her answers may be generally helpful. Address all letters to Miss Emma M. Hoorer, care of THE LADRES' HOME JOURNAL, Philadelphia, Pa.

WHAT ARTICLES NOT TO DARN

HAVE been telling my economically inclined and near readers how to darn, what materials to use and what to darn, but it is almost as important to know what not todarn. A towel, table-cloth or napkin that is "giving" all over need not be touched, for every stitch put in only hastens the finalé. For some reason the moment one begins to darn a piece that is poor all over, just that moment does it give wny in the hands of the would-be mender and fall a useless rag. That a "stitch in time saves nine" is very true, but to darn an article successfully, which means so that it may continue in use and which means that it may continue in use and not show, it must be taken in hand at the first sign of decay, otherwise the busy worker had far better devote that time to resting her weary hands and eyes.

MENDING TABLE LINEN

MENDING TABLE LINEN

The less starch that is put into table linen the longer it will wear. Personally, I only like it in large dinner napkins and table-cloths in a quantity sufficient to make them slightly stiff, but this is something that every housekeeper regulates for heeself. When the wearing threads show that a rent is soon to appear, darn it at once in small even stitches with fine flax thread. If the hole enlarges in the wash before mending it may need patching with a piece of old linen, for which save your napkins, the cloths making too good a supply of "bread cloths" for one to say save them. By matching the pattern of the damask and darning it, as I described the French nums mending a torn dress, the work will not prove a disfigurement. Anyone that can embroider usually makes a neat mender, but unfortunately all darners are not fine embroiderers. Fine linen handkerchiefs may have their oseful days lengthened by mending them with 100 cotton, and now that they are so expensive this becomes a necessary item.

Rugs may be darned with coarse yarn of the groundwork color and an upbolsterer's long.

so expensive this becomes a necessary item.

Rugs may be darned with coarse yarn of the groundwork color and an upholsterer's long, but not bent, needle. Ingrain carpets are mended with a closer twisted yarn or heavy carpet thread. In mending kid gloves, use cotton, which forms the stitching of gloves, and a glove needle, which is short and fine, with a large eye. Oversew a rip on the right side just as the gloves are originally stitched. When the thumb gusset is short or tight and tears, to give more room buttenhole the edges around twice and then draw the two outside tears, to give more room buttonhose the edges around twice and then draw the two outside rows gently together with another row of buttonhole stitches, which gives the necessary room. If the buttonhole of a glove pulls out strengthen it with a tiny bit of narrow bobbin tape all around. Mend woolen or jersey gloves with silk mendings the moment the broken stitch appears, as on account of the stockinet weave the hole spreads at once.

PROSAIC STOCKING DARNING

HEROINES are described bending over HEROINES are described bending over embroidery frames, bennning a dainty bit or ruffling, even knittling, but never darning. In spite of the snubbing thus administered to the homely darning, nothing is more necessary to one's comfort. The best-natured man known will "growl" if his socks are "cobbled," though not many of them inquire if their prospective bride is an adept in this not, taking it for granted that she is. Darn hosiery with cotton or wool of the same color and use fast black cotton or silk for black hose, or when they are washed each darn will show or when they are washed each darn will show up as a dingy green casis. I have described stocking darning before, but it seems so much disliked that a few cheerful words are needed to encourage these doing the good work. Per-sonally I really enjoy darning stockings, and I am sure that many others would were it not that this task is allowed to run on until it becomes one of immense proportions, which weighs the mender down at the outset. Do not darn stockings when tired out, or by lamp-light, unless you wish to become disgusted with your task.

THE MENDING OF LACE

THIS is an art of itself, and many profes-sional menders, who are usually French I sional menders, who are usually French or German, earn handsome livings working at this dainty task. A knowledge of lace stitchery is necessary in mending handsome lace, as the torn part is made new by working the pattern over. If possessed of really beautiful lace I would say "send it to a professional." If an ordinary piece tears mend it with lace thread, which comes in small soft balls at five to ten cents, imitating the groundwork mesh to the best of your ability. Before taking a stitch baste the lace on a piece of embroidery, leather or stiff paper, otherwise it will be drawn out of shape and distorted by puckers. In pulling out the basting threads after darning a tear, be careful to clip the threads into short lengths.

PRETTY SKIRTS AND BODICES

ROUND figure gracefully

ROUND figure gracefully formed, whether plump or stender, may wear a princes gown, but it is a merciless style for revealing any peculiarities of the figure. These dresses are now cut with a "bell" or sharply gored back and have a Russian lapped diagonal front, one with a pointed busque or long jacket effect. The coat effect is given by large side pieces set on at the hips, which are usually of a contrasting material, velvet looking well with a silk or woolen gown. Simple princess dresses for young ladies' house wear, are of eashmere or crépon, fastening invisibly in the back with a velvet corselet and collar and probably a frill of the velvet over the shoulders like a tiny cupe, called cape ruffles. Woolen princess gowns are worn with a sleeveless front like a deep coat of velvet.

A princess gown is lard to fit over the hips, which makes the basque fronts popular with home dressmakers. I certainly would not advise anyone to attempt such a gown without a good paper pattern. Bone every seam, running the bones down below the waist line as in a basque. Where dorts are dispensed with in the material, the fulness now, if a woolen gown, is stitched in tiny plaits turned toward the front and pressed in shape. The most successful modistes have their pressing done with a twenty-pound tailor's iron. Some of them have a man to do the pressing upon which so much now depends, and both strength and skill are necessary for the task.

SOME CHANGES IN SKIRTS

SOME CHANGES IN SKIRTS

SOME CHANGES IN SKIRTS

THEY are lighter to begin with, which greatly rejoices the health culture people, but while this is a step in the right direction I can not say that I think the extra length put on the back is a healthy addition, as it sweeps along dragging mud and dust in its train. The newest French skirts are not made over a foundation, being simply lined with taffeta or thin gros grain silk or satine, each piece taking the shape of the outside, which is three yards and a half wide at the bottom and barely half of that at the top, which is fitted by the gored side and back seams, if made of narrow goods, and entirely by Vs, if of wide goods, made up on the cross, with only the sharpty gored back seam. Such skirts rest five inches on the ground in the back. The fashion of having a pocket on either side where placket holes are made in preference to the back, gains favor with those long-suffering mortals who have sought in vain many times for the pocket opening. These openings have hooks to keep them closed and are often trimmed to correspond with the remainder of the costume. In Paris the front of a skirt is cut just to escape tripping the wearer, as it gives a more graceful curve to the long back. Border trimmings are still used on skirts, which continue around the entire breadth of the gored design. The panier and apron draperies are gaining favor in Paris. A pretty skirt has the "bell" back laid in a scant and narrow cluster of plaits at the back of the belt, the narrow front slightly draped, and the plain sides lapped over the front with a border of velvet around the entire skirt and up the lapped sides. French skirts are both plaited and gathered at the back, but we seem to prefer them in plaits which are universally worn for all materials.

BOBICES FOR ALL FIGURES which are universally worn for all materials.

BODICES FOR ALL FIGURES

In spite of the popularity of the deep cont basques, many short bodiers are worn by basques, many short bodies are worn by young indies. They are draped in front withyoung Indies. They are draped in front without outside darts, fastened invisibly and finished in many instances with a corselet, which may point or round, while the back is in a point, narrow cost tails or like a deep cost shape. For a slender figure the front of the bodice is brought to the center of the bust and apparently tucked beneath a corselet that resembles a genuine corset in shape. All bodices are shaped to give a long, slender look to the wener. House dresses having a round waist with a full lapped front, have the full skirt sewed to the edge and concealed by a girdle or shaped belt of velvet or silk. Suspenders of velvet over the shoulders are worn with and without corselets to correspond. These are very pretty with a square front to with and without corsesets to correspond.
These are very pretty with a square front to a cloth dinner gown, with corselet, sleeves and suspender bretelles of velvet. A box-plained ruffle of velvet, doubled, is worn under the edge of a short pointed bodies, with an armhole trimming to match. Fasten the invisibly booked dress with the patented books and hooked dress with the patented hooks and eyes sewn to a tape, as they are so much easier to sew on. Where the figure sinks in at the back of the waist line it will sometimes give a better fit to make two tiny darts, running an inch above and below the waist line in the liming, then palling the outside smoothly over them.

DRESSMAKERS CORNER

Under this heading I will cheerfully answer each month any possible question on Home-Dressmaking sent me by my readers.
EMMA M. HOCPER

HENRICITA. LIZZIE AND CORA-Rend answer to "Bottle H," and consult me personally in March.

H. M.—French dyers say a veiling embroidered, may be well dyed if the material is of a good quality.

Mas, J. M.—You cannot cut a princess gown without a pattern. The thiring grantlet cuffs are lined with col-lar curves.

Mus. Thos. G.-A youth of fourteen wears a Berby, r self. Alpine hat, doeskin gloves and four-in-hand or note scarts.

M. M.—Chinasilk gowns are worn all where as house drasses; but from October to May they are not appro-priate for the street.

INFANTS' BORK-Use the finest of minesok and Vul-excisumes lace, the fine limitation; add insertion if you prefer, which should be very sheer.

A. F. J.—The "storm" serges are said to be really materproof. It will be very easy for you to experiment with a sample before buying the dress.

D. A. I.—I think you would have far better results to send the far cloak to a furrier. Some fars are dressed with warm sandust, but with any of value I would not experiment.

LAPRA F.—Fawn shades are very stylish. If a yel-lowish tan is untecoming, try one of the grayish tints. I think I have seen fully thirty different shades selling under the name of fam.

Downig H.—Bo not get may of your decrees for an April weshing before March, when many of the spring grads will be opened. It is apposed that rough goods will be very stylish for the coming senson.

From V.—Combine your pink surah as per answer to "Margaret." The jet gimp runs from a half to two-thirds of an inch in width, and costs from 3 to 80 cents a yard. The mill-head gimp and fine open work are

H. H. Youngaus—I sent you a personal letter, according to address, on October 28th, but it has been returned to me. You have protechly arranged your plushere this; the only combinations for it were astrocham cloth and far. Mns. Ww. D.—Very protty buby carriage africans are of heavy white pages, embruidered in white floss, and edged with three fringe, all of the materials costing about $2.5. In your climate such a cover might be used at all seasons.

B. D.—Many thanks for your kind appreciation. I think all connected with the Jocustat try to help womankint, and manurally Sad pleased when told of their success. Yurs, it is said, will be cheaper next wis-ter, especially scalekins.

ALICE—You can have your princess gown lapped diagonally in front, with a demi-train, V-neck and bit sieeves. Trim the opening and wrists with a white site moss trimming, and wear the Cleopatra cord girdle knotted lossely in front.

MANTE A.—Do not combine any color with your green, unless it be cream chiffen ruffles on the bodies, as described for "M. E. B." A chiffen ruffle on the edge would longthen the skirt. Made in this manner you can dispense with the sash.

Mur. F.—I regret your disappointment; but every mouth you may read in this column warnings to cor-respondents to orthe early, and that when in a horry, by addressing me and enclosing a stamp I will realize their haste and personally answer them at once.

JENNER AND OFFICES—Rend answer to "Alice." If yest prefer some gilt have a timed cord and gine fol-lowing the line of the slikes edge, which is a capital imitation of Seather edging, which, by the way, would also be very presty, and only costs $1.00 per yard, in many colors.

BRLLE. Your exceeding dress of white brocade can be trimmed with chiffen rafiles and pearl gimp. You must have white solds gioves, shoes and hose to match he sole of preferring those of a tan color, as fishion now will have the white with a white gown, as well see with gowns of a delicate shade.

with gowns of a delicate shade.

Manuaret—I should book for a black slik having a flower the color of the broomin, or black moiré for the combination. The latter is new, showy and cheaper. As you do not say how much broomly not have I cannot peak of the making. It would also look well with loce sleeves and plastron, have edging, flounce and jet gimp.

Partracks—Vou should not blame your patient, as from the increasers you give you are not of an average form. All paper patients are cut to neerisin grade of measures, supposed to be the average; but when a form is peculiar to any way the grade compact it perfectly, though it will still be an excellent guide for the first fitting given.

By a. Vow plate or see that the still the still a still still given.

Hera.—Your plaid sample is an English poplin, somewhat noembling the small cord bengaline. Use black velvet with 2 for a house dress, and white thins silk for a set plasgron. The relevel will inske a cellar, cuffs, yello or consciot! and, if you wish to buy as much vet as this, also adds border on the "bell" skirt, which will, I presume, have a "fig."

with I presume, have a "dip"

School Gerll—"Bell" skirt, with ruffle; round basepe, still belowers, wrist and neck ruffles of chiffon. Material of Chim silk, order or revion. Which-belt of four-inch saths ribbon, crossed in front from the back, carried to the back to a point between the shoulders and thed there in ends and two boogs sufficiently long to reach the skirt edge. Neck runnd or in a slight v.

M. E. B.—Make a "belt" skirt of your skirt, with a ruffle of bise chiffion at the foot. For a ruffle of the chiffion, of a harrower width, around the pointed bodies, and edge short sleeves of silk with the same. Have chiffen ruffles in front, from the bodies point to the shoulders, where they end under bullerity bows of ribbon. Head the ruffles with pearl, crystal bends, slik or sliver ging.

An Olan Suinschauss—If a colored silk needs reco-

Ax Oan Structures—If a colored slik needs reso-vating, I would advise you to send it to a reliable dyer. You can sponge a black slik with state been or weak coffee, teding a bit of the slik, and on the wrong side of the slik as it will be when made up. Diluted alco-led, gin and water, in which am old glove of black kid has been belied, are also good renovators for black kid has been belied, are also good renovators for black side, on the wrong side.

on the wrong side.

"Inquinter "-Phash cloaks are always worn, though they cannot be said now to be in the height of fashrion. Only gold neck bends are in good style. Trim a black Henriesta with side kings for an elderly woman. Make with a pointed cont-tail basque, moderately full shewrith a pointed cont-tail basque, moderately full shewrith and resident with side for a fine-plathed back, and front slightly draped to remove the extreme plain look of the front, which makes a stout figure so prominent. Press the plains of a fine back on the wrong side, but do not contract them with too many tackings. Lay the plains straight, and lap more at the top. If your civil gris askew in even one plait you will never get the rest even. Out a French skirt slightly down in front, and fit to the figure with V's or deries.

to the figure with V's or deris.

Heles D.—Jacket effects are not becoming to a short-waisted person. Have a pointed basque, back and front, and very short; Veshiped neck, back and front, and edge both with a rufle of chiffen, beaded with a bead glimp, white, or white and gold. Full elbox siceves, entirely of chiffen, dashed with a chiffer rufle; bell "skirt, trimmed with a rufle or two of chiffen. The skirt could be matriced and pleased under the rufles. Such a house dress as was described in the November Jouens A. mould be very pretty for you. The brown will look correct with the black jacket. I am sorry that your letter did not search me seconer, as my January department was too full to insert your answer in time to be of match service to you. The winter dress should be of hadder cloth, or beinfette, as it is desired for a standard style. Make with a deep pointed coat-call basque much modified "bell" skirt, with velvet trimming as a border, cuifs, colour and vest or correder. Buy dark green, navy-blue, golden-brown or tan cloth.

We have made unusual preparations for the Opening Season of 1892.

This is the time for Receptions, Weddings, Balls and Anniversary festivities which call for Evening Dress. Good Taste and Fashion require, for such events, the use of Silk Fabrics.

Our Stock includes every known style of these goods, from the lightest Gauze to the wide Silk of heaviest Cord.

We shall be added to the season of the season

We shall be glad to answer any inquiry regarding prices and styles, and to send samples, whenever the desired fabric is definitely stated.

James McCreery & Co., New York. Broadway and 11th St., -

Dride

Special attention is called to this elebrated brand of Bleached Muslin, which for fineness and durability is unsurpassed. This cloth is manufactured with great care, particularly for LADIES' UNDERWEAR and

GENTLEMEN'S SHIRTS. in 36, 41 and 45 inch widths, and is guaranteed not to Crack or Turn Yellow, Inquire for this brand, and take No Substitute.

In purchasing garments, ask for Pride of the West.

For sale by all leading retail Dry-Goods dealers in the

No More Round Shoulders. KNICKERBOCKER SHOULDER-BRACE and Suspender Combined Expands the Chest; prevents thand Shoulders. A perfect skirt-Supporter for Ladies. No harness sample onlike all others. All sizes for Men. Women, Hoys and Girls. Cheapest and only reliable Shoulder-Bruce. Easily adjusted and worn with comfort. It is a Combined Shoulder-Brace and Sus-pender. It provides new and improved suspending for men's pants, and supporters for laties underskirts, which do the double duty of holding up and bracing up. Sold by Umersists and General Stores, or Seat, pact-paid, on receipt of SI per pair, plain, or SL-50 silk-faced. Send chest incasure around the body. Address

KNICKERBOCKER BRACE COMPANY, Easten, Pa. N. A. JOHNSON, Proprietor.

One thing is certain-Our Fashion Catalogue

Blustrates the latest Paris and New York styles in Ladies', Men's And Children's wear, at New York's Lowest prices. Write for it at once, It is sent you Free.

MAHLER BROS., 303-504 oth Avenue, N. Y.

LACE CURTAIN Catalogue, 1 cent, and samples of Wall Paper, 4 cents. WM. DRARNESS, Cincinnatt, O.

GONE OR the count of flamest worn under the count of flamest, protecting the deching from perspiration to apper thus dries shields, one part thus dries at leids, one part doing the work of six.

M. DEWET, Mr. 1887 W. Marroe B.L. Chicago, J. AGRAYE, Send Money by P. O. Chicker, Caralague Free, S. WANTED.

FREE SAMPLES of new styles of Waterproof goods.
Nackintoshos and Overgaemente made to order.
Agents wanted. BAY STATE TAILORING CO., 11 HAWLEY STREET, BOSTON.

FREE Samples maded for Sick Headache," Rheuma-ties, Dyspepta. Dunbar's Syries Turic Co., Gereland, G.

THE FASHION IN MOURNING GOODS

By Isabel A. Mallon

has been decided, long ago, that when one has lost a dear one by death, bright colors are rather shocking to the eye; that it is one's privilege to assume the allblack which never offends, and which gives to the world at large the token that the wearer is in grief, and that her grief that the wearer is in grief, and that her grief is to be respected. As in every mode of dressing the fashion in mourning changes, manufacturers have learned to make more beautiful materials, and modistes have studied the best method of developing them. This se von finds crape more in use than ever before; and the reason for this is in the fact that a good English crape has been brought to such perfection that it not only permits the dust to be shaken out of it, but will even stand a gentle shower of rain. The average woman, in potting crape on a rown, or makwoman, in patting crape on a gown, or mak-ing a bonnet of it, is apt to arrange it so that it looks crooked and goes awry, and the reason for this is she has not yet realized that there is a right and is a right and a wrong side to the fabric. However, if she examines it she will see that the right side is smooth and the crinkles highly finished, while the wrong side scens uneven, and will catch quickly to any wool material, Just hereit might be well to say that in making it up crape should not be lined with silk, but with a light wool fabricin-stond. The stend. The crape will adhere to the wool lining and remain in place and ook and straight when it will pull away from the silk one and fall in a loose fashion that will take away from the good appearance of the gown or bonnet. Always buy a good quality of crape; the materials for mourning should be of the best.

A SUITABLE MOURNING DRESS (Illus. No. 1)

THE MOURNING MATERIALS

THE MOURNING MATERIALS

If end the deepest mourning; it wears so well, and can be gotten in such a perfect black, that it has ousted every other material. It is usually trimmed with crape, for which it affords a good background. Next to Henrietta cloth, the chosen material for street wear is dead-black camel's hair; then, of course, there is the large array of plain wood suitings, such as cashmere, broadcloth, tamise and the many black stuffs that have special names given to them by the manufacturers, but are all called suitings. Heavily-corded materials are not mourning; and she who chooses a ribbed fabric, and trims it with crape, simply announces her ignocance of the proper combinations. The very materials themselves show that they are not in harmony.

A SUITABLE MOURNING DRESS

A SUITABLE MOURNING DRESS

THE fushion of crape folds on a skirt is again revived, though the folds are not, as in the post, lapped over each other, but are instead sufficiently far apart to show the material between, and oftenest of different widths. In Illustration No. 1 is pictured a mourning costume made of Hourietta cloth and crape. The fashionable, bell-shaped skirt is trimmed with three bands of crape, the one at the extreme edge being about three inches wide; the second one being two, and the third one, one. These show a division between them of two inches. The basque is pointed in the back and front, its closing being concented under the front, which really might be called a large plastron, as it is formed entirely of crape, cut with perfect smoothness, and fitting the figure exactly. The seams in the back have tiny folds of crape outlining each, these have they folds of crape outilining each, these folds, by-the-by, not being set in the seams, but carefully arranged on the outside of them. The collar is a high one, covered with crape on the outside only. The sleeves are full, and gathered on the shoulders, shaped in at the elbow, and bave, as their decoration, three bands of crape, graduated in size like those on the skirt. With this is worn a Mary Stuart bonnet, made of folds of crape, and with a veil gathered and drawn to the back, where it falls in full folds reaching far down. The veil across the face is a round one of black net, trimmed with a fold of crape. If this constance were worn by a widow, a double fold of white lisse would outline the entire edge of the bonnet. of the bonnet.

ABOUT THE VEIL

CRAPE veils are ween long enough to reach almost to the edge of the skirt. At the bottom is a hera about half a yard deep, while at the top is a narrow one which is simply a finish for the material. The wearing of veils over the face is not as general as is simply a finish for the material. The wearing of veils over the face is not as general as it was, though widows continue to wear them in that way for from three to six months, as they may desire. The veil is now draped over the bonnet, and the round veil, with its crape border, is worn over the face. This, by the-by, is what is known as the French mode, and it is certainly more becoming and comfortable than living behind a veil, as was done some years ago. Unless you have a naturally artistic taste it will be wisest for you to have the milliner drape your veil on your bonnet, and then by keeping it in a long, rather than an ordinary bonnet-box, having it spread out in its resting-place, it will retain its freshness, and your bonnet will look new and in good order.

Have a soft brush kept exclusively for removing particles of dust from your crape, and do not permit this brush to do service on any other material. Too much cannot be said in favor of buying good crape; and I would suggest that unless one feels that one can afford this it is wiser not to get any, cheap crape being one of the numerous methods of throwing one's money away.

ing one's money away.

FOR WRAPS AND COATS

PLAIN dull cloth is used for close-fitting PLAIN dull cloth is used for close-fitting coats, long ulst-ra, or any of the wrups that are not supposed to be dressy ones, and on them is put no trimming whatever, unless it should be the buttons, which are of flat, dull silk. The long coats, closely fitting the figure, and reaching nearly to the knee, are liked for mearning, but are principally chosen for walking. The cheviot cloaking, not that with a coarse diagonal effect, but that which is simply plain and not rough looking, is the preferred fabric. For light-weight cloaks, camel's hair or Henrictta cloth is generally selected.

A rich wrap, reaching far below the waist, is made of camed's hair, and is pictured in Ri-lustration No. 2. Quite plain in front, it is gathered high on the shoulders, where epan-lettes of crape add to the height, and make a pretty decoration. The collar is a broad, flar-ing one of crape, and bands of crape, two on such side course free pades. ing one of craps, and hands of craps, two on each side, come from under it, and extend the entire depth of the front. With this is worn a small capote, made of folds of craps, having a bunch of narrow craps loops just in front and another at the back, from under which the veil falls. The ties are two straps of craps, drawn up high and fastened with dull jet pins.

BEAUTIFUL STUFFS FOR HOUSE WEAR

BEAUTIFUL STUFFS FOR HOUSE WEAR

THE combinations of silk and wool shown in the new materials, and intended for house or evening dresses, are most beautiful. Clarette cloth, with a silk warp, is light and graceful, and would made an extremely pretty tea-gown that might either be trimmed with crape, or have the decoration of itself arranged in soft drapings and folds. For evening wear, a silk and wool mousesline is shown that is almost as light as crèpe de chine, and which will adapt itself to the styles in vogue very easily. I would commend this material not only to those who are in mourning, but to those who like pretty black evening dresses; for while it is a jet black, it yet would, by its decoration, show whether the wearer was in mourning or not. Trimmed with feathers, with chiffon, with jet and steel, or with gold, a most beautiful dress could be arranged. What is known as carmelite cloth is also shown in a mixture of silk and wool, and for so light a cloth is remarkable, strong.

for so light a cloth is remarkably strong, the reason for this being that the silk being that the silk and wool warp runs both ways. There are more materials to-day among the black stuffs than ever before; and from alapsea to Hen-rietta cloth, from monseeline to cush-mers there is a range mere, there is a range that is marvelous to any one who has not troubled herself, nor had occasion to look up the black ma-terials.

An evening dress of Clarette cloth with a silk warp, would be in good taste if it had a skirt showing a pinked frill of dull. black silk as the edge finish, and a draped hodice trimming, the neck to show just a little, and hav-ing full, gut he red sleeves reaching the wrist. A broad such of black ribbon could be worn, either in the very simplest manner, about the waist, or if a nar-row ribbon should be chosen it could be brought from the back coast over the buck, cross over the front and allowed to fall just below the aboulders.

THE FASHIONABLE MOURNING BONNET

THIS very pretty bonnet, shown at Illustration No. 3, is made of black English crape, drawn in such a way that the plateau effect is produced, although as it is bent up a little in front it has not the absolutely flat air of this shape. Its decoration consists of three high loops of black ribbon at the back, wired to position and tied with a narrower ribbon as are the Prince of Wales feathers. The ties are of black ribbon brought forward and then carried back and fastened on the hair, so that are of black ribbon brought forward and then carried back and fastened on the hair, so that the double tie effect is given. Such a bonnet as this, is, of course, suited for mourning wear; a long crape veil is not wern; if a crape veil would be desired it would be proper to have it of black net with a crape border. If the ribbon is thought too light the bows could be made of black crape, and a bridle could take the place of the ties. A plain black veil would be worn with this, but I should not advise a dotted one of any kind with a crape bonnet. Crape flowers are not in good taste, and the very best milliners don't use any more elaborate decoration than ribbon upon crape.

A YOUNG WOMAN'S MOURNING BONNEY

The leavy veils of crape, or of nun's veiling, may only be worn with the plain, close crape bonnet, and would be quite out of keeping if worn with any other sort. Such veils usually cover the bonnet almost completely, and are fastened at regular intervals with dull-headed black pins. The bonnet strings should always be of a dull black ribbon.

ANSWERS TO SOME QUESTIONS

ANSWERS TO SOME QUESTIONS

It is not deep mourning, but it may be worn three months after mourning is assumed if it is trimmed with crape, but even then the dull silk must be chosen.

Feathers are not to be used in mourning, a feather fan not even being permissible.

Jet should not be worn until after crape is laid aside, and then only the dull jet is proper, unless you are wearing black for a distant relative.

Neither velvet nor plush are mourning.

A white handkerchief without a border is counted in rather better taste than those having the black outline; but when a border is used it should not be over half an inch wide, and no embroidery is allowable on the linen square.

Square.
The gloves should be black undressed kid ones, the glove kid not harmonizing with crape.
Buttons should be of the sumplest, the dull black silk ones, flat, being given the preference. Where a garment can be closed without the buttons being visible it is deemed most desirable.

deemed most desirable.

No jewelry should be worn, even that of jet being counted rather bad form. A widow continues to wear her wedding ring, but this is the only glint of gold about her. The mourning fur is really the black Persian lamb, but custom seems to have permitted the use of black bear and black fox, and of scul that is dyel very black.

No matter how deep the mourning may be, black can always be ing may be, black can always be laid aside and white assumed when one is to be married. The black can after this be re-assumed. A young girl who is in mourning and who is to be at her sisterwedding may also assume white, and the mother is permitted to lay aside crape for the time being, although she wears all black. Neither gray nor lavender would be assumed, black or white being the only tones permitted when mouring is to be put on again, and of course a bride would not wish to wear black. wish to wear black

A STYLISH MOURNING WRAP (Illus, No. 2)

All these seem litthe things, but they go to show the dif-ference between a woman who is prop-erly dressed and the one who has not thought it worth while to pay suffi-cient attention to er toilette to make that most desirable of costumes, one that is perfect in fit and detail.

Shicago. The one or sell for is a world thater.

Sample pair of either style mailed on receipt of 25c.
L. B. KLEINERT RUBBER COMPANY,
26 to 32 E. Houston Street, New York.

SOMETHING NEW. Yeddo Crèpes.

Printed in beautiful designs. We have the entire control of them for the United States. This is a lovely material used for children's dresses. Also evening wear. Price per yard,

15 CENTS

Send for SAMPLES of one of the handsomest dress materials ever shown. 12 yards is enough for a dress. Postage 25

SHEPARD. NORWELL & CO., BOSTON, MASS.

CASH'S HEMSTITCH FRILLING.

Made of the Finest Cambric in widths varying from % to 4% inches.

SOLD BY ALL LEADING RETAILERS.

Most suitable for Trimming Bed-Linen, also Ladies' and Children's and Infants' Underwear.

ILLUSTRATED BOOK showing samples of above goods, also our other Standard Patterns of Frillings, FREE BY POST, Address

J. & J. CASH, 92 Greene St., N.Y.

for Illustrated Catalogue,

L. L. LOOMER'S SONS, BRIDGEPORT, CONN. (Sole Manufacturers and Patentees.

A RELIABLE WOMAN

is pretage for sample and terms. NICHOLS MPG CO . STR Canal St., New York.

THE SMALL BELONGINGS OF DRESS

By Isabel A. Mallon

MRS. MALLON will be glad to answer any question about woman's wear which may be sent to her by Journar readers. She asks, however, that she be permitted to answer through this Department in the Journal; though, if stamps are inclosed, she will reply by mail. Address all letters to MRS. MALLON, care of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, Philadelphia, Pa.

T SEEMS most suitable, as St.
Valentine is the patron saint of February, there should be no end of pretty things on sale indicative of love and lovers' gifts. Of course, the wise storekeeper appeals to this part of his trade, and furnishes all sorts of appropriate belongings

itrade, and furnishes all sorts of appropriate belongings that may be sent as valentines. Among these are the pretty heart pendants in plain gold, of moonstone set about with tiny diamonds, of gold with a precious stone here and there, and, of course, of gold or silver with a loving sentence or name engraved upon them. There are heart-shaped trays, tiny ones in silver that are to be placed on my lady's toilet table and used to hold pins, hair-pins, or any of the little belongings that would otherwise lie loose upon the table. A photograph frame, especially suitable in which to enshrine one's sweetheart's face, has a heart-shaped frame of small, blue forget-menots. In fact, any of the little trinkets in the heart outline would suggest the saint, and all as "sweethearts" would be satisfactory. The very latest is a belt buckle formed of two gold hearts that fasten together at the waist in a most graceful manner, that is, by the old-fashioned hook and eve most graceful manner, that is, by the old-fashioned hook and eye.

THE woman who wants a simple bonnet for every-day were can easily trim it herself, for there are sold ready-made bows that form the trimming, and which may have ties to match. These are oftenest the closez bows, that is, the cabbage bows of shaded velvet. Among those seen are green shading into pink, dark blue into pale lavender, and orange into dark green; put on dark blue, black, or brown bonnets these bows would be in harmony, and the ties may either match the bow itself and be of shaded velvet, or else perfectly plain of the same color as the felt. perfectly plain of the same color as the felt.

THE true lover's knot in gold or silver is funcied for fastening the watch high up on one side of the bodice. Occasionally it is effectively studded with precious stones, but this is only occasionally, the preference being given to those of the good metal unadorned.

A NOVELTY in opera cloaks is one of white corded silk reaching below the knees, and having a yoke hand-painted in pale yellow roses, and outlined with gold lace. The long cord and tassel used to the this cloak together is of heavy gold. Everybody knows how effective, especially in the evening, the combination of white and gold is so undoubtedly there will be many imitations of this wrap. ti ons of this wrap.

A NEW trimming used to outline yokes and seams of bodices is of gold braid with thry gold drops. It sounds elaborate, but is really very narrow, though most effective on black, brown, olive, or, indeed, any color that combines well with gold.

TATTING, that work which always seems so mysterious, is having a vogue, and enpes or yokes made of it are very much liked. A cape mad of tatting, and which reaches a little below the shoulders, is at present considered very smart for evening wear, and really does give a very becoming and picturesque effect.

THE chatelaine continues in vogue, and if One only wishes three pieces upon it, the jeweler will insist that these must be a watch, vinsigrette, and a set of tablets; however, once a chatelaine is poesessed, the wearer is never satisfied until stamp-box, pin.cushion, closed mirror, pencil, and all the many little trinkets are grouped upon it.

NYBODY buying a muff will show great A vision in getting one as large as is consistent with one's size. Just remember that it is much easier to have a large muff made smaller than to have a small one made larger. This is repeated for the benefit of the woman who is buying her muff late in the

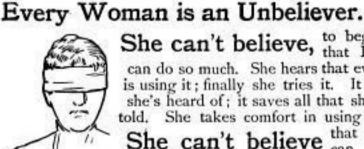

THE ring that is faucied as a present from a young girl to her betrothed is a chain one of platinum and gold, with a true lover's knot just on top. It must not be a stiff chain, but one that when taken off the finger fulls in a little beap, if she doesn't wish to impress him with the fact that her chains are

SHADED or changeable silk continues to be liked for blouse waists to be worn in the house. They are made quite simple, and have as their only decoration collar, cuffs and belt of velvet. A very pretty one show-ing green and scarlet in the silk has these ad-juncts of moss-green velvet.

No more useful present can be given a bride than a crystal traveling clock. Experience has taught that except in France the average hotel room has no clock in it, and when one is alone there is no better company than a pleasant-toned clock, one that rings out the half hour with a single chime, and announces the full hour with as many strokes as it deserves. These clocks come in black, brown, and dark blue leather cases, lined with plush or velvet, and while the name may be put on the clock itself, it should also appear on the case, with one's address underneath it, so that if it is left in the train or at the station the honest person who finds it will know where to send it.

CIREAT, buge tiger lilies, annunciation I lilies, and enormous roses, chrysanthemums or dablins are shown in velvet and satin, to be placed on the large lace shades now in vogue for lamps. This makes the shades less expensive, as when the flower-shades are gotten at a lamp store they cost a great deal, whereas if you buy a silk shade first, get the lace and frill it on, then put upon it a flower or flowers bought separately, it will be found to cost much less. And she is a wise woman who looks after her bouschold in the way of saving on luxuries, by devoting a little time to their arrangement and manufacture.

VERY thin table veil: in pale blue, lavender, pink, pale green and scarlet are in use for wear with the light evening bonnets. They are so thin they do not crush the triming and the color being so pale has no effect on the skin, while the veil does its duty in keeping the hair in place. Some, who like to mass the color about the neck, allow three-constrers of a veil desprise on the quarters of a yard to a veil, drawing up the fulness under the throat and fastening it high on the back with five or six fancy pins

She can't believe, to begin with, that Pearline can do so much. She hears that everybody is using it; finally she tries it. It does all she's heard of; it saves all that she's been told. She takes comfort in using it. But

She can't believe that so much can be done

She consults those safely, who have used it for years. She finds that Pearline has been tested and proved in a hundred ways; that it's harmless to hands or fabric; that it's as safe as good soap. Then that she She can't believe ever did without it. She has less to do, she gets more done-and it's all done better. Her clothes last longer-they're not rubbed to pieces. Her housework is easy; her time is her own. She believes in Pearline, and tells her friends about it-(that's the most effective kind of advertising).

Peddlers and some unscrapulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE— Beware is as good as" or "the same as realisme.

Pearline is never peddled, if your grocer sends you an mitation, be honest—send it hack.

JAMES PYLE, New York.

A Graceful Act

Of hospitality is to offer your evening guests a cup of Bouillon before leaving. Use Armour's Extract of Beef and boiling water; add salt, pepper and a thin slice of lemon to each cup. Serve with plain crackers. There are many ways of using Armour's Extract. Our little Cook Book explains several. We mail it free.

> Armour & Company Chicago

St. Cecilia.

St. Cecilia, according to ancient legends, invented the organ and consecrated it especially to God's service, believing that all other instruments were insufficient to express the music of her soul. On it she composed and sung hymns so sweet that angels came to listen to her. It is this legend which the artist has portrayed in the famous picture of "St. Cecilia," of which this is an engraving.

The ESTEY Organ aims to produce the highest and most perfect music of the soul. It is a wonderful instrument, with a rich, deep, pure tone full of that rare "singing" quality. The tone of the ESTEY Organ is imitated in many others, but they all fall short of the ESTEY in combined sweetness and power. Send for Illustrated Catalogue, prices, etc.

Estey Organ Co., Brattleboro, Vt.

150 Tremont Street, Boston, 831 Broadway, New York, 18 North 7th Street, Philadelphia

State and Jackson Streets, Chicago, 816 Office Street, St. Louis, Mariette and Broad Sts., Atlanta, Ga.

OVERMAN'S SPECIFIC OXYCEN

A Medicaled Orygen Hame Treatment for Bleaness of Elect., Throat and Lungs.

Separate Specifics for Catarrh and Hay Fever.

Separate Specifics for Catarrh and Hay Fever.

Berlines Hay Fever, Bronchills, Ashma, Nasal Catarrh, La

Grippe, Calarrhal Deatness and Nervous Prostration.

A REMEDY PRESCRIBED BY PHYSICIANS.

Menual of Specific Groups, PRES. Deposits the St. Longs and Rel. Lands.

Menual of Specific Groups, PRES. Deposits the St. Longs and Rel. Lands.

Menual of Specific Catarrh.

Deposits the St. Longs and New Longs and Rel. Lands.

Menual of Specific Catarrh.

Deposits the St. Longs and Rel. Lands.

Menual of Specific Catarrh.

Deposits the St. Longs and Rel. Longs and Rel. Lands.

Menual of Specific Catarrh.

Deposits the St. Longs and Rel. Lands.

Menual of Specific Catarrh.

Deposits the St. Longs and Parket.

Deposits the St. Longs and Parke THE SPECIFIC OXYGEN CO., Nachville, Kr.

A DAINTY BOBE DE NUIT (Illus. No. 1)

DAINTY UNDERWEAR IN VOGUE

By Isabel A. Mallon

UST what sort of underwear to assume is one question that troubles the average woman very much. She doesn't want to wear so much that it will be bulky, and she doesn't want to wear too little for fear she will catch

She tries first one and then another shaped garment; and the wise woman is she who, having at last hit upon that which is most comfortable, makes it most dainty and assumes it for good. Very little linen is used nowadays for one's tingerie, the preference be-ing given to cambric, victoria lawn, nainsook or percale. The last is noted with tiny dots, or or percale. The last is noted with finy dots, or wee flowers in pink, blue or lavender upon the white ground. Then when the garment is finished the edges have a triple scallop, or a sharp point embroidered in cotton of the same color as the figure. This material, with its simple finish, is liked for suck-shaped chemises, for night-dresses and for drawers; it is seldom, if ever, used for skirts.

SOME PRETTY NIGHT-DRESSES

THE fancy for silk night-dresses still exists, but as there always have been women who would wear nothing but the clear white lawn or mainsook, and as these women are many, the makers of underwear are specially catering to them. Very much more fine work, that is, handwork, can be put upon a main-sook gown than upon a silk one, and the needle-woman can make more fine tooks, fancy stitches, gatherings, herestiching and drawing of threads than ever would seem possible. A pretty design for a night-gown in sible. A pretty design for a night-gown is that shown in Hustration No. 2, which is of the ordinary sack-shape, having a slight train in the back and a broad hemstitching in front; in the back and a broad hemstitching in front; the material is gartiered in just across the bust, and very carefully gathered; across this is a narrow band of lusertion, and above it a full frill of lace with narrow ribbon run through the top of it, so that it may be drawn to fit. A full frill of lace is around the neck at the back and comes down each side, giving the appearance of a square-necked bodies to the night-dress. Ribbons are fastened at the side seams, and are drawn forward and tied in a loose way just in front. The sheeves are full and high on the shoulders and are drawn in at the wrists, where they have lace frills as their decoration. In silk, flannel, cashmere, cambric or muslin such a night-dress would be pretty and very easily made, the elaborate effect being produced entirely by the lace and rib-bons. For people who do not care for thin gowns, those of figured percale, with a broad sailor collar and full sleeves drawn into deep cuffs, with the usual embroidered finish, are

ONE OF THE PRETTIEST NIGHT-DRESSES

THE PREFERRED UNDERVEST

THE silk or lisle thread woven in many THE silk or lisle thread woven in many colors and in various ways into vests are worn almost exclusively in place of the chemise. They are, of course, warmer, and as they extend well over the hips really protect one more than a chemise, the skirt of which flares away. They are shown with an openwork finish about the neck; in some instances it is very elaborate; sometimes they are squarenecked, sometimes they are squarenecked, sometimes they are litting strap over the shootder and the silk strings to draw them the shoulder and the silk strings to draw them in to make them fit and to keep one warm. In the delicate shades I can recommend the pule pink, which when it does finde, fades so entirely that it becomes a creamy that that is decidedly pretty, a something that cannot be said about the shrimp. The blues are not to be depended upon, though, curious enough, the lavender washes extremely well.

A DAINTY ROBE DE NUIT

THE fastening of night-dresses at the side THE fastening of night-dresses at the side is at once novel and pretty. One is shown in Illustration No. I. It is made of white mainsook very fine and soft. The back is slightly full, and gathered in at the neck to the ordinary band. The froat, which is cut off straight just below the throat, is arranged in a series of the tucks that dure below the waist line, giving the necessary fullness. A ruffle of fine torchon lace is about the neck and comes down each side, while a full frill of it makes a decoration

makes a decoration across the front. The buttons are set on the side of the front, while the buttonholes, hidden under the law, are easily reached, and yet when it is all fastened when it is all fastened no buttons are visible. The sleeves are full, and have for wrist finish pretty cuffs made of torehon lace and insertion. Pour rosettes of pink rib-bon are to be worn with this gown, one being on each side of the tucked portion and one on each and one on each sleeve. If desired, a pink ribbon sush may hold it in at the walst, but as the tucking extends so far down this is really far down this is really not necessary. Such a night-dress could be developed in any of the wash materi-als, but I could not advise it in either flaunel or cashmere, as the result would be a clumsy and rather bulky piece of work. People who have to wear wool gowns find the simple sack design with a decorated collar and cuffs the most desirable.

THE PETTICOATS MOST IN VOGUE

THE somewhat short, rather scant petticoat with its failness drawn back by a string midway of its depth, continues in vogue. They are developed in changeable sifk, plain silk and in light-weight cloth. The usual trimming is three narrow, scant, pinked flourness; the silk skirt elaborately trimmed with lace not having the vogue given to it that belonged to it some time ago. Very many ladies living in warm rooms and wrapping up warmly when they go out, wear but one skirt during the winter and have that of very thin flannel. This quality is sold in pale gray, lavender, nile-green, rose and shrimp pink, bright scarlet, pale blue, clear yellow and a very light mode that is almost a cream. Both ribbon and lace are put on these skirts, black or white lace being used, as is deemed most harmonions. A typical skirt of this kind is pictured in Illustration No. 3. It has the front width slightly gored, and just enough fullness is allowed at the back to make it set gracefully. On the edge is a bond of pink silk ribbon below it a row of white reductions. THE somewhat short, rather scant petticoat foliness is allowed at the back to make it set gracefully. On the edge is a bond of pink silk ribbon; below it a row of white valenciennes insertion, then there is another row of the pink ribbon and then a full frill of white lace. The ribbon and insertion should be an inch and a half wide, while the lace frill should be three inches. The band to which the skirt is sewed is of the ribbon folded, and long narrow pink ribbon strings the in the back. In black such a skirt could be trimmed with black lace, and scarlet, pale blue or pale yellow ribbon. Lavender could be decorated with either white, black or its own color; red could be trimmed with black or white.

ABOUT DRESSING SACKS

THE long, rather cumbersome dressing-gown went out with the dowly wrapper, and in its place is the graceful dressing-sack. This is sufficiently long to reach nearly to the knees, and is oftenest mounted on a yoke in regular Watteau fashion. Slik, cashm regular wateau insulon. Sink, cash-mere, or flannel are the materials used for dressing-sacks, while ribbons, of course, play their part in being decorative. The flannel ones are warm and easily cleaned, and as all the dainty colors may be gotten, a great variety of individual taste may be everginal.

A FLANNEL JACKET

A VERY becoming jacket is made of rese-colored, light-weight flamel. It has a yoke of moss green velvet from which the full widths of flannel fall, being arranged in double box plaits. They reach almost to the kness, and have an inclusive ribbon as the finish. A rolling collar of velvet is the neck finish, and long ribbons here tooped together contine the jacket at the throat. The sleeves are high and fold and eathered into coffs of volvet. and full and gathered into cuffs of velvet. A mistake too often made in a dressing sack is that of having the sleeves close-fitting; as one wears the sack when arranging one's hair, or sometimes placing the bonnet just in position, the arms want to have a free swing, un-transmeled by tight sleeves. For this reason very many ladies prefer the old-fashioned "angel" sleeve, which closes just a little below the shoulder, and falls entirely away from

THE woman who can do fine needlework can new make her underwear beautiful without putting any other trimming upon it than the labor of her hands. In the stores where specialties are roade of trausseaux, and of very fine underwear, all the work is done of very fine underwear, all the work is done by hand. Stitches so fine that they seem as if set by the fairles are gloated over by the comodisseurs in linguire, and the closeness with which they are placed is counted as of special value. It seemed for a while as if the art of plain sewing would be forgotten, and all that would be known by the coming woman be decorative needlework; but the various guilds started in London have done much to encourage the funinine art. Women of high social position give their approbation to it, and so handwork
is again in fachion on linen, lawn, muslin, or whatever may lin, or whatever may be the fabric.

It is for such work as this that the fine needles, the web-like threads, and all the threads, and all the dainty needle-basket adjuncts are used. Embroidery cottons are used to form the cipher or monageam that marks who the owner of the garment is, for nowadays my lady does not let indelible in k touch her belongings, but instead her favorite way of writing her way of writing ber initials is wrought initials is wrought not in firm stitches and small letters. On a night-dress the letters are high up on the bust; on pettherats, on the ribbon strings, on chemises on the shoulders, and on undervests in the same place.

All long seams finely felled by hand, except on hand, except on flannel, when the seam is laid open and "herring-boned" with silk. As far as possible, gar-ments are cut without scans, but in most instances scans are recessary to make them form the fit required, the fit that is of impor-tance, for "lumpy" underwear will cause your outside bodice and skirt to "set" improperly.

ABOUT ONE'S BELTS

FOR the woman who is inclined to bestout, P or the one who wishes to keep her fig-ure looking as slender as possible, it is best to have the various pieces of underwear so ar-ranged that they will all button upon one yoke, and this yoke should be under the cor-sets. In assuming your corsets just remem-ber that if they are to be comfortable and keep the outline of your shape, and not that which the dressmaker would wish you to have, let them he had thing you meaning before not them he the last thing you assume before put-ting on your dress, and do be a little careful in choosing your corsets. Get one that is not too large, or not too small, but to fit you, and then large, or not too small, but to fit you, and then you will not have either a red nose from tight lacing, or your hands frozen from the shace cause, nor will you be uncomfortable because it is so loose upon you. Notody wants people to lace: that is, nobody with any sense, but it has been proven beyond a doubt that a sensible, properly-made corset is at once desirable and healthful.

A TYPICAL SKIRT (Illus. No. 3)

THE FEW LAST WORDS

FTER one has devoted time and patience A to making pretty belongings, after one has chosen ribbons and laces and arranged everything as lovely as possible, then you must everything as lovely as possible, then you must remember that a dainty nest is wanted for these belongings. Now, for this get some very inexpensive silk as thin as possible. Make it into sachets large enough to fit your bureau drawers and fill them with whatever may be your favorite perfume. Lavender, violet, or orris powder are all desirable odors to permente linea, for they are not heavy, but suggest the odor of the country, and make one think of fresh water and linean dabbied in cool brooks. Do not let anybody induce you to use either patchouli or mask among your lingerie, as both are unrefined, and you never wish to suggest that they are bear you or your wish to suggest that they are bear you or your belongings.

FRENCH HAND-MADE UNDERWEAR.

This class of goods is not inappropriately berned artistic, for it is most carefully and scientifically shaped, and the outlines of ornamentation everywhere show the twees of genius, while the details of sewing and embeddery are executed with the most painstaking rate. The prices will doubtless surprise you. For its tance:

French Percale storms, with hand-embeddered necks and sleeves, are only

$1.00.

Better qualities, with hand-embroidered necks, storres and fronts,

$1.50, $2.00, $3.50, and $5.00.

French Percale Drawers, all lengths, with hand-embroidered ruffics,

$1.00.

Better qualities: $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50, $3.50 and $5.00.

French Percale Skirts, with 12-inch ruffle, finished with hand-embroidered scalloped edge,

$1.00.

Better qualities: $2.50, $3.00, $3.50, $3.75, $4.00 and

French Percale Chemise, with hand-embroidered yoke,

75 cents.

Better qualities $1.00, $1.25, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 and

Mention Time Labour' Home Jornson.

WOODWARD & LOTHROP

10, II and F Streets, N. W., WASHINGTON, D. C.

PRINTED BATISTE,

36 inches wide.

King Philip Mills.

Send two-cent stamp for samples of

Cambric, Lawns,

Nainsook and Batiste, MADE BY THE

KING PHILIP MILLS,

85 Worth Street.

New York,

N. Y.

LAWNS & BATISTE PRINTED EFFECTS

WARRANTED ABSOLUTELY FAST

One thing is Certain-Our Fashion Catalogue

Histrates the latest Paris and New York styles in Ladies', Jien's And Children's wear, at New York's Lowest prices. Write for it at once, It is sent you Free. MAHLER BROS., 503-504 6th Ave., N. Y.

DRESSMAKING SIMPLIFIED.

Any Lady Can now Learn to Oct Perfect-Pitting Dresus. No own writing a Chart or Square can stemphte with The McDowell Garcent Doubles Machine to Cutaing Stephil, transfell, and Frefers Paring Germani-Eary is Leave, Rayle to Use, The any Front, Fallows every Fushion. As in-venion as Uniful on the Storing Ma-chine. President as training of the state of the st

Sould it cents for copy of our elegant French Franklen books explaining how to cut larget style garment.

Ladies, Send Stamp for Primer. I do shopping of all kinds. Fight years' experience, best reference. Manzoura Manyen, 868 Spence St., Philas

A Department devoted entirely to an interchange of ideas among our band of JOURNAL.

rs. Address all letters to AUNT PATIENCE, care of 'THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, 433-435 Arch. street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Y DEAR SISTERS :- The room seems a little close and stuffy, does it not? Let and stuffy, does it not :us throw open the windows for a moment or two. It is for a moment or two. It is a mistake to try to keep ourselves warm by shutting up every crack which would admit the fire looks in our grates when the room has been closed all night, and the fire "kept in." You think it is for want of "draft." it does not burn. It is for want of "draft." it does not burn. It is for want of oxygen; that important part of the air, upon which the fire in our grates and the fire in our lungs depends, has been quite used up. I am always sorry to see sund bags across the top of the lower window sashes. I do not like double windows. We get quite too little fresh air inside our homes in the windows; we are refreshed. Our English sisters are always surprised when they come to America to find our houses so hot. They wonder how we can live. Do not be afraid of a little fresh air. I am a little amused to hear a woman say, as I nouses so not. They wonder how we can live. Do not be afraid of a little fresh air. I am a little amused to hear a woman say, as I often do, "I cannot venture out of my room in winter without taking cold." Of course she cannot. She has been getting herself into a condition of ill health which prepares her for any sickness which may attack her, whether it be a simple "cold," or something more serious. Of course, there are times when one must avoid exposure to a storm or the sharp air, and there are people whose physical condition is such that they must at least temperature, but none more than those who are feeble and delicate need the freshest of air to breathe, If it is absolutely necessary to keep them under cover let the air in their rooms be constantly changed.

How few persons know how to give an errand to a children and servants can take the errand from one telling. If her mother says: "Mary, please go to the greeer's and get a pound of sugar and half a pound of coffee," the probability is that Mary will say: "Where was it you wanted me to go?" or, "Do you want a pound of coffee?" or, "Was it coffee or tea you wanted?" And onite likely after she has gone out of the fee?" or. "Was it coffee or tea you wanted?"
And quite likely after she has gone out of the door and turned the corner she will come back and say: "How much sugar?" The fault is largely lack of attention; the habit of the quick reception of an idea and the ability to remember it can be cultivated. Parents and teachers should be careful in giving directions to young persons to do so in a quiet manner, and it should be expected that the directions will be accurately followed without any need of repetition.

THERE is a game which is both entertaining and useful in cultivating the habit of attention. It is called "Observation," and is played in this way: Place upon a table a number of articles, quite varied in appearance, and allow the players to look at the collection for a moment or two only, and then require them to write a list of the articles, offering a prize for the most perfect one. The game can be played by any number of persons and is suitable, therefore, for the family or for larger social gatherings, and can be as elaborate as one chooses to make it.

I have read that a fumous prestidigitator, chooses to make it.

I have read that a famous prestidigitator, when a boy, was trained by his father to notice so carefully, that ofter passing a shop window he could mention nearly everything displayed there, could repeat the titles of the books on a library shelf after one rapid glance, and do a great many other marvelous things, which enabled him to appear to perform naturales. miracles.

THE unpleasant phrase "cheap girls" has arrested my attention more than once, and I have worsdered what sort of girls they are. Are they those whose loud laughter and talking draws to them the attention of every one in the car? Are they those whose voices one in the car? Are they those whose voices call us to the window as they pass? Do they wear skirts so narrow, shoes so tight, waist so small, that their guit is an amusement or a marvel? Do they puff up their shoulders above their cars, and piece their skirts down from the top in order that they may sweep the streets? I wonder are they the girls who place themselves in the way of young men? who "make errands" which will carry them into home themselves and call freewingly or side. business streets, and call frequently on girls who have brothers? How easily their flimsy device is seen through, and what sneers it occasions. Dear girls, don't be cheap. Don't make a "bargain counter" of your church vestibule, and offer your smalles and your vivacions talk to the vecue man whose person and clons talk to the young man whose person and manners have pleased your facey.

IN a very important particular 1 am unifice many of my Journ's disters. I am biceast with the best of bestlib, which enables me to accomplish a great deal of work.

A woman owes it to be seed, as well as to her brobant, in word at her work to the carrier marginar becoming

A woman owes it to beyself, as well as to her broband, to went at her work in the early morning becoming clothing, another kind for which he has expressed a preference; for that reason. I wear while dresses of severence; for that reason. I wear while dresses of severence it that require no iconland, or of lace-striped lawn that require no starch.

A wife should provide not many varieties of food but well cooked and daintity served; my table is always set with my best face of hower that you put has been been and provide and my thought have my best set for my descret friend, my chokest guest and most bonored my lundead.

A wife should not keep her broband walking for her when they are going out together. Although I well him to dress, I try to be ready before he is und to accomplish that I keep my clothing in require 36 that with twenty stanties sectice I own material cutting and offer.

Has your bushond expressed a wish that you should attend an orosing service, or take a journey of a through and office.

Has your husband expressed a wish that you should study and improve in certain directions? Then spend the spare moments cultivaling yesters! If in those parties that a superior of the spare moments cultivaling yesters! If in those parties that a superior my self in the study of a foreign impange, for which we have the le cur business; and also in these, in other has large great delight, so although any life is fall of week, for I am my bristand's book accept and do not own housework, still I treasure all any spare moments and improve in the directions he desires.

Very five wires said insolands have exactly the rame religious creed, and if he worse than testices to try to argue him into your way of thinking, as although information of the interpretation of the moments of the moments of the moments of the moments of the small routine of every day's dother.

Now, if what I have written will asked in breathing in some other home-life some of the joy that here is made and make an dear home-life some of the joy that here is made and make, an extending the sense of the parties of the scale of the processed admiring lover. I will consider that the time I have spent in writing this letter has been well spend.

Annel.

One cannot always appear in white in the morning, but the principle of this suggestion can be carried out. Select a material and a style of making the morning dress which will be becoming and durable and yet attractive. The "old dud," be it worn by mistress or mail, is an offence in the neoraing. One may possibly gain strength to endure it in the middle of the day, if the "old dad" must be worn at some time. But I have in my own home proof positive that one who does drudgery and who has but a meture purse may always look neat and attractive.

And health—oh, if we only knew how much that means to every wousan, would we not give up the things which would injure it, —would we not as young girls gladly deay ourselves the momentary indulgence which means an injury to the digestion or curtailment of sleep, or that worst of all woman's sins, the cramping of the vital organs?

...

Dearration of the control of the con

Thank you for the trouble you have taken to give this very interesting account of your work. It will suggest similar methods to many other young leaders of clubs and mission-bands. A willingness to share comforts and advantages is growing, not only where there is large wealth, at among those whose life is not very abundant, and it is a most encountered and horsely along the there. conriging and hopeful "sign of the times."

I would like the privilege to have "my little my" domestic sorrows have described and read or finered domestic sorrows have described some form of those decesses which physicians are beginning to consider under the head of low pressure nervices affection. If such an one cannot first confect in her home confesses as he, when to her mixed all her transfer loss cass she, when to her mixed all her transfer loss right thereby or in the beneficest societies aspects of nature, it seems to me her only large would like in an earlier change of wome. I not mywelf "Why can't she find confect in the sky?" because I have finant it there, in my day I have known that most deprecading softials. The landthese of great cilles, but took in this nerve, always left note for me a bit of sky, and in its ever-changing kalenbrouge there was for me comfort and courses. That beautiful this starts are out, it blance with the chapterns of trafficher and represent the interface of precision. Orion beautiful his story of adventure and exclusive, the home traffic home of traffiching and the passe of perceive. Orion beautiful she that is not fully ways stretching continued which is human and the passe of perceive. Orion beautiful and it say to mywelf. "These belief starts obtain in well at loone when mother dwelet."

These are inspiring thoughts; and the beautiful sure others are seen as inspiring thoughts; and the beautiful continued in the second of the beautiful sure of the beautiful sure others methed well at home when mether dwelet."

These are inspiring thoughts; and the hour-These are inspiring thoughts; and the boun-tiful book, which is so full of meaning, is not like an "edition de laze." limited to the enjoy-ment of a few, but is open to every one. I know two little girls who de-have they are having "bountiful times" just before they go to bed each night, studying the sky with their mother.

DEAR AUNT PATIENCE—I Sed that I must have belp from some source, and I know you will belp must I write to you. I am a young girl, bet motherless pad without an elder sister. My mother deal has June, when I was just righteen, and the care of the boose fell on my young girl of theore from the care of the boose fell on my young and its a perfected abouthers. I have my fitter, three brothers (the youngest skeben) and a house of nine rooms to care for. I was never taught anything shoot housekeeping, mending, sawing, etc., being in school until that thus, so that, of curren, I cannot manner, and my house is in constant confusion. I. Has every one be, bettle working sometimes, and do never's note its one siay, and then do nothing for several days. I would like to know how to get my work systemized. We cannot afford the expense of a servent, and I do not line work except the wealing. I do so made desire to be a good housekeeper in my father's house. I presente this letter is very different from the kind you usually revelve, but it cares of from the beart, and I trust many of the sisters will help me with a plan.

Let us have short, mentical instructions for

Let us have short, practical instructions for this young buckeeper. Do not send a dozen pages about washing dishes, or half a dozen pages about ironing a shirt. Let us have as many very simple, very definite hints as possible. Confine yourselves to one page on the general work of the house, and if you can put your advice on half a page, so much the better. I have a pite of letters on washing flannels, any one of which would nearly fill a page of the Journal; and if I printed them all we shall have flannel washing and nothing else for a year. And then we should be as much puzzled as ever whether hot or cold water is the best for them.

DERHAPS I can offer a suggestion that bears on the A boundy art of washing decides. I know there are many women who have to for classes to because it is not half done at these ares-landed knowleds washing the transfer and more residuatory than more related to the same of the control to the same that the same relationship to serial tends to the same that the same relationship to the line, and tend the base on them, and let the stream of water halfset them actil every vestige of snap and ninchines is gone, and behalfs the garneous are beautifully clean. I need not suggest that all beavy articles may be riseed in the same wy. I conside the nee of that three-foot base on washing day a boon to the hosse-keeper who is not strong, a merty be her losely. If she does not have to do the work heres!I. Now, do not say "That is Southern shiftlessness," as some perhaps might; for attestigh my house is here, I am a Pennsylvanian by strik, a Vankes by elaculou and experience. I use these processes is washing because I dret worster if any one size washes in that way.

A. H. C.

Thank your for these point instructions.

Thank you for these plain instructions. You show us how one may have noble thoughts and be faithful in small and honsely

And here is another lover of the sky; ...

DEAR FRIEND—I have such good company these winter eventues. Cariyle said "the test of friendship not congenial resumentonship is interrogree without speech." And truly there is no need of words to were my greets and never it is seen as resulting the resulting speech. The said result has been a rest after the introd. The said may self. It is such a rest after the introd. So the day, the twaddle of goeslay newsmongers and the publishes of sodery calliers, to still in other seasy chair and had that we are beings, not of times, but of eternity. Such hours are growing seasons for the scot; have deep the growth each day's actions will determine, for speech and dood are the lower and bissessme that come from the roots of thought and meditation. Would you share one companionship: Twar your eyes soward the East and behold the glerious fire of kingly Appler. He beams on you and mealike. Californic his acquaint-ance, and you have a life long friend. If you would know him better take up your open-gions; he will not resent be securing radeness, and his four attradiants will reteard you with a sight of their devolutes to reyar planet. He crims the eventing sair, and if you will study his course you will appreciate not only his granders, and will become interested in other twonders of the beavens, and fifth will mean meet to you. The "alient wateres of the dayth," are worded when the cut is attituded to dictine harmonies. You will greet each returning onset lation as an absent but each man of the haddless of such and provide the said and ready that had been my education. I no longer feet that had been my education had not been supply hunter that had been my education have madely in his row, and the modifier outselfacion of Orion striling above the custer's between, for those was the nighty hunter that had been my educated him "climbing up hill," as Proctor says, and then some for the facility upon me every night had long with an entire the same man, the flower is a man, when his words are not him with the gay earth-biosoms.

f have failed, with a good opera-glass, to see Jupiter's companions; was the trouble with

A KNOLD TOYNREE, the young English reformer, once write: "Languar can only be campared by enthesiasm, and endimelson can only be carrossed by two titings, first, an ideal which takes the languarton by soons; and second, a definite, intelligent plan for carrying that ideal out into practice." The truth of this remark is illustrated by such peoplar movements as the Chantaseque Boading Circle, which, with its ideal of continued study by old and young is all walks of life, and its "definite, intelligent plan" has induced so many thousands to shake off montal languar and to enter with enthusiasm upon systematic reading courses, W. Q.

This little paragraph answers many ques-tions; How shall I pass my time? How shall I improve myself? What can I do to make myself a fit companion for any friend? make myself a fit companion for any friend?
This is one thing you may do. Take up definite study, and form your ideals by nequaintance with what is noble and good, and then gather inspiration for striving after your ideals by daily contact with good and great minds. Happily this can be done now by the most locally and isolated. It is astonishing to see how the white wings carry printed words into the remotest curpers.

...

**PHERE is one we man at least who has a husband a sho is "sweet temp red and happy blocking" during house-decading films.

I do not know how it is brought about, but do know what a comfort it is to have my hosband come in with: "Well-little woman, what do not think you are doing?" as he pinches my check and gives his ensomary kloss. Then he fails to work to do any eddpot that needs strong hands, whiching and fulfing us that women do not known to asymbiag at all without a man alsout to septialize as the right of the whole house when cleaning. I do not tens myself in registed buttern grid. But it is not tent up the whole house when cleaning, I do not does myself in registed buttern grid. I exceed my historied with a smile, no matter how bony I am.

One afternoon is all too about for the old.

One afternoon is all too short for the glad inspiring words coming from far and near, from the old and the young, and for the questions we want to ask and snewer. We must not linger in the pleasant company, but turn such to her own duties, easy or hard. Some-thing of closer we will carry with as to make the years happy indeed for all who know us, and for all the unknown so far as word or deed of ours can carry comfort and joy.

Aunt Patience

Witch Cream

is neither sticky nor greasy. It keeps the flesh fresh and healthy.

Sample Rottle sent on receipt of 10 cents. C. H. & J. Price, Sterling Silver Island Spaans and Forks have pieces of Solid Silver inhid in the backs of the best and kandle. All war positively prevented at these prints. Ask your Jaweser for them, or send for thinlegge. Take ne substitute.

THE HOLMES & EDWARDS SILVER CO., Bridgeport, Cone,

Very Satisfactory Garment. Because it Supports Stockings and Underclothes tong the SHOULDEDS, and has no still cords; fits with per-alom. Elegron, and strictly hygienic.

LADY CANVASSERS WANTED THE FOY, HARMON & CHADWICK CO., Brostlyn, M. E.S.

"CHIC"

DRESS LIFTER (PATENTED) USED BY

H. R. H. THE PRINCESS OF WALES, Mrs. W. E. GLADSTONE, Madame ADELINA PATTI, Etc., Etc., with Testimonials.

To be had from Leading Drr Goods Stores. Single Set., 50 etc.; Bomble Set, 60 etc. A Special Adjustment for trained skirts. Furthelians with every set.
G. H. LANGE & CO., ENGLAND.
NEW YORK OFFICE, 103 WORTH STREET, City.

A package of All-cock's Conn Surelins or a sample of All-cock's Bunion Sumans will be sent, prepaid, on receipt of Ten Cents.

They are easily applied, give immediate relief, afford absolute comfort, and are the best, surest, cleanest and cheapest remedy for corns and bunions ever

BUNION produced.
The Coen Shieldbard made large and small. In ordering, state size wanted.

SHIELDS. POSOUS PLANTES CO.,

DO YOU PAINT?

b Fancy Work! Instally Home and Magazine I a Text Book in Painting Fancy Work. Single color is 48; Say per We will good your Sameric Coy's othe Maga-sho 4 Cistokeo Sympiny by Late Christon, at J. F. INGALLS, - LYNN, WASS, Bar J.

Almond Meal, MINER'S,

Whitese and neurishes the Skin, re-norres Pimples, Econom, Blackbeach, Weinkles, Shiny Skin, Moth, Tan, Freekles, Liver Pgots and all skin blom-lat. Ask the Miner's the originally Perfects harmless. Scients by mail, H. A. MINER, Molden, Mass.

* MESS PARLOA will at all times be glad, so far as she can, to answer in this Department all general domestic questions sent by her readers. Address all letters to MISS MARIA PARLOA, care of The Ladies' Home Journal, Philadelphia, Pa.

O many questions come as to the proper ar-rangement of the dining-room, the methods of setting and waiting upon the table, when certain table, when certain dishes should be serv-ed, etc., that I think it will be well this month to devote most of our space to these matters. The questions have come from men and women in many conditions in tife, and from almost every State in the Union.

In this country it is a common thing for people who have passed half their lives in comparative poverly suddenly to become rich. With these riches come larger establishments and a more generous way of living, but not always with correct knowledge as to how things should be done. Possibly a few suggestions may help some such persons, as well as the housekeepers who still do their own work.

A PLEASANT, SUNNY DINING-ROOM

A PLEASANT, SUNNY DINING-ROOM

The dining-room should be large enough to enable a person to pass around the table comfortably when the family or guests are all seated. It should also be light and sunny, and easily heated and ventilated. The roest essential pieces of farmiture are a table of generous width, engable of being enlarged, comfortable chairs and a sideboard. After that, if the room be large enough and the purse will admit of the parchase of a cabinet or two, with glass fronts and sides, so much the better. In these there can be kend dainty bits of chima and glassware. These cabinets will brighten a dining-room more than anything else you can put into it, possibly excepting pictures. If there be no room for a cabinet, a corner cupboard and some langing shelves will be a great addition. Pictures that suggest pleasant things are, of course, always desirable. A few thrifty ferns, flowering plants or evergreens add a great deal to the brightness and beauty of any room, but particularly in the dining-room. Have them there if you possibly can. A heavy covering of white felt or double Canton flannel is also necessary for the table.

HOW TO SET THE FAMILY TABLE

BREAKFAST being the plainest used of the day, the arrangement of the table should always be simple. The cloth should be spotless. At each person's seat place a knife, fork, teaspoon or dessertspoon, tumbler and napkin, and if fresh fruit is to be served, a linger bowl, if there be no servant. If you have a waitress, she will place the finger bowls on as you finish with the fruit. If fruit fruit has served there she will place the finger bowls on as you finish with the fruit. If fresh fruit be served there must also be placed at each sent a fruit knille and plate. The knives and spouns should be placed at the right and the forks and mapkins at the left; the tumblers to be at the point of the knives. There should be space between the knile and fork for a brenkfast plate. Have the dish of fruit in the center of the table. Have a tray cloth at each end of the table. Spread little batter plates at the top of each plate. If individual salt and pepper bottles be used, place them at the side of each plate; If large ones, place them at the corners of the table. Put four tablespoons on the table, either in two corners, or beside the dishes that they will be tased in serving. Put the carving knile will be used in serving. Put the carving knife and fork at the head of the table and the cups and sancers, sugar and cream, coffee pot, hot-water bowl, etc., and the mush dishes at the other end.

The mistress of the house serves the mush, and when the fruit and this course have been served, the dishes are removed and the hot plates and other food brought in, the head of plates and other food brought in, the head of the house serving the hot ments, etc., while the mistress pours the coffee. It sometimes happens that a man of business lacks time to serve breakfast, in which case the mistress of the house attends to that duty. If there be a waitness, she passes the plates when they are ready; also the bread, butter and coffee. The bostess usually puts the sugar and cream in the coffee, first asking each one if they will have these additions. After all have been served it is quite common to dismiss the have these additions. After all have been served it is quite common to dismiss the waitress, ringing for her if her services be again required. When there is but one servant, the family help each other after the breakfast has been placed upon the table. Fresh water is good not accept per ple, and each person abbuild be served with a tumblerfull when they take their seats at the table. If there he hat cakes or walles they should come after the meats, and wailles they should come after the meats, and there should be a fresh set of warm plates, as well as of knives and forks.

ABOUT THE DINNER TABLE

THE dinner table is set in nearly the same manner as the breakfast table, omitting the coffee and mush service and placing soop spoons where the mush spoons were in the morning. In the center of the table may be placed a pretty square and on this may be set a small law plant or wass of thesees or a dish of small, low plant or vase of flowers or a dish of fruit. The silver for all the courses may be put on the table when it is set, or may be placed by the waitress for each course. Dinner plates are placed on the table or not, when it is set, as one pieases. When they are placed on the table they are removed with the soup plates, and warm plates are then placed near the carrer. In the December number I gave some suggestions as to the dinner table, and named some of the things that should be placed on it when it was set. In the November number of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL under the title, "How Delmonico Sets a Table," there were given directions for setting the table for an elaborate dinner.

THE LUNCHEON AND TEA TABLES

THE LUNCHEON AND TEA TABLES

PAMILY luncheons and tens are rarely served in courses. Tex, cocon or chocolate is, as a rule, served at these mends, so that the table is set in practically the same manner as for breakfirst; but the plates are placed for each person, and unless there be ment to carve, the carving knife and fork are not put on. The bread, butter, cake, preserves, etc., are placed on the table when it is set. If hot meats, vegetables, soup or cakes be served the cold plates must be changed for hot ones. When meats, regetables or salads have been served at these meats, the plates should be changed before the cake and preserves are passed.

For luncheon, such dishes as these are suitable: eggs in any form, soups, salads, cold meats, with baked or warmed-up postoces, any kind of broiled meat or fish, any simple made dish, fresh fruit, stewed fruit, preserves, cake, dispersively site.

dish, fresh fruit, stewed fruit, preserves, cake, gingerbread, etc. Any dish (except sonp and fresh fruit) that you serve for luncheons will be suitable for tex.

COMPANY LUNCHEONS AND DINNERS

SEVERAL subscribers ask for menus for SEVERAL subscribers ask for menus for company luncheons and dinners, and one asks that the order in which each course is served shall be given. I would say here that the subscriber will always find this done when the menus are arranged by people who understand such things. The same subscriber asks if the salad should be served after the oysters and before the dessert. A salad in a dinner course should be very simple—some kind of raw or cooked vegetable, very cold, and served with a simple French dressing oil, vinegar, salt and sepect or mayonnaise sauce; and it should be served before the dessert.

Sometimes, one of these shaple salads is served with game or roast chicken. Crisp selvery dressed with mayonnaise sauce is particularly nice for this purpose. I will give two simple menus that can be served easily by good management, even where but one servant is kept. That there shall be no mistake I will separate each course by a short straight line:

straight line:

LUNCHEON. Consommé in Cups Bread Oysters an gratin

Brolled Chicken French Peas Potato Balla

> Salad Cheese Olives Crackers

Tea or Chocolate

DINNER, Macaroni Soup

Bechaniel Sance Boiled Fish Escalloped Potatoes

Reast Duck Brown Sauce French Pens Fried Sweet Potatoes

> Lettuce Salad ivis Cheese Olives Crackers

Fancy Cakes Los Cream Coffee,

QUESTIONS ON TABLE ETIQUETTE.

A SUBSCRIBER asks: "In serving gravy, should it be passed, or put on the plate?"
"Should garnishes, such as parsley, he served, or not?" "Give latest etiquette for tempoons, knives and forks when a guest wishes a second portion." Either method of serving gravy is correct. If, however, the host serves it he should put it on the side of the plate, not over the ment or fish. It is quite proper to serve a bit of the garnish, and when the piece is fresh and dainty it mids to the attractiveness of the plate; still, at many properly-served tables this is never done. The spoons, knives and forks should be left on the plate when it is sent for a second helping, n second helping.
Another subscriber asks: "When only one

Another subscriber asks: "When only one servant is kept, should the girl serve the dessert from the kitchen, bringing it in on a tray, or place it before me and let me serve it?" "Should I use finger bowls when we do not have fresh fruit?" "Which is the proper may to eat a layer cake, especially custard cake, with a fork, or the fingers?" The dessert should be brought to the table whole, and be served by the hosters. Finger howis abould, he used at any meal when fresh fruit is served, but it often happens, even at large dinners, but it often happens, even at large dinners, that there is really no use for them. If olives, candies, salted almonits or celery be served at a dinner or function, the finger how's should be put on at the end of the meal, for all these articles of food are taken in the fingers, and, of course, soil them. I should advise the use of the fack when eating beer only. the fork when eating layer cake.

COMPANY TABLES AND MANNERS

COMPANY TABLES AND MANNERS

NOW, a word as to a very common fault in some of our bomes. There seems to be an idea among many propie that there must be a different set of manners for company from what is observed in every-day life. While it is the proper thing to have for an invited company a more elaborate diance, and a little more ceremeny in the service than for the family table, it must be remembered that one should not put on and take off good manners as one would a garment. They are a part of one's self, and whether the family mend consist of many courses or only a cup of tea and a slice of toat, it should always be served decently and in order, and the manners of the members of the household should be such that one need not blush for them, even in the finest company. As soon as a child is old that one need not blush for them, even in the finest company. As soon as a child is old enough to come to the table he should be taught by precept and example what good table manners are. If the father and mother be so unfortunate as not to have had proper training themselves, they should study to correct any but habits they may have, for the sake of their children. Let it be understood that good manners are not the sequiring of every new wrinkle that fashionable society may prescribe. There is a great difference between good manners and good form. What is good form to-day may be very had form to-morrow, but good manners are not change able. Unselfishness, kindly feelings and politeness are the foundation of good manners. Good table manners demand that one shall take soup from the side of the spoon; shall take small mouthfuls of food and masticate quictly, making no unpleasant sound; shall take to the first that is the first fail.

take small monthlitts of food and masticate quietly, making no unplensint sound; shall take in the fingers no food except fruits, confectionery, olives, bread, cake, celery, etc., and that the members of the family shall be as polite to each other as to any guest. Where people tush through their meals there is not much change for table manners are and line. much chance for table manners or good diges-tion. If properly managed, the table can be made one of the most refining influences of

CLEANING NEW IRON COOKING UTENSILS

SUBSCRIBER asks how to clean new stove furniture so that there shall be no The monufacturers varnish the outside of fromware to protect it from rust. This varitish burns off in a few hours, and I know of no other way to remove it. They tell me at hardware stores that there is nothing close to do the rust from the rust in the rust hardware stores that there is nothing close to do the rust from the rust from to do.

A more difficult problem is the washing of the inside of the utensil, so that it shall not rust or smut. Steel cooking utensils are made almost as cheap as iron, and while they rust if not properly cared for, they will not smut. Rub the inside surface of the utensil with old newspapers, getting off in this manner as much of the black as possible. Next grease every part of the inside thoroughly with beef or mutton suct. Cut up about a pound of suct for each vessel, using, however, two pounds for the tea-kettle. Put the fat in the vessels and let them heat slowly on the back part of the stove. When thoroughly heated, move them to a hotter part of the stove, where part of the stove. When thoroughly heated, move them to a hotter part of the stove, where they should remain for two or three hours, beting careful not to get the fat so hot that it will burn. The a piece of an old cloth on a long stick, and about every lifteen minutes swab the fat around the sides of the utensils, that the fat may permeate every part of the iron. At the end of two hours draw the utensils At the end of two hours draw the utensils back to a cooler part of the stove, where they will end gradually. When cool enough to handle readily, pour out the fat and wash the vessels in hot soapsuds. Wipe as dry as possible with the dish-cloth, and then rub smooth with a coarse dry towel, Iron utensils once treated in this manner will give no trouble in the future, if they receive proper attention. It is important that the oily bath be given iron utensils before water touches them.

There are two causes for the common rusting of iron cooking utensils; water is allowed ing of iron cooking utensils: water is allowed to cool in them, and they are not wiped dry when washed. These utensils should be washed as carefully and wiped as dry as a piece of glass or silver. Keep sourse towels for tin and iron utensils, and if the dishes are washed as clean as they should be they will not soil the towels any more than if they were of china.

Iron muffin-pass and griddle-cake and fry-ing-pass may be generously greased with fresh lard and allowed to stand over night. In the morning heat them thoroughly, and then wash and dry as directed.

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1878.

W. BAKER & CO.'S Breakfast Cocoa from which the excess of oil has been removed, Is absolutely pure and it is soluble.  $No\ Chemicals$ ore need in its preparation. It has more than three times the averagth of Cocon mixed with Starch, Arrowroot or Sugar, and is therefore for more ecoicenical, costing less than one regts cup. It is delicious, nourisbing, strengthening, EastLY December, and admirably adapted for invalidaas well as for persons in health.

Sold by Grocers everywhere. W. BAKER & CO., Dorchester, Mass.

Equally Popular with Rich and Poor. A Universal Favorite.

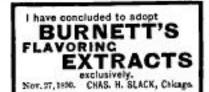

Makes an every-day convenience of an old-time luxury. PURE and wholesome, Prepared with scrupulous care. Highest award at all Pure Food Expositions. Each package makes two large pies. Avoid imitations-always insist on having the

NONE SUCH brand.
If your grocer does not keep it, send not. (or stamps)
for full size package by mail, prepaid.
MERRELL & SOULE, Syracuse, N. Y.

This Department is under the editorship of EBEN E. REXFORD, who will take pleasure in answering any question regarding flowers and floriculture which may be sent to him by the Mr. Rexport asks that, as far as possible, correspondents will allow him to answer their questions through his JOURNAL Department. Where specially desired, however, he will answer them by mail if stamp is inclosed. Address all letters direct to EBEN E. REXFORD, Shiocton, Wisconsin.

DESIRABLE PLANTS FOR PARLOR USE

many inquiries come to me about plants adapted to cultivation in the par-lor that I give a brief description of a few of the best not already men-tional in the Industry tioned in the JOURNAL. There is no accessory to a house which I would so strongly recommend as potted flowers. They bring brightness and gladness, and often create sunshine when all other things fail.

A BEAUTIFUL PALM

ONE of the most striking and peculiar of ONE of the most striking and peculiar of the palm family is the Cycas reboluta. Its trunk looks more like a large and elongated pineapple than anything else. From the top it sends out its thick and leathery foliage in a great tuft. On a well-grown speciment the foliage will be two or three feet in length, spreading out in all directions, and from this some idea can be formed of its decorative qualities. It is dark green in color. Its leaves are stiff, but they have a graceful curve, and a good plant will be found extremely valuable in oroamenting a room. Its price prevents it from becoming as popular as it would surely be if it could be bought more chemply, but because of its being rather slow and difficult to propagate it brings a high price. and difficult to propagate it brings a high price.

THE GRACEFUL SWORD FERM

THIS good old plant is coming into popularity again among those who value plants for their beauty rather than their novelty. It lacks the delicate grace of the Adioutums, but it has a grace all its own, and a well-grown specimen will always attract attention. If given a soil of leaf-mold and sand, a shady place to grow in and plenty of water and con-siderable room for its roots, it will in a short time become a plant of noble proportions. It is not uncommon to see plants having thirty, is not uncommon to see plants having thirty, or fifty fronds from two to four feet long. These have a curve of striking gracefulness, and many mistake the plant for some variety of palm because of the division of the leaves, which grently resembles that of some of the latter family. It is admirably adapted to culture in baskets or hanging pots, if care is taken to give plenty of root-room. It suffers from lack of water, and it is very important, therefore, to see that its wants in this retent, therefore, to see that its wants in this re-spect are fully supplied. Shower its foliage freely as often as possible, and examine it frequently to see that scale has not attacked it.

VARIETIES OF THE JASMINE

THESE plants are great favorites everywhere. At the south many varieties are quite hardy, but with us at the north, they must be grown in the house. Grandiflow is a beautiful winter-blooming variety, of half climbing habit. Its flowers are white, starshaped, and of most delightful fragrance. Its foliage is finely cut, and somewhat resembles that of some varieties of fern. Resolution that of some varieties of tern. Resources closely resembles Grandifora in all respects except that of color. It is a bright golden yellow; Grand Duke is of shrubby habit, and produces small white flowers freely, double, as a rose, and of the most delicious fragrance. The culture of these plants is simple. Give a roll of course of the culture of these plants is simple. The culture of these plants is simple. Give a soil of sandy loam; water freely. Shower often to keep the red spider from injuring them and keep them in a sunny window. Cut back at first, to make them branch freely. After each period of flowering it is well to cut back all the branches on which flowers were borne, as this induces the sending out of other branches, and new growth must be secured in order to have plenty of flowers, none being borne from old wood.

A BRILLIANT PLANT

ONE of the most showy and satisfactory of house plants that will bloom all the time if given a little care is the Ackania Moderacas. It has foliage shaped something like that of the Abarison, of a very bright and pleasing green. The flowers are a rich, bright scatter, and the contrast between flower and scires, and the contrast between nower and foliage is exceedingly line. It is not as free a bloomer as many plants, but it will seldom be without a few flowers, and this cannot be said of most plants. It grows well in loam, made light with a little sharp sand. Give the pot good drainage, and water well. It likes light and was but does not insist on a great deal of and sun but does not insist on a great deal of warmth. It is not disposed to branch very freely if allowed to have its own way, there-fore, in order to secure a bushy, compact plant, it is necessary to cut it back sharply from time it is necessary to cut it back sharply from times to time while young, so that as many branches can be secured as are necessary to give plenty of blossoming surface. It stands cutting back well, and all that is required to produce a plant of satisfactory form is patience and per-sistent attention. One thing that recommends it to the amateur is its almost entire freedom from the attack of any insect. It can be trained as a small tree, or a shrub.

A DECORATIVE HOME PINE

THE Pandamus utilis, better known as the Screw Pine, from the fact that its follage L Screw Pine, from the fact that its follage is arranged in a spiral form, is one of the most decorative of house plants, if placed in the center of a group where it can be sufficiently elevated to display its drooping qualities. It requires only ordinary care, and improves with age. The leaves of this pine are generally three feet or more in length, about two inches in width, and of a bright green color, with a red line running down the center of each. The edges of the leaves are thickly set with sharp, needle-like teeth which effectually prevent anyone from meddling with it. It is a vent anyone from meddling with it. It is a peculiarity of the plant that it lifts itself from the not by its roots, and the the pot by its roots, and the amateur often gets the impression that the plant requires re-potting because of the exposure of these roots. If re-potted and set lower, so that the base of the plant comes in contact with the soil, the roots immediately set to work to throw the plant above the pot again.

TWO NEW HYDRANGEAS

TWO NEW HYDRANGEAS

THE Hydrangeas are great favorites, and their popularity is well deserved. They bloom freely, remain in perfection for months, and are of the easiest cultivation. The old Hortensia is the best known variety. It forms a plant three or four feet high by two or three feet in width, and bears dozens of clusters of flowers in early summer, of a pleasing pink color, each cluster being of enormous size. Some of our enterprising florists have lately introduced two new varieties outle dislately introduced two new varieties quite dis-tinct from the old Hortensia, but quite as meritorious. Stella finibriata produces its flowers in great clusters or trusses with wonderful in great clusters or trusses with wonderful profusion; so much, so that a plantappears almost covered with great balls of snow. The petals, instead of being smooth on the edges, are beautifully fringed. Hoses is a vigorous grower, and a great bloomer, and has flowers of a brighter pink than any other variety. It makes a fine companion plant for Scila finitiata. To grow the Hydranges well, give it a rich soil, plenty of root-room, and—most important item of all—a liberal quantity of water while it is making its annual growth. In winter, put in the cellar. In winter, put in the cellar.

HOW TO RAISE HELIOTROPE

THIS flower needs a soil rather light and sandy in character, but the sand should not be of the kind we mix with loam and other soil for the purpose of making it light and porous. Rather, that kind of sand which closely resembles loam, and has considerable richness in it. A stiff, heavy loam will not give good results. For increasing the richness of the soil I would use "Food for Flowers" rather than barn-yard manure, as the latter is rather than burn-yard manure, as the latter is almost sure to breed worms, and these greatly almost sure to breed worms, and these grently injure the fine, delicate roots of the plant. See that the pots have good drainage. Overwatering is fatal; too much moisture at the roots causes them to decay, and your plant will soon drop its leaves and take on a sickly look from which there is no recovery until the causes which produced the unhealthiness are removed. From this, however, you must not get the idea that the plant does not require considerable water. It does. It sends out innumerable tiny roots which form a thick mass in the soil, and make it difficult for water to numerable tiny roots which form a thick mass in the soil, and make it difficult for water to penetrate it. Unless water is given in suf-ficient quantity to thoroughly saturate all the soil in the pot, and reach the roots daily, the health of the plant is affected at once, and the leaves will soon turn brown and fall off, pre-cisely as they do when there is overwatering. Give proper drainage, and there will be no danger of using too much water. Make sure that the ball of roots is soaked through. Very often the soil will look wet, but examination often the soil will look wet, but examination will show that the mass of tiny roots is dry in the center while that about it is very moist. the center while that about it is very moist. Therefore, be sure to give enough to reach them, if you want your plants to do well. In order to make the plants bushy, pinch back well when young, and keep up this pinching until you have at least a dozen branches. You can tie them up to a rack if you want to, or allow them to take care of themselves. I prefer the latter plan. They may "sprawl" somewhat, but they can never be ungraceful, and to me, at least, a tied-up Heliotrope always looks so formal that I can never get rid of the impression that it is uncomfortable, and mutely asks for that freedom which can give it grace. Give it a warm place, and all the sunshine possible. sunshine possible.

THE FRAGRANT CARNATION

THE FRAGRANT CARNATION

O not neglect to get some seed of hardy Pinks this spring. If you do, you will lose a great deal of pleasure. No finer plants for the garden exist, all things considered. They are beautiful in form and color, and have a rich, spicy sweetness that no other flower possesses. For cutting they are unequaled. Try one plant and you will be sure to have more the following year. They can be grown from seed, but in this way you are not sure of what you are going to get. If you want special colors, it is necessary to order plants. The following are some of the most desirable sorts: Alba finbrista; pure white, beautifully fringed, and very double. "Assa Boleyn;" flowers of extra size, very double, a dark velvety maroon in color, shading to light crimson. A splendid kind. "Juliet;" flowers white, with a center of pale rose. Very charming. "Kohiwor;" pure white. "Snow;" a profuse-flowering kind, of purest white, very large and double, and finely fringed. "Abbotsford;" carmine marbled with pure white. Rich clove fragrance, flowering most profusely in June, but freely in fall. ing most profusely in June, but freely in fall.

PLANTS FOR A SHADY CORNER

A NEW variety of the Apidatra has foliage of a very rich dark green banded with light green, yellow or pure tvory white, the variegation being irregular, some leaves being almost entirely light, others having only narrow lines of the light colors. These leaves are all sent up from the crown of the plant, and vary in length from a foot to two feet, and often number fifteen or twenty on each plant. It will be readily understood from this that a pot of it presents a most attractive mass of foliage. Indeed, few plants are more striking, and i know of nothing better adapted to front rows in groups in parlor or hall ed to front rows in groups in parlor or hall where plants are arranged to present a solid and massive effect. The leaves are of a thick, and massive effect. The leaves are or a track, tough texture, therefore not easily injured by handling, and, like all foliage of that kind, they stand the effect of dry air and dust ex-ceedingly well. This plant does not require ceedingly well. This plant does not require exposure to the sun, though undoubtedly it is benefited by being given some sunshine. It likes a good deal of water, but care should be taken to have the drainage perfect if you would prevent the tips of the leaves from turning brown. A singular plant which is eminently adapted for parlor use because its leaves remain in a perfect state for years; they are from three to four feet in length, and are beautifully variegated with light green shading to yellow, on a dark ground. The variegation has the peculiarity of running across the leaves in bands of irregular widths, rather than lengthwise. than lengthwise.

BEAUTIFUL HOME PLANT

MONG easily grown pot plants the Mimulus must be regarded with especial favor. The flowers are of a peculiar and striking shape, resembling somewhat those of the Gloxinia, but the Mimulus is a much more satisfactory plant, because of its greater ease of cultivation and greater freedom of bloom. For spring and summer flowering, seed can be sown any time during the winter seed can be sown any time during the winter months, and the plants be brought along to commence to bloom in May. The soil in which the seed is to be sown should be fine and sundy. Use shallow pans, and drain them well. Sentter the seed thinly over the surface of the soil, and then sift soil lightly over the seed and press it down with the hand. Then sprinkle with a fine sprny, and cover with a pane of glass. Put the box or pan in a warm place, and in a few days the young plants will appear. As soon as they have made a few leaves, prick off into small pots. When fairly started to growing give a cooler place. The plants are of rapoil growth. While growing and flowering they require plenty of water. A soil of turfy loam, leaf mold and sand is suitable. Pinch out the main stem to make them branch. The out over the pots to sticks suitable. Finch out the main stem to make them branch. The out over the pots to sticks set about the edge. In color they are a rich yellow, blotched and spotted with velvety marcon. M. morchatus is the well-known variety, commonly known as the musk plant, because of its fragrance. The Minulus is very desirable for groundense or window can be. desirable for greenhouse or window-garden.

ABOUT OUR FLORAL ADVERTISERS

THE Journal believes in flowers in or about a home. They are educative to children, refining to men, and woman's hand-maids. No one is a more ardent lover of flowers than is the editor of the JOURNAL, as the box of blooming plants in Mr. Bok's edi-torial window and the vase of fresh flowers on his desk, freshly culled each day, testify. And while he instils into the hearts of nil his renders, by his own words and those of his editorial associates, a love for flowers, the pub-lishers seek, especially at this time of the year, to place before the Journal readers those of our most reliable houses and firms which offer what is best and most beautiful in the floral the box of blooming plants in Mr Bok's ediwhat is best and most beautiful in the floral world. We can confidently say that we believe our floral advertisers to comprise the leading and most honorable dealers in business to-day, and as such we recommend them to our readers. It will be to your advantage in many cases, however, to mention the fact that you saw their advertisement in the Journal, should you write to them.

F all the bonny buds that blow in bright or cloudy weather, of all the flowers that come and go the whole twelve months together," there are none that you cannot obtain at Vaughan's Mammoth Plant and Seed Store, Chicago. For 1892 our American Horticulture" to date, with the handsomest cover ever used on a floral work, FOR 24 CENTS (12 two-cent stamps) we mail one bulb each Jacobean Scarlet Lily and New Tuberous Begonia, with this magnificent Catalogue. To keep you posted on Borticulture at the World's Fair we must have your name. Mention this paper. VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE, 146 AND 148 W. WASHINGTON ST., CHICAGO.

FOR A TOMATO

SURE HEAD CABBAGE

EARLY SNOWBALL TURNIP

A PHOTOGRAPH. In the earliest in the world, easy grown, good see, excellent quality. Will be far shead of your happhone.

My Catalogue, is worth 50 to any one who gets it, the ordered surgest certar; the form a bean plant with 100 pole, and above towasto pelae.

EF I will seed a packet each of Frize Tomato, Cabloage and Tarmp, with my Catalogue of Harquian for only 50 certail Greatest bargain catalogue are sent out.

EF Exert servan seading silver for above collection. very person sending silver for above collection, crive Free a packet GOLDEN HALL LETTUCE, variety ever gr wn, and a 50 cent certificate for F. B. MILLS, Rose Hill, Onondaga Co. N.Y.

FINCH'S EVERGREEN CUCUMBER ariety of superior quality, fore green color, growing from 10 to 12 , and immensely productive.

FINCH'S SURE HEAD CABBAGE Is all hend and sure to hend. Very uniform in such itm and fine in texture, uscellent in quality, and a geood keeper, Alfred Rose, of Penn Yan, N. V., greer a head which weighted 64 to pounds.

12°T will send a Packet send of Tennate. Cacumber and Cabbage, with my Illustrated Catabague, for only 20 cents in Silver or 28 cents in Stamps.

FIVE CINNAMON VINES FREE case, with its beautiful beartical beartical beartical beartical beares, glosey green peculiar foliage, and delicate white bioscens, emitting a delicious climamon fragrasses, will grow from 10 to 30 feet in a single scusses, and for covering Arthors, Screens and Versides in without a reval. I will send 5 BULBS FREE, and postpaid, to every person septing me 25-cames for the above Tree Tourns to Callection, the balls will produce 5 Beautiful Vines exactly the same in every respect as I have been selling for One Dellar. Address plainty FRANK FINCH, Box B) CL YDE, N.Y.

EF Every person sending Sil.VER for this collec-tion will receive extra a process of the Mansfield Tournite (also known as the Prize) which has been grown over sine feet in beighth, bearing fruit of good quality, weighing from one to two pounds each.

LOVELY FLOWERS.

J. ROSCOE FULLER & CO.

RARE PLANTS

CURIOUS CACTI from Sealer and South America, BULBS from Asia, Africa Australia, etc. Illustrated Catalogues FREE with sample bulb or cactes, 18 cents.

IO Rare Cacti for $1.00. A BOOK ON CACTI,

A. BLANC & CO., 214 S. Uth Steet, Philada., Pa.

NEW, RARE AND BEAUTIFUL PLANTS!

OUR SPECIAL COLLECTIONS,

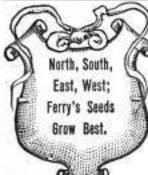

THE AMERICAN EXOTIC NURSERIES. B. D. HOTT, Manager, Seven Oaks, Florida.

Magnificent New Red, White and Blue Water Lilies.

being from all other varieties. Seeds, It comes, obst., Then three Warre Lillow are unjust, and we then greaters and the control of the contr FIG. (she range search) blooming boths, the con-cash. CEINCH KINKE Observation, with, striped deep red; large boths, 40 octor such. FANNES 481ANT 4008-BINATION STRAIN, a great minure of all the choicest distinct scraims and varieties—its copic lower before the property of the company of the concheck à centre per pachet. DIANTHUS NEW STRIPER mething getted, Illian the Cartanian. It centre per tot. SPECIAL GPFER. All of the above, amount-pic 81.66, and a PHER bath of the gread Spider y, carefully wrapped in long strands of the bound-in PARISH 2008, or GHAY ELARS, which is no for decenting resum, and market to my address only 15 cents, and safe arrival generatived-free, a ten both of the NEW HARDY TIERDOSE, g plant of the HARDY JAPARISH CROYER. LEAV 16 Dail service was in Polithetenia. Eventillar

PIKE & ELLSWORTH, Jessamine, Pasco Co., Florida.

THREE SEED TRUTHS. READI

The Sower

THINK!!

ACT!!!

Ferry's Seeds have made, and kept Ferry's Seed Business the largest in the World. MERIT TELLS. has no second chance. Good sense says make the most of the FIRST, by using Ferry's Seeds

Ferry's new Seed Annual tells the whole Seed story, Don't Bow Seeds till you get it, Bent Free for the asking,

P. O. Box 1317 Detroit, Michigan.

D. M. FERRY & CO.

Cts. 15 Continuous Flowering Roses & 75 cts. FOR A MAGNIFICENT OFFER!

ALL THE ABOVE are strong, vigorous Plants, suitable for immediate brains of rose bade almost every day throughout the summer. For 73c I will send free by mail, All strong Flavering Flants, such labeled, 13 disrance for double of single flowering, or 15 Carnation Pinks, or 15 Chromothe depends from my collection, or 15 associed flowering plants, or 15 associed more flowering bulbs. For a remittance of $3.75 i will send the above six rollecting plants. Get up a club for five of these collections and have one for nonrestrong our costs. It addition is will send the Above six rollections and have one for nonrestrong our costs. It addition is will seld the Above six rollections and have one for nonrestrong our costs. It addition is will seld traits a plant of the New Strand To. asta. Get up a club for five of these collections and have set. In addition I will odd gratis a plant of the New Str Cutalogue of Plants and Seeds mailed free

CHARLES A. REESER CHARLES, SPRINGFIELD, O.

BEAUTIFUL FLOWERS

Are easily grown, but you must get good Seeds. YOUNG'S SEEDS are considered the Standard of Excellence, and have been planted in thousands of gardens for more than a quarter of a century. Anyone will tell you that they are the best. Try this little collection for 25 cents. You will send more and larger orders after that-everyone does.

SST. Superby larger-described.

ASTERS. Bracefold standard and band.

EWERT PEAS. Florat new twents i fraction.

EMERT PEAS. Florat new twents i fraction.

EMISSISTINAS. School tardeties a milend.

EMISSISTINAS. School tardeties a milend.

EMISSISTINAS. Larger-foreword; bracerant,

ABOVE 10 PACKETS OF FINEST FLOWER SEEDS, SENT POSTPAID, FOR 25 CENTS.

Our superbly Illustrated Catalogue of Roses, Plants and Seeds (instructive, useful, complete) goes free with every order, or mailed free to all who write for it, enclosing C. YOUNG & SONS' CO. 1408 OLIVE STREET. 6c stamps for postage. C. YOUNG & SONS' CO. SAINT LOUIS, MO.

THE CHARMING MEXICAN PRIMROSE

beauty, both in color and habit, are offset by no finite whatever. It is the one most desirable new plant for the whole world. FIRE PLANTS, ALREADY TO BUE AND BLOOM, by MAIL, POSTPAID, GUARANTEED TO ARRIVE IN GOOD CONDITION, 40 cents each, 3 for SLOO, 7 for SLOO, There ordering three or more plants may have a Manetta Vine free by asking for it. THE TRUE MANETTIA VINE The most magnificent flowering vine in cultivation, and is loaded in marrisons beauty is world wide. Fine plants ALREADY BUDDED AND BLOOMING, 25 cents each or 3 for 50 cents.

NEW PEACOCK PANSY. A Pursy of superb and varied color, showing the glorious and luminous NEW PEACOCK PANSY. A Pursy of superb and varied color, showing the glorious and luminous pansy ever seen. SEEB PER PACKET, 25 CENTS.

SPECIAL OFFER! For 60 cents we will send by mail one plant each of Mexican Primrose, Manestia Vilor and packet Peacock Pursy, two of each fir $1.

Also the Following Extra Choice Collections by Mail Postpaid.

A GREAT OFFER. For only 85.00 we will send, pertund, all the collections, Primrose, Manettla and OUR BRONZE BLUE CATALOGUE 1A superior work of act in brother him of PLOWER and RARE FRUITS, is the most beautiful and complete ever send. By pages, hundred to PLOWER and RARE FRUITS, is the most beautiful and complete ever sende. By pages, hundreds of Elegant Eogravings, Stiple Lithograph Owers and 7 brantiful intege Colored Plates. We offer the finest standard varieties and novelties in Flower and Vegotable seeds, fields and Flants of all kinds and rare new Praise. Also the greatest collection of rare Cacil, Functing Shribs, New Aquatic Finals, etc. Don't miss the Great Japanese Wiseberry, Alsonmer Raspberry, West Hyacinita, Trailing Quisen Fuchst, Dwarf Grange, Mosquito Calchier Final, Picture Sock Tomato, Standey Potato, and hundreds of other Great Novelties. THIS MAGNIFIA. CENT CATALOGUE WILL BE SENT FREE TO ALL WHO ORDER THE MEXICAN FRIMROSE OR ANYTHING HERE OFFERED. Or for only 20 cents we will send CATALOGUE, sample copy of THE MAYFLOWER, and pracket of PEACOCK, PANSY SEID. We want agents in every town to take subscribers for our beautiful Monthly Hestericanum Liberal premiums.

JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, Floral Park, Queens Co., N. Y.

Get

Thousands of people will purchase Flowers this year. If possible they would naturally prefer to visit the largest stock and make selections.

Read

This would take them to The Dingee & Conard Co., of West Grove, Pa., the largest rose growers in America. But were such a trip possible, the visitors would simply be perplexed by profusion. Each and all of these people can however, at the cost of a postal, have the stock of this great establishment set before them in a convenient and understandable way by means of their book, The NEW GUIDE for 1892. As its name implies, this book is a Guide; it illustrates and describes upwards of 2,000 Roses, Bulbs, Hardy Plants and Seeds, giving without exaggeration, the information which every purchaser needs. It also gives such plain directions as to care as will enable their customers to repeat The Dingee & Conard Co's success with flowers. No valuable Flower Novelty is omitted from this work, which also contains many tempting Premium offers. As long as flowers are worth selecting, money worth saving, and disappointment worth avoiding, this Guide will be of great value to every purchaser and lover of flowers. It is offered FREE to everyone. The asking is the only price.

Heed

The Dingee & Conard Co.

West Grove, Pa.

Profit

is a matter of choice. You get the luck if you get the right seeds. Ours are all lucky seeds, just because we trust nothing to luck. We are always trying, testing, proving, so that we can sell you only seeds that will would you like a list with all the reason of fruit and flower seeds.

Would you like a list with all the cream of fruit and flower seeds.

Many valuable novelties, but all TESTED. It is FREE, if you send two se.

stamps for postage, and mention The Labors Boar format.

JOHNSON & STOKES, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SEEDS 🖼

FRESU! Reliable! Colobrated for Parity & Street Green, and the qualities. Only 24 Sc. per large plat. 5. 6004.000 Servity Entraward orders this year feature with orders this year feature. The control Seed and Plant Catalogue. Present all who address at error, 14. W. HUCK REE.

Hard Ford Seed Farms, No. 204 Main St., Rockstord, 111.

SEEDS mode, 100. Cat free, 2 a seat, washer, 8.3. Digitized by Google

BAILEY'S RUBBER

HEEL CUSHION

gives elasticity and case to every step taken by the woner. It breaks the shock or jarring of the body when waiking and is particularly stapped to all who are obliged to be on their fiest. To those suffering from Spinal. Eidney, Rheumatic and Nervons Affections, it will be bound a great relied. The rubber with its annular projections is as soft as velvet, thoroughly valcanized, always clastic, leather covered next to the foot, and can be instantly adjusted inside of the boot, directly under the heel. All slows, 25 cents per pair, mailed upon receipt of price. At all dealers.

What People Say Who Wear Them:
"Send 6 pairs more; ther are a grand surves."

Send 6 pairs more ; they are a grand success." Entirely satisfactory ; send 4 pairs more." They give instant relief; send me 1 pairs more."

Indorsed by physicians for nervous troubles. C. J. BAILEY & CO., 22 Boylston St., Boston. Everything in Rubber Goods.

How to Make a Fortune

WANTED—Salesmen; who can easily make twenty-five to seventy-five dollars per week, selling the Celebrated "Finless Clothes Line," or the Famous "Macomber Fountain lak Ersser"—Patients recently issued. Sold ONLY by salesmen, to whom we give Exclusive Territory. The Pinless Clothes Line is the only line ever invested that holds clothes without pins—a perfect success. The Macomber Fountain lak Ersser is entirely new; will crase in instantly, and is king of all. On receipt of Sec. will mail you sample of either, or sample of both for El, with circulars, price-distrand terms. Secure your territory at once. Address THE PINLESS CLOTHES LINE CO., No. 120 Hermon St., Worcester. Mass.

FOUND $5,000.

w45 140 -15

$13,389.

the Callesting Pays High name any this Colas or Proofs outset fife, each through a they highly he worth a. Thanprane'd droubers on raw solar fice or insided for two seams. AURNES WANTED. SEMBRATIC HANK, COST St., Boron, Mr.

THEE TO LADIES, describers to Tite young and old,
strated. Send on this book. Address Pub.

WAVY HAIR SWITCHES, All long, convent Hair, from $5.00 up. $10.00 elsewhere.

COCOANUT BALM.

The only Complexion Beautifler endorsed by eminent physicians. Makes the skin as fair and soft as a child's. Petro. 8, 100 per box. All Tollet Preparations of the Deletrated PARFUMERIE MONTE CHRISTO. HALE DYES ALL SHADES, A SPECIALTY. Send for free pumplies." How to be Beautiful.

54 West Fourteenth St., New York.

CARDS: New Sample Book St. U.S. CARD CO. Castle, 0

Best & Goes Farthest." Once tried, used always."

"But Low, there's No credit in being Jolly when you Have VAN Hou-Drink."

PERFECTLY PURE.

Its great success has, of course, led to many imitations, but it is generally admitted, and a comparison will easily prove that none equals Van Houten's in deliciousness, and natritive qualities.

The Standard Cocoa of the World.

Sold in 1-8, 1-4, 1-2 and 1 1b, Cam. Seta to either VAN HOUTEN & ZOON, 105 Reads St., New York, or 45 Wabash Ave., Chicago, and a can, containing enough for 35 to 40 caps, will be mailed. Mestics this publication, Propaged only by Van HOUTEN & ZOON, Weesp, Holland. A7.

THE LACK OF PROPER DRAUGHT

Our small Book malled on request. BRADLEY & HUBBARD MFG. CO., Factories, Meriden, £t. New York, Boston, Chicago.

SIMPLE REMEDIES FOR COLDS

BY MARY MARSTON

T IS a fact that the simplest remedies are ofitimes the best, although their very simplicity gives them less value in our eyes. The writer has here collected a few of the most simple remedies for colds, yet each has been tried over and over again, and has never been found wanting, and it is in their perfect simplicity that their value lies.

HOT LEMONADE

FOR breaking up a cold there is nothing better than bot lemonade taken upon retiring. This is made by putting the juice of two lemons in a pint or bot water. Boil one minute. Sweeten to taste, and drink as hot as possible.

To make this, take one tablespoonful of boneset; put in it a pint of hot water, letting it draw fifteen minutes. Sweeten with molasses. When cold, strain and take two tablespoonfuls every half hour.

HOARHOUND TEA

H OARHOUND TEA is also excellent, being made and taken in the same way.

These herbs can be obtained from any druggist.

OLD-FASHIONED ONION SYRUP

THE old-fashioned onion syrup, made of mineed onions, a tablespoonful of vine-egar (cider vinegar is the best), and half a cup of boiling molasses, will be found a good remedy for hourseness and sore throat.

GARGLES FOR SORE THROATS

A N excellent gargle is made of one tables spoonful of cayenne pepper, half a cup of boiling vinegar and three teaspoonfuls of salt. Mix well together, and when settled strain. Gargle the throst every half hour. Any one subject to sore throat of any kind will find a certain cure and preventive in the daily use of salt and water as a gargle.

BURNT CAMPHOR

THE fumes of burnt campbor will instantly relieve a cold in the head. Put a piece of campbor the size of an egg in an old sancer. Set it on fire, and after burning a few moments blow out the flames, and inhale the funes.

" All she lacks of beauty is a little plumpness."

This is a frequent thought, and a wholesome one.

All of a baby's beauty is due to fat, and nearly all of a woman's - we know it as curves and dimples.

What plumpness has to do with health is told in a little book on CAREFUL LIVING; sent free.

Would you rather be healthy or beautiful? "Both" is the proper answer.

Scott & Bowns, Chemists, 132 South 5th Avenue, New York, Your druggist keeps Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil—all druggists everywhere do. $1.

POCKETBOOK Worth 50 cents, and made of imitation Seal; also Elegant Shoe Catalogue, sent on receipt of 20 cents postage to LAPPIANS, PALMER ROUSE SHOE STORE, Chicago, III.

IT'S WONDERFUL! "The New Trenament" for Catarrh, by retrainers. Send stamp for BO page pamphies, fros. Agonts wanted.

A HEALTH SUPPLIES CO., 710 BROADWAY, N.Y.

MUSIC SALE To reduce our stock of music we will send by misic with send by misic size, including songs, marriers, malless, quadrilles (with callet, etc., by Mendelsechn, Berthoven, Manart, etc., for 20c. Settlefaction given or money refunded. COMRADES and 300 songs, storils and music, Soc. 100 pieces visilin music, 50c. Qt. Harnaway, 320 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

Rowley's Toilet Mask Madame

(OR FACE GLOVE).

THE FOLLOWING ARE THE CLAIMS MADE FOR MADAME ROWLEY'S TOILET MASK, AND THE GROUNDS ON WHICH IT IS RECOMMENDED TO LADIES FOR BEAUTIFYING, BLEACHING, AND PRESERVING THE COMPLEXION:

1st. The Mask is Soft and Pilable and can be Easily Applied and Worn | 9th. It is a Natural Beautifler for Bleaching and Preserving the Skin. without Discomfort or Inconvenience.

2d. It is dumble, and does not dissolve or come asunder, but holds its original shape.

3d. It has been Analyzed by Eminent Scientists and Chemical Experts, and pronounced Perfectly Pure and Harmless.

4th. With ordinary care the Mask will Last for Years, and its valuable properties Never Become Impaired. 5th. The Mask is protected by letters patent, has been introduced ten years, and is the only Genuine article of the kind. 6th. It is Recommended by Eminent Physicians and Scientific Men as a substitute for injurious connetics. 7th. The Mask is as Unlike the fraudulent appliances used for conveying cosmetics, etc., to the face or day is to night, and it bears no

8th. The Mask may be worn with Perfect Privacy if desired. The Closest Scrutiny cannot detect that it has been used.

analogy to them.

The Toolet Mask (or Pace Glove) in position to the face. TO BE WORN THREE TIMES IN THE WEEK.

and Removing Complexional Imperfections, 10th. The Mask is sold at a moderate price, and one purchase ends the expense.

> 11th. Hundreds of dollars uselessly expended for cosmetics, lotions, and like preparations may be saved by those who possess it.

> 12th, Ladles in every section of the country are using the Mask with gratifying results.

> 13th. It is safe, simple, cleanly, and effective for beautifying purposes, and never injures the most delicate skin.

> 14th. While it is intended that the Mask should be Worn During Sleep, it may be applied, with equally good results, at Any Time, to suit the convenience of the wearer.

> 15th. The Mask has received the testimony of well-known society and professional ladies, who proclaim it to be the greatest discovery for beautifying purposes ever offered to

A FEW SPECIMEN EXTRACTS FROM TESTIMONIAL LETTERS:

"I am so rejoiced at having found at last an article that will indeed improve the complexion."

"Every bidy who desires a faultless complexion should be provided with the Mask."

" My face is as soft and smooth as an infant's," 'I am perfectly delighted with it.'

" As a medium for removing discolorations, softening and beautifying the skin I consider it unequalled."

"It is, indeed, a perfect success—an inestimable treasure."

"I find that it removes freekles, tan, suntern and gives the complexion a soft, smooth surface."

"I have worn the Mask but two weeks and non-imaged at the change it has made in my appearance."

"The Mask certainly acts upon the skin with a mild and beneficial result, making it smoother and clearer, and seeming to remove pimples, irritations, etc., with each application."

"For softening and beautifying the skin there is othing to compare with it."

"Your invention cannot full to supersede everything that is used for beautifying purposes." "Those of my sex who desire to secure a pure com-plexion should have one."

" For bleaching the skin and removing imperfections I know of radhing so good."

"I have worn the Mask but three nights, and the blackbeads have all disappeared."

"The Mask should be sept in every lady's tellet

"I must tell you how delighted I am with your Tollet Mask; it gives unbounded satisfaction."

"A lady was cured of freckles by eight nights' use of the Mask."

"The improvement in my complexion is truly mar-

"After three weeks use of the Mask the wrinkles have almost disappeared."

"My sister used one for a sported skin, and her com-plexion is all that can be desired."

"It does even more than is claimed for it,"

"I have been relieved of a muddy, greasy com-plexion after trying all kinds of cosmelics without

COMPLEXION BLEMISHES

may be hidden imperfectly by cosmetics and powders, but can only be removed permanently by the Toilet Mask. By its use every kind of spots, impurities, roughness, etc., vanish from the skin, leaving it soft, clear, brilliant and beautiful. It is harmless, costs little and saves its user money. It prevents and REMOVES and is both a complexion preserver and beautifier. Famous society ladies, actresses, belles, etc., use it. VALUABLE ILLUSTRATED PAMPHLET, with proofs and full particulars, mailed free by

→ WRINKLES, ←

THE TOILET MASK COMPANY, - 1164 Broadway, New York.

Apply NOW, while you have our address before you, as this advertisement appears only occasionally.

Please mention "THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL."

FOR 100 PODS!

proved Strain was at anything yet of-red. In grows about out high, branching a in all directions, aring its pods so gothatth y seldom the largerous remains and full directions for culture, or the plant 180 billioned full directions for culture, or the larger land best kind to suit all soils in the world, the carriers had been kind to suit and sentences of all and if

If Every person scotling sover for above collection ill receive Free a packet GOLDEN BALL TURNIP. free. F. B. MILLS, Rose Hill, Onondaga Co., N. Y.

THE RAINBOW abowing red, bone, w and white in the w and was dower. Mets.; half pkt. bets. wil all kinds of seeds HALF PACKETS AT HALF PRICE.

Seeds! Galosobaria, New Canna, and New Passion Flower, No. Cain, free, A. C. Andersoon, Leigh, Neb.

Make your

lants Bloom

Window Gardening.

FLOWERING Send 10e, and I will mail to go 2 Tuber use it sulbsd new varieties of 10e.
BULBS in two new varieties Surefuer to Tuberuse Bulled did Pour!

15 Bulbs in two new varieties, Summer Gradis, For 50c., 12 Second Ibilit. Bunble Pearl Internet Zephyranthus Rosen, new summer flowering rescained Amarylia; spiendid balb for Sc. 15 for 20.
CBAS. T. STARR. Avondale, Chester Co., Pa.

GIVEN AWAY!

ROBT, SCOTT & SON, Philadelphia, Pa.

NONE BETTER. Large Catalogue Free, if you will name paper, Flowers, Vegetables, Finest Strain. C. E. ALLEN, - Brattleboro, Vt.

L. W. GOODELL, Seed Greener, Paney Purk, Bright, Sixter, SEEDS, PLANTS and BULBS.

Dreer's Reliable Seeds.

714 Chestnut St., Philad's

JAPAN and California Bulbs, Seeds, Shrubs, etc., Send us your address, and we will mail you

ENGLISH DECORATED

Dinner Set, No. 45, 112 Piece Premium with an order of $20.00.

ENGLISH DECORATED Band Dinner Set, No. 165, 112 Pieces, Decorated in Five Natural Colo

Premium with an order of 835,00,

Premium with an order of $20.09.

Or, sucked and delivered at deput for $9.09

cash.

Premium with an order of $35.00.

Cash Price, packed and delivered at deput, $12.50. As Regard St.

WE are IMPORTERS of Ten and Coffee, Chim and Cracker, and do the larger Ten and Coffee business in Bosim (direct with consumers). We also carry a large stock and soil at the lowest possible Cash prices Dinner and Ten Sets, Silver-slated Ware, Lamps, also Larce Cartains and Table Linea foor own importation. To those who take the time and tradic to get up Clabs for Ten, Coffee, Spices and Extracts, we offer premiums, in toying ten and Coffee from as, you get full value for the monor invested and get a premium, and you get goods that are direct from the IMPORTERS. If you key Ten and Coffee from your greet you gay those of sur profits and pay for a premium, but do not get h. In an article published in one of the largest tablies in this country it was claimed the too beautiff from the retail green shared a profit of the per rest. The moral is plain, but from files that shows a profit of the per rest. The moral is plain, but from files that shows of the largest tablies in this country it was claimed the ten beautiff from the retail green shared a profit of the per rest. The moral is plain, but from files that shows of the per rest. The moral is plain, but from files that shows of Dinners. Ten and Coffee sales. (or filestrated Price and Premium Liest tolk the whole story. We like to mail it is not worked for it; it costs you nothing and will interest you. 136 pages.

THE LONDON TEA CO., 811 Washington Street, Boston.

"PILLSBURY'S BEST" FLOUR

Makes More Bread Makes Whiter Bread Makes Better Bread

THAN ANY OTHER FLOUR MANUFACTURED.

For Sale by all First-class Grocers.

PERFECTION VAKI TIXS, been bettered. Dates record without breating. Seemly reaches factors for good agreets. Sweeple Set Mr. Diginalance Mrs. Co., Buth, N.Y.

Have You Seen The Latest Fashions in

Probably not, for the remarkable improvements are very recent and several are now offered for the first time, while new strains of the past few years have been perfected.

Pansies are doubtless the most popular of all flowers raised from seed, and in order the control of the college of the control of the to give a new impetus to their culture, by acquainting all with the wondrous beauty of the LATEST NOVELTIES, we have decided to make the following

Special Offer For 25 Cts. we will mail one packet each of all the following:

PEACOCK PANSY. A gread fancy flow control edged with a thin white line, within er, petals edged with a thin white line, within which is a space of purplish crimson, passing into a rich central blotch of deep blue shading to black. The choring is tracy driktoner.

ROSY MORN PANBY. This is a really beautiful roay and color with a distinct white edge around each petal, while the three lower putals are blotched with a deep purplish red. The flowers are of perfect form and good size.

BURPEE'S DEPIANCE GIANT FAN-CY PANSIES. The flowers measure from transactions had to four inches across; the ground colors are of all shades and they are both three-spetted and fire-spetted, distinctly marked with the large blotches.

We have a trautiful plate, painted in the colors, of the three distinct new Panules toward above, which we will mail enclosed at with our FARM ANNUAL for 1899.

IMPROVED GIANT TRIMARDEAU, really improved in the entremous size of flow-in, fine form, and increased variety of colors. IMPERIAL GERMAN, Splendid Mxd. eed of over 5fty colors, saved from the finest owers by the German specialits, whose gardens expearedly imperied during the past Summer,

ALL FIVE of the above grand Novelties in PANSIES, one packet of each with instructions how to raise the largest Pansies, will be mailed to any address on receipt of 25 cts., or five complete Collections for $1.00. No such offer was ever made before, and we hope to greatly extend the culture of Pansies by thus popularizing the finest strains of this beautiful flower. Will you not take this opportunity of becoming acquainted with their wondrous beauty? Our word for it, you cannot invest twenty-five cents in any other seeds that will give such satisfaction and delight.

ORDER NOW, and ask for Burpee's Farm Annual for 1892, the most complete Seed Catalogue of the year. With honest descriptions, truthful illustrations, and colored plates painted from nature, it tells all about the BEST SEEDS. including Rare Novelties in Vegetables and Flowers, which cannot be had elsewhere.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Catalogue Free the pages describing one of the 38 YEARS. 700 ACRES. 25 GREENHOUSES.

The STORRS & HARRISON CO. PAINESVILLE. Lake Co., OHIO.

SEEDS. ROSES. PLANTS WE SEND PREPAID BY MAIL.

40 packets choice Flower Seeds; all different. These will be enficient to plant a whole flower garden, 81.00 30 packets choice Vegetable Seeds; you will get every thing in this collection. 1.00 thing in this collection.

20 very fine Ever-bisconing Keess, 20 kinds; all will flower this year.

23 choice "Rainbew" Pansy Plants; an elegant bed, Lee S breibie and 8 Single Geranisms; all different. Lee 20 choice Chrysanthemums; different; prize winners, 1,000 Hanberte Bississied 26 page Catalogue, with best terms in contrast.

information. One of the most reliable catalogues published. Describing all kinds of ganranteed forden, Flower and Field Seeds, Fruit and Ornamental Trees, Small Fruits, Choice Roses, Flowering Phants and Bulbs. Thoroughbred Land and Water Fowls, Registered Pigs, German Hares, etc. Sent free, on application. Address, membrates in the Parks.

SAMUEL WILSON, STEEL MECHANICSVILLE, PA.

Commanda "Gannerance Discoverages" for 1922 contains one bunded name band. sonely printed and illiminated with accurate photo-engravings and colored plates, and the most artistic Scarlet and Gold cover ever made. It is a Mirror of American Horticulture to date, and shows the recent attainments of this art, side by side with the good old plants of our fathers' gardens. The cultural instructions, garden supplies, flowers for bouquet making, etc., etc., are of special interest to indies.

What Chicago is doing and what she will do in 1881, is what American people must know. Our programme is outlined in this Book for 198, and every one who orders, however small, in 1992, will receive our World's Fair Book of 1993. Therefore we make to every reader of The Ladies' Homo Journal who mentions it,

** "THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL" OFFERS. Offer No. 1. For 04c, we mail one both each Amaryllis Formosiesima (Scariet Mexican Lily) and new Toberous Begonia. Offer No. 2. For 40c, we mail one new Chinese Peonia "Lady Bramwell" a pink satin flower, Boyal Hortleelinral Society Prize winner, Offer No. 3. For 50c, we mail one plant each, Chrysan ormini Welder, golden robus, Ivory, white, and Watson, pick. Our famous catalogue with colored cover illustration of "Paristan Flower Girl" from Salon of 180 sent free with each of ye The Ladles' Home Journal offers VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE, WARRINGTON BYTTON CHICAGO.

NEW HARDY PRIMROSES.

nd multiply your after year. This is obtained from the newest and

CURRIE BROS., Seedsmen.

Milwaukee, Wis.

TO ALL CORRESPONDENTS:—Any question from our readers of help or interest to momen will be cheerfully answered in this Department.

But places bear to minut: Write your questions plainly and briefly Don't use unnecessary words; editors are host persons.

The right to answer or reject any question is reserved by the Editor.

Answers consol be promised for any special issue. They will be given as quickly after receipt as passible. All correspondence should be atcompanied by full name and address, not for publication, but for reference.

M. J. S.-We cannot give addresses in this column. NACOTI-If your face is shiny discentinue the use of about.

CANADA-Vassur College is exclusively a college for Anna-Some suggestions as to dressing children will be found in last month's Journal.

Mies. Journ —A bride should acknowledge all her wed-ding presents as soon after their receipt as possible.

Councernoteest - "Serfacer's Monthly" changed its mame to the "Century Magazine" in November, 1881.

Severe. The terms "first water" and "second water," as applied to dismonds, mean first and second quality.

MOTHER - We talk the average man can beach the average buy more successfully than the average woman can.

R. B. -It is both enstomary and proper for the clergy-nan, at any social gathering, to ask a blessing on the

F. M. W.-I do not think tarnished gold heald can be restaured; at least that is my own personal experi-

A. H.—Cocon-butter is good for face unweage. In showing a visitor to her room the bostess should pro-cede her.

Christa - Longfellow, the poet, was married twice; his first wife bore him five children, two sons and three daughters. Describer—A letter addressed to the person yet men-tion if sent in our care will be forwarded to her.

Benyieses:-To remove ten stains from your lises cloth try salt and lemon upon the spots, with exposure to the sun.

C. G. M.—Colored or tinted visiting cards should never be used. A visiting card should be engeneed or written, not printed.

I. R. R. —I do not think wrinkles can be satisfactorily removed from vervet, unless it is submitted to a profes-sional steamer.

E. R. R.—A girl of seventeen wears a skirt of the same length as do older girls, but she should not be per-mitted to wear a train.

H. D. G.—Clean your willow chairs by scrubbing them with strong soap-ends, into which a Hills bineing and a little sait have been put.

FOREMER.—Female beirs in the United States are under no deathing as to their intestate succession to real estate as in England. Hansmark—In commencing a letter to a maken lady, a lotter of business. It would properly read; " Miss Mary Brown—Dear Madam."

HOUTKERS.—If you are a young girl, and a man asks permission to calf on you, it is quite proper for you to refer him to your mother.

L. R.—Suggestions as to making all-black drasses were given in the Jacoury Journals. Trim your black silk with black silk passementarie.

BOXANNA-I would advise your having a physician restave the wartifrom your neck; then, unless it is a very large one, there will be no scar.

Dyn.—It would not be in good taste to use the cont-of-arms of your mother's family ; instead, I would suggest a pretty cipiter formed of your own name.

READER-Your "al-home" cards should be sent out with your wedding cards. The golden-browns form most artistic fernishings for a dining room.

M. E. C.—Instead of seal plush I would prefer a cleak of good cloth; it will be found to wear better, and is really to better style than the plush described.

M. J. L.— "Aphasia" is a nervous disease; it is defined as "an impairment of the idea of language or its expression independent of paralysis of the longue." MARY-There is no special oll for massage, most people using that which they like the best, almost oll, olive oil, excess butter and vaseline all being functed.

SIXTEEN—Buthing vascine in the roots of the bair will be found to prevent its falling out. But it well into the scalp, and do not put quantities of it on your bair.

F. I. M.—I have been told that washing black lace in already, stretching, folding and putting it under a beavy weight, will freshess and make it hock almost as good as new.

Lettris—A letter made of twenty grains of hypo-sniphite (not phate) of soda, in an ounce of water, and applied with a soft lines cloth or sponge, will remove freekles.

GRACK-The invitation should read "Mr. and Mrs. Gray request the phasters of your company to meet their describer Grace, on Monday evening, Pohroary 11th, 186."

SCHECKIEGE—It would be quite a graceful attention on year part to send some flowers to the ladies who are about to entertain yea. Your suggestion about roses is a good one. LENA-It would be in very had taste if you did not write to the lady with whom you spent your vacation; indeed, it would be more than that, it would be ex-tremely rude.

MAUDE S.—The bridegroom engages the services of the electromas, though, of course, he consults the bride as to her preference. The cards are furnished by the family of the bride.

V. K.—We do not think that Dr. Taimage would object to laying his sermous translated; but we would advise any person meditaring such work to obtain Dr. Taimage's permission first.

NETTER-If you have been foolish enough to give your photograph to a young man, you cannot blame him if he refuses to resum it. There is no reason why you may not say for its return.

M. G. F.—Mink is ween by yesing people, and I cannot lengths how you have gotten the titles that it is only were by the middle-aged. A mink cape is a very desir-able addition to one's wardroise.

OFFER.14—The most beautiful neck is long in propor-tion to the body, round, firm and white, showing no passeles. A sheet, thick neck, or an extremely long, this one, are ornanty not beautiful.

A. E. R. - With a little care, a white such silk may gaten for your webling does, and yet it need not be he godon for your webling dress, and yet it need not be very expensive. I do not think a bed-most with orange for its presulting tone would be pretty.

(b) D, ti.—Notestivetter has everything in the way of books; and so I would suggest that you find out one that your eiterly firmed short not possess, and give it to him for the birthiday of holiday present.

I. L. D.—If a ventur indy takes three months in which to find out whether size can accept a man or not, size cannot be very much inferenced in him. No man can compel a girl to become engaged to him.

45. L. C.—Write direct to the advertiser of the article You meuriou for information regarding it. A gentlement who goes in charged with a listy is not expected to furnish her with her contribution to the nine-box.

A. F. - Pale rise, or pale green surah sitt, will look well under your white law. As I have said a number of times, I cannot give addresses to this column, nor can I undertake to make sales for subactions.

Berrs M.—I am not a believer in indiscriminate letter writing to young men, and I would suggest to you not to correspond with a man friend without first informing your mother about it, and getting her advice.

HENGA—A girl of sixteen would wear her hair drawn saftly off her face, braided and looped in the back, she tied with a black ribbon. George Ellot was the wife of Mr. Cross, her name being Mary Ann Cross.

M. F. A.—Your list of questions is altogether too long to be answered in this column. Besides, if we goldake not, they are price questions, and we do not consider the answering of such as being quite fair.

S. E. B.—I would not advise your wearing thack to be guarded in; even if you are in deep montains, it is quite proper for you to lay it node for that time, assume a winte gown, and then resume your meaning again.

D. L. S.—It is not wise to have a great many correspondents, though there would be no impropriety in your writing to the young man, who is a dear friend of yours, even though you do not expect to marry blue.

L. E. S.—At a reception, or ten, it is proper to bid the hostose good-tyre before you seemes your wraps. If there is a very great crossd, and one is not near the hostose, it is quite proper to depart without saying good-night to her.

H. M.—All full, fluffy furs are liked, the preference, however, being given to dark ones. Fashionable card-cases are of white, scarlet or pale gray bather, with gold or silver fear de fir placed in conventional man-ner upon thems.

Mas. H. V.—Freshen up your plush cost by patting far upon it: make epaideties of fur, and put them on the shoulders, and the effect will be given of high sheeves, while all shabby edges will be concealed by the outlining with far.

F. B.—A note of thanks should be written for flowers or awards sent you, but when they are given you per-sonally verbal thanks are sufficient. If these are sent at Chrismas they do not necessitate the sending of a present to the young man. Water-The expense of a wedding should be borne by the bride's family. The groom's expenses begin with his fix to the clergyinan; be should also pay for the garriage in which he inkers the bride away from the church after the ceremony.

May—It is proper, always, to leave a card in making a formal call; indeed, it is wisest at all times. West your have brestes in warm water and white soas, in which some amounts has been thrown; then stand them on their bristles in the sampline to dry.

Manny—It is always good form to acknowledge an in-vitation; therefore, it would be gatte proper for you to write a note to the yring; man, thanking him for having invited you to the graduating exercises, and expressing your regret at your inability to be present.

ALICK M., AND OTHERES—I can give no addresses in this column. May I suggest that in writing a little through is given to the many letters that are received by me, and so pake ink will not be used, and the que-tions made as clear and as concise as possible.

INVALID—The climate of Bernauda is noted for its mildoses and beakthfeloses; but it is never wise for a deficate person to make a change of climate without consulting a physicise, and we would not arrive you be try even Bernauda without the consent of your medical man.

Dosoversea R.—Before visits are received from young men one is supposed to be out in society, and young girls are not usually presented before almotices or twenty. I should not advise the correspondence with a man who takes continually of love and doesn't mention markets.

M. N. T.—Glycteine darkens some skins: just why, it is impossible to say, except by the difference of tem-perament existing is every human being. For a very sullow skin I would suggest a course of treatment for the liver, advising you to consult with your family phy-sician. Hazez.—The word "mason," comes from French gamblers' slung. An "esco," was something that brought lack to its possessor; in time the word became "mason," from "ston escot," "mo-escot," ma-escot," Audran, in his opera "The Mason," popularized the word.

N. C. H.—"The Battle Hymn of the Republic" was written in 1861 by Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, while on a visit to the camp near Washington. It may be fined in almost any compilation of American poetry; we re-gret that we example space for its publication in the Journal.

I. J. M.—It would be wisest to announce your engagement; and in this way the friend who has been so courteous in his attentions to you will inderstand jost what alteration he may show you, and also that you are henorable enough not to allow him to expect the low which cannot be ids.

A. R. R., and Many Ormson-I have said many times, and again repeat it, that we do not publish or sell patterns. The illustrations above in the fashion department are taken from the latest models in the dresemaking world, designs of which have not yet reached the pattern houses.

A CALLER—The question of Sunday visits is one that grow be decided by each one personally; certainly, it is hatter for a young man to be spending the evening in a family where he is surrounded by everything good than for him in he hanging around better, and on the street, and meeting, perhaps, people who do him no good.

A New Subscribes—If you have consulted good physicians in regard to the condition of your skin, and they have been mable to help you. I fear that note of the simple remedies I sight suggest would do you any good. If you have not among these gone to a dector who makes a specialty of skin disease. I about advise you to do so.

C. A. W.—I would advise your sending your white kid slippers to a professional scourer's to be cleaned. Nothing will make the half light except the se-called benefing fluids, and those I cannot slivise. Women who are bisseed with pretty dark hair stoud be sub-fied, and only try to improve it by keeping it glossy and in good condition.

A SUBSCRIBER - If your hair is very only I would not advise the use of vaseline upon it. Instead, in washing it, throw a little borax in the water; this will tend to make it a little drier. Hench it with regularity, and apply some hair wash which does not routain oil and does contain quinter; a prescription could be gotten from your family physician.

Lou-Plates are not turned over when they are arranged on the table. Small castors are placed in the certuer of the table, but the large, shi-fashbaned ones usually decorate the shebened. It is perfectly proper to give your cred to whoever may come to the door when your friend is not at home, even if it should be one of the members of the family.

G. A. L. If a lady and a greaternan call teacher, it would be the place of the gentleman to ask the servant at the door if the person whom they wish to vist was at home. It is where to let some use, with whose you have just become acquainted, ask permission to call upon you, rather than have you seek him. It is in rather but haste to ask men for their photographs.

J. M. F. – At a five-of-tirck tea, measurements are not re-quired, our are factors using. Cake of any kind you many dreine, sandwicties, saileds, tea, coffee and choos-sate are quire-sefficient at an obstrate tea; at an infor-mal one, tea, with breast not better, and one kind of cake beautificient. The daintiness of service, see not the quantity served, is most thought of at such affairs.

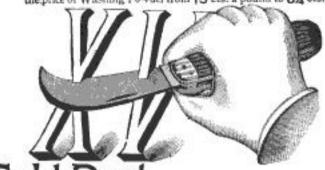

TAKE THE HINT.

WHENE'ER an anxious group is seen Around some monthly magazine Or paper that is daily whirled To every quarter of the world, And merry peals of laughter rise As this or that attracts the eyes, The smiling crowd, you may depend, Above some illustrations bend That advertise the strength and scope And purity of IVORY SOAP.

But while they smile or praise bestow And wonder whence ideas flow, The fact should still be kept in mind That people of the knowing kind Will heed the hints or lessons laid In rhymes and pictures thus displayed, And let no precious moments fly Until the IVORY SOAP they try, And prove on garments coarse and fine, The truth of every sketch and line.

COPYRIGHT 1891, BY THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO.

We Cut Down
the price of Washing Powder from 15 cts. a pound to 6½ cts. a pound

Gold Dust

Washing Powder

Has Done It. The daily cleaning and weekly washing can be BETTER done by Gold Dust Washing Powder than with ANY Sam of the der than with ANY Soap or other Washing Powder, and at less than One Half the Cost. Your grocer will sell you a package-4 pounds-for 25 cents.

N. K. FAIRBANK & CO., Sole Manufacturers, CHICAGO, ST. LOUIS, NEW YORK, PHILADELPHIA, BOSTON, BALTIMORE, NEW ORLEANS, SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND, ME., PORTLAND, ORE., PITTSBURGH AND MILWAUKEE.

YOUR WIFE'S TEMPER

and your own pears of mind will be halped if you buy a "Harimum" sire door may. It keeps the man obtains and cases the work indexes. We have under overhalf a tuition mate in our anxiety to be considered printic benefitsions, tokalague and Testimonials malled free.

**HARTMAN****

HARTMAN MFG. CO., works, Beaver Falls, Pa.

Breaches: Bit Churchers Street, New York; 308 State. Street, Chicago; 51 and M South Fernyth Street, Atlanta, Ga. Our Mate have brace tag attached atempted "Hariman.

DELICIOUS DESSERTS INSTANTLY.

Dissolve this package of in a pint of hot water, pour into a mould, and when cool you will have a quart of DELICIOUS JELLY.

IMPERIAL CREAM DESSERT. BELICATE

Made by adding a pint of boiling milk to OLEYOP: contents of this can.

These are two TABLE DELICACIES made quickly and without trouble. If you fall to find either with your grocer, send 150. (to pay postage) for full-sized package of JELLY or CREAM DESSERT. Various Flavors.

E. C. RICH CO., LTD. 160 & 162 FRANKLIN ST., NEW YORK.

Lovely Flowers. $2.00 worth on trial, 25c.
Bell's German Asters, 10 choice seria mai Draceau Foliage
Beet, dracens-like leave, i Golden Wave Calliagais, effective
2 popular, Crazz's Gladiolus Chanas, large flower, very choice Parple Ring Charkin, inferessly dvalle; Double in Dish Cloth Gentle drawn, for bounds Apprilar: Crazy's Gindiolus Casanas, are formanis, effective Parple Ring Charkin, intensely double; Double Vielet Bush Parple Ring Charkin, intensely double; Double Vielet Bush Morning Gibery, show; Bish Clast Gourd, for bornets and dish double; Crimson Belle Pink, show; Bridesmudd Godetin, beautini satin surface; Primrose CoPd Sanflower, aron; Palmande Philax, are uniture; Tall Pyramid Mignesette, choic; Zallu King, Silesee, me. One package Seed of each show lovely flowers milled with Catalogue for 25 Cts.

Presh and Pure | Yosomite Hammoth Wax |

Yosomite Hammoth Wax |

Yosomite Hammoth Wax |

Golden Self-Blinscholing Clebery, bost, blanches itself; Early Haline Sweet Corn, large, or as early; Lentz's Turnip Beet, but entre early; Bell's Surehead Cabbage, all head, sure sardy; Gilden Self-Blinscholing Clebery, bost, blanches itself; Early Haline Sweet Corn, large, or as early produces it to lit too since; Bell's Rapid White Plokling Onlon, extre early; Bell's Sweets and specialistics; Bell's Worfel's Pair Rutta Banga, the bost. One package Seed of each show Vegatables in box, with Catalogue, only 25 Cts. Eath shows Collections mailed in box, with 2 Tuberroses and a package of the New Hammoth Pansion Flower, only 50 cts. Our beautiful Catalogue (oath inter) in a package of the New Hammoth Pansion Flower, only 50 cts. Our beautiful Catalogue (oath inter) in a package on the Superlor Seeds to new constrains. Address GUITAR SELF-TAUGHT without notes with Howe's Charts. 10c, per set (24). A.O.Howe, 70 State St., Chacago, Cir. free

ASOAP
FREE The Tollet Beguisite make beauting the possible progress of the progress of the possible po

Moustaches, and Paper Scenery. New Catalogues, containing many novelties, full description and prices and FREE | FEEE] T. H. FRENCH, 28 West 23d St., N. Y.

LADY Agents to sell new and beautiful goods.
Address Mrs. N. R. LETTLE, Chicago, I il

500 SCRAP

NEW CARDS for the street of Landson Santia store

30 NEW 200 2c. D CUBLING JELLY-DR. AM-mett's French Jelly keeps hair in HAIR mett's French Jeny seeps mail, 10c, mett's French Jeny seeps mail, 10c, middle on DRUG CO., NY city

TOUR NAME OR SUPPLY OF THE PARTY OF THE PART

CARDS

USE Dr. X. Stone's BRONCHIAL WAFERS, the great Throst & Larg Remedy. He per box. Bruggists. Sample Re. Stone Medicine Co., Chicago, Ili. CARDS MARKET MARKET

PLAYS Dialogues, Speakers, for School, Chib and Parlor, Catalogue free, T. S. SENISEN, Publisher, Chicago.

WRINKLES | With Almost Not Chron. You can put-tonly not then amay, their it particular, in MANY IS NOTED, 17 (1970 weeking to The Chronic Chinage, Ed. Agents weeking to The Chronic Chinage, Ed. Agents weeking

CARDS Interpretation of the party of

ROSE FLOWER SEEDS WILL BEEDS WILL BEED Flower, 10c. June pages, PA

★FREE! ROLLER ORGAN.★ Plays 300 Tilles If you want one, cut this notice out and send to us at once.

BATES ORGAN CO., 72 PEAN. STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

WE TEACH HOW, You make $75.00 to $150.00 8. A. RUSS CO., South Bend, Ind.

BIRD The secret of the Cenary Breeders of the Harts
MANNA perents the string of Cage Hirds,
MANNA perents this allessate and hoops them
MAKES to good outsities. It makes Casarias MAKES try swill fee It oests. Sold by all drugCANARIES girds groons and bird dealers.
WARBLE. Third Street, Philladdighthia, Pa.
WARBLE. Third Street, Philladdighthia, Pa.

per Flawers, how to make, samples of paper and price-list of material, No. Ladles' Art Co., Hes 194F. St. Louis, Sa.

EAGLE PRINTING OUTFIT 15: Three alghabete of type, type laider, berile in lak pad and twomers; put up in cost box wit those for use. EAGLE SUPPLY OL, New H

Including Sample Books, New section, February Street, Maghaines, Lei-dern, Papers, etc., each will pusse address bester period on each wrapper. You will receive peeding and harden mail of any one at your time. We will a canoniser your address before residing and harden ment on anon-best your address for twitter meeties to our Generaleed Direct story, that goes whething daily in Kanychatterrys and Publishers all blue world; and 1800 of your buildings.

port of the wind; the said of the bound of the port of

BARRY'S TRICOPHEROUS

An elegant dressing exquisitely perfumed, removes all impurities from the scalp, prevents baldness and gray hair, and causes the hair to grow Thick, Soft and Beautiful Infallible for curing cruptions, diseases of the skin, glandand muscles, and quickly bealing cuts, burns, bruises, sprains, &c. All Druggists or by Mall, 50 cts.
BARCLAY & Co., 44 Stone St., New York. ESTABLISHED (80).

HAIR SKÎN. BIGGEST GLORY and PROFIT AWAIT YOU. FOR WE WILL PAL Heaviest Single Fruits

TO MATO

so valuable that we paid $250 last year for the NAME alone when sold under the Na. "400."

This year we think more of it than ever and to aid in making its merits still wider known we have doubled the amount of the money prize.

NOW THEN FOR 1892 WE OFFER $500.00

EVERY GARDEN IN THE LAND

because the essential features of EARLINESS, SIZE, WEIGHT, COLOR, SOLIDITY and QUALITY, that make the ideal Torrate, this Ponderota variety peasesses in the superlative degree. Delicate persons will always prefer it because it is nearly seedless.

Price per Packet, 20 cts.; 6 Pkts., $1; 12 Pkts., $1.75; 25 Pkts., $3. DON'T FORGET, that with every order for a packet or more we will for the GARDEN, (which alone costs us as cents) provided you will state where you saw this advertisement. Our Catalogue of 150 pages is bound in illuminated covers, and is the largest ever issued. It is replete with many engravings and colored plates of all that is new and desirable in SEEDS and PLANTS.

ER HENDERSON & CO

35 & 37 Cortlandt Street, NEW YORK.

A SAMPLE CAKE and 120 mage Book on Dermatology and Beauty, Illustrated; on Skin, Scalp, Nervous and Blood Diseases and their frealment, sent scaled on receipt of 10c, also Distigurements like Birth Marks, Moies, Warts, India Ink and Powder Marks, Sears, Pittings, Budmens of Nose, Superfisons Hair, Pimples, etc., removed.

JOHN B. WOODSCHY, REENATOLOGICAL INSTITUTE, 1225 West 42d Street, Kew York City.

Cassultation from at office or by letter. Mustion this Magnetis.

ACENTS WANTED. The Excelsion

Carpet Stretcher and Tack Hammer Combined. Can be used by anyone. NOW is the time to make big memey. Sent Postpald for 65 cents. Postage stamps taken. Circulars free.

RICHARD W. MONTROSS, Callen, Mich.

ADIES GENTLEMEN Carrotte BLUSH OF ROSES

farmous DLUGH UT NUGGES for your complexion. It has never failed to cure every form of skin dissace. It will remove that shiny look, whiten your face just a trifle, and will give you a LOVELY COMPLEXION. Bold everywhere. Take no substitutes. There is sume. To cents per bottle by mail. Address. MISS FLORA A. JONES, SOUTH BEND, IND.

Curling Fluid Keeps the halrin our fordays. No Odor or Seelimest. Harsaless. Gives vigor and beauty to halr, increases its growth. A telest necessity. At drugstate or son prepaid 5 de. LABY AGENTS wanted. DENISON CHEMICAL CO., 80(C) LaSaile St., Chicago.

A DAY SURE. S2.15 camples Free-Horse owners buy I to 6, 26 other specialcles-E. E. BKEWSTER, Helly, Mich.

NO OTHER

LEAVES A DELICATE AND LASTING ODOR.

For eals by all Drug and Fancy Goods Dealors or if unable to procure this wonderful some send 256c in stamps and receive a cake by return mail.

JAS. S. KIRK & CO., Chicago. SPECIAL-Shandon Bells Waltz (the popular lociety Waltz) sent PREE to anyone sending us loce wrappers of Shandon Rells Scan.

A ball that denoes freely in mid-air without airings or wires. A barrel of fan and anymeroes a scientific pratice, a healthy by and everyasting manuacture of the control o

NO BAD FATS, SPIRIT OR SUGAR.

Scaps dry, roughen and weaken the Skin, and make it blotchy, dull and muddy, the Hair wiry, white and weak, and the Nails striated and brittle, from the following causes:

a and Potash left in them.

Deleterious scents and colors.

4.—Coccanut Oil (makes alkaline scaps "bite").

S.—Glycerine, Rosin, Sugar, and Methylated Spirits (as in transparent scaps). Soda and Potash left in them.
 Deleterious scents and colors.

(A)-VINOLIA SOAP contains unchangeable cream, instead of soda and potash, and is guaran-

(A)—VINOLIA SOAP contains unchangeable cream, theseast of some and pocase, and is guaranteed pure: therefore, it does not dry the skin.

(B)—VINOLIA SOAP is not colored, polithed, whiteued, made transparent with chemicals, or in any way "doctored up it': so it is free from extraneous irritating matter.

(C)—VINOLIA SOAP yields a creamy, soothing lather, which cleanses without shriveling the skin, hair, or nails. It is the Soap prescribed by all leading consultants abroad, hair, or nails. It is the Soap prescribed by all leading consultants abroad, and the totlet, nursecy and bath. Does not extract natural oil from the skin.

UNRIVALLED LONDON MEDICAL JOURNAL REPORTS:

Fig. The British Medical Journal reports: "Of unquestionable excellence and much in favor with the profession. A well-manufactured soap, unadolectated with injurious ingredients."

The Lancet reports: "No free alkall, a distinct excess of free fat, odor delicate, and an article of excellent quality."

##The Hospital Gazette reports: "We can confidently assert that for tollet purposes we have never seen 'Vinola' Soap surpassed."

sect. Vinotal Scap surpasses.

59"The Chemist and Druggist reports: "'Vinolia' Scap is absolutely free from uncombined sikali.
It is an ideal scap, and the skin has a velvety feeling after washing with it."

"Vinolia" Soap, Balsamic (Medical), as cents; Otto Toilet, 35 cents, "d Vestal, 85 cents.
"Vinolia" (a plastic emollient cream for the Skin), 30 cents per box.
"Vinolia" Sanitary Rose Powder (scothing, soluble, and safe), 30 cent, "r box.

BLONDEAU ET CIE., 73 & 75 Watts St., New York. * Miniature Samples of Soaps, Cream, Powder and Dentifrice forwarded on receipt of Ten Cents.

HOW is Chicago growing?-by location of new factories.

WHERE are factories locating?-in her manufacturing suburbs.

WHICH suburb affords them best facilities?-Griffith, having two fuel oil pipes and four railroads, including a Belt Line which connects with twenty-two more roads as shown by the map.

WHAT is the history of investments in Chicago's factory suburbs?-

uniformly profitable, returning five and ten fold in a few years.

WHY will an investment in Griffith lots pay?-because it can now be had on the ground floor and values are constantly advancing by location of new factories.

HOW MUCH are lots in Griffith?residence lots $120 upward; business lots $300 upward, on monthly payments of $4 to $12 if desired.

Write to-day for full particulars of lots offered. SENT FREE. We are only waiting for your address. Here's ours: JAY DWIGGINS & COMPANY, 142 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

Is This Reasonable?

If regular physicians succeeded in curing the severer forms of skin diseases, there would be no use for the CUTICURA REMEDIES, and therefore no sale;

Because nine patients out of ten, cured of torturing and disfiguring skin and scalp diseases by the Cuticura Remedies, proved to have been under an average of at least two physicians before taking up the CUTICURAS.

We do not object to this state of things. Why should the doctors?

They have the patient first. We are content to take the case after them.

The only thing that occasions wonder is that the patient should go around instead of across lots. The road is so plain and straight that a child may follow it.

First. Send for our book, "Cause and Cure of Skin Diseases," which will be mailed free to any address.

Second. Buy a cake of Cuticura Soap, price 25 cents. This can't hurt you, financially or physically.

Third. If the SOAP proves the most effective skin purifier and beautifier you have ever used, as well as the purest and sweetest of toilet and nursery soaps, you may venture to buy a box of CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, price, 50 cents.

Fourth. If the great Skin Cure should afford immediate and grateful relief in the most distressing of itching and burning skin and scalp diseases, and prove more than satisfactory in every respect, Fifth. You may safely proceed to buy the CUTICURA Resolvent, the new blood purifier and greatest of humor remedies, price, $1.00, and thus complete the cure.

Is not the foregoing reasonable?

And is not the expense of testing our proposition trifling, compared with medical attendance and the cost of the usual number and variety of prescriptions?

Everything about the CUTICURA REMEDIES invites confidence. They are as perfect as our present knowledge of materia medica and therapeutics can make them. Neither time, talent nor money is spared in their preparation. They are absolutely pure and agreeable to the most delicate and sensitive, and appeal to the intelligent and refined everywhere. They are suitable to all ages, and may be used from infancy to age, from pimples to scrofula, with the utmost satisfaction.

It is gratifying to note that the CUTICURA REMEDIES have won the confidence and esteem of the cultivated and refined in every community; and while used by people in every walk of life, the higher the consumers rank in intelligence the greater the appreciation of these great skin cures, blood purifiers, and humor remedies.

Sale greater than the combined sales of all other blood and skin remedies.

Sold throughout the world.

POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CORPORATION, BOSTON.

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR

PHILADELPHIA, MARCH, 1892

TEN CENTS A COPY

幾 (ontents 樂

CHANGE OF

March-Poem	00.
A Royal Recluse	1
다리 보이 시민들은 프라이어 전시에 들어 없어 보면서 하는 전에 되었다면서 보다	2
Her Infinite Variety-Poem Harry Romaine	3
With Pertrait	3
The Lost Star-Poem	3
With Ported	3 4
Artistic Ideas in Ribbon Embroidery . Maude Haywood	5
Are Our Girls too Independent? Mrs. Frank Leslie	6
A Brief Prelude-First Part Margaret Butler Snow .	7
	9

At Home with the Editor	Editor 10
From a New Inkstand
The King's Daughters	aret Bottome 12
Under My Study Lamp
Side Talks with Girls
Side Talks with Boys Foster	Coates 15
In Literary Circles
Art for Art Workers
Mother's Corner	beth Robinson Scovil 18
Artistic Needlework
Hints on Home Dressmaking Emm	a M. Hooper 20
Some Fashionable Visiting Toilettes . )
Small Belongings of Dress /sabci	A. Mallon 21-23
Things for the Toilet and Toilette
Just Among Ourselves	Lyman Abbott 24
Everything About the House Maria
All About Flowers	E. Rexford 26-29
Questions and Answers	32

MARCH

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Like some reformer, who with mien austere,
Neglected dress and loud insistent tones,
More rasping than the wrongs which she bemoans,
Walks through the land and wearies all who hear,
While yet we know the need of such reform;
So comes unlovely March, with wind and storm,
To break the spell of winter, and set free
The prisoned brooks and crocus beds oppressed.
Severe of face, gaunt-armed, and wildly dressed,
She is not fair nor beautiful to see.
But merry April and sweet smiling May Come not till March has first prepared the way.

· (VRTIS · PUBLISHING · (OMPANY · PHILADELPHIA

This historic American house now wish to call the attention of those intending to purchase, or of those interested in a piano, to the latest product from their factory. Sixty-nine years of experience and an unquestioned reputation for honest and durable work make these pianos of the highest rank.

Every piano guaranteed for five years. Style "K" (upright) and Style "S" (Grand) especially are attracting world-wide notice from musical people.

Representatives of Chickering & Sons are to be found in almost every city, but communications addressed to the Company at Boston will receive prompt attention from the Company or its representatives.

We ask you to write us before buying.

CHICKERING & SONS,

791 Tremont St., Boston, Mass.

T. H. FRENCH, 28 West 23d St., N. Y.

MISS BEACH'S Curling Fluid

0,000 Ladies have Endersed It At draggists or propald 50c. DENISON CHEMICAL CO.,

FOR WEAK LUNGS

Winchester's Hypophosphite of Lime & Soda.

For Chronic Bronchitis, Nervous Prostration.

Dyspopsia of Indigestion, Loss of Vigor and Appetite and diseases arising from Poverty of the Blood, Winchester's Hypophosphite is a specific, being unquited as a Vitahining Toulc, Brain, Nerve and Blood Pood. SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

WINCHESTER & CO., Chemists,

CHAS. RAISER, Mir., 62-64 Clybourn Ave., Chicago. III $10 to $20

A VISIT TO ATLANTIC

City, New Jersey, the far-famed health and pleasure resort, is either delight or disgust, charm or chill, blessedness or blues—it depends on where you stay.

You'll find a new joy in a spring civit—if you choose a house where you can enjoy even a cold, rainy day—where heated rooms, open grate fires, het or cold sea-water baths in the house, cold, rainy day—where heated rooms, open grate fires, het or cold sea-water baths in the house, make you independent of weather. In THE CHALPONTE invalids and pleasure-sockers are secure of comfort in storm or sunshine. A beautiful booklet, with illustrations, will show you what the house is like. Bent free. Address

THE CHALFONTE, Atlantic City, New Jersey.

Interesting to Ladies.

The beauty of woman is in the sense of her clothes. It is true that clothes do not make the woman, yet they help the appearance of the woman. Sensible dressing is always artistic and throws into relief the modest beauty of the figure. The fashionably modeled corset cannot make the figure fashionable unless the figure be naturally so modeled.

The corset may cover ill shape beneath, and give apparent graceful curves and lines, but a pinched-up waist and an artificial bust are neither natural nor artistic, and the woman who so attempts to build outside appearance is reckoned for what she is, frequently for worse than she is. She does not even deceive herself. The Equipoise

No other women for fourteen years. corset substitute has ever given such universal satisfaction. It is recommended by sensible women everywhere and by the leading physicians at home and abroad. It fully embodies the true bygienic principle of support from the shoulders. The perfect modeling and careful adjustment of each part with relation to the others so equally distributes the strain and pull of the garments attached that their weight is hardly perceptible. The bone pockets are so constructed that the bones can be removed without ripping. The readymade Equipoise Waist fits the wearer as though especially made to her measure.

The materials used in its construction are of thebest procurable quality. The Equipoise Waist is guaranteed to wear twice as long as any other waist or corset, irrespective of cost.

Made by George Frost Co., 31 Bedford Street, Boston, Mass.

Send Stamp for a copy of our finely illustrated book on sensible dressing, which contains a list

Waist has been worn by intelligent | of merchants who sell the Equipoise

If they are not sold in your city or town you can order from us by mail without extra expense.

GEO. FROST COMPANY, Boston, Mass.

WOODBURY'S FACIAL SOAP FOR THE SKIN, SCALP AND COMPLEXION.

Equipoise Waist.

FACTS, NOT FICTION, CONVINCE.

these Pacts upon which Woodbury's Pactal Bosp is Rec Whitening, and Preserving the Complexion:

and Preserving the Complexion:

1. It is unexcelled as a tollet soap for all bathing purposes, thorough in its action as a cionaser and bauntifier of the skin, caring all pimples and eruptions.

2. Factal Scap replaces committee, powders and lettors, and counteracts their injurious effects. Money and skin saved by its use.

3. It removes excessive oil from the skin, rendering it soft, smooth and velvety to the touch.

4. It is expectally recommended for physicians use, and when once used will prove its claims. Receipt of ingredients furnished to physicians.

5. It is expectally recommended for physicians use, and when once used will prove its claims. Receipt of ingredients furnished to physicians.

6. It is invaluate for shaving, preventing disease, allaying tritialien, clearasing and heating in its nature. A sweet, pure and clean skin guaranticed after its use.

7. It is tought for washing the Hair and Scalp, and acts like at touch, preventing dundruff, toter and exempt, gives to the lair a fresh, glossy appearance, prevents its falling, removes excessive oil, and makes the hair soft, light and pleasio.

2. Hackbeards do not linger after their first introduction to this, their enemy. All old discolored secretions depart, the skin presents a fine, smooth, glowing appearance, that is soon apparent; beauty and health of these is the result.

9. Where soft coal is burned in the only scop that will successfully that the dirt-index air and keep your beauty and a target for jest and like. For removing the makeoup of actresses it is excellent. It dis-full. For removing the makeup of actresses it is excellent. It dissolves quickly and thoroughly all paints, powders, and fottees of all kinds.

Illb. For excessive perspiration of say part of the body this soap accomplishes wonders, removing all odors and perspiration.

Silves quickly and increasing an passes, powers, and story this soap accomplishes wonders, removing all odors and perspiration.

Bith. Prepared by a dermatologist of twenty years' practice in trenting skin and scalp diseases.

Bith. Prepared by a dermatologist of twenty years' practice in trenting skin and scalp diseases.

For eals by all Druggista, or sent by Mail, 50 cents.

A sample cake of scap and 193-page Book on Dermatology and Beauty, fillustrated, on Ekin, A sample cake of scap and 193-page Book on Dermatology and Beauty, fillustrated, on Ekin, Sealp, Nervous and Blood Diseases, also Disaggreements like Birth Marks, Moles, Warts, India like Sealp, Nervous and Blood Diseases, also Disaggreements like Birth Marks, Moles, Warts, India like and Powder Marks, Sears, Pittings, Red Nose, Cancer, Superfluous Bair, Aone and all Ekin and Scalp imperfections and their treatment, sent scaled for 10 cents.

JOHN H. WOODBURY, Dermatological Institute, 125 West 42d Street, New York City.

Worms Fruit and Leaf Riight of Apples, Pears, Cherries, EXCELSION SPRAYING Grape and Potato Ros, Plan Currents prevented by using EXCELSION SUPERITS. PERFECT FRUIT ALWAYS SELLS AT GOOD PRICES. Catalogue showing all injurious insects to Fruits mailed from Large stock of Fruit Treess, Vincean Sing all injurious insects to Fruits mailed from Large stock of Fruit Treess, Vincean Berry Plants at Bottom Prices. Address WM. NTAILLA Quincy, Illa.

GEO. P. BENT, MANUFACTURES, CHICAGO, U. S. A.

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

Vol. IX, No. 4

PHILADELPHIA, MARCH, 1892

EUGENIE, EMPRESS OF FRANCE

seems indeed the eleventh hour with Eugenie. The ex-Empress of France is passing her last days with only sorrow and disappoint The row and disappointment for companious. The darkness of midnight is closing about her. Once the best loved in France, she is now, alas! almost despised. Once a woman of matchless beauty, whose face and form were the talk of Europe, she is now only a shadow of her former self; her face wrinkled, the lustre of her eyes washed away with many tears. Her form, bent with age and racked with rheumatism, is supported by two stout canes which she always carries to she always carries to lean upon. She is so helpless from rheumatism as almost to give the impression that she has paralytic tendencies.

Once the best dressed woman in the world, whose rich costumes, rure laces and superb envy of queens and princesses, she is, to-day, sombreness itself in black robes, Her empire passed away like the sigh-ing of a sum mer wind. Husband and son have entered into the land of son have entered into the land of shadows. Friends have become enemies. The French people call her "the latal woman," instead of Empress. She is an exile, a woman without home or country. The star of hope has been blotted from he horizon.

he" horizon
I have seen Eugenie many times of-late, in Loudon, in Paris, in Venice, and she has always reminded me of some Lady of Vicissitudes. She travels about Europe seeking rest and peace, two joys unknown to her. Instead of wearing the crown of France she wears that other crown that poets have told of—"Sorrow's crown of sorrows," the memory of harming things.

"Sorrow's crown of sorrows, the includes of happier things.

My last glimpee of her was thus, and it is the story of that I tell here. I had gone from London to Farnborough Hants last summer, to visit her mansion, and see the place where the exiled Emperor and the ill-fated Prince Importal are sheeting. Excuberough is one of exiled Emperor and the ill-faled Prince Imperial are sleeping. Farmborough is one of the lovellest spots in rural England. It is about an hour's journey from London, and within a mile or two of Abdershot and Sandhurst. The train from London speeds by thriving towns, and into a rich country where the grass is like an emerald curpet.

Farmborough station is a small place. It nestles in a valley. A few carriages are at the depot to take visitors about the place; but one does not need a carriage, for you spire that rises boldly above the trees on the hilltop points the way to St. Michael's Church, where the exiles rest in a magnificent mausoleum.

the exiles rest in a magnificent mausoleum. Up the hill one goes, and over a dusty road, until an old-fashioned inn is reached. A until an old-fashioned inn is reached. A farmer's boy sits on a fence whitting a stick. A smart phaeton, driven by a young girl, dashes by. A hostler is leading a neighing pony by the head. Chickens, ducks and geese, and a small dog, are a happy family in the road in front of the tavers. All this and more I see as I pass along to the gateway in the hedge fence, the entrance to the church. There is a leader at the mate and a smalling the hedge fence, the entrance to the church. There is a lodge at the gate, and a smilling Scotch lassie, in a clean frock, gives me a gentle curtsey as she leads the way up the gravel walk, through rows of majestic yew trees, to the top of the hill, and I come into full view of the church, and also the house where live the white robed and white-capped monks who guard the place. It is a pretty spot. No one could wish for a lovelier place to be buried in. Green grass, beds of rich and fragrant flowers, neatly kept walks, all tell of loving hands that never tire in devotion to the memory of the dead. The church stands on the crest of a hill from which a superb view of the surdead. The children stands on the cress of a hill from which a superb view of the sur-rounding country may be had. It is of white stone, and so clean does it look that one is tempted to believe that it is scrubbed daily. Across the road, hidden almost from view, is the home of the ex-Empress. Like the church, it is built on the elevation of a hill, and En-genie can see from her windows the spot where genic can see from her windows the spot where her dear ones rest.

While I am looking and wondering, my rosy-cheeked Scotch maid has disappeared, and in a moment returns with a stout monk, who respectfully bows, and bids me follow. He does not ask my business, for he has many visitors. I follow him down a small flight of stone steps to the rear of the church. Ivy and rich wisteria have twined themselves lovingly together, and are gently creeping up the sides of the sacred edifica. All around the church have been planted flowers; but always and everywhere I see shy violets rearing their heads. They are Eugenie's favorite flower, and the monks have planted them there for her sake. The door leading to the mausoleum swings have a true of forms.

mausoleum swings back at a touch from the monk, and we are soon standing on a tiled floor that is There are a few chairs, and a hand-some altar, where the monks say mass, and where the only other person ever present on such oc-casions is the ex-Empress. It is, in fact, a private chapel. To the right of the altar is the granite alter is the granus sarcophagus con-taining the remains of the Emperor. It is a massive affair, weighing a good many tons, present-ed, as the brass inscription plate on it tells, "as a mark of affectionate sympa-thy by Victoria R." There is one other plate containing the words, "Napoleon HI R. I. P." There are floral tokens near. The most noticeable is an artificial wreath of immortelles, tied with an artificial wreath of immorrances, that with tri-colored ribbons, laid there by Eugenie. There is also an artificial wreath of ivy sent by Queen Victoria. It is tied with a long white satin bow, and bears the Queen's name in her own bold hand. The remains of the Prince rest on the left of the altar, also in a Prince rest on the left of the altar, also in a huge granite sarcophagus, and on it have been heaped many floral tributes. There is a bunch of palms from Princess Beatrice, an ivy wreath from Lady Florence Dixie, a souvenir wreath that came from Zululand, and also a wreath from the Queen, bearing the words again in her own handwriting, "Homage and affection. Victoria."

But more interesting than any of these are the handfuls of loose violets and forget-me-nots that are scattered on both tombs.

violets and forget-me-nois that are scattered on both tombe. "They were placed there by the Empress yesterday." The monk says; and as I eye them wistfully be takes a few, makes a tiny bou-quet and hands it to me for a

"They were picked by her own hands," he adds, "but they will hands," be adds, "but they will not be missed, for she will be here very soon with more. She comes every day to weep and pray."

At the foot of each tomb is placed a cushioned chair, and in these the Empress sits alternately, for a time, alone with her sorrow. In a niche just back of the prince's tomb is the place where the exEmpress will rest when her troubles are over.

are over. You must be gone now," says the monk, after I have walked about for some time. "The Em-press will soon be here. No one is allowed in this place when she

So we go out where the birds are singing and there is no thought of death. Three monks are at work in the flower beds, and two others are carrying away some old sticks and fallen leaves to the woods near by, so tidy are they in Farnborough.

As I looked from the church to the house I saw the dark robed figure of Eugenie, picking her way along, leaning heavily upon her canes. A private path lends from the house to the church, and to make it more convenient, a small footbridge has been constructed over the railway track. Slowly, and oh! so painfully, she mounted the steps and crossed into the churchyard. She was alone. Her eyes were fixed upon the ground. One of the monks harried to meet her, and received from her hands a bunch of fresh violets. The ex-Empress greeted him cordially. Following at a respectful distance, he left her at the door of the tomb. I heard the key turned by the hand of the ex-Empress, the door swung open, and in a moment Eugenie was with her dead to weep and pray. I wondered what memories passed before her as she sat alone in the darkness of that chamber of death. What ghosts of the past were passing in shadowy array! What events, train by train, was she reviewing? What brilliant trumph or humiliating defeat was she recalling? If she was merely looking through the mist of years into her past life, what a panorame was there! merely looking through the mist of years into her past life, what a panorama was there! The life of no woman, and perhaps no man, not even excepting Bismarck, presents anything like it. I thought of at least one scene that might stand out in her mental vision in startling contrast startling contrast with her present sorrowful condition.

sorrowful condition.

It is in Paris.
France is a republic, after a sort. The people have swept the Orleanists from power. At the Tuilleries there is a grand ball in progress, and the gayest of all gay Paris is there. In the throng is a young woman, scarcely more than a girl, who is easily the belle of the occasion. Graceful and lithesome, rivacious and witty, she casion. Graceful and lithesome, vivacious and witty, she outshines the blasé beauties of the ball-room, as the electric light does the farthing dip. They sneer at her, and say ugly things, but the men throng about her, each vicing for her favor. Among them is one dark of brow, and saturnine of countenance. They call him Louis Napoleon. He has been an exile from France, an adventurer in the United States, and strange stories are told of his career in that country. He is now in politics, is an advocate of popular rights, and all that, and the rising hope of French radicals—save the mark. He, too, is fascinated by this young girl, so much so that he seeks the honor of an introduction, and a waltz with the fair lady.

"I do not much care to dance with a Bonaparte who is not an Emperor," the capricious beauty replies.

parte who is not an Emperor," the capricious beauty replies.

Does Eugenie recall this scene, and that remark, and what came of it? Who shall say? Or the scene may change and other things pass before her strained vision. The coup of cost has been accomplished. The drenming adventurer, Louis Napoleon, has shown his colors, and they have won. He is the Emperor now, and no longer the friend of the French radicals. And the girl who snubbed him at the ball not so long before is his Empress. The union has been sealed with the seal of Peter, the fisherman, and Eugenie is the mistress of the gayest court of all Europe. She is not popular with her sex, and she knows it; but she has power, and she knows that too, and uses it. Napoleon III is her slave. In the Tuilleries, at Foutainebleau, at Versilles, the vain capricious beauty reigns without a rival. She has petty kings and princes of well-nigh bankrupt kingsloms at her beck and nod. France is rich and powerful. Germany has yet to become an empire. Austria is in a troublous condition. Pius IX is Pope, but all Italy seems bent on stripping him of his power. Is Eugenia satisfied with her position and power? Not she! she is an Empress of France too. Her dresses and jewels are the wonder of Europe. She is young and beautiful and a mother. As she drives through Paris, the people grow wild in their exhibitions of affection for her. But her ambition is not satisfied; she has studied the career of the great Napoleon, and she is ever filling the dull mind of her husband with dreams of conquests even greater than those of his conquests even greater than those of his mighty predecessor.

It may be that Engenie thinks of her ambitions and what came of them; what came of them; she may remember one day that was dark, indeed, for her. Sedan had been fought and won. Paris had passed into German hands; more than this, a German emperor had been crowned in Versailcrowned in Versailles. The second empire was a thing of the past, and she and her husband were in exile, pensioners on the clearity of the Queen of England. And then the weary days
while the Emperor, all his dreams shattered, gloomy and all his dreams shattered, gloomy and morose, fretted his life out and she was left alone with her son, for whom she had, however, high the news came that her hope and her pride lay dead in Africa.

hopes. And then that other bitter day when the news came that her hope and her pride lay dead in Africa.

With such sorrows passing before her is it any wonder that she is deaf to the songs of the birds and the laughter?

The interior of the church, above the tomb, is very attractive. It is a bright and cheerful place. The smulght comes in from the big windows, and lights up every nook and corner. The altar is very beautiful. A handsome organ stands on the left, and on Sundays a willage choir of six young girls furnishes the music. The service is entirely in French, and is conducted by the monks, who are arranged in gorgeous robes, trimmed with rare laces, furnished by Eugenie. There is seating capacity for about two hundred persons. The ex-Empress is always present at the service on Sunday morning when she is in Farnborough. A chair has been provided for her to the left of the altar; and there she sits, with her face in her handkerchief, all through the service. Visitors to the church come from all parts of the surrounding country. Frequently Queen Victoria and Princess Beatrice are of the the surrounding country. Frequently Queen Victoria and Princess Beatrice are of the number, for they can easily drive over from Windsor. After the service, the people all wait to see Eugenie as she leaves. Often she walks about the grounds, chatting with some of the people she knows, particularly the children of the village, of whom she is very fond. It is no unusual thing for her to bend down and stroke the heads of the little ones, or kiss them on their foreheads.

EUGENIE'S PRESENT HOME AT FARNBOROUGH

I loitered around the grounds for onite an little ones, or kiss them on their forcheads.

I lottered around the grounds for quite an hour, and then Eugenie reappeared. I had an excellent opportunity to get a good look at her as she slowly moved about. When she straightened her form she scenned to be tall. Her figure is quite full; her waist has lost its graceful curved lines; her hair is silvery gray; her cheeks are wrinkled, and there is no longer beauty in the face that all the world at one time was willing to conceie was the freshest, the fairest and the loveliest of all faces. Her black cashmere cloak, trimmed faces. Her black cashmere clock, trimmed with crape, her widow's bonnet with its long with crape, her widow's bounet with its long veil falling over her shoulders, and her black gloves, made her a striking figure as she walked in the sunshine. Her face was ashy pale, and never a smile passed over it. As she passed me, she looked up into my face, and bowed with just an approach of a smile on the sud face. It was a strange contrast to those other faces that Winterhalter has placed on canvas—a young woman, with a mass of golden hair, shoulders that gleamed like polished marble, and eyes of marvelous beauty and bewitching expression—Eugenie in her prime. It was all so strange, and recalled to me Burke's lines, "What shadows we are, and what shadows we pursue!" Leaving her, I walked over to her mansion, Farnborough hall, a ross the railroad track.

It is no flinsy, inconsistent structure, but a substantial and admirable specimen of early English, the lower part of rod brick, with dressings and mullioned windows of stone, and the upper also of brick, but rendered over fine, and besides the ordinary trees, there are some specimens of very rare conifers. There should be plenty of game, and as for fishing, there are ornamental lakes with wooded islands, boat-house and a fishing cottage or summer-house with a fire-place, so that in winter it will come in well for skating parties. A kitchen garden covers three acres, and there are green-houses, vineries, peach, camellin, cucumber and melon houses, and finally come a couple of three-stall stables with six loose boxes, all most complete and spacious, as well as the usual harness-room, coach-houses, a continue for the coacheman and had coups for as the usual harness-room, coach-houses, a cottage for the coachman and bed-rooms for the grooms. There are, in all, nine cottages on the estate, including one for the bailiff, adjoining a very extensive range of farm build-ings, with the neighboring gasometer and gas and boiler-houses. Finally, there is a farm, which is let.

which is let.

It is in such a home as this that Eugenie lives and mourns. Her days are long and tedious. She is an early riser—a victim to insomnia, and sometimes she never closes her eyes in sleep for three nights. She has two tried women friends who are with her, take care of the house, and do what they can to make cheerful her days. A force of ten servants completes her household. Brakfast is served early, and after this meal there are letters to be read and answered, newspapers from London and France, and, perhaps, a visit to be made to some one in the village who is ill. Then, before luncheon, comes the daily visit Then, before luncheon, comes the daily visit to the mausoleum, and after this luncheon to the mansoleum, and after this luncheon and a walk through the beautiful grounds. Engenic is at present engaged upon the story of her life, and each day she adds a few pages to her memoirs. But no one has ever seen this manuscript, so jealously is it guarded, and it will not be seen until the hand that pens it has been stilled forever. Dinner is served at seven o'clock, and after this more writing, reading, and perhaps some simple writing, reading, and perhaps some simple in cement and picturesquely relieved by columns in teak. The whole building has a comfortable, home-like look, and the eye rests with content on the beautifully-wooded and park-like grounds surrounding it. In short, it is a type of an English country-seat. A couple of carriage drives, with corresponding lodge entrances, lead to a handsome portice payed with tiles, through which you pass to the entrance hall, 17 feet high and about 24 feet in length by 22 feet wide; beyond, up a flight of steps, is a stately inner hall or corridor, 60 feet by 15 feet. Here is the principal staircase, leading to a magnificent suite of reception rooms, ample testimony to the lavish and artistic taste of the designs and architect. The drawing-room, 32 feet by 22 feet, is a superb chamber, and the outlook, through its bay and triangular windows, of the lawn and bay and triangular windows, of the lawn and grounds, with the groups of stately trees dotted here and there, is indeed charming. Opening out of this stately saloon is a smaller and more easy one. The library is nearly 25 feet square, a neble oriel-window chamber harmonizing with the ideas of modern refinement. There are two dining-rooms, one called the "oak room," Then there is "the gentlements room," also entered from the inner hall, and now the description of the inner hall, and now the description of the main floor is complete.

INTERIOR OF PRIVATE CHAPEL AT FARNBOROUGH

On the first floor you enter a lengthy corridor, over the inner hall, leading to the princiral bed-rooms, of which there are eight. two dressing rooms, while in the wing of the house approached by a second corridor are six secondary bed-rooms and a staircase by which you get to the clock-tower. On the second floor are eight additional secondary and servants' bed-rooms. Each floor has its bathrants. The domestic offices are comparations. The domestic offices are a large shut off from the inner; there are a large kitchen, scullecy, housekeeper's room, servants' bull, pontries, dairy, storerooms, extends remove of cellurs, with farming and stake-rains for the brating apparatus and stake-rains for the brating apparatus and bath-rooms. All the gas used in the house is made on the estate, the water is supplied by steam-power, and there are hydrants both inside and out in case of fire. There are plensure grosunds all around the houseof velvet lawn and emerald surf, lawns, flower-beds, termee walks, shrubberies, lawn-tennis and croquet grounds, all in e-trone good taste and skillfully planned. Ti park-which alone covers sixty-eight acres of ground-and the woodlands have serpentine walks and drives; the timber is remarkably game until bed-time. Thus it will be seen that life at Farnborough is quiet and monoto-nous. There are many visitors, but the ex-Empress will not see them. She receives, however, scores of letters daily on all serts of subjects, from all serts of people, and these she reads with interest, and to some she replies with her own hand. She has many old friends who write to her often; noble corres-pondents, too, but none more loyal or sympa-thetic than Queen Victoria.

thetic than Queen Victoria.

The wealth to keep up this style and enjoy this miniature notion in a secluded spot must be considerable, but the Empress is credited with having plenty and something to spare. The savings from the wreek of the Empire are said to have been large, and her pessessions are set down as yielding her a considerable income. There seems no danger that the style of this establishment will be marred in the slightest for the remaining years of Engenic's life. It is perhaps fitting that this should be sign set of the remaining years of Lagente's life. It is perhaps fitting that this should be so, for besides the good she does to the labor-ing people with the expensive establishment she keeps up, she gives liberally to charity, and every person in Farmborough blesses her every day.

ometimes the Empress goes to London for When she does, four servents or. She seldom makes any a brief visit. WI accompany ber. except upon her most intimate friends and rarely invites anyone to see her. She goes to Paris, too, quite often, the scene of her triumphs and defeats. But no one cares for her in the gav city, only the police who watch her constantly. The Parisians used to hoot her, but they do not even notice her now. She is still fond of France, and she likes Venice. She has recently bought, for $55,000, five acres of ground on the most beautiful spot on the French part of the Riviern—Cape St. Martin, the tongne of land which jule out into the Mediterranean between Monaco and -and here she is to build a villa,

When the last census was taken in England, When the fast census was three in assistant the Empress filled the form in her own hand-writing as follows: "Comtesse de Fierrefond (Maris Engenie), age sixty-four; born at Grenada, Spain; naturalized French, a widow; had one child, a sour a sojourner in France, lives usually in Englant; is traveling with two friends and four servants."

Thus she epitomizes in a few lines what future historians will amplify into volumes. History shows no life with so many ups and downs, so much joy and sorrow, so much sunstains and shows. strine and studows.

Upon her first visit to Paris Eugenie's beauty was ravishing. She was likened to a snow-flake on a July day; like the fairy-like mist that hangs over Niagara; like all that is purest, freshest, loveliest in nature was the impression that she produced upon people. Once at a great ball she was clad entirely in white, of the fleeciest, gauziest, mistiest description, and with a very simple parrure of emeralds and diamonds glistening in her blonde hair, looping up her transparent sleeves, and shining on her lovely neck, she was as completely a vision of delight as eye ever rested on.

The remainder of the story is known, and her marriage, her reckless extravagance, the war, her downfall and escape, are tales of history told again and again. She encouraged frivolity and spent money more recklessly, perhaps, than any other woman ever did. She was conceded to be the best-dressed woman in the world. Her wardenly cost $1,000,000. She was conceded to be the best-dressed woman in the world. Her wardrobe cost $1,000,000, and her jewels were of fabulous value. She spent $10,000 a day for household expenses. It was the age of gold. She undoubtedly was the cause of her own downfall, but she did many kindly deads. She was one of the first to recognize the merits of Rosa Bonbeur, and it was by her wish that that talented artist was decorated. was decorated.

was decorated.

Her legacy of woe is unmatched by any woman in history. She is all alone. Her jewels have been scattered to the corners of the earth; her crown is torn asunder, and the precions stones are now used to decorate women she never saw. Her steps are dogged by spies when she stends like a house-breaker into beloved Paris. Her beauty and strength have faded. She has long waited for the end, Who was it said "Death is merciful?"

ARE WOMEN INCONSTANT?

By JUNIOS HENRI BROWNE

OMAN owes her reputation for inconstancy to men who, when such reputation was made, reputation was made, were exclusively the moulders and controll-ers of public opinion. They were the sayers as well as the doers, and from their continual from their continual saying, both by per and tongue, they forged a falsehood into the semblance of truth. Knowing themselves to be the embodiment of inconstancy, they thought—and their thought was correct—that they might clude their desert by ascribing their temperamental and notorious weakness to the other sex. This device, as old as time, is a variation of the fugitive robber crying, "Stop, thieft" and pretending to join in the chase after the culprit. But old as it is, it often proves effective, as in the present case, and has been widely adopted in consequence.

And thus it happens that the character of adopted in consequence.

And thus it happens that the character of woman, before she had become as prominent as she is to-day, depended for portrayal on the tender mercies of man. She can and does describe and analyze herself voluminously nowadays; but much of the early interpretation of her—so hard is it to dislodge out these leavilges.

interpretation of her—so hard is it to dislodge old ideas—is still accepted, and men use every effort to have it so.

Every spoken language, not to speak of the dead languages, contains phrases reflecting on her stendfastness. For instance:

Women and weather are not to be trusted.

Women change like the sea.

Woman's moods differ like day and a sight.

Bewere of a sheering day and a spating.

Beware of a sleeping dog and a smiling Who confides in a woman builds on the

The one constant woman died yesterlay,

No season is so brief as a woman's love. A woman may be loyal to love, but never to

It is the old story; he trusted a woman and

Woman is true as the wind.

Woman is true as the wind.

Women shed tears the better to decrive.

More than half of men's wees come from the instability of women, The inconstancy of woman causes the great tragedles of life.

The most fascinating women are the most

A woman has only one tongue; but she an tell a million lies. Woman is a trap in which every man is Woman's promises are as uncertain as next mr's blossoms. When you can make a woman constant, you can time a hyens.

Woman is constant only to inconstant

There is no end to such expressions. They abound in Persian, Syrine, Arablun, Armenian, as well as in German, Italian, French and Spanish, showing age, if not pertinency. Mostly expirisms, they would seem to be specially so designed, since they have generally an epigrammatic turn, as if sting had been preferred to truth. Cultured men have, in all ages, exercised their wit on women, pretending to couplasize her defects. In charging inconstancy upon her, they have the additional inducement of screening them-

That woman is uniformly constant, or a model of constancy, no one acquainted with human nature would pretend. She is human, and therefore liable to err. But that she is fickle, changeable, exprisions in her affections, as compared with man, and that he has any good reason to so accose her is an overstmin on credulity. His arraignment of her in this respect suggests the lable of the lion and the

The painter took the lion to his studio, and The painter took the non-to-ms smann, and showed him a picture of a man killing a lion. "What think you of it?" he asked. "I think," answered the beast. "that if lions were paint-ers, they could deplet more flows killing men than they could depict men killing lions.

Until the beginning of this century the painters were men. Many flons have now become painters; but the impression of the old picture is not yet erased. When will it be?

Ancient and modern literature, because its authors were men, have contributed greatly to prejudice the general mind concerning woman's fidelity. Homer told the story of the Trojan war, caused, as the tradition is, by the elopement of Helen from her husband, Menelaus, with her lover, Paris. She had been carried off, so beautiful was she, by Theseus, when but ten years old, and she was rescued by her brothers, Castor and Pollux. All the poets represent her as entirely perfidious; but all their representations are largely mythical. Homer, in his other epic, narrates the unwavering loyalty of Penelope, during Ulysses' all their representations are largely mythical. Homer, in his other epic, narrates the unwavering loyalty of Penelope, during Ulysses' wanderings of ten years—it is evident that he had small desire to get home—but not many persons seem to remember that Penelope was the antipodes of Helen, or that her husband had the marked versatility of attachment usually attributed to women. Hundreds of writers have drawn Cleopatra as a pattern of disloyalty; have made her name a synonym of faithlessness. We know something of her, and that her memory has been shamefully abused. She never had a husband, save a nominal one, Ptolemy, her boy-brother, and but two lovers, Cæsar and Antony; and the latter years after the death of the former. Does this fact furnish any basis for the abominable reputation she has acquired? Even Shakespeare has foully libeled her. She was not at all what she should have been; but the records of her life do not prove her to have been faithless. Inconstancy, though the fashion of the age, she surely did not share. And how was it with her two world-renowned lovers? Why ask, when it is notorious that they were the incurnation of infidelity? It is plain that loyalty in men was not looked for in ancient days; nor is it looked for, apparently, by our contemporaries. Nevertheless, when woman's constancy is questioned it must necessarily be in relation to, and in comparison with, man's.

parison with, man's.

The famous legend of King Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table has various versions; but all of them exhibit Guinevere, wife of Arthur, the most beautiful of women— beauty and fickleness are as cause and effect beauty and fickleness are as cause and effect in the early literature—as untrue to her lord, as an example of feminine lightness. The authors of the past seem to have thought that they could not make a tale in verse or prose romantic or interesting unless they should in-troduce inconstant heroines to their readers; and for this purpose they were ready to de-fame the whole sex, at least by implication. Women may be untrustworthy as to love in recems and returness. Their material worthi-poems and romances; their untrustworthi-ness may be an effective factor in art; but in ness may be an effective factor in art; but in reality, in nature, they are, in the main, stanneh and faithful to the core. No doubt the human race has been steadily meliorating with time, having made rapid strides, espe-cially in the last hundred years. Men have grown better as well as women; but they are yet far behind women in morals, in all the sweet humanities, in whatever belongs to delicacy, conscience, tenderness. They have sweet humanities, in whatever belongs to delicacy, conscience, tenderness. They have improved in constancy, though they never can hope, and they never, as a body, will try to reach the feminine standard. Woman is constant on instinct, on principle, by enlightened policy, by mere self-interest. Her inward prompting and outward advantage conspire to the same end. She is doubly guarded. Man is differently constituted. Principle alone must, as a rule, hold him stendy; and comparatively few of his sex, it must be admitted, act on principle in this regard. Woman is monogamous; man, and, in fact, male animals generally, are polygamous. Monogamy is but another name for constancy, as polygamy is for inconstancy.

Whatever man may assume, be does not believe that women, generally, are unstable. His attitude and entire conduct toward them demonstrate this. If such was his conviction, he would not marry; he would not jeopardize his honor, his pence of mind, his precious self-love. Marriage would, in time, cense to be a custom; for marriage, suciety, civilization, depend absolutely on woman's fidelity to the matrimosial bond, not as a theory alone, but as a sacred truth. Man thinks, with reason, that some, perhaps many, women are disloyal; indeed, it is ensy to ascertain the fact. But it always seems to surprise him; it is different from his expectation, otherwise he would not mise such a clanor about it. The incoretancer of women generally is a conscious and shallow pretext, more so to-day than ever. Nature, society, science, law, nien, all denand the exact contrary, and their demand is fully met.

March April May

Are the best months in which to purify your blood. During the long, cold winter, the blood becomes thin and impace, the body becomes weak and tired, the the nid of a reliable medicine. Hood's Sarsaparilla is pseultarly scapied to parify and enrich the blood, to reste a good appetite and to overcome that tired feeling. It is especially valuable as a tonic

After the Grip

As it processes just the building operflect so much needed; vitalism and enriches the thin and impoverished fill-oil, and it invigorance the kidneys and stimulates the lives no that they resume regular and healthy action.

"Six Weeks with the Grip

Was my and experience early in 1864, and I was then very weak and musbe to work over a few hours Heing tirged to take

Hood's Sarsaparilla

I did so, and in its days I could work, sleep well, had a good appends, and gained in health and strength." Tras. Roswena, Tidedo, Ohlo.

HOOD'S PILLS are purely repetable and are the best lyse invigarator and family enthartic

HER INFINITE VARIETY

BY HARRY ROMAINE

LOVE her as "Faith," when the sunlight steals

Through the church's heavy air; A radiant saint, by my side she kneels, And her soul goes up in prayer.

I love her as "Charity," when her purse Has always another mite To lift the weight of poverty's curse And make some weary heart light.

But when she stands in an earthly guise, With her perfect love confessed, In the trusting glance of her brilliant eyes, It's as "Hope" that I love her best.

*XV.-MRS. CHARLES H. SPURGEON

BY FREDERICK DOLMAN

F you were to question any member of the great con-gregation attached to the London Tabernacle of the Rev. Charles Haddon Spurgeon concerning the pas-tor's wife, he probably would quote these words of Scrip-ture by way of reply: "She stretcheth out her hand to the poor; yea, she stretch-eth forth her hands to the needy. She looketh well to the ways of her husband and eateth not the bread of idleness. Her children rise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her." None better describe the woman who for thirty-five years has shared the toils and triumphs of her famous husband. Mr. Spurgeon was but twenty-two when he made choice of a wife in Susanna, the daughter of Mr. Robert Thompson, a merchant of Fal-con Square, in the city of London. But if young in years, the preacher was, of course, even then old in wisdom, and the excellence of his judgment fully atoned for the earliness of his marriage. Mr. Spurgeon was then paster of a smaller chapel in South London, and resided in the poverty-stricken neighbor-pastor of a smaller chapel in South London, and resided in the poverty-stricken neighborhood of the borough. During the first fortnight of the year 1896—the marriage took place on January 8th—the yearing man was preaching in several of the provincial cities.

MRS. SPURGEON

Not very long after marriage Mrs. Sisarpeout fell a victim to a disease from the effects of which she has never wholly been free. In 1868, in accordance with the wishes of the most eminent surgeons, she consented to a painful operation. It was performed by Sir James Simpson, of Edinburgh, and eventually had the happy result of greatly mitigating, though not entirely removing, her sufferings. though not entirely removing, her sufferings.
Until that time illness had prevented her giving very much active help to her husband's work; probably she had been most helpful to him in the loving sympathy she gave while her husband was the target for so many attacks, from the churchmen on the one hand, from the free-thinkers on the other, attacks which had become more frequent with his appointment to the position of pastor of the Metropolitan Tabernacle.

With health partially restored, however, Mrs. Spurgeon, in her pleasant sitting-room in Nightingale Lane, Clapham, where the paster had been enabled to take unto himself pestor had been enabled to take unto himself a house a year or so previously, began to ponder upon schemes for the benefit of the poor people in the more squalid parts of South London. She became president of various societies, having, in some form or other, the people's good as their object. She visited the sick among her husband's rapidly-increasing congregation. She founded the Working Missionary Society among the women who from far and near attend the Tabernacle. She formed the Pastors' Aid Society, by means of which poor parsons, their wives and children, are furnished with warm winter clothing.

But Mrs. Spurgeon's most important lifework, by means of which her name is known almost all the world over, is the "Book Fund"—a good work also arising out of her sympathy with ill-paid ministers of religion. Let me give Mrs. Spurgeon's account of its origin:

"It was in the summer of 1875 that my dear

"It was in the summer of 1875 that my dear husband completed and published the first volume of his 'Lectures to my Students.' "I wish I could place it in the hands of every minister in England,' I exclaimed, after I had read the proofs.

read the proofs.

"'Well, what will you give toward it?' my practical spouse asked in reply."

